THE PREFACE.

THE various improvements made of late years in every branch of learning, are preſumed a ſufficient reaſon for the preſent attempt to facilitate the ſtudy and practice of the law.

Adjudications unanimouſly given on right principles, are of ſo great authority, that the direct point once determined becomes a ſtanding rule for poſterity, and eſtabliſhes certainty in practice; conſequently, the moſt perſpicuous method of teaching the law is by means of reports.

But thoſe of the Court of KING'S BENCH alone, as they now lie ſcattered in a vaſt number of different volumes, are ſo voluminous and expenſive, as to exceed the ability of the younger part of the profeſſion to purchaſe; and to ſearch and examine a variety of books for a particular caſe, requires more time and attention than the practitioner can ſpare, without neglecting the neceſſary duties of his office.

The ſubſtance of ſuch a MULTIPLICITY OF REPORTERS, comprized in a narrow compaſs, therefore cannot fail of being equally acceptable and uſeful to the profeſſion in general, and, particularly, to gentlemen in any practical branch of the law; there being no caſe, however immaterial or inſignificant it may appear at firſt ſight, which ſome time or other may not convey neceſſary inſtruction: And as the utility of this performance greatly depends upon the facility with which it enables the STUDENT or PRACTITIONER to find any particular matter that may be wanted, the utmoſt care has been taken to ſtate with accuracy, collect in one point of view, and arrange in alphabetical order, under the different HEADS OF PRACTICE, every thing at preſent diſperſed in the numerous collection of reports in this court.

Convinced

The PREFACE.

Convinced of the neceſſity of ſuch a DIGEST, and encouraged by ſeveral ſhining characters, men of diſtinguiſhed judgment in matters of this nature, the Author chearfully undertook the taſk, unawed by the many difficulties which perhaps have prevented others from an undertaking of this kind; from the conſideration, that though his labours ſhould not immediately conduce to his own emolument, they would eſſentially contribute to the ſervice and eaſe of his brethren.

Such were his inducements to this publication; wherein nothing is omitted that is to be found in any of the KING'S BENCH REPORTERS of authority, that have appeared ſince the revolution, with the addition of many valuable Manuſcript Caſes hitherto unpubliſhed.

The improvement and eaſe of the reader is not alone conſidered, but his pecuniary advantage alſo. This Work is therefore printed in ſuch a manner, though on a proper ſized type, that a few ſheets only contain as much as has uſually been given in a folio volume of Reports. And hence the purchaſer, at the trifling expence of two guineas, is enabled to become maſter of what is at preſent ſold for almoſt thirty pounds.

This Work was originally publiſhed by ſubſcription in numbers, and was received (if we may judge from the extenſiveneſs of the ſale) with the general approbation of the gentlemen of the law.

As its evident utility has induced the candid and judicious to give a favourable reception to this firſt attempt, the Author is encouraged to complete his original plan, and publiſh the adjudged Caſes in the other Courts at WESTMINSTER, during the above period, digeſted in the ſame manner.

IN THE Court of King's Bench.

Abatement

To the Writ, and to the Action.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Bowyer v. Cooke.

IN debt againſt the defendant, as executrix: ſhe pleaded that her huſband died inteſtate, and that letters of adminiſtration had been granted to her by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by means whereof ſhe adminiſtered to the goods and chattels of John Cooke her huſband, wherefore ſhe prays judgment, not being compelled to anſwer. On demurrer to this plea, the queſtion was, Whether ſhe ſhould not have traverſed that ſhe was executrix, or ever adminiſtered as executrix? Chief Juſtice. Every plea muſt have its proper concluſion; now reſpondere non debet, is proper to the juriſdiction, which, 'tis true, is in conſequence in abatement; but they are two diſtinct things, and you muſt begin and conclude the plea properly. There ought not to be a traverſe, and the plea is much better without it: Let the defendant anſwer over for the other faults. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 145.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Jones v. Bodeenor.

Defendant, an attorney of the Common Pleas, was ſued by J. S. in B. R. gave bail, and was declared againſt as in cuſtody: the ſame term Jones delivered a declaration by the bye againſt him, to which he pleaded his privilege: to the plaintiff's replication, that the defendant was in cuſtod. mareſc. at the ſuit of J. S. and delivered out to bail, and that pending the above ſuit, he exhibited his bill ſecund. curſ. curiæ; the defendant demurred. The council on behalf of the plaintiff inſiſted, that by giving bail the defendant had acknowledged the juriſdiction of the court, and waived his privilege. It was the opinion of the court, that the defendant might plead his privilege to the firſt action, becauſe he comes here by coercion, and had no opportunity of pleading it before. 27 H. 6. c. 7. Though a man be in cuſtodia mareſc. he may claim conuſance, pari ratione, may plead his privilege, and it is abſurd that the defendant ſhould be in a worſe condition with reſpect to Jones than he was to the firſt plaintiff, when the ſecond ſuit is topped on the action of the firſt plaintiff. Yet the court held, that if his privilege had been waived as to the firſt action, it would have been waived as to the ſecond alſo. Vid. Raym. vol. 1. *p*135.

In this cauſe the court gave judgment for the plaintiff on a writ of error brought to remove a writ of quare impedit, for the variance between the pleading and the letters patent; the defendant having ſet forth a grant made to William Feekſtone, tunc armigero poſtea militi, when on oyer of the letters patent they appeared to be granted to William Feekſtone, militi; on this principle, that he could not be a knight and an eſquire at the ſame time; knight being a word of dignity, and part of his name, but eſquire not, according to all the old authorities. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 302.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Duncombe v. Church, Warden of the Fleet.

The defendant ſalvis ſibi omnibus adv. ad bill. &c. pleaded, that he was an officer of the court of C. B. and that no officer of that court could be ſued except before the juſtices of the Common Pleas. The plaintiff replies, that temp. exhibit. bill. the defendant was in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea in quodam placito debiti ad ſect. A. B. On demurrer the court was of opinion, 1. That the want of a prout patet is only matter of form, and helped by a general demurrer, becauſe without ſuch concluſion if a record is pleaded, the other party may reply nul tiel record. 1 Saund. 98. This is no plea after imparlance.

2. That the warden may plead his privilege though a bill is filed againſt him as in cuſtody; the difference according to Chief Juſtice Holt being, that where a perſon is in actual cuſtody, he is liable to all actions; but if he is in court on bail, he may plead his privilege, as the ſheriff cannot take notice of it, ſo that he muſt give bail. Beſides, this is no plea to the bill, but to the juriſdiction; and the clauſe of ſalvis omnibus, &c. ought to be to the juriſdiction as well as to the bill. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 1.

The defendant pleaded that he was unus attornatus cur. Dom. Regis de Banco, without ſaying tempore impetrationis brevis: a reſpondeas ouſter awarded. Vid. Salk. vol. 1. caſe 2.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Vid. Rol. K. B. 9 W. 3. Bonner v. Hall.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit the defendant pleads in abatement, another action depending in the C. B. for the ſame cauſe; the plaintiff replies, that no action was depending for the ſame cauſe, and therefore petit judicium de debito & damnis, on which the defendant demurs, the plaintiff joins in demurrer, and concludes rightly. Per J. C. Holt. This caſe differs from that of Biſſe and Harcourt, the plea there being good; and when the plaintiff replied new matter to maintain his writ, he ſhould have made his replication accordingly; where the plaintiff traverſes the defendant's plea in his replication, and offers an iſſue, he may pray judgment de debito & damnis, becauſe if the matter is tried, peremptory judgment ought to be given; but in this caſe the firſt fault is in the defendant, the plea being ill, and therefore the defendant was ordered to anſwer further. Vid. Raymond, vol. 1. page 339.

Trinity, 10 W. 3. Owen v. Butler.

In debt on bond on oyer craved, the condition appeared to be that the defendant ſhould pay three ſums of money at three ſeveral days. The defendant pleads in abatement that he has paid the money due at the two firſt days, and that the third day of payment is not yet come. On demurrer, it was adjudged that the defendant anſwer over. Vid. Raymond, vol. 1. page 344.

Trinity, 10 W. 3. Williams v. Drury.

On an aſſumpſit, the defendant pleaded a miſnomer in abatement, to which the plaintiff demurred, becauſe the defendant had laid no venue. Held by the the court unneceſſary, becauſe pleas concerning the perſon muſt be tried only where the action is laid. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 195.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Clarke v. Butler.

In aſſault the defendant pleaded defendit vim et injuriam quando, &c. and would afterwards have pleaded a miſnomer; it was objected on behalf of the plaintiff, that the defendant could not plead a miſnomer, or to the juriſdiction of the court, after having pleaded as aforeſaid, becauſe he had admitted his identity by that name. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 235.

In error on a judgment in C. B. the general errors were aſſigned, and the ſame point argued here as in that court, viz. whether a recovery in which there was no tenant to the precipe before the writ of ſummons iſſued, and then a tenant was made to the precipe pending the writ, and before the return thereof, and the recovery paſſed, Whether this common recovery was good? The judgment was affirmed niſi; and on the laſt day of term, on further argument, the court continuing of their former opinion, the rule was made abſolute. Vid. Raym. vol. 1. p. 475.

In an action on the caſe for falſe impriſonment, the defendant pleaded a miſnomer in abatement by attorney; the plaintiff demurred, and excepted to the plea, becauſe miſnomer cannot be pleaded by attorney, for the defendant having filed his warrant of attorney in the name by which he has been declared againſt, he ſhall be eſtopped by his warrant, to ſay afterwards that he is known by another name. C. J. Holt was of opinion that this was good cauſe to refuſe the plea, but if received, no cauſe of demurrer; and as to the eſtoppel that the entry of the warrant of attorney on the roll was only a memorandum, and on a conference with his brethren, judgment was given quod billa caſſetur. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 273. Raymond, vol. 1. page 509.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Newton v. Rowland.

On an indeb. aſſumpſit for 100 l. againſt an executor; the defendant pleaded in abatement he was an attorney of the Common Pleas, and prayed his privilege, but was ruled to anſwer over, his privilege extending only to actions brought againſt him in his own right. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 533.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Cremer v. Wickett.

In an action of aſſault, the defendant pleaded in abatement, another action for the ſame aſſault depending in this court; the plaintiff replied nul tiel record, and entry was made quia curia domini regis hic ſe adviſare vult ſuper inſpectione & examinatione recordi, &c. dies datus eſt, &c. The defendant filed his demurrer, and refuſed to pay for entering his plea, on which account plaintiff ſigned final judgment. The queſtion before the court was, Whether the demurrer was regular? The judgment was ſet aſide, and the plea ſtood as of the laſt term, and a day was given to inſpect the record as of this term. Vid. Raymond, vol. 1. page 550.

In treſpaſs againſt a maſter for beating of his ſervant per quod ſervitium, &c. the defendant pleaded actio non, becauſe it did not appear that the plaintiff was his ſervant at the time of ſuch aſſault, concluding his plea with a petit judicium de billa et quod billa caſſetur: the point taken up by the court, was, whether the concluſion made this a plea in abatement. Per Holt: Billa and narratio are the ſame in this court, wherefore judgment may be demanded of the bill, and inſufficiency alledged in the declaration, and though ſuch a plea as this ought not to be received, yet as it has been accepted, let a reſpondeas ouſter be awarded; for the defendant cannot aſſign it for error, becauſe advantageous to him, and we are juſtified in giving final judgment; a rule was accordingly made. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 399, and Raymond, vol. 1. page 593. Medina v. Stoughton.

In debt for goods ſold and delivered againſt a woman, who pleaded in abatement coverture at the time the action was brought; the plaintiff replied, that the defendant was ſole and not covert, and concludes to the country; it was objected by the defendant, that the replication was ill, for that it ſhould have been taken with an abſque hoc, that ſhe was covert, and not as in the replication and not covert. Lord Chief Juſtice Holt ſaid ſuch a plea to a writ needs no venue, but may be tried where the writ is brought, but if pleaded in bar, there muſt be a replication, and that muſt ſhew the place of the party's birth in England, from whence a venue may ariſe; and though there are precedents both ways, yet this is a true difference, and the defendant muſt ſhew and prove the coverture; and ſaying in the replication that ſhe was ſole, implies the negative of a marriage, as much as that ſhe was not covert. If the plea had been in bar, the marriage muſt have been laid at a certain time and place; but being in abatement it is good, tho' laid generally, but the huſband's name ought to be ſhewn, that the plaintiff may know againſt whom to have his writ. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 564.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Brookes v. Stroud.

Two executors ſued, and ſet forth to be executors, and that they themſelves proved the will; but by the probate, it appeared that only one proved the will: the defendant pleaded this in abatement; but a reſpondeas ouſter awarded, for both executors have the right in them, and he that did not prove may come in when he pleaſes, but cannot refuſe during the life of him that has proved, Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 6.

The defendant was arreſted as J. Villars Armiger, and pretended himſelf to be Earl of Buckingham; on a motion the queſtion was, how he ſhould put in bail ſo as not to eſtop him. Per cur. He need not join in the recognizance, and then there is nothing to eſtop him: in civil actions it is not abſolutely neceſſary for the defendant to be joined in recognizance, as in criminal; and even there on motion the Earl of Banbury, upon an indictment, was allowed to find others who gave bail for him, by the name of G. Knowles, Eſq; as their act could not conclude him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 7.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

On a reſpondeas ouſter, the defendant pleaded the general iſſue; the court awarded, that the plaintiff may ſign judgment, if the defendant's attorney on re-delivering back a copy of the iſſue will not pay for it; the old courſe was, to deliver in a copy of the whole record, viz. the declaration, plea in abatement, &c. and iſſue; but the court made a rule, that for the future a copy of the narr. and iſſue ſhould only be paid for. Vid. Salk. caſe 2.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Fiſh v. Horner.

In an action of debt on a judgment in the Common Bench, pending a writ of error, ſuch writ being pleaded in abatement, in ſupport of ſuch plea, the caſe of Cremer v. Wickett was cited. Powell Juſtice ſaid this plea had often been attempted, but without effect, and it had been ſo reſolved by all the judges on mature conſideration; and further, that the court would diſcountenance ſuch proceedings, and therefore refuſed to hold the party to bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 62.

Defendant pleaded that he was an attorney de C. B. and ought not to be ſued alibi abſque conſenſu; plaintiff replied, he did conſent, but laid not a venue where, the replication therefore was adjndged bad. Vide Salk. caſe 8.

In treſpaſs againſt A. and B. for taking water out of the plaintiff's well; A. and B. pleaded in abatement that B. was tenant in common with the plaintiff of the ſaid well; the plaintiff replied he was ſole ſeiſed, abſque hcc, that he was tenant in common with the defendant B. et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam. To this it was demurred, and a reſpondeas ouſter awarded; the point in diſpute was, whether the plaintiff ſhould not have concluded his abſque hoc with an averment: and the court ſeemed to think that where an abſque hoc comprizes the whole matter generally, as abſque tali cauſa, it may conclude & de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam; but where it only traverſes a particular matter, as abſque tali warranto, &c. it ought to be averred; but the chief juſtice held this not ſuch a particular matter as need be averred, becauſe 'tis to maintain his writ. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 10.

In a homine replegiando the defendant appeared and pleaded in abatement, that there was no addition of place, vill, or hamlet: the plaintiff demurred; for replevin is not vi & armis, and in actions vi & armis proceſs of outlawry lay only, and no addition is neceſſary where ſuch proceſs does not lie: and the 25 E. 3. c. 17. does not extend to replevin. Opinion of the court. Proceſs of outlawry lies in replevin, and the King may have a fine. See 25 H. 6. c. 6. 2 Ro. 805. n. ſ. 1 Inſt. 128. b. Plo. 228. N. Br. 220. H. But this is not by common law nor upon the original; but the ſtatute of E. 3. gives the exigent, which iſſues on the pluries returned; for the original is vicontiel, and is determined: the words of the ſtatute of H. 5. are, in every original in actions perſonal wherein proceſs of exigent lies, &c. That ſtatute is conſtrued ſtrictly. And an aſſize of novel diſſeiſin is not within it, though the King ſhall have a fine; and exigent lies becauſe it is a mixed action; ſo here it muſt be ſuch an original as the court can proceed on, not an original that is determined. In this caſe the original replevin is vicontiel, and the court proceeds on the pluries, therefore the firſt replevin needs no addition within the ſtatute; and where the firſt writ is without addition, it cannot be neceſſary in the ſecond, nay, the inſerting ſuch an addition would vitiate the ſecond writ, becauſe where any writ or proceſs is founded on a former, it muſt not vary from ſuch firſt writ. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 13. Mod. caſes 115, 198.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Croſs v. Bilſon.

In replevin the plaintiff declared for taking his mare in quodam loco vocat. the King's highway; the defendant venit & defendit vim & injur. &c. Et ut ballivus, &c. bene cognoſcit captionem equæ præd. in quodam loco voc. the King's highway, & juſte, &c. quia it was the freehold of my Lord Lemſter, &c. abſque hoc, that he took the mare in the place called the King's highway; & hoc &c. unde pet. judicium & retorn. &c. plaintiff replies juſt. cognoſcere non debet quia dic. quod cepit equam præd. in loco vocat. the King's highway, & hoc pet. quod inquiratur per patriam; defendant demurs, and concludes, Unde ut prius pet. judic. & quod narr. præd. caſſetur. the plaintiff joins in demurrer, final judgment awarded in the C. B. for the plaintiff, and affirmed here on error brought. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 102. Raymond, vol. 2. page 1016.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Preſgrave v. Saunders.

In replevin for ſeveral goods taken in a chamber in Devereux-Court; defendant pleaded actio non quia dic. quoad ſuch and ſuch, proprietas eorum fuit ipſi def. abſque hoc, that the property of them was in the plaintiff, & hoc paratus eſt verificare; & quoad others dicit quod proprietas eorum fuit in quodam Richardo Frith, abſque hoc, quod querenti, & hoc paratus eſt verificare. Unde pet. judic. ſi fuit præd. quer. actionem ſuam habere debeat, &c. pet. etiam retorn. bonorum, &c. cum damnis, &c. On demurrer it was objected, that property in a ſtranger ought to be pleaded in abatement, and not in bar. The court thought differently, and ſaid, that it had been adjudged otherwiſe, and the law is otherwiſe, for it utterly deſtroys the plaintiff's action, and may be pleaded either in bar or abatement, for whether the defendant or a ſtranger have the property, 'tis all one to the plaintiff as he has none himſelf. Vide Raymond, vol. 2. page 984.

In a homine replegiando on oyer of the writ which was a pluries; the defendant pleaded in abatement the following variance from the regiſter, that the words ad ipſorum (præfatæ Mariæ Comitiſſæ Banbury & Caroli Knolls, &c.) damnum non modicum & gravamen were omitted, to which the plaintiff demurred. Per curiam. The pluries complaining of the delay done to the plaintiff in not executing the firſt writ and the alias, theſe words ad ipſorum damnum, &c. are a material terial part of the writ, though not of the alias, and therefore the writ varying from the regiſter in a material point, the writ muſt be abated. Vide Raymond, vol. 2. page 903.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Lord Banbury v. Wood.

On a homine replegiando, want of addition to the pluries was pleaded in abatement, and on demurrer the queſtion was, whether this was within the ſtatute of addition, 1 H. 5. cap. 5. On a ſecond argument all the judges were of opinion, that addition is needful to a writ vicontiel, and awarded a reſpondeas ouſter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 84.

The defendant being ſued by the name of Benjamin, pleaded in abatement that he was baptiſed and always known by the name of John, abſque hoc, that he the ſaid John was ever called or known by the name of Benjamin. The plaintiff replied, that he was known by the name of Benjamin from the time of his baptiſm. On demurrer it was inſiſted that the traverſe was needleſs and frivolous, the matter precedent being the ſubſtance of the plea, and that a man could have no other name than that he was baptiſed by. Judge Powel was at firſt of this opinion; but at laſt the court unanimouſly awarded a reſpondeas ouſter; Chief Juſtice Holt obſerving, that a perſon may have a name and ſurname, who never was baptiſed, as in fact numbers have; and that a man or woman may be baptiſed by one name, and be confirmed by another, an inſtance of which he mentioned, though he ſaid he was not ſatisfied that the firſt name ceaſed in ſuch caſe; and ſuppoſing it had been a ſufficient anſwer without more, to have ſaid the defendant was baptiſed by the name of John, yet ſaying he was baptiſed, &c. was no more than an inducement, which is waived by the traverſe, but in his opinion the traverſe and inducement were both material. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 115. Salk. vol. 1. caſe 15.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Lett v. Mills.

The defendant pleading in abatement, that ſuſcepit ordinem militarem et jam miles exiſtit, on demurrer it was reſolved, that thoſe words were a very proper way of expreſſing that he had received the order of knighthood, that miles, without addition, is to be underſtood of a knight batchelor, which is part of a man's name, that whatever concerns the condition of the perſon ſhall be tried where the venue is laid, and that if a knight be ſued without his addition, it is a good plea in abatement. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 105.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Batterſby v. Marſh.

The plaintiff in his bill ſtiles himſelf a gentleman, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was no gentleman, to which the plaintiff having demurred, the court held the plea good, being confeſſed by the demurrer; but it being after a general imparlance, the defendant was obliged to anſwer over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 80.

There are two ſorts of pleas to abate the writ; firſt, to the action of it; ſecondly, that though it be right as to the action thereof, yet it may be defective in its frame for want of form, or from its not agreeing with the regiſter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 1. p. 27.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Staples v. Heydon.

In treſpaſs for breaking plaintiff's wharf and cutting down his fences, he declares againſt two defendants for two treſpaſſes done at different times; one of the defendants pleads not guilty as to the whole; the other pleads a ſpecial juſtificiation to both treſpaſſes, viz. that one Gray was poſſeſſed of this wharf and a timber yard adjoining for 90 years, and had and uſed a way from this yard over this wharf to the Thames, and being ſo poſſeſſed, did demiſe ſuch yard to Heydon for an under term; and that the plaintiff erected this fence, and thereby took away his right of paſſage, which the defendant had cut down; and in the leaſe was contained a grant of all ways and paſſages, &c. and avers that he had no other way to the river Thames. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and to the other treſpaſs the defendant pleaded the ſame juſtification, and the plaintiff replied, that he had another way; on which iſſue was taken, and on the trial at niſi prius the defendant made default, and the inqueſt was taken by default, and a verdict for the defendant and 6 d. conditional damages on the demurrer; and the other defendant was found guilty of the firſt treſpaſs, and not guilty of the ſecond; the defendant moved for a repleader on the immaterial iſſue; but the court held that they could not award a repleader in this caſe, the defendant being by his default at the trial out of court, and therefore there could be no repleading. Chief Juſtice Holt ſaid, if the defendant had made out his title to the way in his plea, and then made an impertinent averment to which the plaintiff had replied and taken iſſue, a repleader would have been unneceſſary, for the verdict would have been aided by the ſtatute of Jeofails. Powel, J. ſaid it would have been aided by the ſtatute, but that there muſt have been a repleader if there had been no default, and in this caſe, he held it neceſſary to ſhew a title to the way; he made a difference between this and an action on the caſe for ſtopping a way, ſuch action being againſt a wrong doer, it is ſufficient to ſhew the poſſeſſion; but otherwiſe, where a man means to juſtify a treſpaſs by it. The court held that both the pleas were naught. Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved it was ill to plead the term of years, without ſhewing the commencement of the term, it being a kind of preſcription that could not be in a tenant for years; ſaid, had they pleaded that ſuch a one was ſeiſed in fee of both, that there was always a way uſed, &c. and that he had demiſed to Gray, and he to the defendant prout, it had been a good title, for then the ſame paſſed by the demiſe of Gray as appurtenant; or if he had ſaid that ſuch a one was ſeiſed in fee of both, and demiſed to Gray, and he made the way, and then demiſed, it would then have paſſed as appurtenant. Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, the ſame might have been pleaded by way of grant from the termor. Plaintiff's council in reply ſaid, the defendant having by his plea confeſſed the treſpaſs, and offered nothing to juſtify the ſame, the plaintiff ought to have judgment, however the iſſue was, and cited 3 Cro. 214, and 1 Leon. 68. in ſupport of his arguments, which were anſwered. Over-ruled by the court.

On this caſe being brought before the court again, they were of opinion, that the party could not be let in again to replead to abate the writ, on which plaintiff's council moved for judgment on the demurrer, becauſe the plea was bad: the court ſeemed to doubt how to give judgment, as the caſe ſtood, Powell, Juſtice, was of opinion, as the caſe was, the writ might be abated for the laſt treſpaſs, and judgment given for the plaintiff for the firſt, but the court adjourned the ſame.

On this matter being again brought before the court, the caſe appeared to be contrary, and the defendant that pleaded not guilty generally was found guilty of the firſt, and not guilty of the ſecond; the difficulty with the court then was, how they ſhould give judgment, for they agreed they could not give judgment for part only, but muſt give judgment on the whole record, for the whole as to both defendants; and on the immaterial iſſue, the judgment muſt be, that the bill be abated, and that a bill might be abated as to part of the treſpaſs, and ſtand good for the reſt; but they never knew it abated as to one defendant, and ſtand good againſt the other. This matter was adjourned. Vid. Raym. vol. 2. p. 922.

On a plea in abatement of a ſcire facias, that J. S. was a tertenant not ſummoned, the court made this diſtinction between the writ in general, and when it names the tertenants particularly, and omits one, viz. that in the latter caſe the writ may be abated, becauſe the party may have a better writ, one naming them all; but in the firſt caſe he cannot, therefore the writ ſhall not be quaſhed, but only the defendant ſhall not be compelled to anſwer till the other tertenant be ſummoned. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 199.

The defendant demurring in abatement, the plaintiff joined in bar, final judgment was given for the plaintiff, the court being of opinion that there could be no demurrer in abatement, for if the cauſe was apparent, they would abate the writ, or otherwiſe it ought to be pleaded. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 198.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Clerk v. Withers.

F. D. as adminiſtrator of J. D. recovered 303 l. againſt C. due on a bond to his inteſtate, on a judgment by default in the C. B. and ſued out execution thereon, directed to the ſheriffs of London, returnable Tres Mich. which was accordingly delivered to the ſaid ſheriffs the firſt of Auguſt the ſame year, who the ſame day levied goods to the value. F. D. died the 9th of September following; the ſheriff returns the ſeizure to the value, but that the goods remain in his cuſtody for want of purchaſers; 29th September the ſheriff is removed and another choſen. The plaintiff, Clerk, now ſues out a ſci. fa. againſt the then ſheriff for reſtitution of his goods, and on demurrer, judgment was given againſt the plaintiff in C. B. and a writ of error brought in this court; after two arguments thereon, the court affirmed the judgment, on this ground, that executions are favoured in law, and the levy veſts the property in the ſheriff, and the ſelling is but a formal part of the execution, wherefore the execution being executed in F. D. the firſt executor's life-time, his death does not abate the writ, and as the ſheriff ſeized the goods in the plaintiff's right as adminiſtrator, and thereby became reſponſible to him as adminiſtrator for the value he has returned, that right now devolves to the adminiſtrator de bonis non, who, when the execution is compleatly executed, may take the money out of court. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 290.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Linch v. Hooke.

The defendant, a feme covert, being arreſted by her maiden name, gave a bail bond to the ſheriff by that name. Per curiam. If a perſon is arreſted by a wrong name, and brought into court, he may plead a miſnomer; and whatever a bail bond may do in other caſes, it cannot ſtop a feme covert from pleading; for ſhe may plead a non eſt factum. The ſame term it was ſaid by the court, that if a perſon binds himſelf in a bond by a wrong name, he is eſtopped to ſay it is not his name. Vid. Salk. vol. 1. caſe 17.

Hilary, 3 Ann. Seers v. Turner.

In an action of treſpaſs, the plaintiff declared for an aſſault, battery, and wounding, on the 6th of June, and an aſſault, battery, or wounding, and falſe impriſonment, on the 1ſt of Auguſt after, ad damnum 30 l. the defendant pleads in abatement a plaint for the ſame cauſe in the Marſhalſea court, and removed into this court by habeas corpus, where it is ſtill depending. On demurrer, it was reſolved unanimouſly by the court, that the defendant ſhould anſwer over. For this declaration may be in purſuance of the firſt habeas corpus, and the plaintiff may declare on an impriſonment, and when the defendant is in cuſtody, the plaintiff may declare againſt him for any matter, and the variance of the damages is allowable, and is the practice of the court: but, indeed, in ſuch caſe, the bail cannot be charged. There is a great deal of difference between a recordari or a certiorari, and a habeas corpus; in the two former, the proceedings are on thoſe writs which are entered upon the roll, the return whereof is the plaint, and the plaintiff declares on that. The habeas corpus does not remove the plaint, but it is only certified, and the proceedings below by this writ ſuſpended; there is no proceeding in this court on that plaint, but the plaintiff declares de novo againſt the defendant as a privileged perſon in cuſtody of the marſhal, and there is no day given to the plaintiff on the return of the habeas corpus, as in caſe of a recordari or pone, ſo that the plaintiff is not in court. Vid. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1102.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Hackett v. Tilly.

An adminiſtrator brought an action of debt on bond, to which the defendant pleaded in abatement, that adminiſtration was granted to another. On plaintiff's demurrer to this plea, it was inſiſted for the defendant, that though this is a matter in bar, yet it might be pleaded in abatement, as in the caſe of outlawry and property, which may be pleaded either in bar or abatement.

The court over-ruled the defendant's plea, and ordered that he ſhould anſwer over, obſerving that matter in bar could not be pleaded in abatement. Vid. Salk. vol. 3. Caſe 1. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1207.

In two actions brought againſt the defendant, by the name of Sir Edward Irby, baronet; the defendant pleads in one thus, Et prædictus Edwardus Irby armiger in propria perſona ſua venit et dicit, that he is not a baronet; and to the other he pleaded the ſame matter, with this difference, that he ſaid only prædictus Edwardus venit, &c. The plaintiff demurred to thoſe pleas, and his council took exception, that it was ſaid prædictus Edwardus, which was admitting himſelf to be right named; and after that he is eſtopped to plead any miſnomer, for that he ought to have pleaded that Edwardus Irby armiger qui per nomen Edwardi Irby baronetti, is ſued, venit in propria perſona ſua, &c. et dicit, &c. The defendant's council inſiſted, that there was a difference where miſnomer of the ſurname or addition is pleaded in abatement, and where miſnomer of the chriſtian name; there you may ſay prædictus, the chriſtian name, where it is the miſnomer of the ſurname, is pleaded, or prædictus, the chriſtian and ſurname, where it is only the miſnomer of the addition, but otherwiſe, if miſnomer of the chriſtian be pleaded, and cited. 1 Edw. 4. cap. 3. and ſaid further, that all the books were ſo.

Holt ſeemed to doubt the difference, but ſaid, that if it were ſo, yet the plea was naught, for want of ſhewing what he is; for if a defendant would abate the plaintiff's writ, he muſt give him a better. It is not enough for the defendant to ſay, he is not a baronet, without ſhewing what he is. In this caſe he obſerved, that one of the pleas was not within the defendant's own rule, for he ought, according to that, to have ſaid only predictus Edwardus, or prædictus Edwardus Irby, and not prædictus Edwardus Irby armiger; but the ſafeſt way of pleading it would have been, to have ſaid venit Edwardus Irby armiger, who is ſued per nomen Edwardi Irby baronetti, et dicit that he is an eſquire and not a baronet. The court gave judgment, that the defendant reſpondeat ulterius niſi, &c. Vid. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1178.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Lawrence v. Martin,

The defendant being ſued as adminiſtrator, pleaded in abatement, that he was an attorney of the Common Pleas: a reſpondeas ouſter awarded. Per Holt, C. J. On a reſpondeas ouſter notice thereof need not be given, the defendant being ſuppoſed to be attending on his cauſe in the paper to maintain his plea. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 18.

In an action on ſeveral promiſes, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the promiſes in the declaration were tiel jour, which was after the action brought and traverſed, that they were made before, to which the plaintiff demurred, and the defendant's council in ſupport of the plea urged, that though this matter was pleadable in bar, yet many things that might be pleaded in bar might alſo be pleaded in abatement, as property in a ſtranger, or pris en auter lien, which may be pleaded either in bar or abatement in replevin. The Chief Juſtice agreed to thoſe caſes, but ſaid they differed from this; firſt, becauſe theſe matters could not be given in evidence on a non cepit, the general iſſue in replevin, as this might on non aſſumpſit, that had there been any fact to ſupport this plea, the defendant would have pleaded the general iſſue; ſecondly, that the matter of the plea is new matter, and out of the ſcope of the plaintiff's action. The court ordered the defendant to anſwer over. Vid. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1249.

On an action of aſſumpſit, the defendant pleads a miſnomer in abatement, viz. that her name was Honoria and not Elizabeth, the plaintiff replies that ſhe had filed common bail by the name of Elizabeth, and prays judgment if defendant ſhall ſay her name is not Elizabeth. Determined, that filing bail is the act of the court, and not of the party, and therefore no eſtoppel; but the defendant appearing by that name may eſtop himſelf, and bail is an appearance as well as bail; but if the plaintiff means to uſe it as an eſtoppel, it ſhould be pleaded as an appearance. In debt on a bail bond, a defendant who has filed common bail cannot plead that he has done ſo, but muſt plead comperuit ad diem, pleading, being governed by the operation things have in law. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 19.

The defendant being ſued in the Marſhalſea court as a feme ſole, after having appeared and pleaded to the action, married, and the caſe was then removed by habeas corpus into K. B. The plaintiff declares againſt her in K. B. as in cuſtody of the Marſhal; the defendant pleaded in abatement that ſhe was married when the habeas iſſued, adjudged a good plea, becauſe the proceedings in this court are de novo, and the court takes no notice of what was done in the inferior court, or of any matter prior to the habeas; but the practice in ſuch caſes is on the return of the habeas on motion to grant a procedendo. Vid. Salk. vol. 1. caſe 20.

On a ſcire facias, the firſt writ was demurred to, becauſe it was made returnable on Monday in three weeks of the Holy Trinity.

The court were of opinion the writ was void, there being no ſuch day as the laſt day of the three weeks was Sunday, and therefore was not to be helped by the ſtatute of Jeofails. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 120.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Dillingham v. Gately.

On an action on the caſe brought on a promiſſory note on demurrer for falſe latin in the original, viz. locarent ad competum inſtead of locaret, &c. the court declared that the original ſhould ſtate the whole matter in an action on the caſe, ſo that the original agrees with the bill, for which reaſon falſe latin does not vitiate it; but falſe latin in a writ for which there is an exact form in the regiſter is ill, and accordingly the defendant was ordered to anſwer over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 237.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. Smith v. Bowen.

On an appeal for murder lodged by an infant in his own perſon; the council for the appellant moved, that he might be admitted by his guardian, which the court refuſed, becauſe the appeal ought to have been commenced by guardian in the firſt inſtance, and a motion then made to admit him by his guardian, and ſaid, that if the defendant pleaded this in abatement the appellant might commence a new appeal by bill, an abatement not being peremptory.

The appellee being afterwards brought to the bar, the appellant's council would have abated the writ, and brought a new appeal by bill; but the court would not allow it at a future day, the council for the appellee refuſing to plead the infancy in abatement, with a view of taking advantage of it after trial; the court on inſpection of the appellant, abated the firſt appeal ex officio, and Holt ſaid, if the appellant had not been preſent, a writ muſt have iſſued to have brought him into court for the purpoſe of inſpection. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 216.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. Gately v. Gillingham.

Interlocutory judgment having been ſigned in an action on the caſe by original, and a writ of inquiry awarded, which was teſted 8th of November, returnable Octavis Martini, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that 15 days did not intervene between the teſte and return of the writ; whereas in all judicial writs where you proceed by original, there muſt be 15 days between the teſte and return both in the writ and all ſubſequent proceſs. The court inclined to think the writ ill, but the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 260.

Hilary, 9 Ann. Goodwin v. Godwin. Error.

The matter in queſtion before the court was, whether debt on a judgment in K. B. would lie pending a writ of error in the Exchequer chamber.

The point was given up on account of the number of caſes in point, that an action of debt would lie, but ſtat. 27 Eliz. cap. 8. was ſtrongly inſiſted on to prove, that the record itſelf in law was removed by the writ of error, and that therefore the declaration was ill.

The court obſerved, that neither Hales or Holt ever favoured theſe actions, that to diſcourage them bail was never allowed, that the authorities alone prevented their rejecting them; and though they conſidered the writ of error no plea in bar, yet doubted whether it might not be admitted as a plea in abatement. The matter touching the record was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 17.

Trinity, 12 Ann. Grovenor v. Stephens. Error.

On a writ of error brought, an error in fact being aſſigned, viz. that the plaintiff was a feme covert, when the action was commenced, the writ was diſallowed, becauſe the fact might have been pleaded in abatement; it being the eſtabliſhed practice of the court not to allow any matter to be aſſigned for error in fact, that might have been pleaded in abatement. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 166.

This was a writ of error from C. B. on a writ of quare impedit brought by the chancellor and ſcholars of the univerſity of Cambridge againſt the archbiſhop, &c. grounded on ſtat. 3 Jac. c. 5. which diſables popiſh recuſants convict from preſenting, and veſts ſuch preſentations in the chancellor and ſcholars of the two univerſities reſpectively. The queſtions ariſing on this caſe were, 1ſt, whether the defendant's plea in abatement, that the univerſity of Cambridge was incorporated by the name of chancellor, maſter, and ſcholars, &c. and that therefore the univerſity had ſued by a wrong name, was a good plea? Becauſe if it was, the court of C. B. erred in awarding a reſpondeas ouſter. 2dly, That the univerſity of Cambridge had not ſufficiently pleaded the conviction for want of ideo convictus eſt.

The plaintiff in errror's council maintained that ſuch plea was good, and cited 4 Edw. 4. cap. 7. 22 Edw. 4. cap. 34. and 13 Hen. 7. cap. 14. in ſupport thereof.

For the defendant in error it was argued that a corporation might have one name by which they are impowered to take, and another by which they are intitled to ſue; and quoted 1 Rolls abridged, 513. and that therefore it did not follow, that becauſe the univerſity was incorporated by this name, they could not be ſued or ſue by another; and that the ſtat. veſting this right in them by the name of chancellor and ſcholars, was an incorporation quoad this particular purpoſe; which could be done by letters patent 2 H. 7, 13. 4 Leon. 190. a fortiori by act of parliament; and this being the caſe, the very ſtat. falſifies the plea. He cited Co. Lit. 303. A plea in abatement muſt be certain to every intent, and ſaid likewiſe that there was another rule reſpecting pleas in abatement; that the defendant muſt never ſet aſide the writ of the plaintiff, without ſhewing a better; and that the variance was not a material one, becauſe a perſon does not ceaſe to be a ſcholar by becoming maſter.

It was offered for the plaintiff in error, by way of reply, that if the univerſity of Cambridge had one name to take, and another to ſue by, it ſhould have been ſhewn by the defendant in error: that as to the act, it could only operate as a deſcriptio perſonæ, and not by way of incorporating them; and that if the act did incorporate them by the deſcription aforeſaid, yet their acceptance of a new charter by another name, compelled them to ſue by ſuch name.

The court were of opinion, that the declaration ſetting forth the act of parliament as an authority to ſue by that name, rendered it incumbent on the defendant to ſhew ſome ſpecial matter to avoid it; as the acceptance of another charter by another name, ſubſequent to the act; and that chancellor and ſcholars is ſuch a deſcription as comprehends the whole univerſity, including both head and members; and that it does not follow that what will be ſufficient to amount to a deſcriptio perſonae to enable a perſon to take, will be ſufficient for him to ſue in. The ſecond queſtion depended on ſtat. 1 William and Mary, c. 26. and the court inclined to think the record of the default a conviction of itſelf, and therefore the ſpecial concluſion of ideo convictus eſt, ſuperfluous and unneceſſary. Adjourned. Vid. Modern Reports. vol. 10. page 208.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. Johnſon v. Altham. Error.

In error on a judgment in C. B. it was inſiſted on as cauſe of error, that inſtead of final judgment a reſpondeas ouſter only ought to have been awarded; the defendant in error, on the contrary, maintained that the concluſion of the plea alone rendered it either a plea in bar or in abatement, and that in the preſent caſe the plea was concluded with a petit judicium de narratione, which was always the concluſion of a plea in bar, and therefore the judgment was rightly given. This caſe being adjourned, in Hilary term following, the court affirmed the judgment given in the court of Common Pleas. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 192, 211.

In debt on a bond entered into by wife when ſole, brought againſt huſband and wife; they plead in abatement the bankruptcy of the huſband, and conclude ſuch plea hoc parati ſunt verificare. On ſpecial demurrer had, the court were of opinion that the bond was diſcharged by the bankruptcy of the huſband; but being alſo of opinion that they ought to have concluded their plea to the country, and this being one of the cauſes aſſigned for demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff. In the courſe of the pleadings it was obſerved, that where a perſon covenants not to ſue huſband and wife on a bond of the wife's when ſingle, during the life of the huſband, and, notwithſtanding, ſues for the ſame, ſuch covenant muſt be pleaded in abatement, and not in bar. Vid. Mod. Rep vol. 10. page 160, 243.

Hilary, 1 Geo. Aylworth v. Woolley. Error.

On an action being brought in C. B. on three ſeveral promiſes; the firſt for 55 l. the ſecond for 65 l. and the third for 65 l. the defendant pleaded as to part non aſſumpſit, and as to part in abatement; viz. quoad 50 l. of the firſt promiſe, 60 l. of the ſecond, and 60 l. of the third; that the writ may be quaſhed, there being three actions depending in the court of Exchequer for the ſame ſums. To this action judgment of reſpondeas ouſter was given.

On error brought in this court, the judgment in the C. B. was affirmed; becauſe a plea in abatement muſt go to the whole, and not to part, and the three ſuits depending in the Exchequer might have been pleaded in bar of the whole. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 286.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Gilbert v. Bath.

It was held by the court, according to 1 Saund. 291. that where the defendant in debt on bond was deſirous of taking advantage of another perſon's being jointly bound, he muſt plead the ſame in abatement, and cannot demur on oyer; for if he does, the court will preſume the other did not ſeal it.

In this caſe there was a demurrer, and judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 503.

The defendant pleading in abatement that he was a horner, abſque hoc that he was a yeoman; on demurrer it was argued and determined, that yeoman was a good addition within Stat. 1 Hen. 5. as the defendant if not a gentleman muſt be a yeoman, and a horner being a mechanic muſt be of the degree of yeoman, and therefore the plaintiff has his election to name the defendant, by his degree or by his trade; and this plea being in abatement, the defendant ought to have given the plaintiff a better writ, and directly in the ſame ſpecies of addition oppoſite to that of yeoman, which the defendant ought to have pleaded; for which reaſon the plea was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 52.

N. B. Lord Chief Juſtice Pratt doubted whether it was neceſſary for the writ to be in the ſame ſpecies of addition.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Gray v. Mendez.

In an action by original againſt the defendant, the defendant was deſcribed as of ſuch a place yeoman, to which he pleaded in abatement that he was a lime merchant, and not a yeoman; on demurrer it was held by the court an ill plea, and a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded on this ground, viz. that every man, be he a trader or not, has a degree by which he may be known, and having ſuch (if he has a trade alſo) the the plaintiff has his election to ſue him by which he pleaſes; if by his degree, it is not enough for the defendant to ſay he is of ſuch a trade, becauſe he does not thereby give the plaintiff a bettter writ: the defendant ſhould have ſhewn himſelf to be of a degree higher than a yeoman, which would have abated the plaintiff's writ, and given him a better. This caſe was determined on the authority of Maſon v. Buſhell or Ruſſell. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 52. where a man was ſued as a yeoman, and he pleaded he was a horner; on which the court awarded a reſpondeas ouſter. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 556.

Hilary, 9 Geo. Atwood v. Beach.

On a judgment being had againſt the principal, and a ſci. fa. brought againſt the bail of J. K. whoſe real name was T. K. after two nihils returned, the bail were taken in execution: on motion they were diſcharged. Sed per curiam, if the ſci. fa. had been returned ſci. feci they could not be diſcharged, becauſe this matter they might have pleaded in abatement. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 114.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Addiſon v. Paterſon.

On a ſci. fa. brought againſt bail, both principal and bail pleaded the miſnomer of the principal in abatement; on demurrer it was determined that the bail could not plead ſuch miſnomer in abatement, but the principal might. *Vid. Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Cowper v. Ginger. Error.

On a writ of error brought by one on a judgment in the C. B. againſt two, which writ was quaſhed; the plaintiff in error having brought another writ of error coram vobis, &c. the defendant in error moved for coſts, as if judgment had been affirmed; and it being objected that the defendant in error was not entitled to coſts, unleſs the ſecond writ was alſo quaſhed; it was argued that a writ of error coram vobis, &c. would not lie in this caſe, becauſe the record was not removed by the firſt writ; the diſtinction being, that where the firſt writ of error abates or is diſcontinued, the record is removed, and error coram vobis &c. will lie; but that where the ſtile of the court is varied, or the parties not ſufficiently deſcribed, the writ of error muſt be quaſhed; in which caſe the record is not removed, becauſe it varies from the writ, and of courſe a writ of errror coram vobis &c. will not lie. The court were unanimouſly of opinion, that the defendant in error ſhould have coſts as if the judgment had been affirmed, though the firſt writ was quaſhed; and with reſpect to the writ of error coram vobis &c. on ſearching precedents, three of the judges afterwards were of opinion that ſuch writ did lie; grounding their opinion on the caſe reported in 5 Mod. Rep. pages 16, 69. Walker v. Stokoe or Stalkoe. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 318.

To this action the defendant pleaded in abatement, after having had oyer of the orginal that the ſame was not returned, and that the plaintiff had not found pledges: on motion this plea was ſet aſide, it being filed without an affidavit in ſupport of the truth of ſuch plea. The council for the defendant ſaid this appeared by the writ on the oyer, and where a matter is pleaded in abatement which appears on the record (as variances) there is no need of an affidavit, by the act for the amendment of the law. Yet the court held that this did not appear on the oyer of the writ, for nothing appears by ſuch ſight but the writ itſelf, but this is a fact which ought to be verified by affidavit. Vid. Raymond, vol. 2. page 1409.

In an action by original, in this court, the defendant after oyer had pleaded in abatement that the writ was never returned; it was moved by the plaintiff's council to ſet the plea aſide, it not being verified by affidavit; the intent of the act being, that the plaintiff ſhould not be delayed by being obliged to take iſſue, unleſs when the plea came in there was ſome cauſe to believe the truth of it. The council for the defendant replied, that the act did not confine the affirmance of the plea to the oath of the party, but to any other probable cauſe, and what can ſhew the ſame more ſtrongly that this writ was never returned, than when the plaintiff, in giving oyer of ſuch writ, has not ſet out the return?

Per curiam, when the party demands oyer, it is only oyer of the writ whether it be returned or not is a matter of fact, wherein the plea not being verified by affidavit it muſt be ſet aſide. Vid. Str. vol. 1. page 639.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Stiles v. Mead.

The defendant pleaded his privilege as a ſerjeant at law, with the writ annexed; but for want of an affidavit that he had buſineſs there, and there only, the court ſet his plea aſide. Vide Strange, vol 2. page 738.

On an action of treſpaſs againſt the defendant, a cuſtom-houſe officer, for ſeizing ſeveral caſks of French wine, on pretence of their being lees, which ſeizure, on an hearing in the Exchequer, had been determined againſt the officer, it was held that in theſe caſes the officer ſeizes at his peril, and that a probable cauſe is no defence. In the courſe of the evidence it appeared that the plaintiff had a partner in theſe wines, who was not a party to the action. Held by the court, that in an aſſumpſit this circumſtance might be taken advantage of at a trial, but that in treſpaſs it muſt be pleaded in abatement. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 820.

In caſe, on a promiſſory note, the defendant was ſued by the addition of gentleman; to which he pleaded in abatement that he was a merchant, and not a gentleman. On plaintiff's demurring to this plea, a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. The plaintiff had his election to ſue him, either by a name of degree or myſtery. The plea in abatement ſhould give the plaintiff a better writ, as to the addition on which he chuſes to proceed. This caſe is alſo to be found in Raymond, page 1541. Vid. Stra. vol. 2. page 816.

The plaintiff in error, on a judgment recovered againſt his wife, aſſigns for error that ſhe has appeared and pleaded as a feme ſole, whereas ſhe was married to him the ſaid Edward King at the time of her appearance and plea. Jones, the defendant in error, pleads that the ſaid Edward King and one John Kitſon bailed her as a feme ſole; and, by way of eſtoppel, prays they may not be admitted to aver in contradiction to the record: whereto King and wife demur. The judgment was affirmed; the court obſerving that plaintiffs would be badly off, if women, after an arreſt, were permitted to quaſh their proceedings by a marriage pending the ſuit. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 111.

Where a perſon has two cauſes of action, and, by his own ſhewing, has no other remedy for one of them, the ſuit ſhall abate only ſo far as the writ is abateable; but if he may have another writ for the whole, it ſhall abate entirely. Vid. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 271.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Middleton and Wife v. Croft. Prohibition.

The plaintiff on a prohibition, in his declaration, ſays, that by ſtat. 7 and 8 W. 3. cap. 35. a penalty of 10*l.* is laid on every man who marries without licence or banns; notwithſtanding which he and his wife had been cited into the ſpiritual court, for having been married without licence or banns before eight in the morning, contrary to the canon: and that he and his wife are lay perſons, not bound by the ſaid canon. The defendant pleads not guilty as to the contempt, and demurs.

After ſeveral arguments at the bar, Lord Hardwicke, this term, delivered the reſolution of the court, as follows: The three queſtions in this caſe are, whether by the canons of 1603. lay perſons are puniſhable for a clandeſtine marriage? if not, whether by the ancient canon law the ſpiritual court is impowered to proceed againſt a perſon for ſuch marriage? and if the ſpiritual court poſſeſſes ſuch a power, either way, whether that juriſdiction is taken away or not by ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 35?

Upon the whole, we are of opinion, that a conſultation ought to be had on all the points of the ſuit below, except one; viz. the hour when the marriage ceremony was performed. Now, as the canonical hours is only a regulation introduced by the canons of 1603, which in our judgment do not bind in this caſe, the Spiritual Court ought to be reſtrained from making that any ground of their proceedings; in this reſpect therefore the prohibition muſt ſtand, and a conſultation be had concerning the other points.

The plaintiff having prevailed in one point, moved for coſts, ſtat. 8 and 9 W. 3. cap. 11. § 3. giving coſts in all ſuits on prohibitions to the plaintiff obtaining judgment or any award of execution, and coſts were accordingly awarded by the court, the words of the act being expreſs. No rule was however made for coſts, it being objected that the ſuit was abated by the death of the huſband before judgment. The matter was reſumed and ſpoke to, being a nice point, the following Michaelmas term; when it was held by the court, that the ſuit was not abated at common law; or if it was, yet it was helped by ſtat. 8 and 9 W. 3. cap. 11. and a rule accordingly made for taxing coſts for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1056. Caſes Temp. Ld. Hardwicke, page 395.

A writ of error was brought to reverſe a judgment in B. R. in Ireland, on a quare impedit againſt the defendants.

The caſe was as follows: Michael Boyle, late Archbiſhop of Armagh, was ſeiſed in fee, in right of his archbiſhoprick, of the advowſon of the church of Armagh, and collated one Vigors, who was afterwards promoted to the biſhoprick of Leghlin and Fernes by William and Mary, whereby the crown had a right to preſent on ſuch promotion: during the time the advowſon was vacant, their majeſties William and Mary, and Ann, died; and thus the preſentation devolved to King George 1. who was obſtructed therein by the archbiſhop and Whaley.

The archbiſhop having prayed oyer of the writ, pleads that it is true that Michael Boyle was ſeiſed in right of his archbiſhoprick, and that the church became vacant by the promotion of Vigors, whence the right of preſentation was veſted in the crown for that turn: but then he ſays, that William and Mary, by letters patent dated February 23, in the third year of their reign, granted to Peter Drelincourt the deanery of Armagh with all it's appurtenances, &c. by virtue whereof the ſaid Peter was poſſeſſed of the church of Armagh as a member of the deanery, and enjoyed the ſame to his death: that Boyle died, and was ſucceeded by Narciſſus Marſh, upon whoſe death the advowſon came to Thomas Lindeſay, in whoſe time Vigors died: that Drelincourt is ſince dead; whereby the right of preſentation was in Lindeſay, who, on the 5th of May 1722, preſented Whaley the preſent incumbent.

Whaley having likewiſe craved oyer of the writ, pleads that he is parſon imparſonee, collated by the late archbiſhop; that the church became vacant by the promotion of Vigors; and that Drelincourt was preſented to the living by the crown, admitted, inſtituted, and inducted: he then deduces the title from Boyle to Lindeſay; ſhews the death of Vigors; that Drelincourt died on the 8th March 1721; and that Lindeſay preſented him on the 5th of May following, on which he was inducted into the living before the king's writ iſſued: and concludes with a traverſe that the church is ſtill vacant, as alledged in the declaration.

The attorney general demurs to the archbiſhop's plea, becauſe therein it is not averred that the church of Armagh was a member of the deanery, or enjoyed as ſuch by Vigors, or preſented to as ſuch by King William and Queen Mary. And the archbiſhop joins in demurrer.

The attorney general replies to Whaley's plea, that K. William and Q. Mary did not preſent Drelincourt to the church of Armagh; and concludes to the country.

Whaley demurs generally to this replication; and after a joinder in demurrer, and ſeveral continuances, the Court of King's Bench in Ireland adjudged the archbiſhop's plea a good bar, and the attorney general's replication to Whaley's plea inſufficient.

A writ of error is brought here on this judgment, the general errors aſſigned, and in nullo eſt erratum pleaded.

In behalf of the king it was argued, that the Court of K. B. in Ireland had erred in both inſtances.

The court was of opinion that the primate's plea could not poſſibly be maintained, it neither ſhewing a preſentation, nor that the church was a member of the deanery; and therefore that the facts alledged therein are not to be taken into conſideration, not being admitted by the demurrer, becauſe ill pleaded; and that Whaley's plea is a full confeſſion and avoidance without the traverſe; for that reaſon immaterial, and may be paſſed over as ſuch.

With reſpect to the length of time, without doubt tempus occurrit Regi, had there been a preſentation: but on this record we muſt take it that the king comes before any preſentation has been made, and no caſe is cited to prove the king limited in point of time. If the preſentation muſt be made during the life of the promotee, a declaration to be good ought to aver his life, which has not been done. In caſe of ſimony, the crown was not barred by any number of preſentations before ſtat. W. & M. cap. 16. and ſhould the grantee of the next avoidance come 100 years after the death of the incumbent, he is entitled to his turn, provided there has been no preſentation in the interim. Had a common perſon preſented Drelincourt, on his death the crown would have loſt it's turn; but without a preſentation it can be no plenarty againſt the perſon who has the right, which in the preſent inſtance is veſted in the crown, though the advowſon is in another, which cannot alter the caſe.

The court of K. B. in Ireland having therefore erred in both inſtances, the judgment muſt be reverſed in toto, and a writ awarded to admit his majeſty's clerk.

On error in parliament, the lords were of opinion, that this being a civil ſuit of the crown, the writ of error was abated by the death of the king; and on this ground reverſed the judgment of reverſal of this court. A new writ of error being brought, and the ſame record returned, Serjeant Bootle earneſtly requeſted to be heard as to a new point, and objected that the traverſe at the end of Whaley's plea was material; becauſe what preceded could not at all events be a turn, as it does not appear that the preſentee ſubſcribed the articles; and cited 5. Co. Windſor's Caſe. Winch. 13. 2 Cro. 650. Yelv. 115. But the court, in anſwer, ſaid, "Then you cannot be admitted to diſpute this point, not having alledged a ſubſcription of the articles in your plea, where it is as neceſſary as in the declaration, though in fact it has been alledged in neither." And abiding by their former opinions, they a ſecond time reverſed the judgment of the lower court.

On a ſecond writ of error in parliament, all the judges attended and unanimouſly agreed with the K. B. in opinion; yet, notwithſtanding, the houſe of lords affirmed the judgment of the court of King's Bench in Ireland. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 837. Fitz-Gibbons. page 30.

On an action on the caſe brought by the aſſignees of H. a bankrupt againſt the defendant, for goods ſold and delivered by the bankrupt (before he became ſo) to defendant's teſtator in his life-time.

The declaration was a common declaration for goods ſold and delivered, with ſeveral counts; to which action the defendant by leave of court pleaded three ſeveral pleas.

On this plea iſſue is joined.

2d Plea ſays, that T. S. defendant's teſtator did not promiſe or undertake in manner, &c. as the plaintiffs have above complained againſt her, at any time within ſix years next before the day of exhibiting the aforeſaid bill of the ſaid plaintiffs.

3d Plea, and as to the two firſt promiſes mentioned in the plaintiffs declaration, the defendant pleads a ſet-off.

Replication. The plaintiffs, in reply to the defendant's ſecond plea in bar, ſay, that after making the ſeveral promiſes in the bill, and after the ſaid H. became a bankrupt, and alſo after the death of T. S. and within ſix years next after making the ſaid promiſes, to wit, 28th November, 32 Geo. 2. they ſued out a writ of latitat for recovery of their damages, &c.

againſt the ſaid defendant, returnable on Tueſday next, after the Octave of St. Hilary; on the return of which writ, the ſaid defendant appeared by her attorney thereto; and on her appearing, they the ſame term exhibited their bill againſt the ſaid defendant, as executrix as aforeſaid: and the ſaid plaintiffs further ſay, T. S. in his life-time, and within ſix years next before the ſuing out the ſaid writ, did undertake, &c. and this, &c.

To the laſt plea in bar to the two firſt counts, plaintiffs in reply ſay, that H. the bankrupt was not indebted in manner, &c. as defendant has in that plea alledged; on which iſſue is joined.

Rejoinder. The defendant in rejoinder to plaintiff's replication ſays, that by the courſe and cuſtom of this court, a writ of latitat ſued out after the end of any term, is ſuppoſed to have iſſued within the term then preceding; and the ſaid defendant further ſays, that the ſaid writ of latitat in the plaintiff's replication mentioned, was really and truly ſued out by the ſaid plaintiffs, after the ſaid 28th day of November, being the laſt day of Michaelmas term, 32 Geo. 2. viz. on the 8th day of December in the ſame year; and that the writ was ſigned on the ſame day and year, according to the form of the ſtatute; and that the ſaid T. S. did not promiſe or undertake in manner, &c. as the ſaid plaintiffs have above complained, at any time within ſix years next before the ſaid 8th day of December, on which day the ſaid writ was really and in truth ſued out as aforeſaid. And prays, &c.

The plaintiffs demur generally to defendant's rejoinder, and the defendant joins in demurrer.

On arguing this demurrer, the queſtion was, if the truth of the fact could in this caſe be averred contrary to the fiction of law?

1. It is an averment againſt the record, for the teſte of the writ is a matter of record.

2. It is contrary to, and deſtructive of the practice of this court, and tends to deſtroy the writ of latitat itſelf, for the writ would be a nullity if teſted in vacation.

The defendant's council anſwered theſe objections, and in ſupport of his client's defence, quoted many authorities, to which the plaintiff's council replied.

Per curiam, we are all moſt clearly of opinion, that the averment in the defendant's rejoinder, ought by law to be admitted: the demurrer was therefore over-ruled, and judgment for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 950.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Combe v. Pitt.

This was an action of debt for 1500 l. brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for unlawfully corrupting three ſeveral voters, &c. Note, The declaration was of Michaelmas term, 3 Geo. 3. with a memorandum to Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls.

That in the ſame term came one G. L. and exhibited his bill againſt the ſaid defendant of a plea of debt for 4000 l. for the ſame cauſe of action, and for the very ſame offences.

The plaintiff replies, That after the committing the offences in the bill mentioned, and long before the exhibiting of the ſame, and before the day of exhibiting G. L.'s bill, viz. on the 30th June, 2 Geo. 3. the plaintiff ſued forth a writ of latitat againſt the defendant, returnable on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls; and that the defendant before the return of ſuch writ, to wit, on the 29th July following, was duly ſerved with a copy thereof; and that the defendant afterwards, at the return thereof, being on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls, appeared thereto; and therefore the ſaid plaintiff, in Michaelmas term, viz. on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls, exhibited his bill againſt the ſaid defendant for recovery of the ſaid debt, and this, &c. wherefore, &c.

The defendant rejoins, That after the committing of the ſaid ſuppoſed offences in plaintiff's bill mentioned, and long before the day of exhibiting the reſpective bills of the ſaid plaintiff and G. L. viz. on the 30th June 2 Geo. 3. the ſaid G. L. ſued out a latitat againſt the ſaid defendant, returnable on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls, and that afterwards, and before the return of the ſaid writ, and before the defendant was ſerved with a copy of the writ, at the ſuit of the above plaintiff, or knew any thing thereof, viz. on the 7th July, 2 Geo. 3. he was ſerved with a copy of a writ at the ſuit of the ſaid G: L. and in obedience thereto, the ſaid defendant on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls, appeared to the writ of the ſaid G. L. and thereupon in Michaelmas term, to wit, on Saturday next after the Morrow of All Souls laſt paſt, the ſaid G. L. exhibited his bill againſt the ſaid defendant, for the recovery of the ſuppoſed debt, by him demanded as aforeſaid. And this, &c. wherefore, &c.

The plaintiff ſurrejoins, That by the practice of the court latitats ſued out after the end of any term are teſted of the term preceding; avers, that the writ of latitat alledged to have been ſued out by the ſaid G. L. though teſted 30th June, 2 Geo. 3. being the laſt day of Trinity term, was really and in fact ſued out on the 3d day of July in the ſame year, and not before; and that the writ of latitat of the ſaid plaintiff, teſted 30th June aforeſaid, was really and in fact ſued out by the ſaid plaintiff againſt the ſaid defendant, for the cauſe aforeſaid, long before the writ of latitat, in the ſaid rejoinder mentioned, was really and truly ſued out by the ſaid G. L. to wit, on the 1ſt day of July, 2 Geo. 3. to wit, at Ivelcheſter; and that the ſaid plaintiff the ſame day and year in the replication mentioned, did ſerve a copy of his ſaid writ on the ſaid defendant, and on his appearance thereto, exhibited his bill, and declared againſt him as aforeſaid. And this, &c. wherefore, &c.

To this ſurrejoinder, the defendant demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed for cauſe,

1. That the ſurrejoinder does not ſupport the plaintiff's replication; but it is a departure therefrom, to wit, that by the ſaid replication, the plaintiff, in order to maintain a priority of ſuit, pleaded, that he ſued out a writ of latitat againſt the defendant, on the 30th June, 3 Geo. 3. yet by his ſurrejoinder, he inſiſted that the writ of latitat was ſued out at a different time, viz. 1ſt July, 2 Geo. 3. and alſo that the plaintiff has not traverſed or denied the ſervice of the writ ſued out by the ſaid G. L. to be before the ſervice of the writ ſued out by the ſaid plaintiff, as the ſaid defendant has in his rejoinder alledged, and the ſaid ſurrejoinder, &c.

The plaintiff joins in demurrer; and on arguing the pleadings by the plaintiff's and defendant's council, in which they cited many caſes in ſupport of their argument,

Per curiam, we think the plea bad, on the authority of the two caſes in Levintz and Strange; and therefore there is no need to go into any of the ſubſequent pleadings, let the defendant anſwer over. Vide Bur. vol. 3. page 1423.

Hutchinſon v. Thomas.

On an information for uſury, the memorandum was of Michaelmas term. The defendant pleaded, that ante exhibitionem informationis, ſcilicet the ſame term, another perſon exhibited an information alſo againſt him for the ſame uſury, and obtained judgment againſt him; on which the informer demurred, and obtained judgment. 2 Lev. 141.

In debt on ſtat. 15, Car. 2. for ſelling fat lambs alive; the defendant pleaded, that another perſon had informed againſt him, and recovered in the ſame term. On demurrer, it was held ill, according to 2 Lev. 141. becauſe the defendant did not ſet out the days on which each bill was exhibited, that ſo the court might judge of the priority. Strange vol. 2. p. 1169.

Adjudged that the defendant may plead in abatement of a declaration where it is by original, becauſe the pleas are different; but if the action is by bill, he can only plead in abatement of the bill, becauſe both declaration and bill are the ſame thing. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 144.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Lepiot v. Browne.

Browne being removed by habeas into cuſtod. mareſchalli, was declared againſt by the name of J. B. of &c. in cuſtod. mareſchalli, and pleaded in abatement for want of diſtinguiſhing him from his father, whoſe name was J. alſo, and lived in the ſame town. It was urged, that tho' this action was by bill, and therefore not within the ſtatute of additions, yet by the common law, there ought to be an addition to diſtinguiſh father and ſon, viz. ſenior and junior; and if the ſon is ſued there ought to be an addition, otherwiſe if the father. Chief Juſtice Holt obſerved, that if father and ſon are both called J. S. a deviſe to J. S. prima facie is to be underſtood to intend the father; but if it appears that the deviſor knew not the father, the ſon ſhall take the deviſe: and ſuppoſe a perſon deals with the ſon, and knows nothing of the father, muſt he bring the action againſt J. S. with the addition of junior? If this was an original, and the father and ſon lived in different counties, the addition of junior would have been unneceſſary; but this being an action v. J. B. in cuſtod. mareſchalli, you ſhould have ſhewn, that the father was in cuſtod. mareſc. alſo; and therefore let it go over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 199.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Biſhop v. Eagle.

On a writ of accompt brought by the churchwardens of St. Bartholomew in London againſt the defendant, on a motion in arreſt of judgment; the court abated the declaration in part, for uncertainty of the charge, and gave judgment quod computet for the reſidue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 186.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Skinner v. Newton. Error.

On an action of treſpaſs brought in an inferior court, the plaintiff declares, that defendant vi & armis tres pecias terræ fregit, &c. ipſius the plaintiff, containing ſo many acres in ſuch a place; defendant juſtified to this action, by ſhewing a right to the way by preſcription; on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment in conſequence.

On a writ of error being brought on this judgment, it was maintained, that the declaration ſhould have been worded clauſ. terræ, inſtead of pecias; treſpaſs being a formed action; and in theſe actions where a form of words is provided by law, the plaintiff cannot alter ſuch form of words, but muſt follow thoſe appropriated by law, and none others.

The defendant in error in his reply inſiſted, that though clauſum was the word uſed in the regiſter, it was but a matter of form, and therefore pleadable in abatement only, and not aſſignable as a matter of error after verdict and judgment, and quoted, Moor, 422, where pecias terræ was held good in ejectment.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, and Judge Powell, were of opinion, that there was no want of certainty in the declaration, and after verdict and judgment, it was hard to reverſe a judgment for mere form, but held, that real actions being formed actions, the party muſt ſtrictly comply with the form ſettled in the regiſter, though it was not neceſſary in perſonal actions.

Judge Eyre joined in opinion with the former judges, and ſaid further, that error does not remove the writ nor plaint, but only the proceedings, that the plaintiff in error could not be let in to make this objection, but from one or the other, that if the plaint was removed, it could not appear therein, it being only in placito tranſgreſſionis ſuper caſum, without ſhewing the matter further.

On this, Judge Powell gave his further opinion, that he thought this reaſon of his brother Eyre of no weight, for that a writ of error in a judgment given in a ſuperior court, does not remove the record or plaint, but only the proceedings; that in the court diminution may be alledged, but yet was of opinion, that writs of error on judgments in an inferior court removes the whole, as there was no alledging of diminution in ſuch inferior court. This matter was adjourned by the court, and in Trinity term, 12 Ann, was ſpoken to again, when Judge Eyre was of opinion, that the defendant, after pleading to this defect in declaration, could not take advantage of it in error, though notwithſtanding in Trinity term, 13 Ann. Judgment was reverſed niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 140, 169.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Parker v. Langley.

In an action on the caſe for a malicious proſecution, the defendant demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed for cauſe, that the plaintiff had not ſhewn in his declaration what became of this malicious proſecution. The matter, after argument, being adjourned, in Hilary term following, the court gave judgment, that the declaration was naught, for the reaſon alledged in the demurrer. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 145. 210.

To the perſon of the plaintiff or defendant.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Weſt v. Sutton.

A ſci. fa. being brought on a judgment in aſſize, for the office of marſhal; the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy; & hoc, &c. the plaintiff replied he was a ſubject born, ſc. at ——— in England, et hoc paratus eſt verificare. On demurrer. Holt, C. J. ſaid, 1ſt, the plaintiff ſhould have concluded to the country; for alien born, when pleaded in abatement, is triable where the writ is brought; for which reaſon the replication muſt conclude to the country; otherwiſe, where alien born is pleaded in bar, in which caſe the replication muſt conclude, et hoc paratus eſt verificare.

2dly, This cannot be pleaded in abatement to the ſci. fa. becauſe it was pleadable in abatement to the action. The defendant ſhall not diſable the plaintiff from having execution, ſince he admitted him able to have judgment: ideo conſiderat. eſt quod reſpondeat. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 853.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Nutt v. Mills.

On an action of debt, the defendant pleaded in abatement, quod ante exhibitionem billae querens ſuſcepit ſuper ſe ordinem militarem et jam miles exiſtit. To which plea the plaintiff demurred, and offered in demurrer, that the plea is uncertain, inaſmuch as it did not appear what ſort of knight the plaintiff was created, he might be a knight of the garter, or a knight of Malta, &c. per curiam, ordo militaris is certain enough. It was then ſaid, that there was no venue laid where the plaintiff ſuſcepit ordinem. Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, there need none, becauſe the plea going to the perſon, it ſhall be tried where the action is laid. By the demurrer, the plaintiff has confeſſed himſelf a knight. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1014.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Pie v. Cooper.

In an action on the caſe, the defendant pleads in abatement, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, and laid no venue. On demurrer, the plea was held good, and that the plaintiff might have replied, that he was born in England, generally. But if ſuch a matter is pleaded in bar, it muſt be pleaded with a venue, and the plaintiff muſt reply, that he was born in ſuch a particular place in England: and accordingly, judgment was given, quod billa caſſetur. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1243.

Trinity, 4 Geo. George v. Powell.

In debt on aſſumpſit for money lent and received to plaintiff's uſe, and on an inſimul computaſſet, the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was an alien born in France, a ſubject of Lewis 14, King of France, and an enemy to the King of England, and that his parents were native ſubjects of that Prince, and not under the obedience of the King of England, and that he was at the time of filing the bill, and now is, a ſubject to the King of France, an enemy to the King. It was replied on the part of the plaintiff, that he was at the time of the promiſes made by the defendant, and now remains, in this kingdom, by licence and protection of the King, viz. apud ſuch a place. On demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Per curiam. This is a good replication; where the plea is in abatement to the writ, and relates to the perſon, it muſt be tried where the writ is brought, and if an alien enemy is pleaded in ſuch caſe, ſuch plea muſt conclude to the country; but if an alien enemy is pleaded in bar, the plaintiff muſt reply, that he was born in ſuch a place in England, and this he is ready to verify. This reconciles the difference in the books concerning this plea. A plea of an alien enemy to a ſci. fa. on a judgment in aſſize, has been held a bad plea after a judgment in freehold, if recovery in freehold, but it is a good plea to the original action. VideForteſcue, page 221.

In debt on bond; the defendant after a general imparlance, pleaded ſtat. 1 Geo. cap. 13. ſect. 23. and recuſancy in diſability of the perſon of the plaintiff. On demurrer, it being objected, that this plea ought not to be allowed after imparlance, in ſupport whereof, Co. Lit. 128. Mod. Rep. 14. Lev. 343. Vent. 76. 135. and ſeveral other authorities were quoted; the defendant's council in reply obſerved, that the caſes cited were all on pleas in abatement to the writ, and when it is abated, the plaintiff is intitled to a new writ; but that this plea is in diſability of the plaintiff's having any writ at all during his recuſancy. Several other objections to this plea were offered by the plaintiff, for that it concluded a prout patet de recordo, whereas it ought to have been immediately pleaded with a profert hic in curia ſub pede ſigilli, and that ſtat. 3 Jac. cap. 4. gives the ſeſſions power to make proclamation againſt recuſants to render themſelves, &c. and if they do not, and ſuch default is recorded, it ſhall be as ſufficient a conviction as a trial by verdict; whereas the defendant has not pleaded any ſuch default recorded at the ſeſſions. Fourthly, that the plea was ill concluded, it being, that the defendant eat inde ſine die, when it ought to have been ideo loquela prædict. remaneat ſine die quouſque, diſability being only temporary till conformity; and, laſtly, it was obſerved, that the defendant did not ſet forth that the plaintiff had not taken the oaths ſince the King's acceſſion to the crown; becauſe, had he taken them ſince ſuch acceſſion, the ſtatute did not extend to him. The matter was adjourned: in Trinity, 11 Geo. the court granted a reſpondeas ouſter agard without further debate, ſaying ſuch plea could never be ſupported after an imparlance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 44. Stra. vol. 1. page 521.

On motion to ſet aſide the execution, quia erronice emanavit, the writ of error not abating by the death of the defendant in error, and of courſe the execution of the judgment ſuſpended thereby, the court were of the ſame opinion. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 439.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Falmouth v. Strode.

In ejectment, the defendant died the day before the aſſizes, yet the cauſe was tried, and after a long defence, judgment given for the plaintiff; on motion in arreſt thereof, it was objected, that this being matter of fact, and not aſſignable after verdict, the repreſentative of the defendant ought to bring a writ of error.

Chief Juſtice Holt obſerved, that if the defendant had died the day the aſſizes began, though the cauſe had been tried after, ſuch trial had been good, though he had died at one of the clock in the morning, for that the law knew of no fraction of a day, and cited Shelley's caſe. 1 Co. The matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 137.

On an ejectment brought in Devonſhire, the defendant died the day before the aſſizes began at Exeter, and upon a trial on full evidence, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; on motion in arreſt of judgment, the court adjudged that the death of either party before the aſſizes is not remedied by the ſtatute: but if the party dies after the aſſizes begins, though the trial be after his death, that is within the remedy of the ſtatute; for the aſſizes is but one day in law; and this is a remedial law, and to be conſtrued favourably. 2. The court held that in this caſe it was in their diſcretion, on motion to arreſt judgment, or oblige the party to ſeek his remedy by a writ of error: accordingly on their refuſal to arreſt the judgment, the party brought his writ of error, that the point might be tried by a jury. Vide Salk. vol. 1. caſe 21.

In an action of covenant brought on an indenture of leaſe, ſigned by one W. R. whom the plaintiff had impowered by letter of attorney, to demiſe his eſtates in Barbadoes, in which leaſe the defendant covenanted with the plaintiffs to pay the reſerved rent, the defendant pleaded in abatement the death of Mrs. Lowther ſince the laſt continuance. It was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that by ſtat. 8th and 9th W. 3. the action ſurvives by ſuggeſting the death of the party on the roll, and therefore that defendant's plea in abatement ought to be quaſhed. But the court would not quaſh the plea on a motion, wherefore the plaintiff ſuggeſted ſuch death on the roll according to the ſtatute, and proceeded in his action. *Vide Mod. Acceptance.

Of rent, or any other thing in ſatisfaction.

Hilary, 2 W. & Mary. Symonds v. Cudmore.

Sir N. M. tenant for life, remainder in tail to W. his eldeſt ſon, and he being impowered to make leaſes for 21 years or three lives, reſerving the antient rent, did demiſe the ſame to C. W. for 99 years, if R. and N. W. ſhould ſo long live at 8 l. 10 s. per ann.

Sir N. M. died, leaving a ſon and heir, viz. W. M. who being ſeiſed of the remainder in tail, and of the reverſion in fee, expectant on the determination of the eſtate to C. W. did by indenture releaſe the ſaid rent before the determination of ſuch eſtate, and did demiſe the ſaid premiſes to E. W. for 99 years, if G. and W. W. ſhould ſo long live, to take effect after the determination of the eſtate to C. W. as aforeſaid.

W. M. died, leaving a ſon and heir, viz. N. M. and he being iſſue in tail, levied a fine for the uſe of himſelf and his heirs.

On the determination of the firſt leaſe, N. M. entered and demiſed the ſaid premiſes to the plaintiff, on which the defendant being aſſignee of the ſecond leaſe entered.

The queſtion before the court was, whether the defendant's entry was lawful?

The plaintiff's council urged, that the eſtate tail was in being, and if it was barred by the fine, yet it was not extinct; that the leaſe was not void, but voidable by the iſſue in tail; that the cognizee to the fine might avoid it, as the iſſue in tail might have done, had no fine paſſed; that at common law all eſtates of inheritance were fee ſimple, and before ſtat. de donis, &c. the donee had a fee ſimple conditional in this eſtate, and might by fine have barred his iſſue; that this ſtatute altered the common law, being made for the benefit of iſſue, by preventing a tenant in tail before or after iſſue born to change the eſtate.

If a feoffment with livery had been made, the ſame would have worked a diſcontinuance of ſuch tail, becauſe the party had a fee ſimple in ſuch eſtate, and then the iſſue in tail muſt have brought his real action.

By ſtat. 4 Hen. 7. cap. 24. & 32 Hen. 8. cap. 34. a power is given to a tenant in tail to bar his iſſue by fine.

That if the leaſe was not voidable, it muſt remain good while any of the iſſue in tail were living, though that reaſoning could not hold, for the books expreſsly ſay, that alienations made for the benefit of iſſue in tail are binding, or if it was voidable by the iſſue in tail, the cognizee to the fine muſt have the ſame power as the iſſue in tail had before the fine paſſed, and cited 1 Inſt. 466, and ſeveral others.

The defendant's council urged, that the leaſe for years was not to be voided by the iſſue in tail, the ſame ariſing out of the eſtate tail, and alſo out of the reverſion; that the ſame might be a good leaſe, though the tail might be barred by the fine, for the leaſe was made by W. M. when tenant in tail, and therefore could not be voided againſt his iſſue; the iſſue having levied a fine, the eſtate tail becomes extinct, and the cognizee cannot come in privity of this act, he being a meer ſtranger, and therefore this act cannot void the leaſe, and ſupported his arguments by the authority of ſeveral caſes.

The court in Hilary term, 4th and 5th W. and Mary gave judgment on this caſe for the defendant, and that the cognizee of the fine could not void the leaſe made by W. M. and gave the following reaſons for ſuch their opinion, viz.

That it was an intereſt derived out of the eſtate tail, and charged the reverſion in fee; that after the determination of the leaſe, made by Sir N. M. his ſon, who had the remainder in tail, might by recovery have barred the eſtate tail.

That if the leaſe was not void, but voidable only by the iſſue in tail, yet after he had paſſed a fine, the cognizee could never void it, becauſe not in privity to the eſtate tail, which is extinguiſhed by the fine, and the cognizor having once diveſted himſelf of the power he had to avoid the leaſe, can never after transfer it to the cognizee.

By ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. the eſtate tail is barred, the words of the ſtatute being, that a fine levied of lands entailed on the cognizor, or any of his anceſtors, ſhall be a bar againſt the perſon and his anceſtors claiming by force of ſuch tail.

The court have often determined on this ſtatute, that a fine levied by a remainder man in tail during the eſtate of a tenant for life, was an extinguiſhment of the entail; and on this principle that otherwiſe there would be two fee ſimples in one and the ſame perſon, viz. a qualified fee determinable on the death of a tenant in tail dying without iſſue, and an abſolute fee out of the reverſion.

The acceptance or refuſal of rent cannot operate either to affirm or avoid the leaſe, for unleſs the iſſue in tail doth enter, the leaſe ſhall not be avoided.

The court gave it as their opinion, that W. M. the tenant in tail, having alſo the reverſion in fee, the leaſe made by him iſſues out of both the eſtates, and the iſſue in tail hath extinguiſhed the eſtate tail, by levying the fine, ſo that the cognizee muſt be in of the reverſion in fee. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 1.

On error brought to reverſe a judgment in C. B. on an action of covenant, the plaintiff declared that ſhe was poſſeſſed of certain houſes in St. Martin's Lane for a certain term of years, and that ſhe demiſed the ſame to R. G. for twenty-one years, under a certain rent, which by ſuch demiſe he covenanted to pay,

That before a leaſe of the ſaid premiſes was ſealed, an indorſement was made thereon, that R. G. ſhould pay every year to the defendant, the leſſee, twelve bottles of Canary wine. The leſſee entered, &c. and made his will, and appointed S. G. ſole executrix thereof, and ſoon after died.

The executrix proved the ſaid will, and took poſſeſſion of the ſaid premiſes, and afterwards aſſigned the ſaid term to Pitcher, the defendant at law, who entered and was poſſeſſed, &c. That he the ſaid Pitcher had not performed the covenants, and aſſigned the breach in non-payment of twenty-four bottles of ſack due for two years, and for arrears of rent, after the aſſignment made to him.

The defendant T. P. pleaded, that before the ſaid wine and rent became due, he aſſigned his intereſt to J. M. but did not plead notice given to the plaintiff; or that ſhe had accepted the rent.

On demurrer, judgment was given in the C. B. for the plaintiff, on which a writ of error was brought in this court, and the common errors aſſigned.

The queſtion before the court was,

1. Whether the defendant P. ought to have pleaded, that he had given the plaintiff T. notice?

2. If ſuch notice was neceſſary, yet whether this action would lie againſt the defendant after this aſſignment made by him to Mott, &c.

To the firſt point, the plaintiff's council urged, that the defendant was ſtill liable, notwithſtanding the aſſignment, without he had pleaded notice thereof, for otherwiſe the plaintiff could not know againſt whom to bring his action, or where to ſeek his remedy, and cited the caſe of Kighly v. Bulkly. Sid. 338. in ſupport of his argument.

The privity of eſtate is transferred by this aſſignment, ſo that nothing remains on which notice can be fixed, which is a bar to the action; the plaintiff ought to have taken notice at her peril; for when an aſſignment is made, it is publicly known to whom, and the perſon in poſſeſſion is always taken to be the aſſignee.

To the ſecond point; that it was neceſſary on the part of the defendant to plead that he gave notice of ſuch aſſignment, yet the plaintiff cannot have judgment againſt this defendant, becauſe no action will lie, for to ſupport ſuch action, either a privity of contract or eſtate, muſt be proved. In this caſe, no privity of contract is pretended to between them, the defendant being only an aſſignee of an executrix of a term; and as to privity in law, that can only remain ſo long as the eſtate exiſts, and no longer. In ſupport of this point, the caſe of Overton v. Sydall's, Cro. Eliz. page 555. was cited as a caſe in point.

An objection aroſe, that as the action was brought as well on the covenant for the bottles of wine, as for the rent, and entire damages were given thereon, ſuch verdict is naught, becauſe the wine begets an action of covenant, it being a reſervation, and not a rent, and therefore cannot be aſſigned to the defendant, who from the nature of the tranſaction, muſt be a ſtranger to ſuch covenant.

The plaintiff's council agreed, that on this particular objection there was no privity of contract, tho' there was a privity of eſtate remaining, notwithſtanding the aſſignment, which was not compleated till notice given, and argued, that if the law was otherwiſe, great miſchief would ariſe, the leſſor having no perſon to bring his action againſt; for if he brought it againſt the under-tenant, unleſs he could prove the aſſignment to him, he muſt be nonſuited, and therefore in idea of law, the privity muſt continue, though in rei veritate the eſtate is aſſigned.

That as to the laſt objection, that by the indorſement, the payment of the wine is no rent, but a reſervation, &c. the plaintiff's council anſwered, That it was not material whether it was conſidered as a reſervation or not, it being a duty which aroſe by means of the thing demiſed, and muſt attend the ſame, and cited 1 Inſt. p. 385. in ſupport of his argument.

After two arguments, in Eaſter term following, judgment was given for the defendant in the original action, and the judgment in C. B. reverſed. The court being of opinion, that the aſſignee was chargeable, by reaſon of the land; and that when he had parted with his eſtate, it was not reaſonable he ſhould be any longer liable, becauſe the executor of the leſſee is ſtill bound to perform the covenants in the leaſe, ſo long as ſhe has aſſets. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 71.

Acceptance.

No one is bound to accept a thing by parcels, to which he has a right in Groſs.

Adjudged, that where a perſon is intitled to a thing in groſs, he is not obliged to accept it by parcels; thus for example, if A. is bound to deliver ten pipes of wine to B. and tenders him a part thereof only, B. is not compelled to accept it.

Thus where the leſſor diſtrains for rent in arrear, and the leſſee tenders part of it, the leſſor is not bound to accept ſuch part; but if he diſtrains for arrears due at ſeveral days, on which the rent ought to be paid, and the leſſee tenders the arrears due on ſuch a day, the leſſor is bound to accept it. The caſe is the ſame if the leſſor brings an action of debt inſtead of diſtraining for rent due on ſeveral days, but if there is no tender of any part, and the leſſor obtains judgment for the whole, it then becomes an entire duty, and if upon execution ſued out the leſſee tenders any part of the rent, the leſſor is not bound to accept it.

Thus in detinue for divers parcels of goods, if the plaintiff obtains judgment for the whole, and after execution ſued out the defendant tenders a part to the plaintiff, he is not bound to accept it.

A leaſe was granted for a term of years, rendering rent, the ſame to be forfeited if the leſſee aliened or aſſigned to another; the leſſee aliened, and the executor of the alienee paid the rent to the leſſor, and though it was not alledged, that he did know the leaſe was aliened, viz. by aſſignment to another, but only that he (the leſſor) knowing the other to be the executor of the aſſignee, had accepted the rent of him; it was adjudged that the leſſor ſhould not enter for a forfeiture againſt his own acceptance, for it ſhall be intended he had notice of the aſſignment, if the contrary does not appear. See Witchcot's caſe 2. Cro. 398.

Thus if the leſſee covenants for him and his aſſigns to repair, the aſſignee of the leſſee by his accepting ſuch aſſignment is liable, for this is a covenant which runs with the land.

A huſband and wife made leaſe of the lands of the wife, the huſband afterwards died, and the wife married again, and the ſecond huſband accepted the rent. Adjudged, that by ſuch acceptance he had affirmed the leaſe, even quoad the wife herſelf, becauſe ſhe had reſigned her election to her ſecond huſband, and he by his acceptance of the rent had affirmed the leaſe. Dyer 195.

A leaſe was granted to W. R. for life, rendering rent at Michaelmas, with a clauſe of re-entry for non-payment, the rent was in arrear, and afterwards the leſſor brought an action for the rent. Adjudged, that notwithſtanding this action he (the leſſor) might ſtill enter for a breach of the condition, the action for the rent not affirming the leaſe, becauſe it ſhall be intended to be brought as for a duty due upon the contract; but if he had diſtrained for the rent not being paid on the day, then he could never afterwards have entered for a breach of the condition, the diſtreſs affirming the continuance of the leaſe. 2 Inſt. 211.

A gift was made to the huſband and wife, and to the heirs of their bodies; they afterwards made a leaſe of the lands, reſerving rent on ſuch a day, with a clauſe of re-entry; the huſband died, and the rent being in arrear, the iſſue in tail accepted the arrears of rent due. Adjudged, that this was no affirmance of the leaſe as to himſelf, becauſe the rent was not due to him whilſt his mother was living; but it would have been an affirmance if he had accepted it after her death. 3 Rep. 64.

Adjudged, that an acceptance of a collateral matter is no bar to the title of a freehold, and that an acceptance of rent after the day of payment does not bar a right of entry veſted by non-payment, becauſe the rent being a duty, and owing, the party might well accept it; but it is otherwiſe after a diſtreſs taken, or the rent is accepted at another day ſubſequent, for either of them affirms the continuance of the leaſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 3, 4.

Anonymous.

A leaſe for years, on condition to be void if the leſſee aſſigns over the term: the leſſee afterwards made an aſſignment, and the leſſor knowing of ſuch aſſignment, accepted the rent. Adjudged, this will not make the leaſe good, becauſe it was abſolutely void before the acceptance. Vid. Salk. vol. 3. page 4.

Smith v. Arnold.

By ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. a grantee of a reverſion is enabled to enter land, &c. for a condition broken, and to bring an action of covenant, &c. Caſe. A leſſee for years, covenants for himſelf, his executors, &c. to build an outhouſe on the lands of the leſſor, and afterwards the leſſee for life aſſigns his eſtate to T. S. The queſtion before the court was, Whether ſuch aſſignee might be charged in an action of covenant if the outhouſe was not built? It was inſiſted that he could not, becauſe the aſſignor had covenanted only for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators; leaving out the word aſſigns. Adjudged, that the aſſignee, by the acceptance of the poſſeſſion of the lands, had made himſelf ſubject to all the covenants which run with the land, of which repairing is one, and building is another, and to ſuch he is bound, without being named by that ſpecial word aſſigns, but not to any collateral covenants. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 4.

Wallis v. Wood.

A leaſe for years was made to T. S. rendering rent, which being in arrear, the leſſee died inteſtate, and adminiſtration was granted to the defendant; on an action of debt being brought for the rent, he pleaded that the inteſtate had aſſigned the term, and after ſuch aſſignment, the leſſor had accepted rent of the aſſignee. The parties were at iſſue on the acceptance of the rent, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict; but becauſe part of the rent became due pending the action, the plaintiff could never obtain judgment. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 4.

Parker v. Webb.

A leſſor being ſeiſed in fee, demiſed the lands for a term of years to the defendant, rendering rent at Michaelmas and Lady-day; in ſuch leaſe the defendant covenanted to pay the rent, &c. the leſſor afterwards granted the reverſion to the plaintiff; to which grant the defendant attorned, and on an action of covenant brought againſt him for non-payment of the rent, the defendant pleaded, that he had aſſigned his term to D. D. before the reverſion was granted to the plaintiff, and on demurrer,

Per Chief Juſtice Holt, This plea is ill, for the defendant ought to have ſet forth, that the plaintiff had accepted rent from the aſſignee, or that he had notice of the aſſignment; but if this had been pleaded, the plaintiff ſhould ſtill have judgment, becauſe he being grantee of the reverſion, may maintain this action againſt the leſſee even after the aſſignment of the term, and though he had accepted the rent after ſuch aſſignment; and this he might do on the expreſs covenant of the leſſee to pay it, which is a covenant that runs with the land. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 5.

In an action on the caſe on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and a quantum meruit laid in the declaration, the defendant pleaded in bar, that he gave the plaintiff a beaver hat, which he accepted in diſcharge of the debt.

The plaintiff replied by proteſtation, that the defendant did not give the hat in ſatisfaction, and traverſed, that he did accept the hat in ſatisfaction.

On demurrer, defendant's council objected that the traverſe was immaterial, for the giving is the directing the matter, which ought to have been traverſed, and not anſwered by proteſtation, and cited Pynell's caſe, 5 Mod. Rep. p. 117. 677, 678. in ſupport of his arguments.

The council for the plaintiff replied, that either the giving or the acceptance of what is given in ſatisfaction may be traverſed.

Per curiam. Where a thing is pleaded by way of concord it is iſſuable, but if the concord is not executed by giving and receiving, it cannot be pleaded in bar to the action; the beſt way of pleading it is, by ſetting forth that the thing was given and received in full ſatisfaction. It is on this principle bills of exchange are conſidered and declared on as ſpecial contracts, though legally but ſimple contracts.

An agreement to honour a bill is virtually an acceptance of ſuch bill. The acceptance need not be on the bill, it may be by collateral writing.

That the houſes were not in repair, that the locks were taken away, that the hedges were broken down, and the ditches unſcoured.

To this action the defendant pleaded an agreement made between him and plaintiff, viz. that he ſhould employ a workman three or four days in and about the repairing of the houſe, which was to be a ſufficient ſatisfaction, and that he had employed ſuch workman, &c.

On this plea iſſue was joined, and a verdict was given for the defendant.

1. Where an accord and ſatisfaction is pleaded, it muſt be real; in this caſe, it was no more than the defendant was obliged to do.

2. That he had aſſigned ſeveral breaches, and the defendant had only anſwered to the repairs of the houſe, which is a diſcontinuance in pleading, and not aided by a verdict.

3. That the ſatisfaction is uncertain, viz. to employ a man to work three or four days; and for theſe reaſons judgment was ſtayed.

Per curiam. In covenant where the damages are uncertain, and to be recovered as in this caſe, a leſſer thing may be done in ſatisfaction, and then accord and ſatisfaction is a good plea.

In debt on bond where the ſum to be paid is certain, there a leſſer ſum cannot be paid in ſatisfaction of a greater. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 88.

On a writ of error from the C. B. in an indebitatus aſſumpſit for 15 l. the defendant pleads that he gave plaintiff a note of hand for 5 l. in ſatisfaction, which the plaintiff accepted in ſatisfaction. To this plea the plaintiff put in an immaterial replication, to which the defendant demurred.

After judgment given for the plaintiff, it was objected on the writ of error, that the defendant's plea was ill, it appearing that the note for 5 l. could not be an equivalent for 15 l. and that the doctrine of law is that where one contract is to be pleaded in ſatisfaction of another, the ſame ought to be of a higher nature, and cited the following caſes in ſupport thereof, viz. Hob. 68. 2 Keb. 804. 1 Mod. 225. 2 Keb. 857. 5 Co. 117. & 1 Leon. 19.

The plaintiff in error's council argued, that the plaintiff at law's demand was only damages, and therefore it was for his advantage to have the ſame reduced to a certainty, and the ſecurity given for the ſame made negociable; and cited ſeveral caſes from 4 Mod. 43. 1 Mod. 261. 1 Rol. Abr. 122. Raym. 450. & Salk. 76. in ſupport of his arguments.

Per Pratt Chief Juſtice. We are all of opinion, that the defendant's plea is not good, and judgment muſt be affirmed; the plaintiff at law having had a good cauſe of action, the ſame can be extinguiſhed only by a ſatisfaction which he agrees to accept. The agreement alone is not ſufficient, it muſt be made appear to the court, that the ſame was a reaſonable ſatisfaction, and not the reverſe, an unreaſonable one, as in this caſe, if 5 l. be not ſatisfaction for 15 l. a ſimple contract to pay that ſum cannot be a ſatisfaction for another ſimple contract of three times the value. On bond another ſatisfaction has never been allowed to be pleaded in ſatisfaction, unleſs the ſame put the plaintiff in a better ſtate, as by ſhortening the time of payment, &c. Indeed the putting the plaintiff in a better ſituation only is not ſufficient; as for example, a bond with ſureties is better than a ſimple bond, and yet that will not be a ſatisfaction. Vide 1 Brownl. 47. 71. 2 Rol. Abr. 470. The judgment therefore muſt be affirmed. Vide Str. vol. 1. page 426.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Paine v. Maſters.

On an action on the caſe, on a promiſſory note, the defendant pleads the delivery of twenty hogſheads of claret in ſatisfaction, and which he the aforeſaid defendant (inſtead of the plaintiff) received in ſatisfaction.

On a general demurrer, it was objected, that the averring the delivery of the wine to the plaintiff was not ſufficient without ſhewing his acceptance of it, which was wanting in this caſe, by the defendant's name being put inſtead of the plaintiff's, and cited Salk. 629. and the caſe of Hawkſhaw v. Rawlings in K. B. Hilary, 3 Geo. in which caſes the court held, that the bare pleading he gave the thing in ſatisfaction, without ſhewing that the plaintiff received and accepted it as ſuch, would be inſufficient.

Shelburne v. Eundem.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. in debt, where the plaintiff had declared, that by a writing between him and the defendant, it was agreed that the plaintiff on payment or tender of a certain ſum of money by defendant on or before the day of ſhutting up of the books, ſhould transfer to him 200 l. South Sea ſtock, for which conſideration the defendant agreed, that he would on or before the ſhutting of the ſaid books accept ſuch ſtock, and would at that time pay for the ſame. In this agreement there was a proviſo to enable the plaintiff to ſell out ſuch ſtock, if the defendant did not accept it as aforeſaid. The plaintiff avers, that he was at the South Sea houſe on the day of ſhutting the books, and then offered to transfer ſuch ſtock, but defendant never appeared, on which he ſold the ſame, and brought his action for the deficiency.

The defendant pleaded a feoffment in ſatisfaction. On demurrer judgment was given in C. B. that the plea was good: Ideo querens nil capiat per billam.

It was held that ſuch plea was bad, and that the reaſons on which the court below grounded their judgment were not right; yet whether on the whole record ſuch judgment was warranted, was the queſtion that came before the court.

On error it was objected by the council on behalf of the defendant at law, that the plaintiff in his declaration had not ſhewn any cauſe of action, for that the covenant to pay was only an acceptance, and in this caſe there was only a tender inſufficiently alledged, but no acceptance. The defendant covenants to accept on or before the ſhutting the books, and then on ſuch acceptance to pay.

The council on behalf of the plaintiff at law inſiſted, that in the agreement there were mutual covenants, or if there had not, the plea of a feoffment in ſatisfaction admits every thing neceſſary to entitle his client to be ſatisfied, and cited Cro. Car. 384. 1 Vent. 126. Hob. 233. 198. 2 Saund. 180. 1 Sid. 466. Show. 114, 213.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. I think the judgment in C. B. ought to be reverſed. The explanation put on this covenant by the defendant is a ſtrange one, for it is no leſs than to diſcharge himſelf of one covenant by the breach of the other. He acknowledges he did not accept the ſtock as he ought, and yet ſays, I am diſcharged from the payment of the money: this is ſo harſh, that if any fairer meaning can be put on it, I am ſure it ought. The natural import of the words appear to me to be, that then ſhould not relate to the actual acceptance, but only to the time when he covenants to accept: if ſo, theſe being mutual covenants, the breach is well alledged in non-payment of the money; if the plaintiff has failed on his part, ſuch failure will be no excuſe in this court, as the defendant has his action to do himſelf juſtice. Powys J. Accord.

Eyre, Juſtice. This being an action for a deficiency of the ſtock, I am of opinion that the mutual remedy is loſt; if ſo, a tender and refuſal are neceſſary to be averred to entitle the plaintiff to ſell the ſtock. The tender is not ſufficient either as to time or place; as to the time, if nothing is ſhewn to the contrary, the laſt part of the day is what the law appoints, and the plaintiff is deficient in that; as to the place, the plaintiff ſhould have averred, that the South Sea houſe is the proper place, for we cannot take notice of it. Vid. Salk. 623. Lutw. 516.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. If it be neceſſary to aver a tender, the plea muſt be naught. In this I am not clear. I think that payment is ſo far from being to be ſubſequent to, or on acceptance, that the very firſt act which ought to be done according to this contract is, that the plaintiff ſhall on paying transfer, and the adtunc refers to that time. Per cur' ulterius council.

This caſe was moved again, and arguments offered by the council on both ſides, when the court gave the following determination:

Per curiam. The objection is, that the plaintiff ſhould have done the firſt act by transferring or tendering at leaſt, or elſe how could the defendant adtunc accipere et ſolvere proinde. This matter depends on the wording of the indenture, and the intent of the parties. It never could be their intention to make the payment depend on the defendant's acceptance; adtunc refers to the time mentioned for the transfer, and not to the act of transferring. It would be unreaſonable to oblige the plaintiff to part with his ſtock firſt, ſince it is notorious ſuch a ſtep is not the nature of theſe agreements. The money is not paid as the conſideration of the transfer, but of the covenant to transfer. We are all of opinion, that theſe are mutual covenants, and though there is no tender ſufficiently alledged in the declaration, yet it is well enough. The judgment below being for the defendant, when it ought to have been for the plaintiff, is erroneous, and ought to be reverſed: we accordingly reverſe the ſame, and give judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 615.

Account.

Hilary, 2 W. & M. Wilkin v. Wilkin.

On aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declares that the defendant propoſing to go abroad, he delivered to him a box and goods, which the defendant promiſed to diſpoſe of for him, and to give him an account thereof at his return. The defendant pleaded in abatement, he was the plaintiff's bailiff, and merchandized the ſaid goods, and that the plaintiff ought to bring an action of account, and not an action on the caſe: this plea not allowed; for the action being grounded on an expreſs promiſe, aſſumpſit lies as well as account, and the plaintiff has his election. Note; the objection was, that in account againſt the defendant as bailiff, he would have allowances, &c. Per Holt. There is ſome inconvenience in giving a long vague account in evidence to a jury: but wherever a perſon acts as bailiff, he promiſes to render account. Judgment therefore was awarded for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 9.

In indebitatus aſſumpſit, on an inſimul computaſſet, it appeared on the evidence that the debt for which the action was brought, was in right of A. to whom the plaintiff was executor. Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that the matter was againſt the plaintiff; but ordered the caſe to be reſerved for his further conſideration, and that in the interim the plaintiff ſhould have a verdict ſubject to his opinion. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 733.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. May v. King.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit for 50 l. the defendant pleaded that he and the plaintiff came to an account together, and on ſuch account the plaintiff was found in arrear to him in the ſum of 5 s. and on the ſettlement thereof, it was agreed between them, that the one ſhould be quit againſt the other, except the 5 s.

The plaintiff demurred, and exception was taken thereto, that the ſame amounted to the general iſſue.

Per Holt, this ought not to be pleaded ſpecially, but amounts to the general iſſue, and might have been given in evidence afterwards; the plea was waived by conſent, and the defendant pleaded to iſſue. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 680.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. At Niſi Prius at Guildhall.

In account, it appeared on evidence that A. gave a note on C. to B. to receive the money for the uſe of A. B. being indebted to C. C. accepts his own note from B. in diſcharge of B.'s debt.

Per Holt, if A. is intruſted with money by B. to be laid out, and A. lends it to another then in apparent credit, and takes a proper ſecurity for the ſame, as a bond, &c. and the borrower afterwards becomes inſolvent, A. ſhall not be chargeable with ſuch money. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 509.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Spurraway v. Rogers.

In an action on the caſe on a ſpecial promiſe to account, the plaintiff had given goods to a certain value, and a ſum of money to the defendant a Captain of an Eaſt Indiaman, who promiſed to return him the value of ſuch goods in India produce, on his return from his next voyage.

Per Holt, if A. receives goods from B. to account for ſuch goods, if the parties come to account, though A. gives not a true account, yet if B. has accepted ſuch account, the ſame is good; and if one perſon receives goods of another, and expreſsly promiſes to be accountable for them, or to render an account of ſuch goods, an action on the caſe will lie, if he will not account on that promiſe. On a general bailment of goods without a particular promiſe to account, the ſole remedy is by action of account. If one covenant or promiſe ſpecially on receipt of goods, to be accountable for ſuch goods, if he refuſes to account, an action on the covenant or promiſe will lie, and an action of account lies on the general receipt.

Thus if A. buys any thing of B. and gives him a goldſmith's bill in payment, which vendee accepts without any objection thereto, if the goldſmith were worth nothing when his bill was given, and A. was unacquainted therewith, yet it is a good payment, but otherwiſe if A. knew the goldſmith to be in a failing condition. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 517.

Trinity. 3 Ann. The King v. Criſp.

The defendant being indicted for that there was an account ſtated between him and A. by which account he appeared to be indebted to the ſaid A. in ſuch a ſum of money which ſaid account the defendant ſigned, and afterward got the ſame into his hands by falſe pretences, and vi & armis tore it contra pacem, &c.

The defendant's council moved to quaſh the indictment for the following reaſons:

1. Becauſe it was a private offence not indictable.
2. Becauſe it did not ſhew whoſe the property of the papers was.

The court denied the motion, alledging that it was a treſpaſs ab initio. The property is his who was intitled to the debt on the account; and directed the defendant to try it, or demur at his peril. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 175.

Trinity, 5 Ann. Poulter vs Cornwall.

On an indebit. aſſumpſit for money received to account for, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action did not lie, but account: for if a perſon receives money to a ſpecial purpoſe, as to account, or to merchandize, it is not to be demanded of the party as a duty, until he has neglected, or refuſed to apply it according to the truſt under which he received it: and the declaration muſt ſhew a miſapplication, or breach of truſt. Per cur. The verdict has aided the declaration, for it muſt be intended there was proof to the jury, that the defendant refuſed to account, or had done ſomewhat elſe that rendered him an abſolute debtor. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 9.

Eaſter, 10 Ann. Biſhop v. Eagle.

In an action of account brought by the preſent churchwardens againſt the former ones, they plead that the plaintiffs were no churchwardens, on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict given for the plaintiffs, and judgment quod computent.

The defendants before the auditors plead, that they received ſuch a ſum of money as churchwardens through a miſtake, when none was really due to the pariſh, and perceiving the miſtake, they repaid the money. To this plea the plaintiffs demur.

The council for the plaintiffs ſaid, that no plea that had been a good bar of the action could be pleaded before the auditors; they could not plead ne unques receiver, becauſe they did receive, and for the uſe of the pariſh; that they might have pleaded this matter ſpecially, and ſo ſhewn that they were not accountable at the time of the bringing the action.

The defendants council admitted that no plea which would have been a good one to the action could be pleaded before auditors; that in this caſe ne unques receiver could be no plea, as they did receive, and for the uſe of the pariſh, for had they been robbed, or not repaid the money, they muſt have remained accountable.

Powell Juſtice was of opinion, that this matter might have been pleaded ſpecially, though it could not be pleaded generally.

Chief Juſtice Parker was of opinion, that admitting this plea of the defendants to be good before auditors, it will be neceſſary for them to plead ſuch plea as ſhews them to be honeſt men, viz. that they not only received the money by miſtake, but alſo that they repaid the ſame. Whereas if it was taken the other way, and to be a good plea in bar, a receipt by miſtake will be no receipt at all, and it will not be neceſſary to ſhew the repayment, but only that the money did not belong the pariſh, therefore he was inclined to ſupport the defendants plea as far as poſſible. Had the defendants paid the money to the pariſh before the knowledge of the miſtake, the pariſh would have been chargeable with the money; becauſe the repayment was in that caſe an act done in diſcharge of the pariſh, and in conſequence a proper plea before the auditors.

The doubt then was, whether the churchwardens after payment of the money to the pariſh, the uſe for which they received it, and this before the miſtake was known, could have been charged in an indebitatus aſſumpſit for the money. Powell and Parker differed in opinion; the former thought they might, the latter that they could not. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 23.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Spackman v. Huſſey.

The plaintiff declared in the Marſhal's court, on an inſimul computaſſet infra juriſdictionem, &c. and obtained judgment.

On a motion to ſet the ſaid judgment aſide, it was inſiſted on behalf of the plaintiff, that the account doth not alter the duty, for that may ariſe in York, and no other conſideration being laid to entitle the court to any juriſdiction, the judgment ought not to ſtand. Adjudged, that the account was ſufficient to give the court a juriſdiction. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 77.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Page v. Barns.

By ſtat. 4. & 5 Ann, cap. 16. for the amendment of the law, it is enacted, that actions of account may be brought againſt a bailiff or receiver for receiving more than his juſt ſhare; and an action of account being brought on this ſtatute againſt the defendant as bailiff ad mercandizandum, who waged his law, on demurrer it was objected, that wager of law would not lie in account againſt a bailiff ad mercandizandum; but if it had been brought againſt a receiver, and the plaintiff had not ſhewn by whoſe hands, in that caſe wager of law would lie; and it was ſo adjudged in this caſe for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 303.

Hilary, 12 Geo. Goſwell v. Dunkley.

In an action of account for a watch, &c. delivered to the defendant to merchandize; he pleaded that he carried the goods abroad, and in order to ſecure them till he had an opportunity to ſell them, he had put them into a warehouſe, which was broke open, and the goods ſtolen therefrom. On demurrer,

The plaintiff's council objected that this plea was no good diſcharge, for the goods were delivered to the defendant under a ſpecial and particular truſt, and therefore it was not a good defence againſt the plaintiff's demand to ſhew that he lodged them in a warehouſe, which was committing ſuch goods to the care of a third perſon, and therefore he was anſwerable for the loſs, and cited 1 Roll. Abr. 124, 125. Yelv. 202. 1 Bulſt. 101.

The defendant's council anſwered theſe objections, viz. That though this is a perſonal truſt, yet the defendant is not bound to keep them always about him. If he was robbed of them himſelf, it is a diſcharge, and cited 1 Ven. 122. 2 Lev. 5. 524. 4. c. 9. e. 40.

Per curiam. This is prima facie a good account, if the warehouſe was not a place of ſafe cuſtody, that ſhould have been offered in reply; a robbery there is the ſame as if from his perſon; for a bailiff ad mercandizandum is not obliged to keep the goods always about him. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 680.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Anonymous. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment had in an inferior court in aſſumpſit; the plaintiff declared that there having been an account between him and the defendant and the defendant having become indebted to him in ſeveral ſums within the juriſdiction of the court, they at ſuch a time inſimul comput. and that on the account ſtated, it appeared that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in ſuch a ſum, which he promiſed to the plaintiff for value received, &c.

The error inſiſted on was, that the cauſe of action aroſe where the conſideration, to wit, the valore recepto was received, and in this caſe the ſame not being laid to be infra juriſdictionem curiæ, the judgment is erroneous, for nothing ſhall be intended to be within the juriſdiction of an inferior court but what is ſpecially alledged, and laid ſo to be; wherefore this contract not being laid to be made infra juriſdictonem curiæ, the judgment ought to be reverſed.

The defendant's council argued, that it was not neceſſary to lay a venue for the valore recepto, and therefore it need not be laid infra juriſdict. In the preſent caſe, the promiſe was for ſeveral ſums of money which became due within the juriſdiction of the inferior court, and which were aſcertained by ſtating the account between the plaintiff and the defendant, and a venue is laid for the defendant within the juriſdiction of the inferior court, where the action was brought.

Per curiam. If the valore recepto, which aroſe on ſtating the account, extinguiſhes the mutual demands on the account, here is a new cauſe of action ariſing, which ſhould have been laid infra juriſdiction'. &c. but it does not, and therefore the promiſe was brought for the original debt, which is laid to ariſe within the juriſdiction of the court: and therefore the judgment muſt be affirmed. Vide Fitzgib. p. 44.

In an action on account, on a motion, that the fieri fac. executed in the cauſe, and the money levied thereon might be reſtored; it being an action of account to which the defendant had pleaded that he had fully accounted, and on iſſue being joined thereon, a verdict had been found for the plaintiff, and judgment entered, and execution awarded; whereas on this verdict judgment ought to have been only quod computet, and then the parties ſhould have entered into an account before the auditors, and the final judgment ſhould not have been ſigned till this ſtep had been taken.

The plaintiff's council offered in ſupport of their judgment, that ſuppoſing the ſame was wrong, yet the execution ſhould not be ſet aſide on motion, but a writ of error ſhould be brought.

Per curiam. The judgment is wrong, for it ought to be only quod computet, and we will take this to be an irregular judgment, and like a final judgment ſigned before any interlocutory judgment. As the judgment appears to be irregular, we muſt ſet that aſide as well as the execution; for we cannot ſet aſide the execution while the judgment ſtands as a warrant for it.

Let a rule be made, that the judgment and execution be ſet aſide, and let the money levied be reſtored, and the plaintiff pay the coſts of this motion. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. page 394.

Actions

On the caſe.

Hilary, 2 W. & Mary. Cudlip v. Randall.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that on the 20th May, 36 Car. 2. he was poſſeſſed of a term for years in a houſe, and that on the ſame day he let the premiſes to the defendant for ſeven years by indenture, by means whereof the defendant entered, and afterwards the defendant ſo negligently kept his fire, that the houſe was burned.

The defendant pleaded non dimiſit per indenturam prædictam modo et forma prout, &c. on this plea iſſue was joined, and a ſpecial verdict found as follows:

That the plaintiff was poſſeſſed of the premiſes, and that by indenture dated 25th May, made between the plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff demiſed the ſame to the defendant and his aſſigns for ſeven years, excepting thereout to the plaintiff, his executors and adminiſtrators, the houſe commonly called the New Houſe, for the uſe of the plaintiff and his father, and of his and their family, if he or they pleaſe to dwell therein, but not to be let to any other perſon, and at all other times when they do not live there, then to the uſe of the defendant and his aſſigns.

The jury find, that there was a new houſe, and an old houſe, and that a fire happened in a room of the new houſe, then occupied by the defendant, and burnt the ſaid houſe down, and therefore if this was a demiſe modo et forma, they find for the plaintiff; if not, then they find for the defendant.

Two points aroſe on this caſe, which were argued by the council, 1ſt, As to the declaration itſelf, whether an action would lie by the leſſee for years againſt his under leſſee? and held it would, becauſe the plaintiff is chargeable to his leſſee by reaſon of conſequential damages.

2dly, Whether on this iſſue non dimiſit, modo et forma is not a variance between the demiſe and the finding by the jury, and held it was not.

The plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſſed of a houſe, and that he demiſed the ſame, &c. which the defendant denied modo et forma. The jury find that the plaintiff did demiſe the houſe, except the New Houſe. The words modo et forma are here no part of the iſſue, it being ſtill a demiſe of the houſe, and the legal intereſt is in the leſſee, the leſſor had only a priviledge to live in part of ſuch houſe, and if refuſed ſo to do, he had no remedy but by action of covenant, it not creating ſuch an intereſt as will ſupport a ſuit in ejectment.

If a jury find more than they ought, yet judgment ſhall be given for the plaintiff; to ſupport this doctrine, there are many authorities.

This caſe depends on the conſtruction of the words in the exception to the leaſe, in which, if the ſubſequent words qualify thoſe which go before, then an intereſt paſſes to the defendant.

The exception, as it ſtands by itſelf, ſeems to make againſt the plaintiff, but the ſubſequent words make the ſentence plain, that a liberty only is reſerved for the plaintiff to uſe the New Houſe.

Another reaſon urged for the plaintiff was, that this exception is void, becauſe contrary to the demiſe; and two caſes were cited in ſupport thereof, Dyer, 264, and Benl. 181.

As to the firſt point, it was urged, that this action would not lie by a leſſee for years againſt his under leſſee, for the exception made him only tenant at will in the New Houſe.

This exception does not go to the whole term demiſed, but only to the time when the plaintiff ſhall reſide there, it imports no more than an agreement, when one doth not uſe the houſe the other ſhall, and therefore no intereſt paſſes thereby: if ſo, this cannot be a demiſe for ſeven years, modo et forma; no, it is only a leaſe at will, and the caſe Nornby v. Clifton, 1 And. 52. is in point.

In Hilary term, 4 W. the court gave judgment on this caſe, viz. that the defendant was a tenant at will, and no more; that this could not be a leaſe for ſeven years, as it was at the pleaſure of the leſſor, when and how long the defendant ſhould enjoy the ſame; and therefore the court held, that the New Houſe was abſolutely excepted out of the leaſe, and in ſuch a manner as not to be qualified by any ſubſequent words.

As to the action, the court held, that the perſon who has the inheritance cannot have an action againſt a tenant at will, though the leſſee for years may; in this caſe, the eſtate is not the queſtion before the court, but conſequential damages, and that the finding of the jury was out of the iſſue. Judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 9.

Hilary, 2 W. & Mary. Baugh v. Killingworth.

The plaintiff being indebted to the defendant for the rent of a houſe and lands in the country, on coming to London was arreſted by the defendant, on a plaint out of the ſheriff's court of London, for which he brought his action on the caſe; on iſſue joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, and offered to the court, that there was no reaſon to ground an action on the caſe, for though the ſheriff's court had not an original juriſdiction of the cauſe, it being for rent due for a houſe and lands in the country, yet the plaintiff being in the city when he was taken on the plaint, the ſheriff's court had thereby a juriſdiction over his perſon; the plaintiff, if he had thought proper, might have pleaded to the juriſdiction of the action brought againſt him in the ſheriff's court; as the plaintiff has not taken this ſtep, nor alledged in his declaration that he was held to unreaſonable bail, there cannot be a pretence for this action; the court were of the ſame opinion, and therefore ſtayed the judgment obtained. *Vide Mod. Adjudged by the court, that if a plaintiff obtain judgment againſt a defendant for debt and damages, and before execution the money is paid to the plaintiff, who on ſuch payment releaſes the defendant, and afterwards takes him in execution within the year, he ſhall not have an action for this vexation, but muſt bring a writ of audita querela; and if he takes him in execution after the year, ſuch taking is erroneous, but an action will not lie, he muſt ſeek his remedy by writ of error. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 3 W. 3. Payne v. Partridge. & al. Entered Eaſter, 2 W. & M. Roll 43.

The declaration ſtated, that Littleport is an ancient vill, and there has been time out of mind a ferry there, over the river, which was a common paſſage for all the king's ſubjects, on paying toll, and that the inhabitants of Littleport living in the ancient meſſuages or cottages there, were intitled to paſſage toll-free; and that the defendant was owner of the ferry, and ſuffered it to run to decay, and that the defendant refuſed to let the plaintiff go over the ferry, though requeſted ſo to do. Defendant pleaded he had built a bridge in the room of it, &c. On demurrer, the court held, the owner could not put down the ferry and build a bridge without licence and an ad quod damnum; and that the cuſtom was good in the nature of an eaſement, but that the cuſtom conſiſted not in the right to paſs, for that was common to all the King's ſubjects, but in the right to paſs toll-free. That therefore the plaintiff could not maintain an action, for not paſſing; for then any other ſubject might bring an action, which would occaſion endleſs litigation. Aliter, if toll had been exacted, and paid by him; that had been a ſpecial damage, but without ſpecial damage, a perſon can only indict or bring an information. Vide Salk. vol. 1, p. 12.

On an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant on a policy of aſſurance of goods from London to Naples. The adventure was to begin at the time of lading the ſhip at London, and ſeven guineas premium was to be given for every 100 l. inſured, the danger of the ſea only excepted; at the bottom of ſuch policy, theſe words were ſuſcribed,

Warranted to depart with convoy.

The plaintiff in his declaration averred, that the ſhip did depart with convoy, was taken by the enemy, and the defendant had notice thereof, but did not pay the inſurance money, &c.

To this action the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, on which iſſue was joined, and the jury found a ſpecial verdict, viz.

They find the policy of inſurance, and that the defendant ſubſcribed the ſame; that the ſhip departed out of the river under convoy of a man of war; that about the Iſle of Wight ſhe was ſeparated from the convoy through bad weather, and put into Torbay, and was there detained by contrary winds; that the maſter of the ſhip expecting to meet ſuch convoy again, departed out of the harbour, but could not meet with it, being hindered by diſtreſs of weather; that the ſhip was taken by the French, and ſo loſt, &c.

The queſtion that aroſe on this ſtate of the caſe was, what the true meaning of thoſe words are, viz. warranted to depart with convoy?

The plaintiff's council urged, that no more was intended than a departure with convoy at firſt ſetting out, which being provided by the inſurers, and found by the verdict, the plaintiffs had fulfilled their warranty, and therefore ought to recover.

That the ſteps taken by the maſter in coming out of the harbour, &c. ought not to prejudice the plaintiff, the maſter being in the nature of a common carrier to convey goods from one part to another; the jury having found, that the maſter did not miſbehave himſelf, but came forth to meet his convoy, and did endeavour ſo to do, but was hindered by diſtreſs of weather.

That the above warranty implies a mutual covenant, becauſe the words come in the concluſion of the policy. If it was a condition precedent, the plaintiff has performed all he was bound to do, the jury having expreſsly found that the ſhip did depart with convoy.

On the part of the defendant it was argued, by the foregoing words, the ſhip ought to go all the way with convoy, and not only out of the mouth of the river where there is no danger, and that ſhe ſhould not be left at ſea where there is, without convoy.

That a policy of inſurance is but a parol contract, and muſt be conſtrued according to the minds of the parties, and not according to the ſtrict ſenſe of the words, and cited Styl. 132. & 1 Roll. Abr. 450. in ſupport thereof.

That by the jury it was found that the maſter of the ſhip departed out of the harbour, expecting to meet his convoy, which muſt be to ſail with her, and protect her during the reſt of the voyage, or otherwiſe a convoy can be of little uſe.

In this caſe there was a ſeverance by bad weather. Now the ſhip might have come up to the convoy, or the convoy to the ſhip, inſtead of which ſhe did not ſtir out of Torbay till the ſhip was taken; therefore the inſurers being to provide a convoy, here is a breach of the agreement on their ſide, which will hinder them from bringing this action, eſpecially, ſince it is an entire agreement and no precedent condition.

Per curiam. If the inſured have acted contrary to the agreement, the policy fails as much as if there had been a deviation.

The word depart is only terminus a quo, if the ſhip had departed from London, and came back again by fraud, that had been no departure within the intention of this agreement.

On this departure (as it is found by the jury) the voyage was begun with convoy. They were afterwards ſeparated by diſtreſs of weather, and both endeavoured to ſave themſelves, and afterwards to find out each other, ſo that no fraud appeared in the maſter. Judgment was given for the plaintiff, tho' the court obſerved that it might have been otherwiſe if the convoy had run from the ſhip, and by that means had been taken. *Vide Mod. H. brought an action as adminiſtrator to A. and declared againſt the defendant on an indebitatus aſſumpſit to A. and alſo on an inſimul computaſſet between him and the defendant. On demurrer the declaration was held ill; for the plaintiff in one action cannot proſecute his own right and that of another's at the ſame time; becauſe the coſts to be recovered are entire, and and if ſo the plaintiff can never diſtinguiſh how much he is to have as adminiſtrator, and how much he is to hold as his own. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 10.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & Mary. Pearſon v. Garrett.

On an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, on his note of hand for 60 guineas which he was to pay to the plaintiff when he married a particular perſon mentioned between them, as the ground of ſuch note, the plaintiff declared as on a bill of exchange. The defendant demurred, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer.

That the plaintiff in his declaration does not aver that he was a merchant, or that the note was made according to the cuſtom of merchants, neither has he laid any conſideration for the making ſuch note.

This is not ſuch a cuſtom among merchants as this court is compelled to take notice of as part of the law of the land, for in fact there is no ſuch cuſtom, it is only an agreement founded on a brokage, and cannot be within the cuſtom of merchants, there never yet having been any precedents to pay money on ſuch a collateral contingency.

The note is no more than a voluntary note given with a preſent conſideration, and if it was to be allowed to be within the cuſtom of merchants, every thing given without a conſideration, might as well be within the cuſtom, which would quite change the law.

The plaintiff's council argued, that the queſtion was, whether this cuſtom is good or not?

It is ſufficiently alledged in the declaration, it is not laid therein to be inter mercatores only, but inter alias perſonas reſidentes, &c. and if ſuch a cuſtom can be good, then the ſame is admitted by the demurrer.

No reaſon can be offered why ſuch a note ſhould not bind as well as a bond, ſince the conſideration for which it was given was very juſt, for it is lawful for one man to help another to a wife.

Per curiam, if the note had been given by way of commerce, it had been good; but to pay money on ſuch a contingency, cannot be called trading, and therefore not within the cuſtom of merchants; judgment was therefore given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 242.

Williams v. Carey.

Williams the executor of J. S. brought an action on the caſe againſt Carey the ſheriff, for that his teſtator having recovered judgment in debt againſt A. ſued out a fieri facias, whereon the defendant returned, he had levied 19 l. 5 s. 4 s. and that he had taken other goods to the value of 40 s. which remained in his hands for want of buyers, and that A. had no other goods, when in fact the ſheriff had levied the whole debt, and averred that afterwards A. became poor, and unable to ſatisfy the reſidue of his debt. Verdict for the plaintiff. It was objected in arreſt of judgment, that this was a perſonal tort, and not within 4 E. 3. c. 7. But per curiam. There is a great difference between meſne proceſs, as the caſe in Jones 173. Noy 87. Latch 167. Poph. 187. and this caſe, which is a proceſs in execution; for by levying of the goods a right was veſted in the teſtator. Hilary, 7 W. 3. Hicks v. Downling.

The plaintiff declares he was poſſeſſed of a meſſuage for a term of years, adtunc and adhuc venturo, and being poſſeſſed, did demiſe the ſame to the defendant for three years, by virtue thereof defendant entered, and being poſſeſſed, reverſione inde eidem quer. ſpectan. ſo careleſsly kept his fire, that the houſe was burnt; a verdict was given for the plaintiff. On motion in arreſt of judgment it was alledged on behalf of the defendant, that though the plaintiff had a term adtunc & adhuc venturum, yet ſuch term might not be ſo long as the term of the under leſſee for three years, and the preſent action will not lie without a reſiduary intereſt, which makes the defendant liable over to him that is intitled to the inheritance. The court allowed this reaſoning; but thought it appeared here was a reſiduary intereſt, it being laid in the declaration to be an under leaſe, and not an aſſignment, with theſe words, *reverſione inde eidem quer. ſpectan. Hilary, 7 W. 3. Littleton v. Cole.

An action on the caſe was brought for negligently keeping his fire, by reaſon whereof the plaintiff's houſe was burned, viz. in parietibus, in partitionibus, feneſtris, in operibus, ferrariis, & ornamentis ejuſdem domus.

On demurrer this exception was taken to the declaration, that it was too general and uncertain, for damages could not be given for the walls and ornaments of the houſe.

As where treſpaſs was brought for taking diverſa genera apparatuum, or trover for goods with other implements and neceſſaries, the not ſhewing what they are, was held by the court ill after verdict, becauſe they could not give judgment thereon for uncertainty.

Plaintiff's council argued, that the action would have been well brought without the videlicet, for enumerating the particulars, is but a matter of aggravation and inference, and this being an action wherein damages are to be recovered, they may be divided, and the plaintiff ought to recover for ſuch part as is well laid in the declaration, viz. for negligently keeping his fire. The plaintiff therefore had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 181.

On a qui tam action for continuing ſheriff longer than a year, the defendant pleaded that he was an attorney of the C. B. and that attornies of that court time immemorial have not been ſuable elſewhere; the plaintiff's council demurred to this plea. 1. Becauſe the plea is negative, and no juriſdiction given to any other court. 2. Becauſe there is no full defence, but he comes and ſays, &c. 3. Becauſe the King is a party, and may ſue where he pleaſes.

Per curiam. The negative is well enough in this caſe, the priviledge being not triable per pais, nor traverſable, but a matter of law, and we take notice that the court of C. B. has a juriſdiction. He comes and ſays, is ſufficient without defence. An informer cannot ſue where he pleaſes, tho' the King may, and this is the ſuit of the informer; becauſe in caſe of his death the ſuit falls to the ground, and the King is not intitled until recovery.

Proſecutors on qui tam actions are conſidered as common informers, and are liable to pay coſts by by ſtat. 18 Eliz. but where a ſtatute gives a penalty to the party aggrieved, he is not deemed a common informer, nor ſubject to pay coſts within the above ſtatute. 1 And. 116. 3 Cro. 177. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 30.

Trinity, 7 W. 3. Dalſton v. Janſon.

In an action on the caſe, brought againſt a common carrier on the cuſtom of the realm, and alſo a trover laid in the ſame declaration, on not guilty pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

On motion to arreſt judgment, it was alledged, that theſe being different actions, ought not to be joined in one and the ſame declaration, becauſe one is grounded on a contract in law, to which non aſſumpſit is the proper plea, and the other on a tort; and for the ſame reaſon a trover, and an indebitatus aſſumpſit ought not to be joined, nor an ejectment, and an action on the caſe for ſcandalous words, though the ſame iſſue ariſes from both.

Antiently the defendant pleaded ſpecially to the neglect and misfeaſance not guilty, therefore is not the proper iſſue to this action.

An ejectment and an action for an aſſault and battery were joined, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff; but this being the firſt precedent, and the actions ſevering in damages, the court adviſed thereon, and Juſtice Wynch was of opinion that the verdict was not good.

In anſwer it was argued, that in the very caſe cited, Lord Hobart was of opinion that the declaration was good after a verdict; and that of late trover had been joined in all actions brought againſt common carriers.

An action on the caſe for over-riding and not delivering an horſe according to a contract, and alſo for a converſion to the defendant's uſe were joined together. On not guilty pleaded, judgment was awarded for the plaintiff, though he might have demurred to the declaration, it being double; but by pleading the general iſſue, that being found againſt him, it made the declaration good.

So treſpaſs for beating the plaintiff's ſervant per quod ſervitium amiſit, and an action on the caſe for keeping a dog that bit ſheep, were joined in the ſame declaration, and the plaintiff had judgment, tho' it may be a queſtion, whether treſpaſs will lie for the laſt cauſe or not, to let the dog looſe, being only a careleſs action, for which treſpaſs will not lie.

The contract is not what entitles the plaintiff in this caſe, it being an action grounded on a tort, and the iſſue and judgment are the ſame in both.

It is true, there was the like declaration, iſſue, and verdict, in Matthew Hopkin's caſe, and the judgment was arreſted; not for the reaſon now offered, but becauſe the plaintiff had alledged that the defendant was a carrier on the 10th of May, and that he was poſſeſſed of the goods on the 8th of May, on which day he delivered them, ſo that it did not appear he was a carrier on the day of the delivery.

Theſe not being actions of different natures, may be joined; thus, debt on bond and detinue have been joined, ſo alſo debt on a penal ſtatute, and an indebitatus aſſumpſit generally for tithes, and non aſiumpſit pleaded to both actions, which was a diſcontinuance as to the penalty, but Juſtice Twiſden declared that it might have extended to both, if the iſſue had been not guilty.

The diſtinction taken in Buckmere's caſe, that in actions real, founded on a tort, the plaintiff ſhall have but one writ to recover lands, to which he has ſeveral titles; but that in perſonal actions, ſeveral torts may be comprehended in one declaration, is agreeable to this doctrine.

Since the ſtatute de bonis aſportatis in vita teſtatoris, an action will inconteſtably lie againſt the executors of a carrier.

Per curiam. A plaintiff cannot join two actions which require ſeveral iſſues; ſo that the preſent queſtion is, Whether actions may be joined where the ſame plea will ſerve for both?

In ſuch caſes, the defendant formerly pleaded particularly to the neglect, but it has lately been determined that not guilty is a good plea.

But it ſeems ſtrange that debt and detinue ſhould be joined, becauſe thoſe actions have different judgments.

The court on the firſt debate of this caſe inclined for the plaintiff, but afterwards Juſtice Rokeby being preſent in Michaelmas term following, were unanimouſly of opinion that theſe were diſtinct actions; an action againſt a common carrier on the cuſtom of the realm, not being ſo much on a tort as on a contract; for by receiving the goods, and accepting a reward for the carriage, the defendant implicitely undertakes to deliver them ſafely, and therefore the law implies a contract to anſwer the value.

The caſe cited of Mathews and Hopkins was on the common cuſtom of the realm, for negligently carrying a bag of wool, wherein was contained 50 l. and in the ſame declaration was a trover for the ſaid money; and it was held, that theſe were different points, and ought not to be joined, which is a caſe in point; judgment therefore was given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 92.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie in no caſe, but where debt lies; it will not lie on a wager, nor on a mutual promiſe, nor againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange, for his acceptance is but a collateral engagement; it will lie againſt a drawer himſelf, for he was really a debtor by the receipt of the money, and debt would would lie againſt him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 23.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Richards v. Hill.

In an action on the caſe for diverting a water courſe, the plaintiff declared, that he was ſeiſed of a water mill to him and his heirs ſecundum cons. decanatus de Woolverhampton, and ſo preſcribed for a water courſe, &c. and that the defendant intending to deprive him of the profits of the ſaid mill, did divert the water from its ancient courſe, for that he could not molare ſo faſt. There was a verdict for the plaintiff.

The defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, that a copyholder cannot preſcribe in a que eſtate, and the court could not take notice of any other eſtate the plaintiff had by his declaration, he ſhould have left out ſecundum cons. decanatus, for how can he be ſo ſeiſed without ſhewing what that cuſtom was?

2. He doth not ſay that he diverted the water from the mill, but only from its ancient courſe per quod, &c.

3. The matter of his damages is laid inſenſibly, for the giſt of the action is, that the plaintiff had a mill, out of which he had profit by grinding; now the word molare is inſenſible, and there is a more proper word for grinding.

The firſt of theſe objections the court over-ruled, for if the plaintiff was ſeiſed of an eſtate in Burrough Engliſh that had been a cuſtomary eſtate, becauſe he hath the ſame by the cuſtom of the manor, and in ſuch cuſtom he may preſcribe.

To the ſecond objection the court held, that the word molare being inſenſible, no damages could be given, and that the declaration had been good if the word molare had been left out. Plaintiff therefore had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 206.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. in an action on the caſe on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and a quantum meruit brought by the plaintiff for meat, &c. which the defendant had when he ſtood candidate for Stockbridge; plaintiff declared on three ſeveral promiſes, the laſt count ran thus, viz. Cumque etiam prædic. the defendant in conſideration that the plaintiff at his requeſt had found and provided for the defendant, meat, &c. ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, and doth not ſay that the defendant ſuper ſe aſſumpſit. This cauſe being tried at the aſſizes at Winton, a verdict and entire damages were given for the plaintiff.

The defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, that the laſt promiſe was void, becauſe the plaintiff does not alledge in his declaration, that the defendant had promiſed, ſo that a ſtranger might make ſuch promiſe, and if ſo the defendant is not bound thereto.

As the charge is laid in the declaration, it cannot be taken by intendment to be the defendant; becauſe ſuch charge is the very giſt of the action, and as the jury have found that the defendant ſuper ſe aſſumpſit modo & forma, and have aſſeſſed entire damages by occaſion of the premiſes; and every promiſe being a ſeparate and diſtinct declaration, and one of theſe counts being wrong laid, the ſame is therefore naught: for example, in aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration he would marry the defendant's daughter, ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, to pay plaintiff 100 l. On defendant's pleading non aſſumpſit, the plaintiff had a verdict; but defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, which he carried, becauſe the plaintiff did not alledge in his declaration that the defendant ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, which makes this a caſe in point. Cro. Eliz. 913. Noy, 72.

It would have been good on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, becauſe where there is a debt the law preſumes a promiſe in the debtor to pay ſuch debt.

It was anſwered by the plaintiff's council, that if the conſideration be void, then the jury have not given damages for it, for they cannot give a verdict either for no promiſe, or a bad promiſe.

As to the caſe before cited, there were three perſons named in the declaration, the defendant's daughter was laſt named, and the words ſuper ſe aſſumpſit immediately following, might relate to her, which was the reaſon of that judgment; in this caſe there are but two perſons named, ſo that when the plaintiff declared againſt the defendant, it muſt of neceſſity be intended that the defendant aſſumpſit, and no one elſe, becauſe the conſideration ariſes from him, and the words cumque etiam in the third promiſe couple that ſentence to the firſt.

If it had been that the plaintiff aſſumpſit to pay himſelf, it had been good after a verdict.

And ſo it would if there had been ſeveral conſiderations alledged in one declaration, and one of them is ſufficient, though the others are naught both as to matter and form, yet notwithſtanding the declaration will be good; and ſo,

Where an aſſumpſit was brought againſt an executor on the promiſe of his teſtator, and he pleaded that he himſelf made no ſuch promiſe, after a verdict it ſhall be intended to refer to the promiſe of the teſtator.

In an action on the caſe on the cuſtom of the realm, for negligently keeping his fire in his cloſe, whereby it burnt the corn in the cloſe of the plaintiff, after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the cuſtom extends only to fire in a man's houſe, or curtilage, (goods of gueſts,) which are in his poſſeſſion. Not allowed, the fire in a man's field being his fire as well as that in his houſe; he made it, and muſt take care that it does no harm, and anſwer the damage if it does; and every man muſt uſe his own ſo as not to hurt another; but had a ſudden ſtorm aroſe, which it was out of his power to ſtop, it was matter of evidence, and ought to have been ſhewn. Holt, Rokeſby and Eyre againſt the opinion of Turton, made a diſtinction between fire in an houſe which is in a man's cuſtody and power, and fire in a field which is not properly ſo; and thought it would diſcourage huſbandry, as it was cuſtomary for farmers to burn ſtubble, &c. On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought by an executor for a debt due to the teſtator, and non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos pleaded, it appeared on evidence that the goods were ſold above ſix years ago, and that the defendant, after the ſix years, being requeſted to pay, denied that he bought the goods; but further ſaid, prove it, and I will pay you. It was inſiſted that this promiſe, though conditional, brings it back within the ſtatute of limitations, the defendant waiving the benefit of the act as much as by an expreſs promiſe.

This caſe being reſerved for argument, ten of the judges afterwards gave it as their opinion, that if the executor proved the delivery of the goods at any time, the above promiſe was ſufficient to bring the caſe out of the ſtatute of limitations, and the delivery having been proved in this caſe, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 38. 421.

In an action on the caſe for maliciouſly cauſing the plaintiff to be indicted for a riot, brought in the C. B. after an acquittal by verdict; on not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff obtained a verdict, and the judgment being now affirmed in this court, it was objected that this would diſcourage proſecutions, as at this rate the proſecutor whenever he miſcarries will be liable to an action.

Per curiam. 1. A civil action differs very widely from an indictment. In that the defendant has his coſts, and at common law the plaintiff was amerced for ſlander, for the eſtreats of which amerciaments, warrants were conſtantly delivered to the coroners, who by a jury affeered them according to the malice, or injury done the plaintiff. Alſo in civil actions the plaintiff aſſerts a right, or complains of an injury, and therefore the court held, that to ſay A. is a baſtard, and I am the heir, is not actionable; becauſe the perſon who ſpeaks the words is a party concerned and aſſerts a right. Otherwiſe, if he had not added, and I am the heir. See 4 Co. So to bring an action, though there be no good ground, is not actionable, becauſe it is a claim of right, and the plaintiff has found pledges, is amerciable for ſlander, and is liable to coſts; but yet if a perſon has a cauſe of action for a ſmall ſum, and takes out a latitat for a very large ſum, or has no cauſe of action at all, and yet maliciouſly ſues the plaintiff on purpoſe to impriſon him for want of bail, or do him ſome ſpecial prejudice, an action on the caſe lies; but then it is not enough to declare generally, that he brought an action againſt the now plaintiff out of malice and without juſt cauſe, whereby he put him to great charge, &c. but he muſt ſhew the grievance ſpecially, as in 1 Sid. 424. viz. that whereas he owed the defendant 100 l. he the ſaid defendant ſued him for 500 l. and to prevent his being bailed affirmed to the ſheriff 500 l. was due, whereby he the ſaid plaintiff was impriſoned for want of bail; or 1 Saund. 228. for that the defendant intending to procure his impriſonment, without any cauſe of action, ſued him in an action for 300 l. whereon he was arreſted and impriſoned, &c. and yet if a perſon not concerned, as a ſtranger, procures another to ſue me without cauſe, I may maintain an action againſt him generally.

2. If a man is falſely and maliciouſly indicted of any crime that may prejudice his fame and reputation, he may bring his action, becauſe he is falſely ſcandalized by the malice of the proſecutor, which is a damage for which the law gives an action. 1 Sid. Yel. 46. Lut. 122. Thus, if a man is falſely and maliciouſly indicted of a crime that ſubjects him to peril of life or liberty, and for which he may be puniſhed, he may bring his action, becauſe he is endangered in this reſpect, and receives a damage, for which the law gives an action. Or if a man is falſely and maliciouſly indicted, though it neither affect his character nor liberty; becauſe it is injurious to his property by putting him to a needleſs expence, and a damage to a man's property will maintain an action as well as a damage to his fame or perſon.

3. Where a man is falſely and maliciouſly indicted of a crime, which hurts his reputation, and is ſcandalous, though the indictment prove inſufficient, or an ignoramus is found, an action lies for the ſlander; becauſe the miſchief intended thereby is effected. The ſame alſo if it endangered his liberty, and he was actually impriſoned. Otherwiſe where it only concerns his property, for a man cannot ſuffer in either of the above caſes.

But though the action lies, yet it ought not to be favoured, wherefore if the indictment is found by the grand jury, the defendant ſhall not be obliged to ſhew a probable cauſe; but it ſhall lie on the plaintiff's ſide to prove an expreſs rancour and malice. If an ignoramus is returned, where the indictment contains no ſcandal, or the party has not been impriſoned, no action lies; and if it contains ſcandal, or the party has been impriſoned, there muſt be evidence of expreſs rancour and malice; innocence alone is not ſufficient. We therefore affirm the judgment. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 14. Mod. Rep. vol. 12, p. 208.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he promiſed the defendant's wife to marry her, ſhe being then ſole, ſhe promiſed the plaintiff to marry him, and though the plaintiff was ready, and often offered to marry the defendant's wife, yet ſhe refuſed, &c. The defendants to this action pleaded non aſſumpſit, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff with 400 l. damages. The defendants moved in arreſt of judgment, 1. That the action would not lie for want of a conſideration, for though a woman may have an action againſt a man on this ground, becauſe marriage is an advancement to the woman, yet it being no advancement to the man, therefore the conſideration which is the ground of the action fails. Vide Hobs 10. 1 Roll. Abr. 22. Carter 233, &c.

2. Exception, That there is no time prefixed, and he does not ſhew in his declaration a requeſt with a parſon. The court did not regard this exception, becauſe to the time it ſhould be in convenient time, and as to the requeſt with a parſon, the caſe of Dickenſon v. Holcroft determined on writ of error brought in this court ſettles that point, beſides in the preſent caſe the defendant has diſabled herſelf from performing her promiſe.

As to the firſt exception per Holt Chief Juſtice, there is the ſame conſideration in the caſe of the promiſe of a woman as in that of a man, for the ground whereon the woman brings the action, is the woman's promiſe, for this being an action grounded on mutual promiſes, if the woman's promiſes are void, the man's promiſe will be nudum pactum.

Rokeby Juſtice took time to conſider this point, and afterwards delivered his opinion for the plaintiff, becauſe marriage is an act as much to the advancement of the man as the woman, and relied on the caſes in 1 Roll. Rep. 79. 2 Bulſt. 276. 3 Bulſt. 48. 2 Cro. 323. 1 Cro. 269. On theſe grounds judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 386.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Turner v. Brent.

A. ſells goods to B. to which he has no title, if A. knows he has no good title to them, an action on the caſe lies againſt him for the deceit, if the owner recovers ſuch goods againſt B.; but otherwiſe, if A. does not know but his title to ſuch goods is good. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 245.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Roſwell v. Prior.

In an action on the caſe, plaintiff declared that he was poſſeſſed of a certain houſe for a term of years which was unexpired, in which houſe were 21 windows, whereby the light inferri conſuevit & debuit into the houſe, and that defendant erected a building near the ſaid houſe, whereby the light was obſtructed. Verdict for the plaintiff.

The defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, that there was no preſcription made to the light, and it was not ſo much as alledged that it was an ancient meſſuage.

Per curiam, this being after verdict, the declaration is good, it muſt be intended, that the plaintiff was to prove it to be an ancient houſe, and unleſs it had been ſo and light, the jury could not have found for the plaintiff. On demurrer this ſhort way of pleading had not been good. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 215.

Trinity, 11. W. 3. Iveſon v. Moore. Entered Hilary 9 W. 3. Roll. 437.

In an action on the caſe for ſtopping up a highway leading to the plaintiff's colliery, with intent to deprive him of the profit thereof, whereby he loſt his profit, and his coals dug up, were ſpoiled for want of buyers, on not guilty pleaded, and a verdict given for the plaintiff:

The court unanimouſly agreed, that where an action ariſes from a public nuiſance, there muſt be a ſpecial damage, becauſe the perſon who did the nuiſance is puniſhable at the ſuit of the public; and to allow all private perſons their actions without ſpecial damage, would create endleſs ſuits.

Per Turton and Gould: Here is a ſpecial damage and well enough ſet forth; for all have not coal-pits, and the matter ſubſequent to the per quod is not traverſable. Vide 1 Rol. 89. Goldſb. 146. 1 Leon. 236. 1 Rol. 63. pl. 31. 1 Co. 51. 2 Jo. 146. 156. a ſtrong caſe. To ſhew a ſpecial damage, it is ſufficient to ſay, whereby he loſt his ſervice for ſuch a time, Hob. 284. erected a building which was a nuiſance to his freehold tenement. 9 Co. 53. whereby he could not have his free right of common. And the damage does not conſiſt in a ſingle inſtance, as whereby ſhe loſt her marriage, which may be ſhewn; but in caſu principali it would be infinite.

J. Rokeſby and Holt Chief Juſtice, contra. The plaintiff's near ſituation yields him a convenience, but no right; for it is the King's highway, for the equal uſe and benefit of all his ſubjects; and the plaintiff has no more, nor no better right than any other perſon. And a man cannot have a particular action without a particular injury, or a particular right, which are the grounds upon which all actions are founded, and to which they muſt conform. See 2 Saund. 115. 3 Cro. 664. This plaintiff had neither a particular right in this way, nor a particular injury. For the ſtoppage is common to every one as well as to him; and an indictment would lay it to the prejudice of all ſubjects paſſing that way. And the caſes cited on the other ſide were founded on a particular right; as in caſe for a ſtoppage where one has a way, a water courſe, or common to his houſe, mill, or tenement, where the action is founded on a particular right, and lies without the whereby.

Now ſuppoſing here was a particular injury by ſpecial damage, that ſpecial damage is not ſufficiently ſet forth; for it is not ſufficient to ſay, he loſt cuſtomers, or buyers could not come, without ſhewing buyers were coming, and were hindered. Vide 2 Lev. 214. 223. and the caſe in 1 Rol. 63. has been often denied, and is not law; for the damage muſt be ſpecially ſhewn, where the words themſelves are not actionable. 1 Rol. 58. n. 1. 1 Cro. 140. 1 Rol. 34, 35, 36. plaintiff muſt ſhew who refuſed. And Chief Juſtice Holt cited the caſe of Paine v. Partridge, 2 W. & M. in this court. In caſe for not keeping of a ferry-boat, which was for all the King's ſubjects on paying a toll, but gratis for the inhabitants of a particular village, of which the plaintiff was one. In this caſe the court held the cuſtom to be good, but that the action did not lie; for though the plaintiff has a particular right, yet that conſiſts in being exempt from toll, and not in paſſing, which is common to every body. So that the not keeping the ferry is a public nuiſance, for which the plaintiff cannot maintain an action in preference to any other perſon; but the defendant muſt be indicted.

The court being thus divided, and there being a former rule to ſtay judgment, no judgment could be entered.

Per Curiam. If the court had been divided on the firſt motion, the plaintiff might have entered judgment: but now this rule muſt ſtand or be diſcharged, and it cannot be diſcharged, the court being equally divided.

Afterwards, by conſent of the Chief Juſtice, this caſe was argued before all the Judges at Serjeant's Inn, who were of opinion that the action did lie. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 486.

The plaintiff brought an action againſt the defendant, wherein he declares he ſent a letter by the poſt, &c. in which was incloſed an exchequer bill, and that the letter and bill were loſt, &c.

That the letter and bill were delivered to ſuch a poſtmaſter, and that afterwards the mail was robbed, and the letter and bill taken away, &c.

On this caſe being argued, the court ſeemed of opinion, that the action was well brought againſt the defendant.

Chief Juſtice. It would be very hard on the ſubject if this action would not lie. The crown has a revenue of 100000 l. per ann. for the management of this office, therefore care ought to be taken that letters be ſafely conveyed, and that the ſubjects ſhould be ſecured in their properties. He compared this caſe with a common carrier, who muſt anſwer for jewels or other valuable things he loſes.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Robins v. Robins. Entered Trin. 10 W. 3. Roll. 162.

In an action on the caſe, for that the defendant under pretence of a certain proceſs in law, cauſed the plaintiff to be arreſted, and though he offered a common appearance, held him to bail, where by law no bail was required, to which action not guilty being pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. This is a tender action. You muſt ſhew that the plaintiff being indebted to the defendant in a certain ſum, the defendant took out ſuch a writ for ſuch a large ſum, on purpoſe to hold him to bail; how elſe can it appear to the court, whether and how far the preſent plaintiff might be held to bail in that action, or whether the defendant might not be only the bailiff who executed the writ, againſt whom the action will not lie? And as to the objection, that the writ was ſeldom returned, and therefore could not be procured to give in evidence, and therefore it would be inconvenient to ſet it out ſpecially in the declaration; he anſwered, the officer might be ruled to return his writ. Vide 1 Saund. 228. And this action lies not till the original action is determined. Therefore judgment was ordered to ſtay until, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 15. Raym. vol. p. 503.

In an action on the caſe for a falſe return to a mandamus, againſt the Mayor, &c. of Norwich; it was objected that it was not alleged in the declaration, that it belonged to them to obey the writ.

Per Curiam. By their alledging a reaſon why they could not obey the writ, they admit that. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 322.

Five members of the corporation being turned out, ſued out a joint Mandamus, and afterwards had the ſame quaſhed on their own motion, becauſe they could not join, the wrong done to the one being no wrong to the other, per curiam. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 232.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Butler & Lewin, v. ——

The plaintiffs brought a joint action on the caſe for a falſe return to a mandamus to ſwear them in as churchwardens of the pariſh of N. After a verdict, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that they had miſconceived the action, by making it joint for the damages, viz. the loſs of fees are ſeveral; this exception weighed much with the court, on which this matter was compromiſed.

Per curiam. Here, though motion be made in arreſt of judgment, yet if there be no rule to ſtay, plaintiff may ſign his judgment of courſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 371.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendants, he declared that the 1ſt of October, he was maſter of ſuch a ſhip, which then lay in Ipſwich haven, laden with corn, &c. and that the defendants entered and ſeized the ſhip, and detained her ſo long that the plaintiff was obſtructed and hindered from proſecuting his voyage, to his damage, &c.

The defendants pleaded a juſtification of the ſeizure as bailiffs to the corporation for toll, &c. which was over-ruled for the following defects. 1. That a preſcription was laid in the corporation to have toll, &c. and it was not ſhewn that this was a corporation, time whereof, &c. 2. They ſaid that they detained the ſhip until they were paid the toll and charges, and a title is made only to diſtrain for the toll.

Defendants council did not attempt to maintain the plea, but took exception to the plaintiff's action, that the ſame would not lie, for that plaintiff ought to have brought a general action of treſpaſs, and cited ſtat. 41 Ed. 3. cap. 24. Palmer 47. ſtat. 13 H. 7. Lane 65, &c.

The plaintiff's council ſaid, that in the caſes cited, the property was in the plaintiff, but in the preſent inſtance the ſhip did not belong to the plaintiff, and he had no damage but the loſs of his voyage.

Holt Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff here might have had his action of treſpaſs, and declared thereon that he was poſſeſſed of a ſhip, and founded his action on ſuch poſſeſſion; but when he brings the action as maſter, he cannot have treſpaſs, but Caſe; a Baillee may maintain an action of treſpaſs, but then he muſt declare on his poſſeſſion; ſo the maſter might have done in this caſe, and the defendants could not ſay that the ſhip was not his. If he ſues as maſter, he he can recover only as officer, and therefore this action is more proper.

The defendants council took exception to the plaintiff's declaration, that it is not ſaid plaintiff had an intent to proſecute his voyage, for it may be if he had not been detained by the defendants, he would not have made ſuch voyage.

Per Holt Chief Juſtice, it is ſufficient for the plaintiff to ſay, that he had his cargo on board, and bound to ſuch a place, for he had no need to ſay that the wind was fair. Judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 558.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Mikes v. Caly.

In an action on the caſe, plaintiff declared that he was poſſeſſed of a ſhip ready for a voyage to America, lying in the harbour of B. to ſail the firſt fair wind, that defendant entered on his poſſeſſion, and diſtrained the corn with which the ſhip was freighted, whereby he loſt his voyage to his damage, &c.

The defendant pleaded that B. is an ancient borough for ſeveral hundred years by ſuch a name, and afterwards incorporated by letters patent by another name. That time out of mind there was an ancient court in the borough for adminiſtration of juſtice, &c. that the corporation, time whereof, &c. uſed to repair and maintain the court houſe at their charge, and in conſideration thereof, they had time, &c. ſo much a ſack for all corn that was ſold in that borough (in the name of toll) by any perſon not an inhabitant or free of the corporation.

That the corn in the plaintiff's ſhip was bought by perſons not inhabitants, &c. and put on board without paying toll, and a preſcription for diſtraining in caſe of refuſal was laid; that the defendant was a bailiff, appointed by the town as their bailiff for the purpoſes of collecting ſuch toll, by writing under their common ſeal, and on demand and refuſal diſtrained the corn for the uſe of the corporation.

This plea was agreed to be bad, chiefly for that it was not laid that it was a corporation time out of mind.

It was argued by the defendant's council, that as the charge was laid in the declaration, the fact done was a treſpaſs, and therefore the plaintiff had miſconceived his action, for that general treſpaſs, and treſpaſs on the caſe are different formed actions, grounded on different ſpecies of offences, and cited ſtat. 4 Ed. 3. cap. 24. 2 Roll. Rep. 149. Palmer 47. and ſtat. 13 H. 8. cap. 26. and others in ſupport thereof.

The defendant's council further argued, that this action did not lie for the maſter, 1. For the ſame reaſon it would lie for every one of the mariners, for they alſo have loſt their voyage, and ſo it would likewiſe for each of the owners.

2. It were in effect to maintain an action for conſequential damages, with which a ſtranger may diſpenſe; as for example, if J. covenants with A. to build a houſe on his ground, and B. ouſts him, by which I am hindered of performing my covenant, I cannot have an action on the caſe againſt B. becauſe A. by his releaſe may make the hinderance lawful; and ſo may the owners do here, and if any damage was, the action ought to have been brought by the owner, and the maſter have his remedy againſt him.

Per curiam, the plaintiff had judgment, and Holt Chief Juſtice ſaid, that the maſter of a ſhip is in many reſpects ſueable, and may ſue in things concerning the ſhip as well as the owner, and the defendant might have a title to the goods by ſale or conſignment by the owners; but if ſo, it ought to have been pleaded, and what the maſter recovers in ſuch action, is for the uſe of the owners; a maſter may bring an action againſt any merchant concerned for freight in his own name, but as maſter he cannot bring trover for the ſhip, but may have his action on the caſe, if by a ſeizure of the ſhip he be hindered of his voyage, as in this caſe, and what is taken from him in relation to the ſhip, he ſhall have caſe or treſpaſs for the ſame, at his election, with this diſtinction, that if he brings treſpaſs he muſt declare on his poſſeſſion, and he ſhall have treſpaſs for a diſturbance of him in his office. By the whole court judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 381.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Holm v. Hunter.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking goods, the defendant juſtified ſuch taking by a judgment in a court baron, and that the goods were taken by a levari, and delivered to him, being plaintiff, in execution. On demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff; for that the goods ſo taken in execution cannot be delivered in execution, though the parties might ſell ſuch goods, and ſo raiſe the money, or have the ſame appraiſed. Another doubt aroſe, Whether a diſtringas and not a levari was not the proper proceſs in this caſe? 3dly, Whether a manor as a manor has a court baron to hold pleas; it has eo nomine a court baron to have ſuit, but the court doubted whether it could hold plea without preſcription. *Vide Mod. On an indebitatus aſſumpſit for money had and received by the defendant for the plaintiff, for the uſe of the defendant, and a verdict given for the plaintiff; on motion in arreſt of judgment, the court held, that theſe words, for the uſe of the defendant, ought to be rejected, becauſe ſenſeleſs and contradictory, and then the promiſe being for money had and received by the defendant for the plaintiff is well. Vide Sid. 306. 1 Mod. 42. Salk. vol. 1. p. 24.

In an action on the caſe, the jury found that the plaintiff being ſeiſed in fee of ſix ſtables, let one on parole agreement to the defendant, and the reſt to other perſons for a term of years ſtill ſubſiſting; that the defendant kept his fire ſo careleſsly, that it burnt the ſtable in the plaintiff's own poſſeſſion, that which he had let to the defendant, and the five other ſtables.

It was agreed, that if a perſon ſeiſed of an houſe in fee makes a leaſe at will, and the leſſee negligently burns the houſe, no action lies; becauſe the landlord might have ſecured himſelf by a covenant. Otherwiſe, if a leſſee for years makes a leaſe at will, for though he might ſecure himſelf by covenant alſo, yet becauſe he is anſwerable over to his leſſor, he is entitled to an action on the caſe.

The court alſo held, that no action laid againſt the defendant for the ſtable which he rented, had the fire ſtopped there; but as it ſpread further, and burnt the ſtables of his neighbours, who had it not in their power to oblige him to covenant to be careful, they are entitled to an action for their damages ſuſtained thereby.

And laſtly, that the leſſor might bring actions againſt the other leſſees, and they againſt the leſſee at will; and that as the leſſor had a right to ſue the other tenants, and they a right to ſue the tenant at will, the leſſor may make his election. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 19.

In an action on the caſe for a malicious proſecution for felony, brought after acquittal, it was agreed that the declaration muſt agree with the indictment in ſubſtance; the indictment was for ſtealing unum ſintinculum Anglice, a callico quilt, and the declaration calls it unum ſinituncułum. This was adjudged a material variance, but the declaration being laid generally, that he charged the plaintiff with felony before a juſtice of peace, it was held ſufficient to maintain the action, and likewiſe that it was neceſſary for the defendant here to prove a felony committed, and alſo a probable cauſe of ſuſpicion. *Vide Mod. In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for not ſhewing him a copy of his commitment within ſix hours after committed, according to the directions of the habeas corpus act. On motion, Chief Juſtice Holt obſerved, that one may on that ſtatute plead nihil debet, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence in an action of debt on this ſtatute. The plaintiff being a perſon committed by the Houſe of Commons for an affront offered to them, he ſaid the Commons never commit but by vote or a warrant under the hand of the Speaker, and whether the habeas corpus act extended to commitments by either Houſe of Parliament would be examined afterwards. He obſerved, that an officer might apprehend without a warrant, but not commit without a warrant; and the difference between apprehending and committing, that the one is in order to the other, the apprehending is in order to carry before a magiſtrate, who has power to commit. *Vide Mod. W. 3. Butcher v. Andrews.

In aſſumpſit, for that the defendant in conſideration that the plaintiff at his requeſt would lend the defendant's ſon any ſum of money, and let him have any goods, ſo as ſuch money and goods ſold exceeded not the ſum of 5 l. which the defendant promiſed to pay the plaintiff. The plaintiff avers, that he lent the defendant's ſon 5 l. in money, and ſold him goods on credit as aforeſaid, to the value of 5 l. and further, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in other 5 l. for ſo much money lent and advanced to the ſon at the defendant's requeſt, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, iſſue was joined, and a verdict given for the plaintiff, and 3 l. damages. On motion in arreſt of judgment, it was allowed by the court, that the defendant could not be indebted for more than 5 l. becauſe he engaged to the plaintiff for no more, ſo that if the jury had given more, ſuch verdict had been bad. In this caſe, the jury having given leſs, it was alledged by the plaintiff's council, that it had helped the declaration, but not allowed: For firſt, it does not appear to the court that the defendant has not paid 5 l. already, and that this is not claimed over and above. 2dly, That the declaration was bad, for the money being lent to J. S. the defendant cannot be obliged to pay the ſame on an indebitatus, but on ſpecial aſſumpſit, as being only collaterally bound by his promiſe; for the ſame money cannot be lent to two: N. B. Otherwiſe, had the money been only delivered to the ſon at the father's requeſt, or only had and received by the ſon at the father's requeſt, as then the loan had been to the father. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 23.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Cutting v. Williams. Error.

On an aſſumpſit, and two ſeveral counts laid; one was on a promiſſory note, and the plaintiff declared thereon as on a bill of exchange, on the cuſtom of merchants. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, entire damages were given, and judgment accordingly for the plaintiff. A writ of error being brought in this court it was held, that the plaintiff could not declare upon the promiſſory note as upon a bill of exchange: and as there could be no ſuch count or action, of courſe there could be no ſuch damages; that the judgment could not be reverſed in part, i. e. reverſed as to the one count, and affirmed as to the other; the court denied Jacob and Mills's caſe, Hob. 6. and made this diſtinction, viz. where the judgment is partly by the common law, and partly by ſtatute, it may be reverſed in part, becauſe that which was a judgment at common law, will remain a judgment, and be complete without the other. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 24.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Meredith v. Chute.

The plaintiff on an aſſumpſit declares, that whereas at the requeſt of the defendant, he delivered to the defendant a note given him by J. H. a third perſon, for 100 l. the defendant in conſideration thereof promiſed to pay him 100 l. after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was not a gift but a delivery; and that the note was uſeleſs, and of no value, becauſe it does not appear to be for a conſideration.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, the delivery ſhall be intended abſolute and indefinite, and it is evidence of a debt, and therefore the parting with it is a good conſideration; and though the conſideration of this note was proved at the trial, yet in my opinion it was not neceſſary. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 759.

In an action on aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declared that he was poſſeſſed of a note of the defendant's, by which he promiſed to pay him the ſaid plaintiff a certain ſum of money; that the defendant, in conſideration the plaintiff would deliver him the ſaid note, promiſed to pay him the money, and that he the ſaid plaintiff thereon delivered him the note. After verdict it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that here was no conſideration, becauſe it did not appear what the conſideration of the note was; and if no conſideration was given for the note, the delivery of it up cannot be one. See Salk. 171. Saund. 136.

Per curiam. The delivery of the note being ſaid indefinitely, ſhall be intended a delivery for ever; and though a note for the payment of money does not carry a conſideration in itſelf, yet it is evidence of a debt, and conſequently a means whereby the creditor may recover his money; and the parting with it is a conſideration which the defendant has admitted, by demanding the delivery thereof. And had the caſe been, that this was the note of J. S. for payment of a ſum of money to J. N. and J. D. in conſideration that J. N. would deliver the note to him, had promiſed to pay him, it would have been a good conſideration, becauſe it is not neceſſary the matter of the conſideration ſhould be of advanage to the defendant, if it is any trouble or diſadvantage to the plaintiff. Judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 13.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Gay v. Croſs.

An action on the caſe being brought for a falſe return to a mandamus to ſwear the plaintiff common council-man for the borough of Totneſs, which had a charter from Queen Elizabeth, directing the manner of electing ſuch officers, a uſage was given in evidence to a jury at the bar, that the election had gone quite contrary, which uſage was allowed good evidence of a bye-law on which it was founded: wherefore the council on both ſides conſented to have the matter found ſpecial, and to leave it to the determination of the court, whether ſuch a bye-law and a long uſage in purſuance thereof, could alter the direction, or rather annilihate the direction of the charter. And the jury having given their verdict in private over night, ſaid that they had found the matter ſpecially, and the next day in court delivered their verdict for the defendant generally, and would neither aſſign a reaſon for, nor alter ſuch verdict. On a motion for a new trial, the caſe of Wood and Gunſton in Stiles, and the caſe of the Welſh drovers were cited as inſtances of new trials, after a trial at bar. And though the court were highly diſſatisfied with the jury, and Lord Chief Juſtice Holt declared he had never known the like; and that as the judges publickly declare the reaſons on which they have formed their opinion, for the ſatisfaction of the publick, and thereby ſubmit their conduct to the cenſure of all able lawyers, though not obliged ſo to do by law; ſo the jury ought to declare their reaſons for their verdict, when required by the court: Yet it being a trial at bar, the court refuſed to grant a new trial. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 37.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Gould v. Johnſon. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment of the C. B. in aſſumpſit, when the plaintiff declared that the defendant, in conſideration that ſhe would receive A. and B. into her houſe as gueſts, and provide for them meat, drink, &c. aſſumed and promiſed to pay her ſo much as ſhe ſhould deſerve, and then averred that ſhe received the ſaid A. and B. into her houſe, but did not ſay as gueſts, and provided meat, drink, &c. The defendant pleaded that he had not aſſumed within ſix years. And on demurrer, judgment was given in C. B. for the plaintiff, the plea being ill, as the defendant ſhould have pleaded the cauſe of action has not accrued within ſix years, becauſe, provided the cauſe of action has accrued within ſix years, it does not ſignify when the promiſe was made, but in an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the plea would have been good.

The council for the plaintiff in error aſſigned two faults in the declaration; 1. That it appears on the declaration, that the cauſe of action accrued above ſix years before, &c. and therefore it is not neceſſary to plead the ſtatute, and Cro. Car. 115. was cited as a caſe in point: but not allowed, the ſtatute ought to be pleaded, becauſe the original perhaps was ſued out within ſix years, that the plaintiff may have an opportunity to reply.

Another exception was taken to the declaration, that it is not averred that the plaintiff received A. and B. as gueſts, and there is a difference between receiving a perſon generally, and as a gueſt; and in a caſe of this kind, a preciſe performance of the conſideration ought to be ſhewn to entitle the plaintiff to an action, and Cro. Jac. 45. W. Jones, 441, 2 Leon. 55. Cro. Jac. 246. Yelv. 175. were cited in ſupport of the above objection, but were fully anſwered by the Chief Juſtice, who was of opinion that they did not come up to the caſe in queſtion, and affirmed the judgment of the C. B. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 841.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Yoxon v. Burnet. Error.

On a writ of error brought of a judgment affirmed in the court of Cheſter on a writ of error of a judgment awarded in the corporation court of that city, in an action on the caſe for a libel, the declaration ſet forth, that the plaintiff was an alderman of the city of Cheſter, a juſtice of the peace, and by trade a grocer, and that the defendant did maliciouſly, &c. publiſh a libel of him, which he cauſed to be fixed up in ſeveral parts of the town. The words of the libel were theſe: Theſe are to adviſe all good perſons to ſhew me where I may ſee Alderman Yoxon, to receive my money of him. On a demurrer to this declaration, and judgment for the plaintiff in the Mayor's court, which was affirmed in the Chief Juſtices's court; the errors aſſigned in K. B. were, that on the plaint levied in the inferior court, the writ to bring the defendant into court was directed to, and executed by the ſerjeant at mace; and after an interlocutory judgment on the demurrer, a precept was directed to the ſheriff of the county to ſummon a jury, and execute a writ of enquiry: and it was inſiſted that the inferior courts had no power to charge the ſheriff; but that the ſame officer who executed the meſne proceſs ought alſo to have executed the judicial one, and that theſe proceedings could not be juſtified by preſcription, becauſe till the 21ſt of Hen. 7. the city was part of the county, and had no other ſheriff than the ſheriff for the county, and therefore the ſheriff could not be an officer of the Mayor's court, which is by preſcription.

2dly, That on an interlocutory judgment in an inferior court, the ſerjeants at mace ought to ſummon a jury to appear in court, and make enquiry of the damages in court; the judge of an inferior court being never ſuffered to direct his precept to another officer to make enquiry of damages, as to ſend to the ſheriff to enquire of damages, is the particular prerogative of the courts at Weſtminſter.

3dly, That the original was an attachment of the body, which is only in treſpaſs vi & armis, and not in caſe; the original proceſs in the latter being an attachment of the goods only.

Serjeant Cheſhire replied, That it is ſaid before to be tranſgreſſ. ſuper caſum, wherefore tranſgreſſ. prædict. muſt be ſuper caſum. That the city of Cheſter was an ancient county, and had had ſheriffs time immemorial, and proceſs directed to them, of which there were many precedents, and ſtat. 21 Hen. 7. was only a confirmation of its priviledges; and that it appeared from all the precedents, that the ſerjeant at mace executed the meſne proceſs, and the ſheriff's judicial proceſs; and that ſuch a matter might be good by grant, and therefore of courſe might have been by preſcription; and that by law the ſame perſon might be judge and officer. See 1 Cro. 138. Jones, 198. 12 Hen. 7. 3. and for the ſame reaſon, ſeveral may diſcharge the office of one. See Mod. Rep. 598. Noy, 64. The uſual practice of the court is the law thereof, and need not be ſhewn ſpecially in pleading, but the courts above are to be ſatisfied of it by precedents, and certificates of the judges of the court, 2 Co. Wiſcot's caſe: and there is a difference in the manner of taking bail in this court and the Common Pleas; and ſo formerly of the return of a ſci. fa. this court always required two ſci. fa's. returned, but one was ſufficient in the Common Pleas.

Lord Chief Juſtice Holt. Though the firſt proceſs to the ſerjeant at mace were wrong, it has been cured by appearance and pleading, becauſe where a man has a day on the roll, he may appear at that day if he pleaſes, though there is no return of the writ, and precedents of this manner of proceeding are ſhewn as far back as 5 Eliz.

J. Powell ſaid, the court could not take judicial knowledge, whether the city of Cheſter had a ſheriff only by ſtat. 21 Hen. 7. that ſtat. only ſaying, that it was then made a county; and ſtat. 43. Eliz. c. 15. directs that the officer of an inferior court ſhall not ſwear a jury to enquire of damages before him; but the practice is for them to ſummon a jury for that purpoſe, and to ſwear them in court before the ſteward or judge: and precedents have been ſhewn here of writs formerly directed to the ſheriff of Cheſter, and that a court is held there by preſcription, called the Sheriff's Court. And an officer called a Sheriff might have been without a county, and ſo known time immemorial; and a ſubſequent act of parliament making Cheſter a county, does not alter the preſcription. But he obſerved this could not be juſtified but by preſcription, as the ſame officer ought to execute all proceſſes; and therefore if on exception to the ſheriff a proceſs is directed to the coroner, it can never after go to the ſheriff, though the exception is afterwards removed; and though there are no precedents of theſe proceedings prior to the reign of Hen. 7. yet as they all run ſo ſince that period, we ought rather to follow them than reverſe all the judgments ſince given.

An action on the caſe being brought for theſe words: there goes Ogden, who is one of thoſe who ſtole Lord S.'s deer; it was offered againſt the action, that words ſpoke are not like words in deeds, they being in deeds fortius verſus proferentem, but otherwiſe in caſe of an action for them. Hob. 77. 1 Roll. Abr. 70. No. 50. 54. Held not actionable to ſay, that a man ſtole a deer, without alledging that he knew it to be a tame one. And in the preſent caſe it is not averred as it ought, that a deer was ſtolen from Lord S. for if it is ſaid that A. poiſoned B. without averring that B. is dead, an action does not lie.

On the part of the plaintiff it was urged, that this expreſſion muſt be underſtood of a tame deer, of which felony may be commited, and then beyond diſpute is actionable; or it will be underſtood of a deer in a park or place where deer are kept, and then it comes within the meaning of ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10. againſt deer ſtealers, whereby they are to be fined 30 l. and be impriſoned, or be ſet in the pillory and impriſoned, therefore the action will lie both ways. And the caſe in 4 Co. was inſiſted on, that to ſay of a woman that ſhe has a baſtard is actionable, becauſe it brings her within the penalty of ſtat. 18 Eliz. Vide 3 Sid. 7. 21. Palmer 298. 1 Roll. Abr. 34. 37. 38. 1 Cro. 436. and if the defendant had indicted the plaintiff here, after acquittal he might maintain an action for it.

Per curiam. Words that are of themſelves actionable without regard to the perſon or foreign aid, muſt either endanger the life of the party, or ſubject him to ſome infamous puniſhment; and it is not enough that the party may be fined and impriſoned, becauſe if a perſon is found guilty of any common treſpaſs, he ſhall be fined and impriſoned; yet no body will venture to aſſert that to ſay a particular man has committed a treſpaſs is actionable; or at leaſt the matter charged muſt in itſelf be ſcandalous; and the preſent words are that he ſtole a deer, which is a wild animal naturally, therefore not ſcandalous. To ſay that A. burnt a barn without ſaying that it was part of a dwelling houſe, or contained corn, is not actionable; and the caſe of Sir Lionel Walden in 2 Vent. was carried too far, and the affair happened at a time when the kingdom in general were furiouſly enraged againſt popery. The words were Sir L. W. is a papiſt and goes to maſs. And the penalty by the ſtatute is a pecuniary one, and the pillory is only for want of money, therefore not the direct penalty inflicted by the ſtatute. Moreover Lord Chief Juſtice Holt obſerved, that the being ſet in the pillory on this account did not render the perſon infamous, but he was ſtill a good witneſs in law. And to ſay that a perſon has hunted in a park without the owner's leave, and killed a deer there, which ſubjects him to the penalty of the ſtatute de malefactoribus in parcis, or to call a man a papiſt ſimply, was not actionable. And that to ſay of a young woman that ſhe had had a baſtard is a very great ſcandal, but not actionable, becauſe a defamation puniſhable in the ſpiritual court. And the ſame to call a man an heretic, and denied the firſt reaſon given in the caſe of Ann Davis. 4 Co. 17. The plaintiff was accordingly nonſuited. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 104.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Smith v. Ary.

In this action the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he had agreed and promiſed the defendant to play at a particular game, and to pay what he loſt, the defendant promiſed to play, &c. and to pay, &c. and ſets forth in his declaration, that they played, &c. and that the defendant loſt, which he had not paid; cumque etiam, he (the plaintiff had won ſo much money at the aforeſaid game, the defendant in conſideration thereof promiſed to pay, &c. On a demurrer, it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that the mutual promiſes in the firſt count muſt be underſtood as if repeated in the ſecond, viz. that the playing was upon the ſame agreement, being alledged to be won at the aforeſaid game.

Per curiam. The ſecond count is not mended by the firſt, for they are ſeparate and diſtinct, ſo that the agreement laid in the firſt will not go to the ſecond; and an indebitatus aſſumpſit will not lie for money won at play, ſo that there was nothing but mutual promiſes, and debt will not lie on a promiſe, nor conſequently an indebitatus, for there muſt be a conſideration, or a quid pro quo, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 14. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1034.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Crowther v. Oldfield. Error.

In an action on the caſe for diſturbing the plaintiff of his right of common, in which he had declared, that he was ſeiſed of a meſſuage, &c. parcel of the manor of W. held by copy of court roll of the ſame manor, and that he and all tenants of the ſaid manor held time out of mind common on the waſtes of the ſaid manor, for all beaſts levant and couchant on their copyholds. The declaration was adjudged ill, after it was found by verdict to be parcel of the manor, as the plaintiff had ſet forth in his declaration, becauſe the words at the will of the lord being left out, it doth not appear to be copyhold; ſo that taking it to be freehold and not copyhold, then the preſcription ſhould have been by a que eſtate at common law, in his own name, and not in the name of the lord. On this point being argued, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that a copyholder has right of common, either as belonging to his eſtate, or to his land; that where it belonged to his eſtate, and as ſuch he claims common in the lord's waſte there, if the copyhold is infranchiſed, the common is loſt and extinguiſhed, for that continues when the eſtate is gone: the other common is as belonging to his land, viz. where a copyholder has common in the waſtes of another manor, in that caſe the common is not loſt by an infranciſement of the copyhold, becauſe though the eſtate is gone, the land ſtill continues. It was urged on behalf of the plaintiff in the original action, that this title ſet forth in his declaration (admitting it to be bad) ought to be conſidered as unneceſſary and ſurpluſage, and the rather, becauſe there was no occaſion for him to ſtate his title; he had the poſſeſſion, and that is ſufficient againſt the defendant, who was a ſtranger, and wrong-doer. Holt replied, it was very true; but if the plaintiff will ſet forth a title, as he has done in this caſe, and that title is inconſiſtent in itſelf, a verdict will not help it; now here he could have none as a copyhold, becauſe it does not appear that he held at the will of the lord, and he could have none as a freeholder, becauſe he had preſcribed in the manor, ſo that his title being abſurd and inconſiſtent, the declaration muſt be ill; for which reaſon the judgment in C. B. was confirmed, and judgment given in this court for the defendant in error. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 13. Raym. vol. 2. page 1225.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he had paid and delivered to the defendant twenty pieces of hammered money, being twenty old ſhillings, at his requeſt, he the ſaid defendant promiſed to pay him twenty ſhillings new money. It was objected, the property is not altered; not allowed by the court, becauſe a delivery, in conſideration of being paid the value, is a ſale. Vide 2 Raymond, vol. 2. page 895.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared that whereas the defendant aſſumpſit to take up a hogſhead of brandy in a cellar in D. and ſafely to lay it down in another cellar, and that he ſo careleſsly laid and put it down in another cellar, that for want of care the caſk was ſtaved, and the brandy was loſt. It was objected in arreſt of judgment, that there is no conſideration; for the defendant is not to have a reward, and it does not appear he is a common carrier, or porter, ſo as to be intitled to a reward; he is only to have his labour for his pains, wherefore this is a nudum pactum.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, if the agreement had been only executory, as that he aſſumed to carry it, and did not, no action would have lain. But here he was actually entered upon the thing according to his promiſe, and therefore having miſcarried, he is liable to an action, becauſe it is a deceit on the plaintiff who truſted him. The court unanimouſly gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide 2 Raym. vol. 2. p. 909.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Shore v. Brown. Error.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declares, that the defendant being indebted to him in 20 l. for goods ſold, in conſideration thereof, ſuper ſe aſſumpſit, &c. after judgment by default, a writ of error was brought, and this exception taken, that it is not ſaid the defendant promiſed, ſo it might be a ſtranger.

Per curiam, it cannot be ſuppoſed a ſtranger promiſed, or that the plaintiff promiſed himſelf, there is no body to promiſe upon this record except the defendant; otherwiſe perhaps, if three perſons had been mentioned in the record, for it might be then uncertain to which the promiſe was applicable.

Gould Juſtice, there is alſo a difference between a collateral promiſe and a promiſe by operation of law; in the latter caſe, the law which raiſes the promiſe applies it. 3 Cro. 9 3. Noy 50. 1 Lev. 164. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 27.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff a burgeſs of Ayleſbury, in the county of Bucks, againſt the conſtables of that borough, for refuſing to receive his vote in an election of members of parliament. On not guilty pleaded, and a verdict for plaintiff; a motion being made in arreſt of judgment,

Gould Juſtice was of opinion, that the action was not maintainable becauſe the conſtable acted as a judge, and not as an officer, and that in a parliamentary matter. Alſo becauſe the hindering of a vote is damnum abſque injuria. 9 H. 6. 60. 2 Lev. 114. 19 H. 6. 44 Hob. 267. And would beget multiplicity of actions, (Vid 5 Co. Williams's caſe) and that the preſent action was out of time. It ought not to precede the adjudication of the Houſe of Commons. 2 Cro. 368. The reaſon of Stirling's caſe was, becauſe the refuſal of a poll occaſioned him the loſs of the place of bridge-maſter, which was a real profit: and the caſe of an action by a freeman for refuſing to admit his voice in the election of a Lord Mayor was, becauſe he had no other remedy but this action; but this caſe differs. 2 Lev. 50. 250. 2 Vent. 50.

Powys Juſtice was of opinion that the defendant, though not properly a judge, is quaſi a judge; that when the matter comes before the Houſe of Commons, the plaintiff's vote will be allowed; and therefore he does not loſe his privilege; it being a law maxim that the law does not regard trifles, and this injury, if it is one, comes within that rule; and he mentioned ſtatute 7 & 8 W. 3. which gives an action for a double return, to the candidate; and that before ſtat. 23 Hen. 6. the candidate had no action for a falſe return; and that in 1641, there were ſeventy double returns, and yet no action brought, or act made; and from thoſe ſtatutes giving new actions in thoſe caſes, he inferred no action lay for the voter at common law: beſides a judgment here will not bind the Houſe of Commons, nor be evidence there; they not being bound by our determinations; and, laſtly, all innovations occaſion more miſchief by their novelty, than good from their utility: 1 Bul. 138.

Powell Juſtice ſaid, the defendant muſt be a judge or not a judge, there being no medium; here he is an officer; as ſuch he is to execute the King's writ, and has only a miniſterial power. In other matters he agreed with Gould and Powys, inſiſting that the right of election of members muſt depend on the right of the electors; and that the former was to be determined by the parliament, and that the plaintiff might petition the parliament for that purpoſe, and afterwards might have his action, but not before; and therefore was not without remedy.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, contra, was of opinion, that the plaintiff had a right to vote, that a freeholder has a right to vote by reaſon of his freehold, and it is a real right; and the value of his freehold not material, till 8 H. 6. c. 7. which requires it ſhould be 40 s. per annum; that in boroughs perſons have a right to vote by reaſon of their burgage; and that in cities and corporations, it is a perſonal inheritance, and veſted in the whole corporation, but to be uſed and exerciſed by the particular members. Hob. 4. 12 Co. 120. Mo. 8 2. And this is not a trifle in law, but a noble privilege, which intitles the ſubject to a ſhare in the government and legiſlature: no laws can be made to affect him or his property but by his own conſent, given in perſon if he is choſen member, or by his repreſentative if he is a voter; that if the plaintiff has a right, he muſt in conſequence have a remedy to vindicate that right; want of right and want of remedy being the ſame thing. If a ſtatute gives a right, the common law gives a remedy to maintain that right; a fortiori where the common law gives a right, it gives a remedy to aſſert it. This is an injury, and every injury imports a damage. Where parliamentary matters come before us, as incident to a cauſe of action on the property of the ſubject, which we in duty muſt determine, though the incident matter be parliamentary, we are bound by our oaths to determine it: there can be no ſuch method by petition as my brother Powell ſpeaks of; nor can the parliament judge of this injury, or give damages to the plaintiff for it. Judgment notwithſtanding was given for the defendant.

This judgment was afterwards reverſed in the Houſe of Lords. Trevor, Chief Juſtice, Juſtice Price, and ſixteen Lords concurred with the three Judges of B. R. The other Judges and fifty Lords coincided with Holt, Chief Juſtice.

In the cauſe of Barnardiſton v. Soame, Chief Juſtice Hale ſaid, That this matter, though it related to the parliament, was an injury precedaneous to the parliament. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 21. Raym. vol. 2. p. 938.

In an action on the caſe againſt the defendant for uſing the trade of a woollen-draper within the corporation, againſt the cuſtom thereof; which cuſtom was, that none who had not ſerved ſeven years to a trade, or had been free of the guild of merchants ſhould uſe it within the corporation.

Note. This cuſtom was not grounded on a bye law, or for any penalty.

On iſſue being joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; and on motion in arreſt of judgment, that ſuch action would not lie, and Cro. Eliz. 803. and the caſe of the Totneſs corporation cited as in point, the poſtea not being come in the court, delayed giving judgment, and directed this caſe to be ſolemnly argued.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid it was a point not determined, whether ſuch a cuſtom was good, though many corporations did pretend to ſuch cuſtom; that ſome corporations pretended to a right by cuſtom to exclude foreigners, but he thought the ſame could not be ſupported.

In Eaſter term, 4 Ann, Judgment was ſtayed in this caſe, on faults in the declaration, and the court declined ſaying any thing on the merits, which they ſaid was a queſtion of great conſequence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 22.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann.

Where a bond for payment of money has lain dormant twenty years, on an action brought thereon, if the defendant pleads ſolvit ad diem, it is a good plea in the opinion of Lord Chief Juſtice Holt; for where no demand has been made, nor an action brought thereon in ſuch a length of time, it affords a ſtrong preſumption that the bond has been ſatisfied. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 22.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Baker v. Preice.

This caſe was grounded on theſe words, viz. You ſtole my box-wood, and I will prove it.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, that the words were not actionable, ſaying, You ſtole my wood, and you ſtole my timber, were the ſame; You are a thief, and ſtole my timber; you are a thief, and ſtole my corn, hops, &c. are not actionable, for the general maxim of law is, that where words charge a perſon either with treſpaſs or felony, if there be not other words, that ſhew the charge to be felony, the beſt ſenſe ſhall be taken. Vide Hob. 331. Hutton, 38.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, condemned theſe authorities, and ſaid, that in this caſe it was not what the party meant, but the neceſſary import of the words that are to be conſidered.

The plaintiff's council replied, You have ſtolen my timber, is actionable, for the ſame muſt be felled and and ſevered from the ſtock before it is timber. Yelv. 152. Noy, 114. The words, Thou haſt ſtolen my wood, and I will charge you with felony. Vide March. 211. 2 Cro. 116. and Hob 77. Thou art a thief, and thou haſt ſtolen a tree, not actionable, for a difference is taken by the court between a tree, for that is underſtood as ſtanding, but if it be felled it is wood. Style 9. Præcipe doth lie of boſcum, but it cannot be ſaid one ſtole an acre of wood, for if it were not a thing of which felony could have been committed, we could not have a verdict. 2 Cro. Jar. 116.

Chief Juſtice Holt. The verdict cited in Cro. Jac. ſignifies nothing in the preſent caſe, there being contemporary authorities that differ from that caſe, ſuppoſe he had ſaid, He has ſtolen my underwood.

Powell, Juſtice. Underwood and coppicewood will be taken for wood ſtanding.

Chief Juſtice Holt obſerved, that the opinions of latter times have been in many inſtances different from thoſe of former days in relation to words; formerly there was a difference taken between ſaying, Thou art a thief, for thou haſt ſtolen my wood, and thou art a thief, for thou haſt ſtolen my wood, and judgments have been given both ways; the latter opinions make no difference, if the words be ſpoke at the ſame time, and theſe are ſcrambling things, that have gone backwards and forwards, and idle people in the country that privately act and carry away coppicewood, are in common conſtruction called wood ſtealers. He obſerved, that he had heard Lord Hale and Juſtice Twiſden ſay, that they knew no ſet rule for actions for words, but that all words ſtood on their own feet. To ſay, a man has the pox, is not actionable; but to ſay, he has got it, and got it by a yellow-haired wench in Moorfields, has been adjudged actionable, though the latter words do not carry a violent intendment, that the ſpeaker meant the French pox, though the ſenſe leads more that way than the other. He remarked, that ſtealing, and feloniouſly ſtealing, was not the ſame; for in common conſtruction, ſtealing did not always import felony; for example, to cut and carry away furze is a ſtealing, but not a felonious taking.

Powell, Juſtice, obſerved, that he always took it ex vi termini; ſtealing did import felony, and ſaid, the diſtinction put by the Chief Juſtice was properly treſpaſs, and not ſtealing.

Afterwards, the whole court give judgment in this caſe for the plaintiff, being of opinion that all the latter authorities ran clearly in his favour, and Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that for his part, wherever words did tend to take away a man's reputation, he would encourage actions for ſuch words, becauſe in ſo doing it would contribute much to the preſervation of the peace. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 23.

Per curiam. If a perſon be ever ſo innocent, yet if there were a probable cauſe of proſecution, an action for a malicious proſecution will not lie. The ground muſt be a direct malice, without any colour of cauſe that will juſtify ſuch action. 1 Vent. 86. Car. 416. 5 Mod. Rep. 394. and 405. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 25.

In an action on the caſe brought for practiſing phyſic within ſeven miles of London, without licence, a ſpecial verdict was found, viz.

That the defendant being an apothecary by trade, was ſent to by one J. S. then ſick of a certain diſtemper; and that having ſeen, and been informed of the ſaid diſtemper, he did, without preſcription or advice of a doctor, and without any fee, compound and ſend the ſaid J. S. ſeveral parcels of phyſic as proper for his ſaid diſtemper, only taking the price of his drugs for the ſame: whether this was ſuch a practiſing of phyſic as was prohibited by the ſtatute, was the queſtion before the court: after many arguments, the court at laſt unanimouſly agreed, that the practiſing of phyſic within this ſtatute conſiſts,

2dly, In judging of the fitteſt and propereſt remedy for the diſeaſe; and,

In an action on the caſe brought by Green on ſeveral promiſes laid in the declaration to have been made to the teſtator by the defendant, who pleads the ſtatute of limitations, on which iſſue was joined: In the courſe of the evidence it appeared, that the teſtator had been dead ſeven years before the action was brought, but the executor proved a promiſe made to himſelf within a year before the commencement of the action. A verdict was given for the plaintiff.

Per curiam, Though the acknowledging of the debt is a continuation of it, and removes all preſumption of its having been ever paid, and conſequently brings it out of the ſtatute, yet this verdict does not maintain the iſſue; it was accordingly ſet aſide, becauſe the promiſe being made to the executor, could not be made to the teſtator within ſix years. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 37. Salk. vol. 1. p. 28. Raym. vol. 2. page 1101. Forteſcue 180.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Hutton v. Manſelle

In an action on the caſe, brought by a feme ſole, ſhe declared that ſhe had agreed and promiſed to marry the defendant; and that he in conſideration thereof promiſed to marry her. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, the cauſe was tried, and the promiſe of the man proved, but no effectual promiſe on the woman's ſide. Adjudged, that there was ſufficient evidence to prove that the woman likewiſe promiſed, becauſe ſhe behaved as if ſhe conſented to, and approved of, the promiſe of the man. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 16.

In an action on the caſe for words, the plaintiff declared for words ſpoken at ſeveral times: the firſt words were, ſhe is a whore and has had a baſtard by her father's apprentice; alledging a colloquium: the other, thou art a whore and hadſt a baſtard by your father's apprentice; in conſequence of which and other expreſſions of the like kind, a perſon who courted her, and was ready to marry her, deſerted her, and refuſed to fulfil his engagement: a verdict and entire damages being given for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment that the firſt words were not actionable, the ſpecial damages being confined to the latter words, viz. the word other.

Per curiam, if it was a new caſe, it would be reaſonable to make the firſt words actionable, beeauſe no greater misfortune can befal a young woman, whoſe well doing depends on her having a good huſband, than to be a reputed whore; but the authorities are too numerous and great for us to run counter to them; the reaſon on which they are founded is, that fornication is a ſpiritual offence, not puniſhable at common law; and an action ſhall not lie for charging a perſon with an offence of which the law takes no notice, without ſpecial damages. Judgment was therefore arreſted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 148.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant; the plaintiff declared, that whereas he is a man of reputation, free from all perjury, and ſubornation of perjury, and that for ſix months before the words ſpoke, was a juſtice of the peace, and is, and for ſeveral years before was Chancellor of the Conſiſtory Court of the Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, and that writs did iſſue ſuch a year for calling a parliament, and that ſuch a day in that year was appointed for the election of burgeſſes for Litchfield to ſerve in the ſaid parliament: that the plaintiff intended to ſtand as a candidate, and thereof gave public notice; that the defendant knowing the premiſes, to hurt the plaintiff in his credit and reputation, and to bring him under the penalty of perjnry, and ſubornation of perjury, at ſuch a time and place, in the hearing of ſeveral of the Queen's ſubjects, and in the plaintiff's preſence, ſpoke of him the plaintiff theſe falſe and ſcandalous words; there goes your rare Chancellor, innuendo, the plaintiff to ſuborn witneſſes to ſwear againſt the parſon; whereas the plaintiff was not guilty thereof. On iſſue being joined, a verdict and damages were given for the plaintiff.

Gould Juſtice. The action lies. If the words were ſimple and abſtractedly ſpoken without reference to any public employment or office of the plaintiff, the caſe would have been more doubtful; but here they are ſpoken in reference to his office of Chancellor, and of a perſon then in commiſſion of the peace, and who ſtood candidate for a member of parliament, and therefore the words are as reproachful as can be, they wound his reputation, and craftily obſtruct his election.

Objection, They are not ſpoken with reference to his office.

Anſwer, They are, becauſe they are ſpoken of one in an office of truſt, and having adminiſtration of juſtice, and ſpoken expreſsly in that capacity, there goes your rare Chancellor; for it cannot be taken here that the word Chancellor was only meant as a deſcription of the perſon, but rather an indication of the capacity, in which he did ſuborn the witneſſes; and it is not material to ſhew that any woman did ſwear againſt a parſon before him, for if not, then the greater falſity and ſcandal, and the word ſubornation is always taken in an ill ſenſe. 3 Inſt. 167. 1 Roll. Abr. 51. Yelv. 72, &c.

Powys Juſtice, doubted how it would be if the words had no relation to his office, or ſpoke of a man not in office, but held them actionable here, for two reaſons, viz. becauſe ſpoke of a public officer, and in reference to his office; for he held the word Chancellor was not a deſcription of his perſon, or as his name as Parſon or Dean is, but an innuendo of his corruption quatenus ſuch i. e. quatenus a Chancellor, and denied the authority of the caſe in 1 Roll. Abr. 79. but agreed to the caſe in 2 Cro. 190. Thou art forſworn in Collet court; and to that in 2 Cro. p. 436. Thou art perjured, for thou art forſworn in the Biſhop of G.'s court, not to be actionable, and would diſtinguiſh theſe caſes from this, becauſe ſpoken here of an officer, and with relation to his office; ſubornation is a known term in law, and is the word of art for corrupting one to commit perjury. 3 Inſt. 167. The ſtat. 32 H. 8. cap. 9. ſpeaks of ſubornation of witneſſes. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 9. ſubornation of falſe procurement of a witneſs. Vide 1 Lev. 118. Hard. 501. Mod. 243.

Per Anderſon. A private man cannot be ſlandered but by particular words, but general words ſuffice to ſlander a magiſtrate, and concluded for the plaintiff.

Powell contra, 1. He allowed the phraſe of expreſſion was as direct as if the defendant had really ſaid, that the plaintiff had ſuborned witneſſes to ſwear againſt the parſon. I cannot well find whether my brothers think the words actionable in themſelves, if ſpoken of any perſon whatſoever, or by reaſon of a relation to his office, or other circumſtances of the plaintiff on the declaration, but I hold them not actionable on any account.

2. A man cannot without a relation to his office, be a ſuborner of perjury, without there is a perjury committed; one may indeed ſuborn to ſwear, and yet no oath taken, or an oath may be taken, and yet the ſame be no perjury, for if it does not appear to be in any court of juſtice; the caſe in 3 Cro. is not like this, for here is neither court or cauſe mentioned where the ſwearing was; he allowed the caſe in Cro. Jac. 158, for in that caſe there was a perjury ſaid to have been committed, and as to Hard 501, a perjury is likewiſe charged. It is not actionable to ſay, that one did forſwear himſelf; à fortiori, how can the ſuborning one to forſwear himſelf be ſlander to bear an action; and ſubornation ex vi termini does not import a ſubornation of perjury; the caſe in 1 Roll. 79, is much ſtronger than this; ſubornation indeed is never taken in a good ſenſe, no more than forſwearing, yet no action lies for ſaying a man did forſwear himſelf.

Then as to the relation of theſe words to his office, or that he alledges himſelf to be a juſtice of the peace, and a candidate for parliament, I agree, words ſpoke of a magiſtrate will be actionable, that would not be ſo if ſpoke of another perſon; but they muſt for that purpoſe affect him in his office. If there had been a caſe in which a parſon had been a party before the plaintiff, and women had been ſworn in ſuch cauſe, and the ſame had been ſet forth, then theſe words might be applied by innuendo to that, and the ſame actionable. Vide Cro. Jac. 30. Yelv. 220, 221. The word Chancellor does not neceſſarily import that this was charged on him in his office of Chancellor, and words muſt be either actionable in their nature, and bear an action if ſpoke of any body, or ſcandalize him in office, &c. to bear an action.

Holt Chief Juſtice, my brothers are not well agreed, whether the words be actionable in themſelves, but rather incline not; I think they have great reaſon for that opinion, becauſe here is not charge on the plaintiff of any ſubornation of perjury, or that he did ſuborn witneſſes to forſwear themſelves, and ſuppoſe it were the firſt, and no colloquium of any cauſe or court where there had been an oath, it would not be actionable, nor is there any precedent for it; and there is reaſon there ſhould not, for to ſay a man has forſworn himſelf, is not actionable, ideo not to ſuborn witneſſes to forſwear: but the words are not ſo ſtrong in this caſe, for they are, that he did ſuborn witneſſes to ſwear; ſure the ſuborning witneſſes to ſwear is no crime, and ſuborning ex vi termini is not a crime, otherwiſe than as it relates to perjury, and ſuborning witneſſes to ſwear, does not imply that they do ſwear, and in the caſe in 1 Roll. 79, a colloquium is laid of a ſuit in Chancery, and witneſſes ſworn there. So one would think here was a ſubornation of perjury; and the words go farther, and ſay, that he would ſue in the Star Chamber for it, a proper court to puniſh perjury in, yet held not actionable. Then how do theſe words touch him in his office? for if a Chancellor will ſuborn witneſſes to ſwear, does this relate to his office? If he does it in another than the ſpiritual court, it cannot, if it be in a ſpiritual court, it may not be before himſelf; in ſhort it does not appear to have been before himſelf, and we muſt not intend it to maintain an action, and the naming him chancellor, is no more, and ſo commonly underſtood, than a deſcription of the perſon as Mr. Chancellor. To make words actionable in themſelves, it is neceſſary to charge ſome ſcandalous crime committed by them. If a communication had been laid concerning an oath which a man had taken in a court of juſtice, and that the man did forſwear himſelf, that had been charging him with perjury, and therefore actionable: but barely to ſay, that a man did forſwear himſelf or ſuborn another ſo to do, is not charging an offence puniſhable, and therefore not ſufficient to ground an action, and concluded for the defendant.

The court being thus divided, the queſtion was about the judgment. If a rule be for a cauſe to ſtay till the court be further moved, and the court is divided, there needs no new rule from the court, and the plaintiff without more ado may enter judgment on the verdict; but if the caſe be ruled to be put in the paper for argument, or the laſt rule be a cur' adv' vult, and the court be divided, there can be no judgment, and the caſe of Iveſon and Moore ſtands on that point to this day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 200.

In an action on the caſe for maliciouſly indicting and proſecuting the plaintiff's wife for felony, of which ſhe was acquitted, the declaration recited the indictment continent. materiam ſequentem; and in the recital of the goods ſuppoſed to be ſtolen, it was valoris of ſo much, whereas the indictment ran valentiæ of ſo much: it was objected that this was a variance from the indictment, but over-ruled, for it was the ſame in ſubſtance, but had the plaintiff undertaken to ſet forth the indictment in hæc verba, it would have been a fatal exception.

Per Holt Chief Juſtice, the plaintiff ought to have proved a copy of the bill exhibited, and that it was found on the oath or procurement of the defendant; but their names on the back of the bill is ſufficient evidence of their being ſworn to the bill, though the writing on the back is no part of the record: it may be proved that the defendant was a witneſs without having the bill; but it is the beſt and cleareſt method to have the bill: and the firſt part of the defendant's defence in this caſe, muſt be to prove a felony committed; for without that it is impoſſible he could have a probable cauſe of proſecution; and here becauſe nobody was by at the time of the ſuppoſed felony committed, but the defendant's wife, who could not in this caſe be a witneſs to prove the felony committed, her oath which ſhe made at the trial of the indictment was allowed to be given in evidence to prove a felony committed; for otherwiſe one that ſhould be robbed, &c. would be under an intolerable miſchief; for if he proſecuted for ſuch robbery, &c. and the party ſhould at any rate be acquitted, the proſecutor would be liable to an action for malicious proſecution, without a poſſibility of making a good defence, though the cauſe of proſecution were ever ſo pregnant.

To which Serjeant Darnell for the plaintiff ſaid, if oath had been made ſoon after the fact committed, that oath might be admitted as evidence of it; otherwiſe not; but here it appeared a warrant was taken out immediately, but nothing done thereon till the defendant had a ſubſequent falling out with the plaintiff.

Holt Chief Juſtice obſerved alſo, that people ought to adviſe well before they brought actions of this kind; and gave as inſtances Pigot's caſe in 1 Cro. Car. 383. where a ſon-in-law indicted his ſtep-mother for poiſoning her huſband, his father; and ſhe being acquitted, brought an action for a malicious proſecution againſt him, and recovered damages; and he to requite her kindneſs, brought an appeal of murder, on which ſhe was tried, convicted at the King's Bench bar, and executed: And another caſe that happened lately, where a fellow brought an action againſt a man for ſaying of him he was an highwayman; and it appearing on evidence that he was ſo, he was apprehended in court, convicted, and hanged the following ſeſſions. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 216.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Wilſon v. Gary.

In an action on the caſe againſt the defendant for reſcuing a perſon arreſted on meſne proceſs at the plaintiff's ſuit.

2. The writ and warrant, by producing copies of them ſworn to be examined, and true.

3. The arreſt ſhewing the manner of it, that it might appear to the court to have been legal, for otherwiſe there could be no reſcous; and in point of damage they proved the loſs of their debt, for that the priſoner became inſolvent, or could not be had.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In caſe of reſcous, you ſhall have no favour, becauſe guilty of a violence againſt the proceſs of the law, and therefore not like the caſe of a negligent eſcape.

The caſe on evidence appeared to be as follows: The bailiff ſtayed below at the ſtreet door, and ſent his follower diſguiſed, with the warrant, up three pair of ſtairs, who there touched the priſoner, and acquainted him that he arreſted him: the priſoner, with the aſſiſtance of ſome women, got from him, and ran down to the firſt floor; and the defendant being below in his ſhop, and hearing the noiſe, ran up ſtairs before the bailiff opened the door, let the priſoner into the room, and would not ſuffer the bailiff to enter and take him.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſeemed to doubt whether this was a good arreſt, being made only by the bailiff's folower, or even if it had been done in the preſence of the bailiff; however, he gave the jury a general charge, who found for the plaintiff. But he ordered the poſtea to be ſtayed till marked by him.

In this caſe the party reſcued appeared, and was ſworn as a witneſs in behalf of the defendant, not having been made a party to the action; which Holt, Chief Juſtice, allowed, by reaſon that he ſwore to charge himſelf, if by his evidence he diſcharged the defendant; but ſaid, he had never ſeen a like inſtance, and that if the defendant was guilty of the reſcous, he muſt be a partaker in the crime. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 221.

In an action on the caſe for a conſpiracy, the plaintiff declared, that the defendants conſpiring to vex and oppreſs the plaintiff did (under pretence of a certain warrant) from Sir S. Lovel, Recorder of London, wherein the plaintiff was charged by the oath of one Aſhby with having aſſaulted him on the highway with intent to rob and murder him) arreſt him the plaintiff, and carry him before Chamberlain, a juſtice of the peace, who, by the perſuaſion of Tracy, refuſed to bail him, though ſufficient bail were offered, and committed him to the Gatehouſe priſon, where ſuch and ſuch ſums of money were extorted from him; but the words without probable cauſe were omitted in the declaration.

On evidence it appeared, that eight years before, the plaintiff, a gentleman's ſervant, being riding on horſeback on the road, quarrelled with Aſhby, and being in liquor, was ſoundly thraſhed by him; notwithſtanding which, Aſhby immediately took out a warrant againſt the plaintiff for an aſſault and battery, but nothing more was done in the affair. Six years afterwards, ſome diſpute ariſing between the plaintiff, Tracy, and Jenkins, in London; Jenkins goes down to Suffolk, and at the perſuaſion of Cornwall, prevails with Aſhby to come up to London, and make the oath abovementioned, (whereon the warrant was granted againſt the plaintiff Muriel) before the Recorder, for which Aſhby had a guinea from Jenkins. A twelvemonth afterwards, Tracy being himſelf a juſtice of peace, employs the under-keeper of the Gatehouſe, and others, to apprehend the plaintiff Muriel, and carry him before Juſtice Chamberlain, and to ſend him word as ſoon as they had apprehended him, which they accordingly did: and Tracy informed Chamberlain, that he had conſulted the Recorder, and ſome other council, about the offence with which Muriel was charged, who were of opinion that it was not bailable; whereas in fact he had never aſked the queſtion: on which Chamberlain refuſed bail, and committed the priſoner. Tracy follows him to the Gatehouſe, and directs the goaler to treat him with ſeverity, and to put him in irons.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Chamberlain was to blame for his ignorance; but there is no reaſon to find him guilty on this evidence; as to the reſt, the circumſtances of the evidence ſhew it to be one continued chain of malice, and if the declaration was good, the evidence would be ſufficient to maintain it.

The exceptions taken to the declaration were, 1ſt, That it recited a warrant variant from that on which the plaintiff was arreſted, the recital being abſolute and poſitive, that the oath was, that the plaintiff had aſſaulted Aſhby with intent to rob and kill him, as he believes. No great regard was paid to this objection; but the Chief Juſtice ſaid it ſhould be ſaved to them.

2dly, That the declaration ſuppoſed the arreſt to be made without a legal warrant; the words being pretextu cujuſdam warranti, (under pretence, or colour, of a certain warrant) and pretextu and colore are words of the ſame meaning; this expreſſion muſt therefore be taken in the ſame ſenſe as if there had been no warrant. But this objection was over-ruled, becauſe an ill uſe having been made of the warrant, though a legal one, that certainly was pretextu (under pretence or colour) of a warrant.

3dly, Suppoſing the warrant a legal one, there can be no conſpiracy in apprehending a perſon by a legal warrant, eſpecially as it is not laid in the declaration, that the warrant was taken out without probable cauſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, in conſequence of this laſt exception, directed a juror to be withdrawn, with the conſent of both parties, the declaration being in his opinion ill, for not alledging that the warrant was taken out without probable cauſe.

The Chief Juſtice obſerved in the courſe of the trial, that this action being on the caſe, in nature of a conſpiracy, all the defendants might be acquitted except one, and he be found guilty; and in ſupport thereof, cited N. B. 277. A. 278. K. 2. Saund. 230. 1 Vent. 12. 18. 23. and 1 Cro. 239. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 169.

The defendants were indicted for conſpiring to extort money from A. and to effect that wicked purpoſe, to charge him falſo with being the father of a certain baſtard child, &c. and that in purſuance of ſuch conſpiracy, they did falſely charge and affirm him to be the father of it. An exception was taken that the indictment did not aver that he was the father of it.

Per curiam. The giſt is the falſo, conſpiring to charge falſely; and it is further ſaid, that they did falſely charge, &c. and an indictment lies for the falſehood before the party is acquitted thereof; but an action on the caſe does not lie till acquittal: and this being a frequent offence, the court refuſed to quaſh the indictment on motion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 137.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Holmes v. Hall.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought by an executor for ſo much money of the teſtator's, received by the defendant to the uſe of the executor.

The evidence offered to the court was, that ſome writings belonging to the teſtator, came to the defendant's hands, which he would not deliver up to the executor, who, to get the writings, gave him ſo much money, wherefore he promiſed to give up the writings, but afterwards refuſed.

The defendant's council urged, that the plaintiff had miſtook his action, for he ſhould have brought an action on the caſe on the ſpecial agreement for the non-delivery of the writings.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, if A. gives money to B. to pay C. on C.'s giving up writings, &c. and C. will not do it; indebitatus, &c. will lie for A. againſt B. for ſo much money received to his uſe; and many ſuch actions have been maintained for earneſts in bargains, when the bargainor would not perform; and for premiums for inſurance when the ſhip, &c. did not go the voyage; but it has been held it would not lie for money paid on an uſurious contract, becauſe there it was not intended it ſhould be repaid, or any thing done for it. Indeed, theſe caſes have been carried too far, viz. Indebitatus, &c. for money received to uſe, and no body would more willingly check them than I would, therefore it ſhall be ſaved you if you will, but I will not nonſuit the plaintiff. It appeared on the evidence, that the defendant pretended to the money as due from the teſtator, and therefore would not deliver the writings without payment, and that the money was given in ſatisfaction of the debt, ſo it was clear againſt the plaintiff, and he was nonſuited.

The defendant's council cited a caſe in ſupport of the defence, where he ſaid one had undertaken to obtain a pardon for another, and to that end, got ſeveral ſums of money from him, but had not procured the pardon; and on an indebitatus, &c. brought for the money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe, yet the plaintiff had been nonſuited before Chief Juſtice Holt, which the C. J. utterly denied. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 161.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration the plaintiff would deliver his gelding to A. the defendant promiſed that A. ſhould re-deliver him ſafe; it appeared in evidence that the defendant undertook that A. ſhould re-deliver him ſafe.

This was held a collateral undertaking for another; for where the undertaker comes in aid only to procure a credit to the party, in that caſe there is a remedy againſt both, and both are anſwerable according to their diſtinct engagements; but where the whole credit is given to the undertaker, ſo that the other party is but as his ſervant, and there is no remedy againſt him, this is not a collateral undertaking; but it is otherwiſe in the principal caſe, for the plaintiff may maintain detinue upon the bailment againſt the original hirer, as well as an aſſumpſit upon the promiſe againſt the defendant. This was upon a caſe ſtated at the trial for the opinion of the court; and judgment accordingly given for the defendant, becauſe the plaintiff may maintain detinue on the bailment againſt the original hirer, as well as aſſumpſit on the promiſe againſt this defendant.

Per curiam. If two perſons come to a ſhop, and one buys, and the other, to procure him credit, promiſes the ſeller, if he does not pay you, I will, this is a collateral undertaking, and void without writing, by the ſtatute of frauds: but if he ſays, let him have the goods, I will be your pay-maſter, or I will ſee you paid, this is an undertaking as for himſelf, and he ſhall be intended to be the real buyer, and the other to act only as his ſervant. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 27.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Goddard v. Smith.

In an action on the caſe for indicting the plaintiff of barretry, &c. in his declaration he ſet forth, that he was debito modo inde exonerat, i. e. was lawfully acquitted, and to prove the declaration on the trial, produced a nole ulterius proſequi by the Attorney General.

The Chief Juſtice, inclining to think that this evidence did not maintain the declaration, reſerved it for the opinion of the court, and ſaid, that the entering a non proſ. was only putting the defendant ſine die, and did not diſcharge any further proſecution on the very ſame indictment, and it would be hard to allow a man who gets off by non proſ. to maintain an action for a malicious proſecution. Indeed, if the perſon indicted had pleaded not guilty, and the Attorney General had confeſſed it, that would have done; but the perſon who gets off on a non proſ. is not at all acquitted on the merits of the cauſe; and to maintain a conſpiracy, it is neceſſary to lay and prove an acquittal. Thus, in an action for ſuing for a large ſum, in order to hold to extravagant bail, the plaintiff muſt ſhew what became of that cauſe, in order to maintain his action; and ſo is Hob.; but the preſent caſe is not ſo much as a nonſuit, as the indictment ſtands ſtill in force. Indeed, he remembered a cauſe, about twenty years before, in which Juſtice Wyndham directed for the plaintiff on the ſame point, but thought it hard even at that time.

It was urged in behalf of the plaintiff, that the word inde referred to the fact charged: but per curiam. At moſt it can go only to that indictment, and cannot be pleaded to a new indictment for the ſame offence, or a nole proſequi would amount to a pardon.

Powell, Juſtice: In all caſes of conſpiracy, the inde acquietat. goes to the fact charged, and not to the indictment; becauſe if it referred to the indictment, if the ſame was vicious, conſpiracy would lie; but that is not the caſe, and a colourable proof would deſtroy this action: now the plaintiff, by procuring this nole proſequi, bars the defendant from giving ſuch proof, and this action cannot be maintained but on acquittal of the fact charged, by verdict, confeſſion, &c. He doubted of the effect of a nole proſequi on an indictment, whether it diſcharged the indictment or not.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he had known it thought very hard, that the Attorney General ſhould enter a nole proſequi on indictments, and that it was firſt practiſed in the latter end of the reign of Charles 2. but that it had frequently been done on information, and ordered ſearch to be made, whether there were any precedents in the time of Mr. Attorney Palmer, or Nottingham.

Harcourt, Maſter of the Office. There never has been any procedings after a nole proſequi: and by the whole bench; in caſe of barretry, the defendant on motion may have a rule to have articles delivered to him of the inſtances, and the proſecutor cannot give evidence of any particular omitted in the articles delivered; and if the proſecutor gives no articles, he ſhall give no evidence.

On a future day, Holt, Chief Juſtice, declared, there was no precedent of a nole proſequi on an indictment during the whole reign of Charle 1. and the court all ſeemed clear, that the action did not lie, but no rule was made. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 261.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Strong v. Courtney.

On a ſpecial aſſumpſit ſtating, that whereas J. T. had a rent charge iſſuing out of the defendant's land, the defendant, in conſideration the plaintiff would indemnify and ſave him harmleſs againſt all diſtreſſes to be taken by J. T. out, of, or on the premiſes, promiſed to pay him ſuch a ſum. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff; it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that no right of diſtraining appeared for the ſaid J. ideo i. e. therefore no conſideration for the promiſe.

The court were of this opinion, though it was after verdict, which they obſerved would not cure the want of conſideration; ſecus i. e. otherwiſe if it had appeared that the rent had been aſſigned to J. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 265.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Thornborough v. Whitacre.

On an aſſumpſit brought, plaintiff declared, that in conſideration of half a crown by the plaintiff in hand paid to the defendant, he promiſed to pay two grains of rye on Monday the 29th of March in ſuch a year, four grains the next Monday after, and ſo on by progreſſional arithmetic, every Monday for a year. On non aſſumpſit pleaded.

Per curiam on motion, let the parties go to trial, and though this would amount to a vaſt quantity, yet the jury will conſider of the folly of the defendant, and give but reaſonable damages againſt the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 305.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Hannon.

The priſoner was indicted for that being a communis deceptor, i. e. a common cheat of the Queen's people, he came to the wife of B. and made her believe he had ſold part of a ſhip to her huſband, and on that account got ſeveral ſums of money from her.

Per curiam. Communis deceptor is too general, and ſo is communis oppreſſor, perturbator, &c. and ſo are all other appellations (except barrator and ſcold) without ſhewing particular inſtances, and the particular inſtance alledged here is of a private nature. If he had made uſe of any falſe token, it would be otherwiſe. The court quaſhed the indictment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 311.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, the plaintiff declared, that on ſuch a day and year he was poſſeſſed, and is ſtill poſſeſſed, of a meſſuage, ſituate, &c. for a certain number of years, which were unexpired, and alſo of a cellar, parcel of the ſaid premiſes, which lies together with the aforeſaid meſſuage, contiguous to the meſſuage of the ſaid defendant, in the pariſh aforeſaid, and to a vault, parcel of the ſaid defendant's premiſes, which was uſed to be ſeparated by a ſtrong thick wall, which alſo belonged to the ſaid defendant's premiſes, and which ought to be repaired by him for all the term aforeſaid; but that the defendant machinans, i. e. contriving, &c. though often requeſted to repair the ſaid wall, ſo negligently kept it in repair, that for default of care in his repairing the ſame, the filth of the ſaid vault, by the decay and breach of the ſaid wall, did flow into the cellar, and fill the ſame for ſuch a time, &c. by which the plaintiff loſt the uſe thereof, &c.

The queſtion was, Whether the declaration was ſufficient to entitle the plaintiff to this action? It being objected, that it thereby put a charge on the defendant which could not be but by preſcriptions, and none being laid, nor was it laid, that the meſſuage was an ancient meſſuage, capable of preſcription. In ſupport of the declaration, that it was well laid, being for a tort to his poſſeſſion, the following authorities were cited, 1 Cro. 575. 3 Lev. 266, &c.

The defendant's council, in ſupport of the objection raiſed to the declaration, cited the following caſes, 1 Vent. 274. and Cro. Jac. 43.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that the caſe of Sands v. Trefuſis was not like this; for the there the ſolebat, i. e.

was uſed, goes to the word currere, i. e. to run, which is the thing complained of, and ſolebat is a word of an uncertain ſignification, and properly goes to the repeated acts, and it is ſaid that the wall ſolebat reparari, i. e. was uſed to be repaired, and yet the ſame is a permanent thing, and therefore it is very improper to ſay, a permanent thing ſolebat. He allowed, that formerly, and even now, there is a difference between charging a wrong doer, and the tenant of the land, for to charge the tertenant, one muſt ſhew a title by grant or preſcription, but the ſame need not be done againſt a wrong doer: formerly it was thought neceſſary, in order to maintain an action on the caſe againſt tertenants for ſtopping a way, to ſet forth the title, but the contrary opinion has been ſince held. Vide Brit v. Stroud. 4 Mod. 418. as well on demurrer as after verdict. I know no caſe where one puts a charge on another, except the ſame be of common right, but he ought to ſhew his title, as in the caſe of repairing one's houſe: but if I have a houſe of office in my ground walled, and there is no cellar contiguous thereto, and another perſon digs a cellar cloſe to my wall, which is perfectly ſound and ſtrong till ſuch cellar has been dug; it ſeems hard to bring a greater charge on me by his digging his cellar contiguous to my wall, whereby the foundation thereof is become weakened. Suppoſe one man has a houſe, and a cellar contiguous thereto, and one wall ſerves for both, and he ſells the other, the queſtion is, who ſhall repair the wall? Or ſuppoſe the cellar was made after the vault and the wall thereof, the one party's making a wall ſhall not take away the owner of the contiguous ſoil's liberty of digging a cellar, though ſuch digging did not ſubject the other perſon to a greater expence.

Gould, Juſtice. There are certainly a great many caſes, wherein if a man declares that he ought to have common, &c. if the ſame be againſt a tertenant or owner of the ſoil, there ought to be a title made. Vide 1 Vent. 319. 356. but latter caſes have turned otherwiſe. Vide Matthew's and Baker's caſe, and Plottney and Slaughter's caſe, Hilary, 4 W. & Mary, Roll. 1771. In the declaration it is ſaid he ought to repair, and the word ought will bring the matter in evidence, and the difference is between a declaration and a plea in bar. 2 Vent. 185.

Afterwards the whole court gave it as their opinion, that the declaration was good, for there was a ſufficient cauſe of action appearing in ſuch declaration, but not on the ſolebat, i. e. was uſed; ſaid, if the defendant has a houſe of office, incloſed with a wall, which belongs to him, he is of common right bound to uſe it ſo as not to annoy another. There is a great diverſity between a preſcription to put a charge on a man to repair his fence, and to excuſe one from a treſpaſs for ſuch charge, becauſe the ſame muſt be by preſcription; the reaſon is, that one muſt uſe his own ſo as thereby not to hurt another; and as of common right, one is bound to keep his cattle from treſpaſſing on his neighbour, ſo he is bound to uſe any thing that is his, ſo as not to hurt another by ſuch uſer. If a man has two houſes, one thereof having a houſe of office that is kept in by the wall of the ſame houſe from a cellar in the other, and he ſells the houſe to which the houſe of office belongs, the buyer is bound to keep ſuch houſe of office in good repair, ſo as not to prejudice the vendor's houſe, he being to uſe the ſame ſo as not to hurt another.

If one perſon ſells a piece of paſture lying open to another piece of paſture, which the vendor has, vendee is bound to keep his cattle from running into the vendor's piece, ſo of dung, or any thing elſe.

If a man erects a houſe of office, to which there is adjoining a vacant piece of ground, which is his, and by which the houſe of office is kept in; in that caſe, if he ſells the vacant ground, and the vendee digs a cellar in it, as he may do, he muſt ſecure his cellar againſt the houſe of office.

If a man erects a houſe next to a vacant piece of ground of his own, and then ſells ſuch houſe, keeping the ground in his own hands, he cannot build on the waſte ground ſo as to ſtop the lights of the houſe; for by the ſale of the houſe, all the lights, and all neceſſaries to make the ſame uſeful paſs; he cannot build to the prejudice of the new houſe ſo ſold, nor can the vendee of the vacant ground do it. If he had ſold the vacant ground without reſerving the benefit of the lights, the court doubted whether the vendee might build ſo as to ſtop the lights of the vendor, becauſe he parted with the ground without reſerving the benefit of the lights. They ſaid there was a writ in the Nat. Brev. p. 127. directed to a mayor, to command him that has the lower rooms to repair the foundation, and him that has a garret to repair the roof; but that is grounded on a cuſtom, and the declaration would be better to ſay only that the wall and the houſe of office are the defendant's, and that through the default of him the filth ran into the cellar. The whole court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 311.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Lewis v. Jones.

In an action of treſpaſs on the caſe, the defendant being found guilty of the treſpaſs prædict. i. e. aforeſaid, Sir James Montague excepted againſt that expreſſion, becauſe it was a variance, the treſpaſs prædict. i. e. aforeſaid, being treſpaſs in general. But was anſwered by Letchmere, that this was helped by a verdict; which was granted. Sir James then took another exception, viz. that it appeared by the record that damages were aſſeſſed by the court, which would have been fatal, had it not appeared by the entry of the judgment, that the judgment mentioned the damages and coſts aſſeſſed by the jury; and then it went on by the court aforeſaid, in manner and form aforeſaid, which the court obſerved was idle and mere ſurpluſage. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 68.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared on a ſpecial promiſe, that defendant would pay a certain ſum of money in conſideration that the ſaid plaintiff would deliver up the bond of C. and averred that he did deliver up the ſaid bond. It was objected, that it was not ſet forth in the declaration, that he gave notice to the defendant, nor to whom the bond was to be delivered; in ſupport of the above objections Cro. Car. 577. 77. Cro. Eliz. 229. were cited. The plaintiff's council, in oppoſition thereto, cited 1 Lev. Price v. Evans, Cro. Eliz. 97.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt, where a general promiſe to pay money when a bond is delivered up, it muſt be intended to be delivered up to the obligor, though he is a third perſon; and the defendant ought to take notice of the delivery, becauſe he might have applied to the obligor to have had notice; for where either party might have had notice by their own enquiry, notice is not neceſſary. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 48.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Anonymous.

In an action of aſſault, it appeared, that the defendant came forcibly and violently to reſcue a diſtreſs from the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff had not time to requeſt him to forbear.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Knight v. Barker.

In an action of trover, the charge in the declaration ran for quingentis piecus inteſtinarum, i. e. five hundred ends of deal boards; Sir James Montague moved the court in arreſt of judgment, inſiſting that pieciis i. e. pieces is a word of a very uncertain ſignification; that they might be middle pieces, or ſide pieces, and of very uncertain dimenſions, and cited Palmer 393. Latch 216. Styles 247. 3 Keb. 153. 1 Keb. 124. 176. Serjeant Darnel, on the other ſide, argued, that trover will lie for a ſtudy of books; and the law does not require ſo preciſe a form in this action, as it did in the infancy of it; and if it was according to the common acceptation, it would be very well.

Powell, Juſtice. Workmen, in general, call all ſhort pieces, not fit for wainſcoting, flooring, &c. ends; and this being a particular term of art amongſt houſe joiners, and generally underſtood by workmen, is a proper denomination for all ſhort pieces: had it been for pieciis extremis, or exterioribus, i. e. end pieces, or outſide pieces, it would not have been ſo well; becauſe theſe words would not comprehend the middle part. Adjudged good, Chief Juſtice Holt not being preſent: but afterwards the court gave a further day, when judgment was affirmed by Chief Juſtice Holt, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 66.

In an action on the caſe for ſhooting at, diſturbing, and ſcaring wild ducks from coming to the plaintiff's decoy pond, without coming on his ſoil, the queſtion aroſe, whether this was ſuch a damage as to ſupport this action? The matter was adjourned till the next term, when a verdict was given for the plaintiff on the following grounds.

A decoy is a benefit to the poſſeſſor, and in nature of a trade, and there is the ſame reaſon a perſon ſhould be repaired in damages for his decoy as for any other trade. 'Tis true, there may be a damage without injury, as where a man ſets up the ſame trade as mine in the ſame town. But diſturbing the wild ducks coming to the plaintiff's decoy, is the ſame as diſturbing him in the exerciſe of his trade; and it was unneceſſary for him to ſet forth the exact number of ducks, which was the exception taken at the bar, becauſe it was impoſſible. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 17. enumerates what is to be deemed wild fowl, ſo that the law takes notice of wild fowl. The preſent caſe differs from that of franchiſes; and from that in 5 Co. about taking fiſhes out of a pond; for in that it was treſpaſs to recover damage for the thing ſtolen, and it was neceſſary to ſet out the preciſe number, and of what kind; but this action is a treſpaſs on the caſe to receive a recompenſe for a conſequential damage or injury; and is for hindering the plaintiff from exerciſing his private right. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 73. 31.

In an aſſumpſit againſt a perſon who promiſed in conſideration the officer would reſtore goods taken on a fi. fa. that he would pay the debt. On demurrer it was held by the court a good conſideration. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 28.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Anonymous.

An action on the caſe was brought for diſperſing a paper accuſing a gentleman of having ſaid, he could ſee no probability of the war terminating with France, till the little gentleman on the other ſide of the water was reſtored to his right, meaning the Prince of Wales.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. A perſon may juſtify in an action on the caſe for words, or for a libel; otherwiſe on an indictment. The innuendo will not make an action on the caſe for a libel good, if the precedent matter is not certain, or imports ſcandal, &c. to the damage of the party. If a man is in treaty with a woman about marriage, and a perſon tells him ſhe is under a precontract, this does not import a ſcandal; yet provided it is falſe an action will lie. In caſe on a libel, it is ſufficient if the matter is reflecting; as to paint a man playing at cudgels with his wiſe. The court were unanimouſly of opinion, that the charge ſtated in the declaration was certain enough without the innuendo. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 99.

Hilary, 6 Ann. Haſſer v. Wallis.

The plaintiff being a feme ſole, married the defendant, who was already married to another woman. He granted a leaſe of the plaintiff's lands, reſerving rent, and received the rents from the tenants as her huſband. The plaintiff at length diſcovering his former marriage, brought an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him for ſuch a ſum of money received for her uſe. After a verdict on non aſſumpſit pleaded, it was objected, that Wallis, having no right to receive, the tenant was not diſcharged, and therefore an action lay againſt the tenant, who has his remedy againſt Wallis.

Per curiam. The defendant was viſibly a huſband, and the tenant diſcharged; at leaſt the recovery againſt the defendant in this action diſcharges the tenant, becauſe a ſatisfaction to the leſſor. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 28.

Eaſter, 6 Ann. Kendal v. John.

In an action on the caſe for a falſe return of a member of parliament, the plaintiff having been adjudged duly elected by the Houſe of Commons, after iſſue joined, and a verdict for the plaintiff, a motion was made in arreſt of judgment on two points: firſt that the action did not lie at common law; ſecondly, that it did not lie on any act of parliament whatever.

This term Chief Juſtice Holt delivered the opinion of the court. Judgment muſt be arreſted; for the action does not lie. The Houſe of Commons has given judgment for the plaintiff, ſo that the action cannot be for a falſe return; the proper remedy is in the Houſe, and we cannot intermeddle with it; but they can cauſe returns to be altered, and then they become the ſame as if the perſon was originally returned. To maintain this action is againſt the record itſelf; the record is ſet right, and is returned by the proper officer, and every body is eſtopped to ſay he was not returned, becauſe it is now good ab initio i. e. from the beginning. Soams v. Barnardiſton is a caſe in point. There judgment was for the plaintiff, but a writ of error was brought, and the queſtion there was, Whether an action on the caſe would lie againſt a ſheriff for making a double return on a writ to elect a member of parliament? The plaintiff declared falſely and maliciouſly to his damage of 1000 l. and 800 l. damages were given; and this was moved in arreſt of judgment, and argued before all the judges of C. B. and the barons of the Exchequer; and the judgment given here was reverſed: they went on the reaſon of the caſe, and that no ſuch action ever lay. If the ſheriff made a double return in any other caſe, it is no return in parliament, which by order of parliament may be altered, and then it is legal ab initio i. e. from the beginning. To ſay it is true to one purpoſe, and falſe to another, is ridiculous, and a contradiction: nor is this any action on the ſtatute; you ſay in a plea of treſpaſs on the caſe, which is very different from an action on a ſtatute. It cannot well be both an action on the caſe, and an action on a ſtatute too; the ſtatute need not be recited if it is a public law, provided you bring yourſelf within the act; and if you do not conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute, &c. you muſt ſhew it at leaſt by concluding in a plea of treſpaſs, &c.

Juſtice Powell. That does not appear on this record; my reaſon for being of the ſame opinion, is the caſe of Soams v. Barnardiſton, while that caſe is law I muſt judge ſo, was it out of the way, I might be of another opinion.

Juſtice Powis. Soams v. Barnardiſton is in point, beſides if the plaintiff can have this action, any other perſon may bring the action, and then the defendant will be doubly puniſhed for the ſame crime.

Trinity, 6 Ann. Savage v. Walthew.

In an action on the caſe by a carrier againſt his ſervant for loſing goods, &c. exception was taken, that this action does not lie unleſs it appears that the carrier had been ſued; this action lying only in reſpect of the damage ſuſtained by the maſter. See Cro. Eliz. 53, 461. Cro. Car. 187. contra: and further, if this action lies, the defendant might be charged twice, by his maſter, and by the owner.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. Not unleſs there is an actual converſion; for in that caſe only, the owner of the goods is entitled to an action againſt the ſervant. The maſter has a ſpecial property in the goods, and may maintain trover; and is liable to the owner, becauſe he was the perſon intruſted by him; beſides, a negligence muſt be ſhewn in the ſervant to make him liable to this action. Judgment niſi unleſs cauſe ſhewn within three days. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 135.

Trinity, 7 Ann. Bourden v. Alloway.

A motion was made to arreſt judgment in an action on the caſe, for cauſing the plaintiff to be arreſted and carried to priſon without a cauſe.

The exception was, that this action ought to have been treſpaſs and not caſe, and that a perſon cannot change the nature of the action by laying it with a per quod, i. e. whereby.

It was inſiſted by Serjeant Wynn, againſt this exception, that a juſtice of peace is impowered by warrant to arreſt a man; and (if he does it wrongfully) this action lies againſt the perſon who maliciouſly cauſes this to be done.

Mr. Barnes explained the difference between treſpaſs and caſe; he ſaid he had heard from the court, that there was but little difference between them, and that almoſt all treſpaſſes might be converted into actions on the caſe, at the election of the plaintiff; but that the true difference between the two was, that treſpaſs lies where there is an immediate injury; caſe, where the injury is collateral.

Mr. Eyre obſerved, that it did not appear that the plaintiff was arreſted by any authority, and therefore a plain treſpaſs. Pengelly ſaid, where the damage is immediate, the conſequential damage thereon will not alter it from an action of treſpaſs to an action on the caſe.

Per Powell, Juſtice. We muſt keep up the difference of actions; and it will be hard to maintain this. But where a man, by being impriſoned, ſuffers a ſpecial damage, as forfeiting a recognizance, or is prevented from appearing on a particular day, whereby he was damnified, &c. there the action muſt be caſe. Juſtice Powis thought the ſame. Juſtice Gould ſaid, this is coupled with ſpecial matter, and is laid to be done maliciouſly; therefore caſe lay. Pengelly—You may as well ſay, a man may maliciouſly aſſault and wound, and therefore caſe lies. The matter was adjourned.

N. B. In another cauſe this term, Powell Juſtice, declared, there was a great difference between treſpaſs and trover, as to the action being local, &c. thus, treſpaſs is local, but trover is tranſitory; trover lies for trees where they are cut down, becauſe then they are chattels; but while ſtanding they participate of the nature of the land, and treſpaſs lies. But ſuppoſe after a perſon has cut down a tree, he carries it away, may he not be indicted for felony? Holt, Chief Juſtice. No; trover lies for carrying it away, becauſe it is a chattel as ſoon as it is ſevered from the freehold; and for the ſevering thereof treſpaſs lies. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 180.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Tate v. Whiting. Error.

On a writ of error brought in this court, on an aſſumpſit, on ſeveral promiſes, brought in C. B. by an adminiſtrator, with the letters of adminiſtration annexed; two of which were made to the inteſtate, and the third laid as follows: Whereas the defendant Tate was indebted to the inteſtate, and letters of adminiſtration were granted to the plaintiff: he the ſaid defendant, in conſideration that the plaintiff would forbear to ſue him, promiſed to pay, &c.

It was inſiſted for the plaintiff in error, that theſe promiſes could not be joined, becauſe the laſt promiſe is made to the adminiſtrator himſelf, and it is a queſtion whether the remittit damna, i. e. he remits damages, which was entered after verdict, will help it; and Shower 366 was cited in favour of this opinion.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. That book I cannot allow as an authority; yet I admit that theſe promiſes could not be joined, and on a demurrer it would have been ill; but now it has been cured by the remiſſion of damages: for if huſband and wife join in an action of battery for the beating of both, if the defendant is found not guilty as to the huſband, and guilty as to the wife, and a remittit damna, i. e. he remits the damages, iſentered as to the huſband, it is good, though prima facie, i. e. at the firſt view of the matter, it ſeems as if they could not join; and the ſame in the preſent caſe. Judgment was therefore affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 196.

Hilary, 8 Ann. Leuknor v. Plant.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declares, that the defendant, Sarah Plant, being a common carrier, and uſing to carry goods for hire between Worceſter and Litchfield, ſhe delivered to her a guinea to carry and deliver to her ſon T. and that the defendant, in conſideration of ſo much money for carriage, promiſed the plaintiff that ſhe the ſaid Sarah would ſafely carry and deliver the aforeſaid money to the ſaid T. whenever ſhe ſhould afterwards be requeſted ſo to do, yet notwithſtanding ſhe the aforeſaid Sarah had not as yet delivered the ſame, although often times requeſted ſo to do by the ſaid Alice, but refuſes, and ſtill doth wholly refuſe to deliver the ſame to the ſaid Alice, &c. After a verdict in favour of the plaintiff, on a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was objected that the declaration ſets forth no breach of promiſe, there being no requeſt to pay to T. to whom the money was to be delivered; and if no breach, then no cauſe of action.

Per curiam, Chief Juſtice Holt being abſent, through ſickneſs. It being ſaid generally, that ſhe requeſted the defendant to deliver, though not mentioned to whom, and it being after verdict, the declaration is well. Let judgment therefore go for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 273.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. At Guildhall. Garnet v. Clarke.

On an aſſumpſit brought on a promiſory note of hand, whereby the defendant promiſed to pay a certain ſum on account of his mother; it being objected that there was no conſideration given for it,

Chief Juſtice Holt declared, that to promiſe to pay to A. B. is good; but to promiſe to pay A. B. on account of C. D. is not good, not being within the words or meaning of the act; the conſideration implied in the act is, that when the party promiſes on his own account, it muſt be preſumed that he is indebted, or elſe he would not have promiſed to pay. Otherwiſe where the promiſe is to pay on account of a third perſon; and in this caſe directed a verdict for the plaintiff, but under controul, and ordered the poſtea to be ſtaid. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 226.

In an action on the caſe for words brought by an apothecary; the words charged in the declaration were: it is a world of blood he has to anſwer for in this town, through his ignorance; he did kill a woman and two children of Southampton; he did kill John Prior at Petersfield, (and in another place the defendant ſaid, he was at the death of John Prior) he has killed his patients with phyſic; when in fact, they died of the viſitation of God. Adjudged that the action lies. The caſes cited were Cro. Eliz. 620. 2 And. 268. Sutor & Emmet. 2 Roll. Rep. Cro. Jac. 206. Hetley 69. 1 Cro. 370. Sir Thomas Jones 141. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 221.

In an action on the caſe for words ſpoke of a perſon who travelled about the country to collect charity for a loſs by fire; the words for which the action was brought, were, he fired his houſe (innuendo i. e. implying) voluntarily he was brought up to rook and cheat the country, and ſince he has fired his houſe he has cheated it more and more; whereby the plaintiff loſt much charity, which he otherwiſe would have had; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the action did not lie.

Per curiam. The innuendo does not ſupply the place of voluntarily, which muſt be proved to make the defendant criminal; and even ſuppoſing it had been ſaid voluntarily, yet the action would not lie; for the matter charged is not felony, unleſs it be done with an intent to burn his neighbour's houſe; and though the words are taken in an ill ſenſe, yet they are not actionable. Juſtice Powell ſaid it was unlawful for people to go about the country and collect charity, without letters patent And Chief Juſtice Holt held, that to ſay, a man is an errant knave,

Wages being due to A. from the Eaſt India Company, he orders B. to receive the money, and pay the ſame to C. one of his creditors ; an indebitatus aſſumpſit is brought in conſequence thereof againſt B. by C.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. The action cannot be maintained by C. the plaintiff therefore was nonſuited. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 241.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Young v. Slaughterford.

At a trial at bar in an appeal of murder, the defendant's council after verdict, moved in arreſt of judgment for the following reaſons.

1. That there are two places mentioned in the appeal, viz. that he was reſiding at Shalford, and that the fact was done at Compton, afterwards the indictment ſays, on the day, year, hour, and place aforeſaid, he percuſſit, i. e. ſtruck or aſſaulted the ſaid Jane Young.

2. There is no venue laid to the aſſault.

Holt Chief Juſtice was of opinion, that neither of theſe exceptions were material ; as to the firſt, when one place is the man's addition, and the other the place where the fact was done, the day, year, hour, and place aforeſaid, muſt certainly refer to the place of the fact ; the other exception is not material, for the aſſault is not neceſſary, percuſſit is a ſufficient aſſault, the word implying an aſſault. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 228.

In an action on the caſe, brought by an adminiſtrator, he declares on two counts, one on a promiſe to the inteſtate in his life-time, the other on a promiſe to the plaintiff himſelf, and names himſelf adminiſtrator in both. On the trial the plaintiff was nonſuited, and the queſtion was, whether he ſhould pay coſts.

Powell, Juſtice, in the abſence of Holt, held, that theſe two counts could not be joined ; and if final judgment had been given, it ought to have been arreſted. But it is a doubt whether it might not have been made good by taking judgment on one count only : but as the caſe ſtands at preſent, the plaintiff muſt pay coſts, becauſe the nonſuit extends to the whole ; and a rule was given accordingly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 256.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declares, that he was poſſeſſed of a farm and a river at D. in the county of Devon, and that the defendant, to damage the plaintiff's farm and river, did, at a place called Davis's Cloſe in the county of Dorſet, dig two ditches, and diverted the platntiff's water out of the river, and damaged the meadows ; but does not ſay per quod, i. e. whereby.

It was objected in arreſt of judgment, that this declaration was ill ; it not ſhewing that the diverſion of the water was in conſequence of the digging of the ditches, which is the giſt of the action, ſo that this is no more than treſpaſs.

Per curiam. After verdict it ſhall be intended that it was proved to be conſequential.

Another exception was taken, that the action is brought in a wrong county ; it ought to have been brought in the county where the ditches were dug.

Per curiam. It is good ; becauſe in this caſe cauſe of action ariſes in both counties, and the action may be brought in either ; and if there is a conſpiracy in one county, and an indictment in another, the action may be brought in either : but if a nuiſance is erected in one county to the damage of a perſon who reſides in another, the aſſiſe muſt be brought in confinio comitatuum, i. e. in the confines or borders of the two counties.

A third exception was made, that the offence was not laid with a continuando, i. e. a continuance ; but that the ditches were dug ſuch a day, and his cloſe damaged, &c. diverſis diebus et vicibus, i. e. on different days and at different times, between ſuch particular ſtated times ; and Hambleton v. Vere. 1 Lev. 299. 2 Saund. 196. was cited in ſupport thereof ; but Chief Juſtice Holt held it not like the preſent caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 257.

In an action on the caſe for entering the plaintiff's houſe, and taking his goods in the ſaid houſe ; the defendant pleaded in bar, that he entered the ſaid houſe in aid of a bailiff, who had a writ of execution, and took the goods of another, and not of the plaintiff. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and offered the following cauſes of demurrer.

1. That this plea amounted to no more than the general iſſue.

2. That this plea was naught for want of ſhewing how the goods came there, whether wrongfully or rightfully.

3. It was naught, becauſe it ſaid in aſſiſtance and not by command of the bailiff.

Per curiam. The bar is good notwithſtanding theſe exceptions ; for as to the firſt a poſſeſſory right is ſufficient to maintain an action of treſpaſs or caſe, though not a replevin ; and on not guilty pleaded, it being given in evidence that they took another man's goods, and not the goods of the plaintiff, would not have maintained ſuch a general plea, becauſe though the goods ſhould not in reality be the plaintiff's, yet being in his houſe or poſſeſſion, they are ſo far his as to maintain this action.

As to the ſecond, it is impoſſible for the defendant to ſhew how.

As to the third, the command or deſire of the bailiff is not neceſſary to be ſhewn, for every one not only may, but is by law bound to give their aſſiſtance to officers in the execution of juſtice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 25.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Parker v. Langly.

In an action on the caſe for a malicious proſecution, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant arreſted him for the ſum of 100 l. on purpoſe to hold him to ſpecial bail, where not one penny was due ; the defendant to this declaration demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed for cauſe of demurrer, that the plaintiff had not in his declaration ſhewn what became of this malicious proſecution.

The defendant's council acknowledged, that after a verdict, judgment could not have been arreſted for this defect in the declaration, becauſe it could not be intended that the plaintiff could have had ſuch a verdict, unleſs it had appeared that the proſecution was malicious.

On a ſpecial demurrer it was inſiſted on as a good exception,

That no action will lie for a malicious indictment, without ſhewing what became of that indictment.

The plaintiff's council urged, that this action was founded on malice, and brought for holding the plaintiff to exceſſive bail, which was collateral to the proſecution, and therefore not to wait the event of that, which if he did, the ſtatute of limitations might poſſibly bar him. Styles 451. 3 Lev. 210.

It was urged, that there was a difference between an action on the caſe for a malicious proſecution, and an action for a conſpiracy, that in the latter the plaintiff muſt indeed ſhew the former action to be determined, but then it appears from the regiſter p. 134, that this does not proceed from the nature of the action, but the frame of the writ, and this held to be the reaſon, 1 Vent. 12. 1 Jones 93. 9 Co. Poulter's Caſe. Cro. Jac. 130.

Hilary term, 12 Ann. This matter coming on again ; Parker Chief Juſtice delivered the reſolution of the court to be, that the declaration was naught for want of ſhewing what became of the former action, whereas it ought to have been ſhewn that that was falſe and hopeleſs.

As the declaration now ſtands, the firſt ſuit may either, 1ſt. Be determined ; or 2dly, It may be deſerted ; or 3dly. It may be ſtill regularly going on, & non conſtat,

i. e. and it does not appear which of theſe three is the matter of fact.

If the firſt, it does not appear whether determined for or againſt the plaintiff, if for the plaintiff, then there is no colour for this action.

If the ſecond, were the matter of fact, deſertion is an indication of its being falſe and hopeleſs, and then indeed this action would be maintainable, and for this purpoſe there is a very ſtrong caſe in Jones 93.

If the third, be the matter of fact, then the action is brought too ſoon. Vide Dyer 285. Hobart 267.

No man can ſay of an action ſtill depending, that the ſame is falſe or malicious. The ſame doctrine holds in criminal caſes. Vide Yelv. 116. Sidſ. 15. 1 Saund. 228. 2 Keb. 476. In an action for a malicious indictment, the plaintiff muſt, in his declaration, ſhew what became of the indictment.

A verdict or a plea in bar, admitting and confeſſing the firſt action to be falſe and hopeleſs, may cure this defect in a declaration. Raym. 418. 2 Keb. 456. 753. 3 Keb. 781.

The admitting this declaration to be good notwithſtanding this omiſſion would introduce great abſurdities, viz. inconſiſtent and incongruous verdicts in different verdicts in different actions.

Indeed, if the firſt action goes off by nonſuit, it may be ſaid that in another action brought for the ſame cauſe, there may be a verdict given inconſiſtent with the verdict given in the preſent cauſe, this may be but the poſſibility of ſuch a verdict in future, and the non-exiſting action ſhall not hinder a man from bringing ſuch an action as this. The entries ſupport this opinion. Aſhton 40. Brownlow Rediv. 61. Robinſon 91. Judgment was given for the defendant.

Held otherwiſe by the Chief Juſtice in this reſolution, that where the title is of one ſort of action, there the declaration can never change it to another, but it may make a fatal variance between the writ and the declaration. 1 Vent. 19. 2 Rolle's Rep. 49. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 145 & page 210.

Hilary, 12 Ann. Jones v. Gwyn.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, wherein the plaintiff declares that he had always maintained a good and honeſt character among his neighbours, and that he got his livelihood by exerciſing legitimo modo, i. e. in a legal manner; the faculty of a badger of corn or grain: that the defendant, not ignorant of the premiſes, but maliciouſly intending, &c. cauſed the plaintiff to be indicted for exerciſing the trade of a badger without a licence, contrary to the form of the ſtatute.

To this declaration there was a joinder in demurrer, and Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court, that judgment ſhould be given for the plaintiff.

There were four exceptions taken to the declaration; the firſt and moſt material one was, that the indictment was declared only to be brought falſely and maliciouſly, but not abſque rationabili et probabili cauſa, i. e. without a reaſonable and probable cauſe.

Anſwer. To this I ſay, this action cannot indeed be ſupported, unleſs the indictment was groundleſs, and without a probable cauſe; yet no one authority cited to prove the very words neceſſary to be uſed, though many authorities wherein they are wanting. Cro. Jac. 193. 1 Roll. Abr. 113, &c.

If the averment of the plaintiff's honeſty, &c. and that the defendant, not ignorant of the premiſes, will import theſe words, then here they are.

But the true anſwer to this objection is, that the word maliciouſly implies it to be without a reaſonable and probable cauſe, and a great deal more.

Malice is derived from the word malus, i. e. evil, which imports what is wicked, and can admit of no poſſibility of excuſe.

Thus it is uſed in the civil law, and thus in ours, what we call malice implied, is murder attended with ſuch circumſtances as can admit of no excuſe.

My Lord Coke, in his expoſition of ſtat. Weſtminſter, 2 cap. 12, ſays, that an appeal brought per maliciam, i. e. out of malice, is an appeal that wants a foundation, and is groundleſs.

Indicting of a man for what a civil action might have been brought, imports malice. 2 Mod. 306.

The 2d Exception to the declaration was, that the plaintiff had not averred that he was licenſed to exerciſe the trade.

Anſwer. This had been neither neceſſary nor proper, but he has ſaid enough, viz. that in a legal manner he exerciſed the trade of a badger.

The 3d Exception to the declaration was, that it was not ſaid that he was acquitted by verdict.

The anſwer is, that the word acquietatus imports acquittal by verdict.

The 4th Exception to the declaration was, that the proſecution of this indictment could not be a malicious one, becauſe the plaintiff in his very replication has confeſſed that which was a probable cauſe for it, viz. the uſing the trade of a badger.

To this it may be anſwered, that this is no probable cauſe; for it is not exerciſing the trade, but doing it without a licence that conſtitutes the crime.

As to the matter of law, viz. that the exerciſing the trade of a badger, not being &c. is not an offence indictable, and if ſo, it is ſaid the action is not maintainable.

The force and ſtrength of this objection may be reſolved into the ſix following points:

1ſt, Acquittal on an inſufficient indictment will not entitle a man to the plea of a former acquittal to another indictment for the ſame offence.

3dly, That conſpiracy lies not but for ſuch an indictment on which the defendant was ſo acquitted as that he may plead his acquittal in bar of another indictment.

4thly, By a parity of reaſon, it may be inferred, that an action on the caſe will not lie likewiſe on an indictment for a matter not indictable, and on which conſequently there could not be ſuch an acquittal as could be pleaded in bar of another indictment.

6thly, This action lies not becauſe on this indictment the party was never in danger, for judgment could not poſſibly be given againſt him.

2dly, That there can be no argument drawn from a parity of reaſon between actions of conſpiracy and actions on the caſe.

4thly, That the party's being in danger, or not in danger, on the indictment, is not at all material.

As to the firſt point, viz. that the ſufficiency or inſufficiency of the indictment is not at all material to ſupporting this action.

It is to be conſidered what the grounds of this action are.

The damage a perſon may ſuſtain by an indictment may relate either to his perſon, his reputation, or his property, and each of theſe has been reſolved to be a juſt ground of this action in the caſe of Savil v. Roberts, and damage in the laſt reſpect, viz. property, there looked on as ſtrong as any.

It is true, that in Raym. 135. Chamberlain v. Preſcot, there is a reſolution not ſo agreeable to that of Savil v. Roberts, Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 208. where Holt, Chief Juſtice, in his arguments on that caſe, gives the reſolution of the court, and ſeems unwilling to deny that to be law, which he might have done.

I own my opinion to have been at firſt, that where the indictment was neither ſcandalous nor ſufficient, this action would not lie, but on further conſideration I have changed my mind.

For impriſonment, vexation, or expence, the ſame on a groundleſs and inſufficient indictment as on a good one.

For quaſhing an indictment is not always in a man's power, demurring is hazardous, and what a man in prudence would not do, when he is ſure of being cleared by a verdict; and if on a demurrer there be any difficulty, it is equally expenſive with an acquittal on verdict.

But it is the expence, not the amount of the expence, which is material. 1 Cro. 191. 3 Hob. 19.

And as the plaintiff is equally damnified by an inſufficient as a ſufficient indictment, ſo the malice of the defendant is not at all leſs, becauſe the matter was not indictable, nay, it is rather an aggravation. 1 Roll. Abr. 112.

The only hinderance to thoſe actions is, the fear of diſcouraging juſt proſecutions; but to this malice is a full and ſufficient anſwer, 3 Cro. 563. Raym. 135.

It is certainly not reaſonable, that more favour ſhould be ſhewn to a bad indictment than to a good one.

It ought to be conſidered, that a ſmall ſlip vitiates an indictment; and if that ſhall protect a man from an action, a way is opened for the malicious to ruin the innocent; for how eaſily may a ſlip be made on purpoſe.

To the caſes cited in maintenance of the objection, I anſwer, that one is 9 Edw. 4. cap 12. an action of conſpiracy, and in that caſe I allow the law to be ſo: the other is 1 Roll. Abr. 110. which is indeed a caſe in point, but then the foundation of the reſolution is built on the parity of reaſon that was ſuppoſed to be between conſpiracy and this action.

Second point, viz. to ſhew that there is no arguing from one ſort of actions to the other.

Actions of conſpiracy are the worſt ſort of actions in the world to be argued, from more contrariety and repugnancy of opinions in them, than in any other ſpecies of actions whatever.

I admit, that unleſs the indictment be either determined or deſerted, this action is not maintainable. Yelv. p. 116.

Conſpiracy lies not without acquittal on this principle of law, that it is a formed action, and the form of the writ is ſo in the regiſter, 17 Edw. 2. 509. Regiſter, 134. b. 9 Rep. 56. b. 2 Cro. 130. 1 Roll. Abr. 114. Jones, 94. 1 Cro. 15. and 1 Roll. Abr. 112.

There is no arguing from an action which is a formed one, and for which there is a formal writ in the Regiſter, to an action on the caſe, that is tied down to no form at all.

If an action on the caſe be brought on an indictment, where the jury find the bill ignoramus, i. e. a falſe bill, there is no poſſibility that there can be an acquittal. 2 Cro. 190. 1 Roll. Abr. 114. 3. 2 Cro. 490. Palmer, 44. Styles, 10. Raym. 180. where likewiſe an indictment is not before the court. Styles, 372, 378. where likewiſe an indictment is inſufficient, and goes off on that account. 2 Cro. 32. Yelv. 46. Styles, 372. 157. 2 Keb. 141.

The third propoſition was, that there was no ground for making a difference, when the matter of the indictment is ſcandalous, and when not.

The caſes before mentioned ſpeak not a word of this difference, and if ſcandal is mentioned, it is only in the nature of damages. Jones, 93. Styles, 378.

The fourth propoſition was, that the danger of the party was not material.

1ſt, It is not the danger, but expence, that is the ground of damage.

2dly, All the danger in the preſent caſe, if the indictment had been good, would only have been incurring a fine, and before ſhewing, the amount of the damage not material.

3dly, When on an indictment a falſe bill is returned, or when the indictment is not before the court, the party is in no danger at all, yet this action lies. The court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 214.

This was a qui tam action, and the objection taken was, that the concluſion ran, and therefore he brings his ſuit generally, and not as well for our ſovereign lady the Queen as for himſelf.

The court were of opinion that it muſt be ſo underſtood, there being precedents both ways, and gave judgment reſpondeas ouſter, i. e. let the defendant anſwer over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 253.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Lewis v. Farrel.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for a malicious proſecution by indictment; the defendant demurred to the plaintiff's declaration, and obtained judgment, becauſe the plaintiff had not ſhewn by his declaration how the indictment was determined agreeable to the caſe of Parker v. Langley, &c. Vide Strange vol. 1. page 114.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendants for hindering him as an inhabitant and veſtryman, to meet the veſtry of the pariſh in a houſe where the veſtry was met, &c. To the plaintiff's declaration the defendant demurred, and ſhewed the following cauſes of demurrer, viz.

That it did not appear by the declaration, that the plaintiff was damnified in any manner, and that the declaration was uncertain, doubtful, and wanted form.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that this action could not be maintained, becauſe veſtries are voluntary meetings of pariſhioners only, and conſidered in law as ſuch, and therefore it was neither an injury or damage to the plaintiff to keep him out of ſuch a meeting. In the next place, if ſhutting the door and keeping the plaintiff out was a damage, it was no more than a public damage, for which no action on the caſe would lie; for to ſupport ſuch an action, a particular damage ought to be proved; for example, if a highway is ſtopped, every perſon who goes that way receives a damage by the obſtruction, yet it being a damage in common to all perſons paſſing that way, no one can maintain an action on the caſe for it, unleſs he ſuffers ſome particular damage to himſelf. 5 Co. 73. William's caſe. Co. Lit. 56. Cro. Jac. 446. Fowler v. Saunders, &c.

The plaintiff's council argued, that the inhabitants of a pariſh paying ſcot and lot might aſſemble in veſtry, and make rates; and every ſuch inhabitant had a right to be preſent at ſuch meeting, and give his vote. Vide 5 Co. 63. 44 Edw. 3. cap. 19. 1 Mod. 194. 2 Mod. 8. 5 Co. 67. 1 Mod. 236. 2 Mod. 222.

2dly, As to the excepion to the declaration, the plaintiff's council argued, that the ſame was well enough, becauſe it was laid therein that the room was the uſual place where ſuch aſſembles were held, &c. and that the pariſhioners were then there aſſembled, and if it was the defendant's room, yet if he had let it out for the pariſhioners to hold their veſtry in, he could not ſhut the door againſt any of them, and that there was no occaſion to lay an expreſs cuſtom for all the pariſhioners; for if their veſtry was a ſelect veſtry, (if by law there can be any ſuch) the defendant ought to have pleaded the ſame. Whether the action would lie or not, if the declaration had been good, the court gave no opinion.

Forteſcue, Juſtice, was ſtrongly of opinion that the preſent action would not lie.

Per curiam. The declaration is ill, becauſe it is not ſhewn that the pariſhioners had a right to hold their veſtry in this room; for in actions of this nature, the plaintiff muſt ſhew a right in the thing claimed, and then that he was diſturbed therein. Judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1388.

Trinity, 11 Geo. Reynolds v. Clarke.

In an action of treſpaſs brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for entering his yard, and fixing a ſpout there, whereby the water came into the yard, and injured the walls of the plaintiff's houſe.

To this action the defendant juſtifies, that before the treſpaſs one J. F. was ſeiſed in fee of the plaintiff's premiſes, and two other houſes adjoining, and demiſed the plaintiff's premiſes to one Tyler, except the free uſe of the yard, and privy, for the tenants of the other two houſes, jointly with the tenant of the plaintiff's houſe. He then ſhews how his premiſes, which was one of the two houſes, came to him, and that he entered the yard, and fixed the ſpout for his neceſſary uſe, to carry off the rain, as he lawfully might.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that this exception amounted to a licence of the party, and that a diſtinction has always been taken between a licence in law, as to go into a tavern ; and the licence of the party ; and that this being of the latter ſort, an action of treſpaſs will not lie, but if the ſpout be a prejudice, the plaintiff might redreſs himſelf by an action on the caſe. 11 Co. This is an action of treſpaſs brought for a nuiſance on our own poſſeſſion.

Chief Juſtice. Though the defendant had a right to enter into the yard, yet it is a matter to be conſidered, whether, if he abuſes that right to the detriment of another, he is not in the ſame caſe with every other treſpaſſer.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. Treſpaſs is a poſſeſſory action, and how does this invade the plaintiff's poſſeſſion? The difference between treſpaſs and caſe is, that in treſpaſs, the plaintiff complains of an immediate wrong, and in caſe, of a wrong that is the conſequence of another act.

Raymond, Juſtice. That diſtinction is perfectly right. I remember a caſe in this court, viz. Courtney v. Collet, which was brought for the defendant's diverting his own water-courſe in his own land, whereby the plaintiff's land was overflowed. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was often debated, whether this was an action of treſpaſs or on the caſe, and at laſt judgment was given for the plaintiff, who had brought treſpaſs only.

The court took further time to conſider this caſe, being nice ; and on a ſecond argument, to the effect of the former, the court delivered their opinion as follows :

Chief Juſtice Raymond. We muſt keep up the boundaries of actions, otherwiſe we ſhall introduce the utmoſt confuſion ; if the act in the firſt inſtance be unlawful, treſpaſs will lie ; but if the act is on the firſt view lawful, (as it was in this caſe) and the prejudice to another is not immediate, but conſequential, it muſt be an action on the caſe ; and this is the true diſtinction. The caſe I mentioned on the laſt argument, viz. Courtney v. Collet, was a plain treſpaſs, and the account I then gave of it, from my memory, was miſtaken ; it was Hilary, 9 W. 3. in this court, treſpaſs for taking fiſh, as well as for that he broke down the bank of the river, whereby the water iſſued, and other fiſhes went away. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the latter part was caſe, and not joinable with treſpaſs ; but the court held that was a treſpaſs, and what came under the whereby was only matter of aggravation. There was another caſe in this court in Hilary, 9 Ann. viz. Leveridge v. Hoſkins : that was an action for digging trenches, whereby the water was drawn away from the plaintiff's river. In this caſe it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was a treſpaſs, but the court ſaid, that it not being laid to be a digging on the plaintiff's ground, the action on the caſe was the moſt proper; and I take that and this to be the ſame caſe. The defendant having a right to enter the yard, and do the firſt act which is here complained of. I think this ſhould have been an action on the caſe, and that treſpaſs will not lie.

Powys, Juſtice, agreed. Forteſcue, Juſtice, ſaid, treſpaſs will not lie for procuring another to beat me ; if a man throws a log into the highway, and in that act it hits me, I may maintain treſpaſs againſt him for it, becauſe it is an immediate wrong, but if it lies there, and I tumble over it, and receive an injury, I muſt bring an action on the caſe for it, becauſe it is only prejudicial in its conſequence, and for which originally I could have no action at all.

Reynolds, Juſtice. The diſtinction is certainly right ; this is only injurious in its conſequence, for it is not pretended by the plaintiff, that the bare fixing a ſpout was a cauſe of action, without the falling of any water ; the right of action did not accrue till the water actually deſcended, and therefore this ſhould have been an action on the caſe.

In an action brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for a malicious proſecution of an indictment for perjury.

In this action the court allowed the plaintiff to give in evidence an advertiſement put into the papers by the defendant, of the finding the indictment, with other ſcandalous matter, notwithſtanding an information had been granted for ſuch ſcandal as a libel, not (as the Chief Juſtice obſerved) that the jury were to conſider it in damages, but only as a circumſtance of malice.

On the trial it appeared, that the perjury was ill aſſigned in the indictment, ſo that the plaintiff in this action could not have been convicted, and that the judge who tried the ſame took exception thereto, and he was acquitted without examining any witneſſes. The Chief Juſtice was of opinion, the action would lie, though the indictment was faulty, relying on the caſe of Jones v. Gwyn, where the diſtinction in Salk. 15. was denied, and held by the court that the action would lie, though the indictment was bad ; a bad indictment ſerving all the purpoſes of malice, by putting the party to expence, and expoſing him, but it ſerves no purpoſe of juſtice in bringing the party to puniſhment if he be guilty.

Whereupon the jury gave the plaintiff 1000 l. damages, and the next term the defendant moved the court for their judgment on this point, (which was ſaved at niſi prius) and for leave to move for a new trial, after the court had given their opinion on the point reſerved, which was granted.

As to the point reſerved for the judgment of the court, the court agreed with the caſe of Jones v. Gwyn, and the council for the defendant did not ſeem to think the authority of that caſe was to be ſhaken.

On defendant's council moving for a new trial, on account of the exceſſive damages given in this caſe, the court thought it was but reaſonable that the defendant ſhould try another jury before he was abſolutely charged with damages, on which a new trial was granted, on payment of coſts.

A new trial being had, the ſame damages were given by the jury on ſuch trial as before, and on the defendant's applying again to the court for a third trial, the court refuſed the ſame, ſaying it was not in their power ſo to do, and cited the caſe of Clerk v. Udal, Salk. 649. in ſupport of their opinion. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 691.

The plaintiff brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant in the court of S. for that in ſuch a trial between the plaintiff and the defendant, the defendant laboured the jury to the plaintiff's damage, &c. The plaintiff had a verdict and judgment for him, on which a writ of error being brought, Hawkins Serjeant, argued for the plaintiff, that this being a matter meerly criminal, ſhould be puniſhed by indictment, &c. and it is a mere embracery ; for the plaintiff in the action did not aver, that by means of this labouring by the defendant, the jury did give a falſe verdict ; ſo that it does not appear he had any ſpecial damage, wherefore no action on the caſe can lie. 1 Ro. Ab. 812. pl. 8. 115. pl. 7. Raſtal Precedents 505, 506. And this being an offence, and a high contempt, the action ſhould have been laid in contempt of our ſovereign Lord the King, which the plaintiff may aſſign for error, though it be an advantage to him that it was not laid ſo.

The defendant's council inſtanced the caſe of a nuiſance indictable, &c. for which alſo upon ſpecial damage, the party ſhall have an action on the caſe; he urged, the declaration in the point of the averment was mended by the verdict, which found for the plaintiff in the action : the court inclined to think, that notwithſtanding the verdict found for the plaintiff, ſtill the declaration was faulty in ſubſtance, becauſe no ſpecial damage was laid. Adjourned.

In Michaelmas term, 3 Geo. 2. For the plaintiff in error it was inſiſted, that it appears on the face of the declaration, that the cauſe of action, viz. the embracing of a jury, is a crime of a public nature; and ſo not puniſhable by a civil action: but admitting that for ſuch a tort an action at common law may lie, upon a ſpecial injury laid to ariſe to the party; ſtill it cannot lie in the preſent caſe, it being not averred, that by means of ſuch embracery a verdict was given againſt evidence, or otherwiſe, that the party received a ſpecial damage: no ſuch action was ever brought. Chappell, Serjeant contra, cited to the firſt point, 39 E. 3. 13. N. B. 95. 11 Co. 87. Cro. El. 90. Long. 5 E. 4. 126. 4 Co. 18. Hob. 267. Cro. El. 167. F. N. B. 172. 47 E. 3. 9. Merch. 81. 2 Ro. Rep. 199. 1 Ro. Ab. 100.

Per curiam. Theſe caſes are only where there are formed writs upon particular acts of parliament; but here is no ſpecial damage laid, which is fatal: and per Reynolds, Juſtice, if the party has a damage, he may have an action, which is not to be founded on the crime, but on the loſs he ſuſtains, which is conſequent to, and reſulting from the crime; and the whole court were determined to reverſe the judgment; but at the importunity of Serjeant Chappel, agreed it ſhould ſtand over to be ſpoke to again. And accordingly,

In Michaelmas term, 4 Geo. 2. The matter was again ſpoke to, and Fazakerly argued for the plaintiff in error, that actions do not ordinarily lie for a proceeding in a court of juſtice; becauſe if the party is aggrieved thereby, he may have redreſs there. Cro. Jac. 601. Eyres v. Sedgewick. Hutt. 11. It does not appear but the court have ſet aſide this verdict, or at leaſt the matter is ſtill open, and they may do it; for it does not appear that judgment is yet given upon that verdict. If the verdict be wrong, the plaintiff might have an attaint, to which judgment in this action will be no bar, and then he will be doubly recompenſed. He relied on Cro. Jac. 601. as an authority in point.

The council on the other ſide ſaid, it is averred the defendant tampered with ſome of the jurors, by reaſon whereof, he had a verdict and damages; now if the verdict was by means of the embracery, then, without it the verdict would have been the other way. Haughton Juſtice was for the action, in 2 Cro. 5 E. 4. 126. 4 Co. 18. 6. Caſe lies for putting a forged bond in ſuit, and for a falſe affidavit of a ſummons. 12 Co. 128. Perjury held actionable, if the party receives a ſpecial damage by it.

Fazakerly. I underſtood that the court, upon the laſt argument, took the averment to be ſufficient.

Raymond Chief Juſtice. The queſtion made was, whether after verdict, the action is maintainable? Then Fazakerly proceeded, that the caſe of a forged bond does not relate to any thing done in a court of juſtice; but the damage there ariſes from the very publication of the bond; and the action 12 Co. is grounded upon the falſe ſummons; but not one caſe is cited to maintain this kind of action: in anſwer to which Philmer cited Hutt. 125. Ro. Ab. 93. 13. 102. 6. Cro. El. 793, 794. Where an action was held maintainable for entering a judgment by nil dicit i. e. he ſays nothing, by deceit, and without the privity of the party, though that matter might be ſet right upon application made to the court where the judgment was entered. It is not material whether the defendant had the benefit of the verdict, for a poſſibility of having a damage by it, will maintain the action. 2 Vent. 25. 41. E. 3. 24.

Raymond Chief Juſtice. The caſe of the judgment ſeems to be a ſtrong caſe, though the court might ſet the thing right. The queſtion is, whether here is not a ſpecial damage? The ratione cujus, i. e. by reaſon whereof, is an averment; and I greatly rely upon its being after a verdict.

Page, Juſtice. I think the action will lie from the verdict's hanging over the plaintiff's head. The quantum of the damage ſuſtained is not now in queſtion; for if he had the leaſt damage it is enough to maintain the action, though the plaintiff in the firſt ſuit ſhould never recover the damages given him by the verdict.

Probyn, Juſtice. The party may have a double remedy.

Lee, Juſtice. It was but of late that malicious proſecutions were held actionable; and now I believe it will not be an anſwer, that the act was judicial, if a ſpecial damage reſults to the party, which ſeems to be ſufficiently averred in the preſent caſe. Adjourned. Vide Fitzgibbons, page 43. 98. 173.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Harman v. Delany.

In an action on the caſe; the plaintiff declares, that he being a gunſmith, and it having been advertiſed at ———, in one of the public news-papers, that he could make guns of two feet ſix inches in length, that ſhould kill as far as guns ſix inches longer, made by any other of that trade; and that the defendant falſly and maliciouſly, and with an intent to ſcandalize the plaintiff in his art and profeſſion, did at ſuch a time, in ſuch a public paper, among other things, publiſh and advertiſe of the plaintiff, concerning his ſaid art and profeſſion, "That the plaintiff could not make guns to ſhoot in the manner he pretended, unleſs they were leather guns, and that gentlemen ſhould be cautious of him, for he dares not engage with any artiſt in town, as any one may be further ſatisfied at the Croſs Guns in Long Acre," being the defendant's ſhop, by which the plaintiff loſt ſeveral cuſtomers, to his damage; upon not guilty pleaded, the defendant was found guilty, and that the jury gave fifty pounds damages: And it was now moved in arreſt of judgment, that this is no libel, for it tends only to contradict what had been publiſhed of the plaintiff, which in effect was, that he was the firſt of his profeſſion; and to deny that, or publiſh the contrary, is not actionable; now the damage found for the plaintiff cannot make this a libel; for the finding of damages is only a conſequence of the defendant's being found guilty, ſince this matter could not have been taken advantage of upon the trial: Indeed, if a ſpecial damage had been laid, as that the plaintiff had thereby loſt J. S. and J. K. who were his cuſtomers, it muſt be admitted, that the action would have lain, though the advertiſement were of itſelf no libel: To ſupport the action were cited 2 And. 40. Hall and Giddy, 1 Roll. Ab. 63. 1 Mod. 19. And it was urged that this advertiſement was of itſelf a libel, for the latter words of it, "That the plaintiff dares not engage with any artiſt in town," make him the laſt of his profeſſion.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. If a ſpecial damage were laid and found, the action would lie, whether it were a libel, or not; but this conſequential damage found by the jury will not make it a libel, if it be not ſo of itſelf, ſo that the queſtion will be, how the latter words are to be taken, whether abſolutely and by themſelves, or whether they are not be conſidered as qualified and explained by the former words. Adjourned.

In Eaſter 4 Geo. 2. this matter coming on again; it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that words not otherwiſe actionable, become ſo, when applied to a man's trade or profeſſion. 1 Mod. 19. 1 Roll. Ab. 63. pl. 48. 50. Cro. Eliz. 343. Hetl. 71. And likewiſe that words publiſhed in writing are actionable, which would not be ſo from a bare ſpeaking of the ſame words, becauſe a libel diſperſes and perpetuates the ſcandal, 5 Co. 125. Hardr. 470, 471. 1 Keb. 393. 1 Roll. Ab. 37. pl. 15. Skinn. 123. Mod. 627. which is the reaſon that the party ſhall not be admitted to juſtify a libel: That the matter publiſhed in this caſe, reflects upon the plaintiff in his trade; for it charges him with the want of ſkill, and that all men ſhould be cautious in their dealing with him, for he dares not engage with any artiſt in town; nor did he ever make the ſaid experiment, except with a leather gun. The whole court held, that the defendant, or any other of the trade, might counter-advertiſe what was publiſhed of the plaintiff, viz. that he could do more than any other man of the trade; but that ought to have been done without any general reflection upon the plaintiff in the way of his buſineſs; that the defendant has not confined himſelf within theſe bounds, but hath charged the plaintiff with being the laſt of his trade; for the words, not daring to engage, &c. ſtand independent of the words next following, nor did he ever make the ſaid experiment, &c. ſo that he is charged generally with the want of ſkill; and where the defendant deſires gentlemen to be cautious, &c. this has a plain tendency to diſcourage people from dealing with the plaintiff. That this is the natural import of this advertiſement, and that the rule to take words in mitiori ſenſu i. e. in the moſt favourable ſenſe has been long exploded; for the ſenſe in which the generality of mankind will underſtand ſuch words, is now the rule of conſtruction.

They agreed to the diſtinction, viz. that words concerning a man's trade, are actionable, though otherwiſe importing no ſcandal; in ſupport whereof, Mr. Juſtice Lee cited, Hutt. 125. And likewiſe that words publiſhed in writing will be actionable, though not ſo when barely ſpoken; and the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Fitz-Gibbons. p. 121, 253.

On a ſpecial action on the caſe, brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for damaging the plaintiff's premiſes, by turning a water-courſe ſo as to injure the foundation of the ſame, &c. To this action the defendant pleaded the general iſſue not guilty, on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict given for the plaintiff for 203 l. damages, and 25 l. 10 s. coſts in the C. B.

On this judgment the defendant brought a writ of error in this court, and aſſigned the general errors.

The council for the plaintiff in error inſiſted, That this action was not maintainable againſt his client, becauſe the defendant was not to be compared to a tertenant, who may be obliged to keep his fences, &c. in repair, as ruled in the caſe of Tenant v. Goulding, 1 Salk. 360. but had only an eaſement in having this water come to his brew houſe, and it is not alledged in the declaration that the pipes were his, or that he laid them there; and therefore he was not obliged to repair them, and of courſe not anſwerable for any damage that might accrue to the defendant in error, by reaſon of the pipes being out of repair. In the next place, if the plaintiff in error was to be looked on as owner of the pipes; (which is not alledged in the declaration) then the plaintiff's declaration muſt be ill, becauſe the defendant in error, has not ſet out a good title to the premiſes, but has only alledged that he was lawfully poſſeſſed, which though it might be good againſt a tort feaſor, yet would not be good againſt a tertenant. Star v. Rookeby, 1 Salk. 335.

The court were of opinion, that the action well lay, for it is alledged in the declaration, that the plaintiff contriving, and maliciouſly intending to injure and oppreſs the ſaid John in this reſpect, &c. the water-courſe, &c. has continued, and the ſame has cauſed to run near the foundation of the premiſes of the defendant in error, &c. whereby, &c. ſo that he is plainly a wrong doer, and has by his continuing, and cauſing the water to run near, &c. damaged the defendant in error, which the jury have by their verdict found. Therefore the judgment in C. B. was affirmed in this court. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1568.

Eaſter. 4 Geo. 2. Cooke v. Champneſs.

J. S. was outlawed upon a meſne proceſs at the ſuit of the plaintiff, and taken on a capias utlegatum, but ſuffered to eſcape by the defendant; whereupon the plaintiff brought a qui tam action, for the ſaid eſcape: Whether the action lay, was the point ſaved at the trial.

For the defendant, it was argued, that where the outlawry is upon meſne proceſs, the party outlawed is in cuſtody meerly at the ſuit of the King, and that the plaintiff has no intereſt in his body; but where the outlawry is after judgment, the party is in execution for the plaintiff. Cro. Eliz. 706, 707. By the outlawry upon meſne proceſs, the plaintiff is at the end of his ſuit, he cannot declare againſt the defendant, but muſt bring a new original. 13 H. 1. Nor is the nature of the debt changed by the outlawry; all which the court admitted: And therefore the defendant's council inſiſted that the plaintiff, could have no loſs by the eſcape.

The declaration was alſo excepted againſt, viz. that the exigent was awarded by a foreign county, and then by ſtatute, 6 H. 8. cap. 4. Proclamation ſhould have been made in the county of which the defendant then was; and that not being ſo, the outlawry is utterly void by the expreſs proviſion of the ſtatute; and the ſheriff ſhall not be charged where the proceſs is void. To this the Chief Juſtice ſaid, that the ſtatute is to be underſtood, that the outlawry muſt be avoided by plea to maintain the action, Cro. Eliz. 652. 2 Cro. 360. 1 Lut. 122. Mod. 834. 2 Bulſt. 236. 1 Roll. Rep. 47. were cited: That it is enough there may be a poſſibility of damage to the plaintiff; and that the party outlawed cannot have his outlawry reverſed, without ſecurity firſt given to appear to a new original: And therefore the plaintiff is delayed in the recovery of his debt, which is a damage; and the court being of this opinion gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 265.

On an action of debt on articles in C. B. for that the plaintiff taught the defendant his trade, on condition that he would not ſet up within the bills of mortality, under the penalty of 44 l. and judgment on demurrer given for the plaintiff. The judgment of that court was affirmed here on writ of errror, brought on the authority of the caſe of Cheſman v. Manby, affirmed in the Houſe of Lords with coſts, Hill. 13 Geo. 1. on the foundation of the caſe of Mitchell v. Reynolds; in both which caſes it was adjudged that an action would lie for breach of ſuch articles. Vide Forteſcue, p. 296, 297. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 53.

Caſe. The plaintiff brought an action againſt the defendant for a malicious proſecution, in indicting him and his wife for receiving goods knowing them to be ſtolen. In his declaration he ſtated that the bill preferred againſt them was found ignoramus i. e. a falſe bill, and that he had thereby ſuffered great damage in his reputation and trade, and had been at great charge and coſts in defending himſelf, and likewiſe at great coſt and expence in defending his wife in this proſecution. To this action the defendant pleaded not guilty. The verdict found by the jury was as follows:

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment on the following grounds:

1. That a man cannot ſue alone for damages done to his wife, but both Baron and Feme muſt join in the action, and therefore the finding for the plaintiff only as to that part of the declaration which concerns the wife is, if any thing, a finding for the defendant, and conſequently they ought to have found coſts for him. Cro. Eliz. 147, 557. 884. 1 Leon. 299. 2 And. 48.

2. That as there was but one iſſue, the verdict was ill, as finding one part for the plaintiff, and part for the defendant.

The plaintiff's council argued, that had this been an action on a contract, the whole declaration muſt have been proved, and the jury muſt have found wholly for the plaintiff, or for the defendant, the iſſues being joint; but that in actions on torts, the iſſues are ſeveral; and it is ſufficient to prove any one charge in the declaration, and the jury may find part for one, and part for the other. Cro. Eliz. 884. In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant ſold to the plaintiff two oxen, warranting them to be ſound, when in fact they were not ſo. The defendant to this action pleaded not guilty, and a verdict was found by the jury for the plaintiff as to one of the oxen, and for the defendant as to the other. On a motion in arreſt of judgment, the court were of opinion, that as it was not on the contract but on the tort, tort, the action was good. 1 Sid. 5. On an action of debt againſt the ſheriff for an eſcape, the declaration charged, that the huſband and wife were taken in execution and eſcaped; the jury found by their verdict that the huſband did eſcape, but that the wife was not taken into cuſtody, nor had eſcaped. Per curiam. It was the ſame thing as if no mention had been made in the declaration about the eſcape of the wife, and the verdict is good.

2. That as the huſband had here ſuſtained ſpecial damage on account of the proſecution againſt his wife, he might bring his action to be repaired in theſe damages without her joining with him.

Cro. Car. 553. An action was brought by Baron and Feme for a malicious proſecution, and on a writ of error it was inſiſted, that they could not join in that action; there does not appear any judgment reported in Cro. but in Jones 440. March. 47. it is ſaid to be determined that they could not join in ſuch an action where the huſband had ſuſtained the whole damage, indeed where the wife had an intereſt they might.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. The general diſtinction taken between torts and contracts is right: in contracts, it is neceſſary to prove all the charges in the declaration exactly in the manner they are laid; but in torts they are ſeveral, and if you prove one of them, you ſufficiently prove your caſe.

In the caſe of Saville v. Roberts, reported in Salk. 13. Holt, Chief Juſtice, determined, that an action for a malicious proſecution where the bill is found ignoramus i. e. a falſe bill, will lie only where the proſecution imported matter ſcandalous and infamous to the party, and not where it had only put him to expence; but this matter coming on again to be conſidered by the court, when Lord Macclesfield was Chief Juſtice, in the caſe of Jones v. Gwynn, Salk. 15. Trin. 11 Ann. relating to badgers and chapmen. In this caſe there was no pretence that it tended to the infamy of the party, but only that it had put him to expence; and it was there reſolved, that there was no ground for the diſtinction made in the caſe of Saville v. Roberts; but that though the indictment was inſufficient, or found ignoramus, an action on a malicious proſecution might as well be ſuſtained, where the party was put to an expence only, without infamy, as where the matter of the proſecution was infamous and ſcandalous.

Had the law now ſtood on the opinion of Holt, Chief Juſtice, the verdict would have been bad; but, as it now ſtands on the laſt determination, the plaintiff might alone maintain the action, by reaſon of the ſpecial particular damage he ſuſtained in defending his wife, as in the caſe of an action by the huſband alone for an aſſault and battery of his wife, per quod conſortium amiſit, i. e. whereby he loſt her company. The plaintiff had judgment. Vide Caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 54.

A verdict and judgment having been given for the plaintiff in C. B. and a writ of error brought thereon in this court, the error aſſigned was, that the proceedings were in latin, and by ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 27. all judicial proceedings are directed to be in the Engliſh language, where the cauſe of action ſhould not amount to 10 l. or upwards, in any ſuperior court; or to 40 s. or upwards, in any inferior court.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. Several caſes depend on this judgment, being all on the ſame point. In the preſent caſe the damages in the declaration are 40 l. and the verdict only for 1 s. and on this the queſtion is, what ought to be the meaſure of the damages?

We are unanimouſly of opinion, that the cauſe of action ought to be taken from the ſum laid in the declaration, becauſe in actions that ſound in damages, the plaintiff cannot foreſee what damages may be given; ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 27. recites ſtat. 12 Geo. 2. c. 29. is connected with it, and in the clauſe relating to ſpecial writs in ſect. 5. of ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. the plaintiff's demand is plainly underſtood to be the cauſe of action, for otherwiſe it would make the attorney an offender.

Thus in pleading the ſtatute of limitations, in executory promiſes, the cauſe of action is taken to be the plaintiff's demand; as alſo by ſtat. of Glouceſter c. 8. wherein it is enacted that none ſhall have writs of treſpaſs before Juſtices, unleſs he ſwears by his faith his plaint is true, and that the goods taken away were worth 40 s. at leaſt. In 2 Inſt. 311, the reaſon why theſe affidavits are foreborne, is ſaid to be their inconvenience, and the defendant is left to take ſuch exceptions as the common law gave him.

The ſtat. of Glouceſter, is likewiſe to direct the juriſdiction of inferior courts; and in fol. 312. 2 Inſt. the ſtat. is ſaid to have received this conſtruction, that in the county courts the cauſe of action or demand muſt appear in the plaintiff's declaration to be under 40 s. it not being ſufficient that it appears by verdict that it is ſo; for example, if the plaintiff's declaration be to the damage of 40 s. and the jury find the damages under 40 s. yet the plaintiff ſhall have no judgment, though the cauſe really belonged to the inferior courts. Margaret Cooke's caſe, 19 H. 8. abridged by Bro. title Juriſdiction, pl. 40. was fiſhing in her fiſhery to the damage of 41 s. ſhe obtained a verdict with 8 d. damages, and it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the court could not hold plea of leſs than 40 s. but over-ruled, and held, that if a perſon lay ſhis damages in the declaration to be 40 s. or upwards, and obtains a verdict for 1 s. he ſhall recover. If in an action in a court baron for 39 s. the jury gives 40 s. or upwards, the plaintiff may omit the overplus; we would not be thought to lay this down as a rule in all caſes, but for another reaſon we are more clear in this caſe; ſtat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 6. made to explain ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. to prevent frivolous arreſts, recites this act 5 Geo. 2. and extends it to judicial proceedings in Wales, and in that proviſion the cauſe of action is plainly intended to be the ſum declared for.

We conſider this as a parliamentary conſtruction, and as the legiſlature have expounded their meaning, we think ourſelves bound, and that therefore judgment ſhould be for the plaintiff; ſo likewiſe in the two other caſes, viz. Holloway v. King; and Thurſton v. Harris. There are two caſes that are contrary to theſe, viz. Oſborne v. Mayo; and Charlton v. Tothill.

In theſe caſes the proceedings are in Engliſh, and the damages laid in the declaration are 25 l. and the verdict for 9 l. 15 s. but becauſe we take the ſum demanded in the declaration to be the cauſe of action, we think this not within the ſtatute; and then, as ſtat. Edw. 3. is expreſs that all judicial proceedings ſhall be in Latin, we are of opinion the judgment in theſe caſes ſhould be reverſed. It is indeed incumbent on the court, as far as they can, to aid the remedy of the plaintiff, ſo as for him to keep his judgment. But we conſider ourſelves bound by ſtat. Edw. 3. and cannot find that proceedings in Engliſh have ever been aided by the ſtatutes of Jeofails. For theſe reaſons, we think that the judgments in theſe caſes ſhould be reverſed, and that in the former caſes the judgment ſhould be affirmed. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page.

A bill of exchange was drawn in this manner; "At thirty days ſight pay to John Somerville or order, 200 l. and place the ſame to the account of the York Buildings Company; value received by yours, Charles Mildmay." Directed to Mr. H. Biſhop, caſhier of the York Buildings Company, in Wincheſter-ſtreet, and was accepted by Biſhop in this manner; "Accepted, H. Biſhop, 13th June, 1732." This bill was indorſed to the plaintiff, who brought an action thereon againſt the acceptor. At the trial, a letter of advice was proved, which was directed to the governor and company of the York Buildings, wherein notice was taken of this, amongſt others, in the following words: "John Somerville, thirty days ſight, 200 l." But according to the direction of the judge, the jury found for the plaintiff. And now,

On motion for a new trial, the council for the defendant urged, that the defendant in his own right is not liable for this 200 l. but only the Company; that this is the caſe of the caſhier of the bank, who never accepts bills in any other manner; and that the acceptance by the ſervants of bankers is always ſo, and binds their maſters, though it be not ſpecified to be on their account; that it ought to be left to the jury to ſee if he did it for himſelf or the company; obſerves that this is not only drawn on a ſervant of the company, but by a ſervant of the company likewiſe: Admits that if it had been directed to Biſhop without any addition, ſuch a general acceptance as he had made would bind him only.

For the plaintiff it was inſiſted, that the leaving it in ſuch a manner to a jury would be throwing things into the utmoſt uncertainty. He ought to be charged according to his acceptance. If a bill is drawn on John a Stiles, any body may accept it, and become charged thereby. Stat. W. 3. c. 17. concerning inland bills, does indeed direct, that where a ſervant has uſed to accept, his acceptance ſhall bind; but how? why, according to the acceptance, and no otherwiſe. Cannot a ſervant accept for himſelf? Yes, certainly; an acceptance is a contract, and a perſonal contract too.

Strange, in reply, allows that a ſtranger may accept a bill, but then it muſt be declared on the face of the bill, that he does it for the honour of the drawer.

York, Chief Juſtice. A bill of exchange is a contract of a very particular nature, depending on the cuſtom of merchants, and muſt be in writing; the drawer contracts that he will pay, if the drawee does not, and ſo does the acceptor, and ſo do the indorſors. There may be caſes where a writing may have all the forms of a bill of exchange, and yet not be ſo; but then it is where the money is made payable out of a particular fund, as were the caſes Jocelyn v. Laſerre, Trinity, 12 Ann. 10 Mod. 294. 316. Forteſcue, p. 281. Stra. 24. 219. 2 Stra. 762. 2 Raym. 1362, 1481. and Jenny v. Herle, Eaſter, 10 Ann. 8 Mod. 265. Stra. 591. 2 Raym. 1361. and if this was within the reaſon of thoſe caſes, I ſhould not be for charging the defendant but as a ſervant; but this caſe is a plain bill of exchange; the words, place it to the account of the York Buildings Company, and not to the account of the drawer, is an uncommon direction, and ſhews that it is a bill drawn in favour of the company; but they do not alter the bill with reſpect to the indorſee; it is the ſame to him as if they were not there, and then this general acceptance of the defendant is a contract to pay the tenor of the bill; but then, does the letter of advice vary the caſe? No; not with reſpect to the indorſee, for that is always a private tranſaction, and the perſon to whom the bill is payable is never conuſant of it; but even that letter is in very general terms; you ſay it was proved at the trial, that the governor and company directed the defendant to accept this bill, but are we to take notice of a tranſaction that paſt between the drawee and a ſtranger? No. If any other evidence was to be allowed to be given to a jury than what ariſes on the face of the note, it muſt have very bad conſequences with reſpect to trade; therefore we can take notice of nothing but what appears on the face of the bill. There is a caſe of Evans v. Carlington reported in 2 Vent. 307. Carth. 5. Show. Rep. 42. Show. Rep. 509. Pl. 473. Skin. 264. where more appeared on the face of the bill in favour of the defendant than does here, and yet judgment was given for the plaintiff. The circumſtances here are equitable circumſtances between the company and Biſhop; I do not apprehend that in this caſe the preſent plaintiff can charge the company.

Probyn, Juſtice. No doubt but a general acceptance by a banker's ſervant of a bill drawn on his maſter will charge the banker only, but here the bill is drawn on the ſervant.

Lee, Juſtice. In conſidering bills of exchange, we ſhould not allow a liberty of going into extrinſic circumſtances; for the action brought on ſuch bills is not an indebitatus aſſumpſit, but an action brought ſpecially on the cuſtom; which cuſtom ariſes from the terms of the bill, and the acceptance is an acceptance according to the tenor of the bill, ſo that the defendant here has accepted it as the bill imports, that is as a direction to him to pay ſo much money.

Page, Juſtice. When an action is brought by an indorſee, if we were to allow evidence to be given without the note, there would be an end of bills of exchange; for if the bill itſelf is not to be an evidence of the contract to him, how ſhould he know what is?

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, the plaintiff declares, that he was choſen churchwarden of the pariſh of All Saints in Northampton, and therefore ought to be admitted and ſworn into that office by the defendant; and for that purpoſe offered himſelf to the defendant, who refuſed to admit him; and the declaration ſets forth, that the plaintiff obtained a writ of mandamus to compel the defendant to ſwear him to be church-warden of that pariſh, which the defendant refuſed to do, but made a return to the writ, "that the plaintiff was not choſen churchwarden of the ſaid pariſh," which the plaintiff avers is a falſe return; whereupon iſſue being joined, a ſpecial verdict was found to this effect; that the ſaid pariſh is an ancient pariſh, of which two of the pariſhioners have uſed always to be churchwardens, and that by the cuſtom of the pariſh, one of the churchwardens is to be named by the Vicar, and the other to be elected by the pariſhioners. That in Eaſter week in the year 1734, the Vicar named his churchwarden, and the pariſhioners elected the plaintiff to be the other, who were both admitted and ſworn into the office, and continued in the ſame untill Eaſter week 1735, and then a new election came on, which is the election in queſtion; and at an aſſembly holden for that purpoſe, there were preſent, the vicar, and the two churchwardens, and many other pariſhioners. They further find, that one Chapman was then named by the Vicar to be his churchwarden for the year then enſuing; after which nomination the plaintiff and one Farrin were candidates for being the other churchwarden, that thereupon a poll was taken, and ſeveral of the pariſhioners polled for the plaintiff; and others polled for Farrin; that before all the pariſhioners polled, the Vicar being in the chair, did with the conſent of the ſaid Chapman adjourn the aſſembly until the next day, which adjournment was oppoſed in behalf of the plaintiff by ſome of the pariſhioners, and upon the adjournment, ſeveral pariſhioners in the intereſt of the other candidate Farrin, went away, and ſeveral others remained and continued the poll, and took ſeveral votes, and at the cloſe of the poll that day, the plaintiff had a majority of votes, that, upon the next day, the Vicar went on with the poll, and then Farrin had a majority, but whether, &c.

The plaintiff's council admitted, that by the 89th Canon in 1603, the churchwarden is to be choſen by the miniſter and pariſhioners, or one by the miniſter, and the other by the pariſhioners, &c. but that Canon has been determined not to bind the cuſtom of any pariſh. Cro. Jac. 532. Warner's Caſe. 2 Roll. Abr. 287. Pl. 50. Cro. Car. 581. Evelyn's Caſe. Hardies 378. Dawſon v. Fowle.

Lord Hardwicke. You need not cite caſes, that point is very well ſettled, that Canon cannot controul the cuſtom.

Abney. Of common right, the choice of churchwardens is in the pariſhioners, and if the incumbent chuſes one in any place, it is but uſage. Carth. 118. That a man though he lives out of the pariſh, in reſpect of lands in the pariſh, may vote for churchwardens. Jeffrey's Caſe. 5 Co. 66. That the majority of the pariſhioners, after a ſummons of the pariſhioners, may bind the reſt even in making a rate. 1 Mod. 194. 236. 2 Mod. 222.

The defendant's council argued, that the plaintiff's election depends on the Vicar's having, or not having a right to adjourn the aſſembly, now as to that it is found, that there was an aſſembly, and that the Vicar was in the chair, which is a finding that he preſided at the aſſembly according to the common meaning of the word, and conſequently the power of adjournment muſt be in him, or at leaſt in him or in the other churchwarden, ſince the plaintiff by applying for a mandamus, is concluded to ſay, he was churchwarden at that time, but ſuppoſing that the plaintiff was duly elected, yet here it appears he had no cauſe of action, for he has received no damage, for there was no occaſion for a mandamus, he being in poſſeſſion of his office without it, and conſequently the return to it, though a falſe one, can be no ground for an action, as his election in 1734, was until another ſhould be admitted and ſworn, and he continued till then in his office; for example, as when a mayor is choſen to continue for a year, and until another is choſen, he continues in office even after a new election, if that election is void; that before the Canon in 1603, a cuſtom for churchwardens to continue two years in office, was good, as appears by the Year Book of the 25 Hen. 8. fo. 5. pl. 25. The rule laid down in Hob. 267, is, that to give a cauſe of action, there muſt be ſome damage already happened, or elſe inevitable; in this caſe, which is an action for damages, the only damage that can ariſe, muſt be either for the with-holding the plaintiff from the profits of his office, or for the expence he was at in procuring the mandamus; now as to the expence, there is nothing of that laid in the declaration, but it only charges that the plaintiff had not the poſſeſſion and privileges of the office, and no damage can be intended more than is laid; as to the profits of the office, he was in poſſeſſion, as I obſerved, even without a mandamus, and beſides, this is not an office of profit. 3 Lev. 362. Ward v. Bramſton, he cites alſo a caſe of Lewis v. Lewis. Hil. 2 Geo. 2. Where, in an action on the caſe for labouring a jury, after a verdict on the writ of error, the queſtion was, whether there was any cauſe of action, becauſe the words ratione inde, i. e. by reaſon whereof, viz. of the labouring the jury, the party had obtained a verdict, was a ſufficient allegation of the damage ſuſtained.

Lord Hardwicke. The doubt referred to the court by the jury, is, whether the defendant is guilty or not of a falſe return, that depends on the plaintiff's election being good or not ſo, and depends on the adjournment of the aſſembly, whether being made by the Vicar and one churchwarden, it be a good adjournment; there is nothing to be found relating to this matter in the books, and I hear no reaſon given that ſatisfies me, that it was a good adjournment; whether it was ſo or not, depends on a previous queſtion, in whom the power of adjournment was; and that was ſaid to be in the Vicar and one of the churchwardens, that muſt be, if it be ſo, either by cuſtom, (but in this caſe no ſuch cuſtom is found) or by ſome rule of common law; but I do not find any reſolution, or even opinion, that ſuch cuſtom is veſted in the Vicar or Churchwarden, or even to give the Vicar a right of preſiding; there is indeed a notion that he has a right to preſide, but that has taken its riſe from ſpecial veſtries, and in that caſe, the cuſtom, or the act of parliament which eſtabliſhes ſuch veſtries, generally nominates him to preſide; is the right then in the churchwarden? I find no authority that ſays it is, and if it were, it is not to be imagined to be in one alone, why then, what is the conſequence? It is that the right is in the aſſembly itſelf, for if they be an aſſembly all conſiſting of equals, and there be no cuſtom nor rule of law to direct the adjournment, the right muſt be in the perſons which conſtitute the aſſembly; it is true, inconveniencies may ariſe from this, for it will require as much time and ceremony to ſettle whether the aſſembly ſhall be adjourned, as for any other queſtion; and therefore the law, where it has intermeddled at all, has provided a remedy for that inconvenience, as in elections for Knights of the Shire, the ſheriff might adjourn by common law, for there is no act of parliament that gives him that power, though there are acts to reſtrain it; and yet the ſuitors are the judges of that court, and not the ſheriff; there might be an inconvenience on the other ſide in this caſe, to ſay, the power is lodged in the Vicar, for he might uſe ſuch power to influence which of the churchwardens he thought fit againſt the ſenſe of the majority of the pariſhioners. As to the want of a cauſe of action; I think in this caſe there is plainly a cauſe of action; for tho' to every action on the caſe, there muſt be injuria & damnum i. e. an injury and damage; here it is not found that the cuſtom is to continue till another choſen, only generally a cuſtom to chooſe at Eaſter, and afterwards in finding that the plaintiff was elected, they ſay he was to continue until another choſen according to the cuſtom aforeſaid, which is not the cuſtom; and whatever the jury find beſide the cuſtom may be rejected, but that is not material; for a mayor elected the ſecond year again, may have an action for a falſe return on a mandamus without doubt, for it leaves his office to be diſpoſed, and in this caſe it is found, that there was another candidate who actually did diſpute the office with the plaintiff, and though the mayor might continue if there was no new choice, yet if there is a new choice of himſelf, he is not in by the old choice, but muſt go on the new one.

Probyn, Juſtice. The parſon is not a conſtituent part of the aſſembly, but it may be very well held without him, and the majority muſt determine all queſtions.

Lee, Juſtice. If this was not a legal adjournment, they did right in compleating the election; and if he was choſen, he had a right to a mandamus, and if he had a right to be admitted on his election, the denial thereof is an injury, and therefore muſt be a damage; there is no difference as to the precedency of the parſon in voting above the reſt of the pariſhioners, only this diſtinction, that the pariſhioners vote in reſpect of their aſſeſſments, and the parſon votes in reſpect of his freehold; and therefore it has been ſaid he may vote though he pays no aſſeſſments. Hackwell's Modus tenendi Parl. fo. 23. which is a book of good authority, ſays, that in all councils and elections, the majority binds, for which he cites 15 E. 4. fo. 2. I think this was not a good adjournment. The whole court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 274.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for double damages on the ſtatutes 13 Rich. 2. cap. 5. 15 Rich. 2. cap. 3. and 2 Hen. 4. cap. 11. The declaration ſtated thoſe ſtatutes, and that the plaintiff had in his poſſeſſion a certain ſhip, and was part owner of the greateſt part thereof, within the body of a county, viz. at London. The defendant pretended a right to a thirty-ſecond part thereof, by virtue of a bill of ſale, pretended to be made on the high-ſeas, when in fact it was not made there, but within the body of the county, viz. at London; and that the ſaid defendant did implead the ſaid plaintiff in the court of admiralty concerning the ſame, and cauſe the ſaid thirty-ſecond part, by virtue of a proceſs proſecuted out of the ſaid court againſt the ſaid ſhip, to be arreſted in the river Thames; and by colour of the ſaid proceſs, did cauſe the ſaid ſhip to be detained there for a long time, whereby the plaintiff loſt the benefit of the ſaid ſhip, and ſuſtained great expence, to his damage of 1000 l. To this action the defendant pleaded in abatement, that at the time of the ſaid treſpaſs and contempt, and until the time the plaintiff brought his action, one T. B. was, and is part-owner with the plaintiff in the ſaid ſhip, as tenant in common. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, the defendant joined in demurrer, and the matter came on to be argued before the court.

The plaintiff's council urged, that it is immaterial in this action who is owner of the ſhip, for the gift of the action is the ſuing in the admiralty, which is perſonal to the plaintiff, and the detention of the ſhip is no part of the gift of the action, but only laid as conſequential damages, and may be given in evidence, as in the caſe of Child v. Sands, Carth. 296. that on this declaration it appears the plaintiff was more than part-owner, for it is laid, that he had the occupation of the ſhip, of which he might be maſter; that where the action is grounded on a tort, which is joint and ſeveral in its nature, it is no abatement; the ſame doctrine is held in Carth. 295. In this caſe the action is joint and ſeveral with regard to the ſhip, that if the court ſhould be of opinion, that for the detention all the parties ſhould have joined, then they will take that to be only laid in aggravation of damages. See Salk. 119.

The defendant's council in ſupport of his client's defence, cited the caſe of Child v. Sands, 1 Salk. 31. 4 Mod. 181. 3 Lev. 351. Skinner, 334, and Carth. 294. which caſe was a ſuit on the foregoing ſtatutes, and objected that all the proprietors being joint owners, ſhould have been joined in the action, but held well, being after a verdict; but reſolved by the court, that if it had been pleaded in abatement it would have been well alſo; they admitted that Carth. reports to the contrary, that though a tenant in common cannot plead his tenancy in common in abatement, a ſtranger may. 1 Salk. 4. Fareſley, 104. that joint tenancy may be pleaded in abatement in trover, Salk. 290. Skinner 12. 640. ſo likewiſe in treſpaſs, Cro. Eliz. 554. In ſupport of this point were alſo cited 1 Sid. 224. 1 Lev. 3. 2 Lev. 20. Lutch. 152. Sir W. Jones, 142. The defendant's council further urged, that the detention of the ſhip, as laid in the declaration, was a diſtinct charge of damage to the plaintiff's property; in which property others having a joint intereſt, ought to be joined.

Lord Hardwicke. In this caſe there are three queſtions, 1ſt. Whether the ſuing by the defendant in the court of admiralty be the cauſe of action in this caſe? 2dly. Whether the detention of the ſhip be the cauſe of action? 3dly. Whether both of them are two diſtinct cauſes of action?

I think the cauſe of action is the ſuing in the court of admiralty, and that the detention of the ſhip is not the cauſe of action, but only a conſequence of the ſuit in that court; and if ſo, then this action is right, and well brought, and there is no ground to abate the bill, and that being the ground of the action, there is no colour for any other perſon joining with the plaintiff, for the conteſt was about the thirty-ſecond part of the ſhip, and the defendant took out a citation againſt the preſent plaintiff only, therefore it is he only that is aggrieved by that ſuit, and conſequently he alone has cauſe of action, according to the ſtatute, and it is this point that diſtinguiſhes this caſe from that of Child v. Sands; for properly in that caſe there was no ſuit in the court of admiralty, and it was that that made one great queſtion in that caſe, whether an action would lie at all for that proceeding, as for a ſuit within the ſtatute, for there the ſhip was arreſted without any ſuit inſtituted, and for that reaſon there being no ſuit, but only an arreſt of the ſhip, the court ſaid, that all the owners ought to have been parties: in this caſe it is expreſsly alledged, that the defendant impleaded the plaintiff in the court of admiralty, and the arreſt of the ſhip is only by way of proceſs in that ſuit, and the nature of the thing itſelf ſhews the detention to have been conſequential, and then this caſe comes to what is ſaid in the caſe of Child v. Sands; that the laying conſequential damage is but matter ex abundanti, i. e. of ſuperfluity, and will not hurt, and it might be given in evidence: if the ſuing be the cauſe of action, then that is ſuch a cauſe of action as the other owners cannot join in, for they were not ſued; if the detention were another cauſe of action, then the rule is as laid down in Godfrey's caſe, 11 Co. 45. b. that where a man has two cauſes of action in his writ, and by his own ſhewing it appears that for one of them he can have no other remedy, the ſuit ſhall abate only ſo far as it is abateable, and he may proſecute his ſuit for the reſt; which is on this principle, becauſe if no other writ lies, it is conſidered as if it had never been part of the demand, and entirely nugatory: if it appears that for one of the matters the writ will not lie, but that he may have another writ in another form, in that caſe, the writ ſhall abate entirely, and ſhall not ſtand for that part which is good. I think in the preſent caſe the detention is not the cauſe of action, but only conſequential damages.

Lee, Juſtice. If the detention was the cauſe of action in the preſent caſe, I ſhould think the defendant's a good plea in abatement; though it is ſaid in Carth. 295. that an action founded on a tort is not abateable on ſuch a plea: that is a miſtake, as appears by the opinion of the court in that caſe, as reported in all the other books; and ſo the old law held, as appears by the Digeſt of Writs, fol. 46. b. Joint-tenants muſt join in treſpaſs, and if they do not, the ſame is pleadable in abatement; but now this caſe muſt depend on how the matter is ſtated in the declaration. The firſt part of the declaration contains a complaint that is merely perſonal to the plaintiff, for it ſtates that he himſelf was perſonally ſued, and conſequently was the perſon aggrieved, and therefore he alone might on that ground maintain an action. On the other part of the declaration, the queſtion is, Whether it anſwers to ſuch a charge of a detention as that all the proprietors ought to join, if that was the giſt of the action? I ſhould think they ought, but I do not think that to be the giſt of the action, but alledged merely as conſequent to the arreſt of the ſhip, and was neceſſary to be ſhewn, neither was the plaintiff in this action entitled to damages for the detention of the whole ſhip, but only for a thirty-ſecond part, ſo that the allegation of a detention is but ex abundanti, i. e. a matter of ſuperfluity. The court gave judgment that the defendant ſhould anſwer over. See Stra. vol. 2. page 1045. Vide Caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 271.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Carpenter v. Tarrant.

In an action on the caſe for ſpeaking theſe words, "Robert Carpenter was in Wincheſter gaol, and tried for his life, and would have been hanged, had it not been for Leggat, for breaking open the granary of farmer A. and ſtealing his bacon; after a verdict for the plaintiff, on motion in arreſt of judgment, it was objected, that theſe words were not actionable; in ſupport of the objection were cited the following caſes, 4 Co. 16. Cro. Eliz. 371. Hobart, 77. Hut. 2. Noy 24. Cro. Eliz. 279. and 184. and it was further objected, that to make theſe words actionable, the plaintiff ought to have averred that he never was in gaol and tried for his life, agreeable to Hob. 219. Brownl. 13. 1 *Roll. The plaintiff's council, in anſwer to the firſt objection, cited Cro. Jac. 154. 247. 2 Roll. Rep. 141. Palmer, 68. Cro. Eliz. 509. 786. 904. and the caſe of Button v. Heyward, & Ux. Hil. 7 Geo. 8 Mod. Rep. p. 24. where theſe words were held actionable: He is the man that has killed my huſband; and in which caſe the court ſaid, that formerly actions for words were diſcouraged, but now they are encouraged, and are to be underſtood by the court according to their common acceptation. And to the ſecond objection, cited 1 Vent. 117. 1 Sid. 277. and 1 Lev. 297.

Lord Hardwicke. As to the firſt queſtion, this is one of thoſe caſes that are frequent, in which the difference betwixt the old rules and modern ones come in queſtion; and I think, that according to all the rules laid down of late years, theſe words are actionable, for they import a ſcandal; the very charging a man of having been in goal is a reproach, and muſt be a very ſtrong intendment to have them underſtood only that he was acquitted by Leggat. The caſe of Cardan is a very ſtrong one for the defendant; but if theſe words were to come in queſtion now, they would be held actionable; yet there is a very ſtrong caſe on the other ſide, though not a modern caſe, viz. Halley v. Stanton. Cro. Car. 268. where the words were, he was arraigned for ſtealing twelve hogs, and if he had not made good friends it had gone hard with him; which words are very like the preſent words, and were held actionable. Indeed, in that caſe, there was an averment, that he never was arraigned, and the court ſaid the ſpeech was the more malicious, as it appeared by the averment to be falſe; and ſeveral caſes are here cited to ſupport that reſolution. So that according to that caſe, an action is maintainable for the words now in queſtion, they being as ſtrong as thoſe in that caſe.

As to the ſecond objection, I take it there are many caſes where averments were anciently thought neceſſary, but are not ſo of late times; and I take it that the words being here laid to be ſpoken falſely and maliciouſly are an averment that the words are falſe; for if they were ſpoken falſely, the words could not be true; and if they were true, it lies on the defendant to ſhew that in mitigation of damages, for I believe there are caſes that it may be given in evidence for that purpoſe, however, that is not the caſe here; if therefore the modern authorities are that an averment is not neceſſary, then the caſe of Halley v. Stanton is in point, for there without an averment the words were held actionable; ſo that I think the declaration good.

Lee, Juſtice. This declaration can be no hurt to the defendant, for if theſe words had been only a narrative of what paſſed at the trial, he might have pleaded it ſo, and juſtified, though at the trial it could only have been given in evidence, in mitigation of damages; the true giſt of the action, with reſpect to the defendant being, whether he ſpoke the words falſely and maliciouſly.

The Chief Juſtice ruled, that if a dog has once bit a man, and the owner having notice thereof, keeps the dog, and lets him go about, or lie at his door, an action will lie againſt him at the ſuit of a perſon who is bit, though it happened by ſuch perſons treading on the dog's toes, for it was occaſioned by his not hanging the dog on the firſt notice, and the ſafety of the King's ſubjects ought not afterwards to be endangered. The ſcienter i. e. knowingly, is the giſt of this action. Vide Strange vol. 2. page 1264.

In this cauſe a caſe being left for the opinion of the court, whether the plaintiff could recover againſt the defendant in the preſent form of action, (an action on the caſe for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe) or whether he ſhould be obliged to bring a ſpecial action on the contract and agreement between them, the Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the court thereon.

This was an action on the caſe, brought in this court by the now plaintiff againſt the now defendant, (who was before plaintiff in the court of conſcience againſt the preſent plaintiff) for money had and received to the uſe of the now plaintiff.

It was proved that the plaintiff had indorſed to the defendant four ſeveral promiſory notes made to himſelf by one C. J. for 30 s. each, for value received, dated 7 November 1758, which was done in order to enable the defendant to recover the money in his own name againſt the ſaid C. J. but previous thereto, the defendant aſſured him, that ſuch his indorſement ſhould be of no prejudice to him; there was likewiſe an agreement ſigned by the defendant, whereby (among other things) it was expreſsly agreed, that the plaintiff ſhould not be liable to the payment of the money, or any part of it, and that he ſhould not be prejudiced or be put to any coſts, or any way ſuffer by reaſon of his ſaid indorſements. Notwithſtanding the ſaid agreement, and contrary thereto, the defendant ſummoned the plaintiff into the court of conſcience, on each of theſe four notes, as the indorſer thereof reſpectively, by four ſeparate ſummonſes; whereon the plaintiff (by his ſolicitor) tendered the ſaid indemnity to the court of conſcience on the firſt of the ſaid four cauſes, and offered to give evidence of the ſame, and of the ſaid agreement, by way of defence for the ſaid plaintiff, in the ſaid court, but the court of conſcience rejected this defence, and refuſed to receive any evidence in ſupport of the ſaid agreement of indemnity, ſuppoſing they had no power to take cognizance of the ſame, and gave judgment againſt the ſaid plaintiff on the ground of this indorſement, (which the plaintiff did not diſpute) without hearing any witneſſes againſt the agreement, that he ſhould not be liable; for the commiſſioners held this agreement to be no ſufficient bar to the ſuit in the court of conſcience, and therefore decreed for the plaintiff in that court on the undiſputed indorſement made by the plaintiff. The decree, was actually pronounced in only one of the four cauſes there depending; but the plaintiff's agent finding the commiſſioners to be of the forementioned opinion, paid the money into court on all the four notes, and it was taken out of court by the defendant, by order of the ſaid commiſſioners.

Theſe matters appearing on evidence before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall, at niſi prius, it was not doubted but that the plaintiff was entitled to the money on the merits, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff for 6 l. (being the ſum paid into the court of conſcience) ſubject to the opinion of the court on this queſtion, viz.

Whether the money could be recovered in the preſent form of action? Or whether it muſt be recovered by an action brought on the ſpecial agreement only?

The defendant's council moved to ſet aſide the verdict, and to have leave to enter up judgment againſt the plaintiff as for a nonſuit, and urged to the court as an inducement thereto, that the action was not maintainable in its preſent form; that an indebitatus aſſumpſit will not lie but where debt will lie; that it will not lie on a wager, nor on a mutual aſſumpſit, nor againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange, nor for money won at play, for this action will never lie but where debt will lie, and can never be brought on mutual promiſes. 1 Salk. 28. Hard's caſe, and 6 Mod. 128. Smith v. Airy.

To maintain debt, there muſt be either an expreſs or implied contract broken; here there is no contract either expreſs or implied.

An indorſement of a promiſory note is a juſt cauſe of action, and the defendant recovered this money of the plaintiff the indorſer, by the judgment of a court of juſtice.

The agreement between the plaintiff and defendant could not binder the action before the court of conſcience, it was only the ground of an action to be brought on itſelf. See Cro. Jac. 218. 1 Bulſt. 152.

The plaintiff's council argued, that they had not miſconceived their action, that they were not confined to bring an action on the ſpecial agreement; but were at liberty to bring this action, viz. "for money had and received to their uſe," to recover ſuch money ſo unfairly received by the defendant.

And would not agree to the aſſertion of the defendant's council, that aſſumpſit will not lie, but where debt will lie.

In the caſe of Aſtley v. Reynolds, Strange vol. 2. page 915. This principle of law was ſettled, that wherever a perſon has wrongfully paid money, he may have it back again by this action for money had and received to his uſe, and yet in that very caſe there was another remedy.

The ſame doctrine holds for money paid on a contract which contract is never performed, and ſo it will on a wager (on a horſe-race) againſt the perſon who holds the ſtakes after ſuch race has been run.

In the preſent caſe no inconvenience can ariſe to the parties, every thing being done and finiſhed; nor can a writ of error lie to the court of conſcience, nor the judgment of ſuch court be impeached.

The court after having heard council on both ſides, took time to conſider this caſe, when Lord Mansfield delivered their opinion in favour of the preſent action.

There was no doubt at the trial, but that on the merits the plaintiff was entitled to the money, and the jury accordingly found a verdict for 6 l. ſubject to the opinion of the court, on this queſtion, whether the money might be recovered by this form of action, or by an action on the ſpecial agreement only.

1ſt. Objection, That an action of debt would not lie in this caſe, and that no aſſumpſit will lie where an action of debt may not be brought.

Anſwer, Where debt lies an action on the caſe ought not to be brought, this was the point relied on in Slade's Caſe 4. Co. 92. The rule then ſettled, and which has ever ſince been followed, is, That an action of aſſumpſit will lie in many caſes where debt lies, and in many where that action does not lie. The principal inducement of the court in encouraging actions of aſſumpſit was, to remove the wager of law.

2d. Objection, That no aſſumpſit lies, but on an expreſs or implied contract. In this caſe it is impoſſible to preſume any agreement to refund money recovered by the defendant in an adverſe ſuit.

Anſwer, If the defendant be under an obligation from the ties of natural juſtice to refund the money, the law implies a debt, and gives this action founded on the equity of the plaintiff's caſe, as if it were on a contract.

Aſſumpſit, "for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe," lies in numberleſs inſtances for money the defendant has received from a third perſon which he claims a right to in oppoſition to the plaintiff's right, and which he had by law a right to receive from ſuch third perſon.

3d. Objection, Where money has been recovered by the judgment of a court having competent juriſdiction, the matter can never be brought over again by a new action.

Anſwer, It is clear that the merits of a judgment can never be overhauled by an original ſuit, either at law or in equity, till the judgment is ſet aſide, or reverſed, on which it is grounded, it being concluſive as to the ſubject matter of it, to all intents and purpoſes.

The ground of this action is conſiſtent with the judgment of the court of conſcience, it allows the commiſſioners acted rightly; they founded their judgment on the indorſement of the notes by the plaintiff, which indorſement is now diſputed. The principle on which this action proceeds was no defence againſt the ſentence of the court of conſcience.

We are ſatisfied that the commiſſioners adjudged, "They had no cognizance of ſuch collateral matter," this court cannot correct an error in their proceedings, and therefore ought to ſuppoſe what is done by a final juriſdiction to be right. We think the commiſſioners did right in refuſing to go into ſuch collateral matter, or otherwiſe by way of defence againſt a promiſſory note for 30 s. that court might go into agreements and tranſactions of a great value, if they decreed payment of the note, their judgment might indirectly conclude the balance of a large account.

This action is not grounded on, whether that the judgment was wrong, but that the defendant ought not in juſtice to keep the money.

Money may be recovered by a right and legal judgment, and yet the iniquity of keeping that money may be manifeſt on grounds which could not be uſed by way of defence againſt the judgment.

The admiſſion that unqueſtionably an action might be brought on the agreement, is a deciſive anſwer to any objection from the judgment, for it is the ſame thing as to the force and validity of the judgment, and it is equally affected by the action, whether the plaintiff brings ſuch action on the equity of his caſe ariſing out of the agreement, that the defendant may refund the money he received, or on the agreement itſelf, that beſides refunding the money, he may pay the coſts and expences the plaintiff ſuſtained.

The queſtion ſaved at niſi prius, viz. whether the plaintiff may elect to ſue by this form of action for the money only, or muſt be turned round to bring an action on the judgment.

One benefit reſulting to ſuitors from the nature of this action is, that the plaintiff need not ſtate the ſpecial circumſtances from which he concludes, "that from the equity and juſtice of the caſe, the money received by the defendant ought to be conſidered as belonging to him." He may declare generally, "that the money was received to his uſe," and ſo make out his caſe at the trial of the cauſe.

This mode of procedure is equally beneficial to the defendant. It is the moſt favourable way in which he can be ſued, he can be ſubject to no more than the money he has received, and againſt that may go into every equitable defence on the general iſſue; he may claim every equitable allowance; he may prove a releaſe without pleading the ſame; in ſhort, he may defend himſelf by every thing which ſhews that the plaintiff from the equity and juſtice of the caſe is not entitled to the whole of his demand, or to any part of it.

If the plaintiff makes choice of this manner of proceeding, it is a bar to his bringing another action on the agreement, though he might recover more on the agreement than he can by this form of action, and therefore if the queſtion was open to be argued on principles at large, there ſeems to be no reaſon or utility in confining the plaintiff to an action on the ſpecial agreement.

This point has been long ſettled, and there have been many precedents in ſupport thereof, particularly the caſe of Dutch v. Warren. Michaelmas, 7 Geo. 1. C. B. being an action on the caſe for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe.

This kind of equitable action to recover back money which ought not in juſtice to be kept, is very beneficial, and therefore much encouraged; it lies only for money which from the equity and juſtice of the caſe the defendant ought to refund; it does not lie for money paid by the plaintiff, which is claimed of him as payable in point of honour and honeſty, although it could not have been recovered from him by any courſe of law, as in payment of a debt barred by the ſtatute of limitations, or contracted during his infancy, or to the extent of principal and legal intereſt on an uſurious contract, or for money fairly loſt at play, becauſe in thoſe ſeveral caſes the defendant may retain it with a ſafe conſcience, though by poſitive law he was barred from recovering; it lies for money paid by miſtake, or on a conſideration which happens to fail, or for money got through impoſition, (expreſs or implied) extortion or oppreſſion, or an undue advantage taken of the plaintiff's ſituation, contrary to the laws made for the protection of perſons under thoſe circumſtances.

The giſt of this kind of action is, that the defendant, on the circumſtances of the caſe, is obliged by the ties of natural juſtice and equity to refund the money.

The court were all of opinion, that the plaintiff might elect to wave any demand on the foot of the indemnity for the coſts he had been put to, and bring this action to recover the 6 l. which the defendant got and kept from him iniquitouſly, and directed a rule for the poſtea to be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 2. page 1006.

Trinity, 30 & 31 Geo. 2. Harris v. Huntback.

On a caſe reſerved for the opinion of the court, on an action on a general indebitatus aſſumpſit; the defendant in his declaration laid two counts, viz. for money lent and advanced by plaintiff to the defendant at his requeſt, and for money laid out and expended by the ſaid plaintiff for the ſaid defendant, at his requeſt.

The queſtion before the court on this caſe was, if the evidence ſupported the declaration?

December 3, 1751. then received of Mr. H. the ſum of 19 l. on behalf of my grandſon, which I promiſe to be accountable for on demand. Witneſs my hand, S. H. This note was produced by the plaintiff in ſupport of the firſt count in his declaration.

The evidence offered by the plaintiff in ſupport of the ſecond count was, that one D. called on the plaintiff at the requeſt of the defendant, for money to pay the workmen, which the plaintiff refuſed to pay, unleſs the defendant would ſign a receipt to him for ſuch money ſo to be advanced to the defendant as aforeſaid, which he did in the following words, viz.

"Mr. H. at the earneſt requeſt of the gardener, the workmen wanting money greatly for the work at the Woodhouſes, this is to certify, that it is my requeſt, that you pay to Mr. D. on account of Mr. H. for the workmen's uſe, the ſum of 15 l. as witneſs my hand, S. H."

On the trial of this cauſe a verdict was given for the plaintiff; and the point reſerved thereon for the opinion of the court was,

Whether the evidence offered by the plaintiff on the trial was ſufficient to ſupport the verdict?

The plaintiff's council argued, that the firſt count was for money lent and advanced by the plaintiff at the defendant's requeſt; and to this a note is produced by the plaintiff, under the defendant's acknowledging the receipt of the money, and promiſing to be accountable for ſuch money, which is tantamount to a promiſe to pay the ſame; the words, on behalf of my grandſon, in the body of the note, make no alteration in the ſame, there being in law no remedy againſt the infant, and therefore it is an original, and not a collateral undertaking given by the defendant to the plaintiff; and cited the following caſes in ſupport of his argument, viz. Birkmire v. Darnell. 2 Raym. page 1085, and Reid v. Naſh, Michaelmas, 24 Geo. 2. and Trinity, 24 and 25 Geo. 2.

To the ſecond queſtion, whether the other evidence offered by the plaintiff at the trial was ſufficient to ſupport the ſecond count.

The plaintiff's council argued, that his client could not have maintained an action againſt the infant for this money, no more than for the former, and that he refuſed to advance ſuch money till the defendant had wrote the foregoing requeſt, and therefore this is an original undertaking, that the defendant ſhall pay the ſame, it being advanced on the account and credit of the defendant.

The defendant's council urged, that the queſtion before the court was, how far a general indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie on theſe facts, and the evidence offered to ſupport the ſame, that the preſent caſe was a general indebitatus aſſumpſit, and that the ſame does not lie but where an action of debt will lie. See 1 Salk. 23. 2 Raym. 1034, 1035. 1 Stra. 680. It will not lie on a promiſſory note, nor will it on a collateral undertaking: in the preſent caſe the count is not a proper one, if the evidence given would ſupport the ſame; becauſe it cannot be conſidered as money lent; it is no more than evidence of a collateral promiſe; why will not an action lie againſt the infant, I think it will; if ſo, it comes exactly within the caſes of Birkmire v. Darnell, and Reid v. Naſh, before cited by the plaintiff's council.

As to the ſecond count, the note given by the defendant only imports a certificate that the money was proper to be paid, and no general indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie thereon, and here is no evidence given by the plaintiff of money lent.

The plaintiff's council, in reply, ſaid, a note of hand acknowledging the receipt, and promiſing to be accountable, is evidence of money lent; that it was the common practice to give notes of hand in evidence, on a general indebitatus aſſumpſit, and that the words, "on behalf of my grandſon," inſerted in the note, could make no alteration in the note. See Thomas v. Biſhop. Stra. vol. 2. page 955. there being no privity between Mr. H. and the infant, no action can be brought againſt him.

This is not a promiſe in aid, or as a collateral undertaking, but a ſole abſolute original promiſe, and therefore the poſtea ought to be delivered to the plaintiff.

Chief Juſtice Mansfield. The queſtion before us is, Whether there be evidence of a debt contracted by the defendant payable to the plaintiff?

The plaintiff's declaration contains two counts for different debts, and there cannot be a clearer evidence given, than that the firſt note is for the former debt: as to the ſecond count; here is a manſion-houſe belonging to an infant, which has a garden belonging to the ſame; it might not be neceſſary, (from the circumſtances of the infant) to ſupport this garden, (as it might be a pleaſure garden) and no action will lie againſt an infant but for neceſſaries. Here it don't appear at all, that the plaintiff could have any remedy againſt the infant.

The plaintiff might bring an indebitatus aſſumpſit for the debt, and give the note of hand in evidence, which certainly would ſupport the declaration.

This is ſaid to be a collateral undertaking only, but the reaſoning, about original or collateral undertakings. depends merely on want of ſufficiently defining thoſe terms, otherwiſe there can be no doubt about their meaning. In the preſent caſe it is clearly an original undertaking; the jury have found thoſe notes to be ſufficient evidence of the debt, and indeed the ſame is rather a matter of fact than of law.

Deniſon, Juſtice, concurred.

Surely the note is an evidence of money lent; as between the plaintiff and defendant, the ſame is certainly an original undertaking, and the money was paid at the defendant's requeſt. There appears to be no privity between the plaintiff and the infant on this tranſaction. The caſe of Reid v. Naſh, before cited, is in ſome reſpects like this; here is nothing like a collateral requeſt or promiſe, it is an original undertaking.

Foſter, Juſtice, likewiſe concurred.

The infant was not liable, and therefore it could not be a collateral undertaking. It was an original undertaking of the defendant's to pay the plaintiff the money.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. 373.

Trinity, 32 & 33 Geo. 2. Aſtley, Bart. v. Young, Eſq;

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for ſpeaking certain libellous and defamatory words, in an affidavit which the defendant made concerning the plaintiff: the defendant, by leave of court, pleaded double to the plaintiff's declation, viz. not guilty to the whole declaration, and a juſtification to the ſecond count; the plaintiff demurred generally to the defendant's plea to the ſecond count, and the defendant joined in demurrer.

On this demurrer being argued by council, the court were clearly of opinion, that a matter given in evidence in a court of juſtice, cannot be proſecuted in a civil action as a libel, though the court before whom ſuch evidence is given, may cenſure it.

On an action of treſpaſs on the caſe, brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and 20 l. damages, aſſeſſed, ſubject to the opinion of the court, on the following caſe.

Case. The plaintiff and one M. H. were ſilkdreſſers and partners in trade, and articles of agreement were entered into between the plaintiff and one B. dated 25 Auguſt, 1760, whereby the ſaid B. covenanted with the plaintiff to ſerve him and the ſaid M. H. and the ſurvivor of them as a journeyman in their trade of a ſilk-dreſſer, for five years, from the date of the ſaid articles, to work at the uſual and cuſtomary hours daily, and not to diſcover the myſteries of the trade, or the ſecrets of the plaintiff and his ſaid partner: and the ſaid plaintiff covenanted to pay the ſaid B. weekly 20 s. for his work; and for the true performances of the covenants, &c. in the ſaid articles, each party bound himſelf to the other in the penalty of 100 l.

It further ſtates, that the ſaid B. accordingly entered into the ſaid ſervice under the aforeſaid articles, and continued therein till 19th September 1761, when the defendant knowing of the ſaid articles, perſuaded, procured, and enticed the ſaid B. to leave the ſame, which he accordingly did, and never returned again.

It further ſtates, that the plaintiff, in Trinity vacation 1761, and before the commencement of this action againſt the defendant, brought an action of debt againſt the ſaid B. for the penalty of the articles, for departing, &c. and obtained a verdict and judgment againſt the ſaid B. in the ſaid action, and recovered the ſaid penalty, with coſts; but the ſaid debt and coſts ſo recovered were not actually paid to the plaintiff by the ſaid B. till the 29th March 1762, which was after the preſent action was commenced, but before the ſame came on to be tried.

The preſent action is brought by the ſame plaintiff againſt the preſent defendant for the enticing and ſeducing the ſaid B. out of the plaintiff's ſervice, and the queſtion to be conſidered by the court was,

"Whether the preſent action be maintainable
"or not under the preſent circumſtances of this

The plaintiff's council obſerved, that the queſtion is, Whether the plaintiff, who has already recovered the penalty againſt the ſervant, can bring this action againſt the ſeducer? He allowed, that if the plaintiff had once received a full ſatisfaction for the ſame thing, he could not recover a ſecond; and alſo, that a recovery of a penalty on a deed is a full bar to any action to be brought on the ſaid deed; but ſaid it muſt be allowed to him, that the party to whom the deed is made may bring either covenant or debt at his election; and that a jury, in an action of covenant, even on ſuch a deed where there is a penalty, are not confined to give damages within the penalty, but may go beyond it.

He repeated his obſervation, that a perſon who has recovered a full and compleat ſatisfaction from one man ſhall not recover the ſame again againſt another for the ſame thing, as on indorſed notes, or on treſpaſſes committed by ſeveral perſons, or on a reſcue and eſcape, or the penalty on breach of a covenant in a leaſe, or in an action of waſte.

The council denied that in this caſe there had been full ſatisfaction or recompence for the ſame thing.

The ſeducing of a covenant ſervant is undoubtedly a good cauſe of action againſt the ſeducer, and it ariſes ex delicto, ex maleficio i. e. from the offence, from the evil doing, but the ground of action againſt the ſervant himſelf ariſes ex contractu i. e. from the contract.

Therefore a recovery in an action for a breach of contract againſt one perſon cannot be a bar to an action againſt another for a tort.

Bars muſt be reciprocal, the ſervant in a ſubſequent action againſt him could not have made uſe of a recovery againſt the ſeducer, neither ought the ſeducer to bring this action againſt the ſervant. It is not a full ſatisfaction according to the circumſtances of the caſe.

If an offender in perjury be puniſhed, that ſhall not hinder the ſuborner from being puniſhed too.

The action againſt the ſervant, and that againſt the ſeducer are on a different ground, and the recovery in one action cannot be a bar to the other.

At the time of bringing this action, there was no actual ſatisfaction had, for though there was a judgment, yet there was no execution taken out thereon, and therefore that matter ought to have been pleaded; what has ariſen ſince the commencement of the action could not be given in evidence in bar of ſuch action, though it might in mitigation of damages, and they have had the benefit of it in mitigation of damages.

It has been obſerved, that this was a damage with an injury, which I deny, for damages were here proved, and if they had not, the law would imply an injury, whether it could have been directly proved or not.

It was ſaid, that the ſervant was only liable to the penalty of 100 l. which when paid, any man might hire him. To which I anſwer he could not, while ſuch ſervant was under the unexpired contract with a former maſter.

The defendant's council argued, that the recovery againſt B. the ſervant was a full and complete ſatisfaction for the injury done to the plaintiff, and he has made his election to bring his action againſt B. for the penalty, which is the ſtipulated amount of the damages for the breach of the contract, and cannot be exceeded. It is like a nomine pœnæ i. e. in the name of a penalty for plowing up ſwerd land, and B. could not have been relieved againſt the penalty recovered, neither could the plaintiff have any further ſatisfaction, he having already received the ſatisfaction ſtipulated, and cannot ſhew any further damage, and cited the following authorities in ſupport thereof. Hob. 66. Cocke v. Jennor, Cro. Eliz. 237, and Hutton 98.

On the reaſons offered by the plaintiff's council, the plaintiff might recover againſt ſeveral perſons who might ſucceſſively have employed B.

It was not neceſſary to plead to this action; any thing may be given in evidence, which ſhews that there is no cauſe of action in the plaintiff.

The plaintiff's council in reply agreed, that as between maſter and ſervant, the plaintiff has received ſatisfaction from his ſervant, and ſaid, he ſuppoſed that the maſter could not proceed further againſt him on the covenant at large, after having made his election to take the penalty, but this is not ſatisfaction for the wrong done to the maſter by the defendant.

He denied the caſe of Cocke v. Jennor, cited by the defendant's council, and ſaid in the preſent caſe there was no actual ſatisfaction received at the time when this action was commenced, and the mere recovery is not alone and of itſelf a bar to this action.

The preſent caſe differs eſſentially from all thoſe where the ſame thing has been recovered, which is the caſe of joint torts and joint contracts; there it is the ſame individual injury, the very ſame thing for which the damages are recovered. The plaintiff therefore ought not to recover twice, tho' he proceed by a different ſpecies of action; in this caſe it is the ſeduction itſelf that is the giſt of the action, and not the conſequence of the ſeduction, the damage ariſes out of the nature of the action, the circumſtance of the caſe implies a damage, though perhaps no damage can poſſibly be proved, or even though the ſervant was a very bad one; the conſequential damages may be more or leſs according to the circumſtances of the caſe, but ſome damages there muſt be, however ſmall.

As to the objection made by the plaintiff's council, viz. "That on the principles above laid down on behalf of the plaintiff, the plaintiff might receive ſeveral ſatisfactions from ſeveral perſons who might employ the ſervant during the unexpired term." The ready anſwer is, that future employers of the ſervant would not be liable, becauſe they would not take ſuch ſervant out of the plaintiff's ſervice, but out of another perſon's, but this defendant ſeduced him out of the plaintiff's actual ſervice.

The plaintiff's council did not deny the principle and doctrine of the caſes cited by the defendant's council from Hutton and Cro. Eliz. but ſaid they were not applicable to the preſent matter.

In this caſe there was a good cauſe of action at the time when the action was commenced, the plaintiff having not then received any thing from the ſervant; and the mere recovery could not be given in evidence on the general iſſue.

The court took time to conſider this caſe, when their opinion was delivered by the Chief Juſtice.

This matter turned on two points.

1ſt. Whether the plaintiff could have maintained this action againſt the defendant for ſeducing his ſervant, if the 100 l. penalty before recovered by him againſt the ſervant himſelf, had been actually received by him before the commencement of the preſent action againſt the ſeducer.

2dly. If it could not, then whether his having received it ſubſequent to the commencement of the preſent action, be ſuch an act as will vary the caſe, ſo as to enable him to maintain his preſent action, which he could not have done if the actual receipt had been prior to the commencement of ſuch action.

In the firſt place we ſhall conſider the nature of theſe articles, and of all others with penalties annexed to the breach thereof.

In every caſe of articles with a penalty, the party who ſuſtains damage may, if he thinks proper, have an equitable relief, ſo often and ſo far as he ſuſtains an injury: he may recover partial damages on partial breaches, proportionable to the reſpective injuries done him, as often as the ſame were repeated. The maſter in the preſent caſe might have done the ſame to the ſervant; had he left his ſervice at different times, for a week, a fortnight, &c. at each going away, and had every time returned again to his ſervice, he might on this equitable remedy have recovered partial damages againſt ſuch ſervant, for each breach of the agreement, in proportion to its degree, but not beyond it. For civil injuries, a man ought not, in point of juſtice, to recover more than in proportion to what he has actually ſuffered.

There is a further election given to the party injured, viz. to proceed by the ſummum jus, i. e. by a rigorous remedy for the penalty, which remedy may be taken for a very ſlight breach, and includes the idea of more than the damage actually ſuſtained, certainly not of leſs.

This remedy cannot be repeated, for the penalty extends to the utmoſt farthing that can ever be recovered for all and every of the breaches, and when once the party has got ſatisfaction, there is an end of the articles, and conſequently of the remedy thereon.

On the action brought by the maſter againſt his ſervant, it was agreed by the plaintiff's council, “ that after the penalty had been ſo recovered againſt the ſervant, the ſervant himſelf was entirely at liberty to go into whoſe ſervice he pleaſed, and the maſter was freed from the articles with reſpect to his ſervant, there being an end of the contract as between them two.”

As to the ſeducer, it is an actual injury done to the maſter, that gives him his action againſt the ſeducer, the attempt to ſeduce without an attendant damage, would not be an injury, and conſequently would not be ſufficient to bring an action.

In this caſe there is no injury done the maſter, for he has recovered and received a compleat ſatisfaction and more, and therefore the ground of action is at an end.

A penalty in its ſignification includes more than the real damages actually ſuſtained; if the ſeducer, or ſecond maſter who employs the ſervant, after the ſervant has paid the penalty, were to be ſubject to damages in an action brought by the firſt maſter, this would ultimately fall on the ſervant, and be in effect an addition to the penalty; for the ſecond will pay the ſervant for his ſervice, no more than he eſtimates the ſame to be worth to him; and if he muſt pay any given ſum to the firſt maſter for damages, for entertaining his ſervant, he will make his bargain with the ſervant accordingly.

There is no pretence for the plaintiff to maintain his action on the firſt point, viz. on a ſuppoſition of his having actually received the penalty of the ſervant before the commencement of this action againſt the ſecond maſter, as the ſeducer of his ſervant.

Second point, Taking this matter as it really was, viz. that the plaintiff had not actually received the penalty of the ſervant till after the commencement of the preſent action, how will that vary the caſe.

The argument offered by the defendant's council from caſes on joint treſpaſſes and joint contracts, have been ſufficiently anſwered by the plaintiff's council; there the recovery is againſt them all for the ſame thing, and there is no analogy between thoſe caſes and this, beſides there is an eſſential difference between caſes on torts, and actions on the caſe. Theſe are actions ſtricti juris i. e. of ſtrict right, and here ſuch former recovery, releaſe, or ſatisfaction cannot be given in evidence, but muſt be pleaded. An action on the caſe is founded on the mere juſtice and conſcience of the plaintiff's caſe, and is in nature of a bill in equity, and in effect really is ſo; ſo that a former recovery, releaſe or ſatisfaction need not be pleaded, but may be given in evidence, for what will in equity and conſcience according to the circumſtances of the caſe bar the plaintiff's recovery, may in an action on the caſe be given in evidence for the defendant, for the plaintiff muſt recover on the juſtice and conſcience of his caſe, and on that only.

In this caſe the penalty recovered by the plaintiff from his ſervant, was actually received by him before the preſent action was tried; the plaintiff might have received it when he would, if he choſe to lie by till he had commenced his action againſt a third perſon, who would not otherwiſe have been liable to any action, and then receives the penalty of the firſt defendant, and proceeds in his action to recover it againſt the ſecond, this is againſt conſcience. In ſuch an action as this (an action of equity and not a formed action ſtricti juris) it is ſufficient if it appears on evidence that the plaintiff ought, not in conſcience to recover it.

If he had actually recovered it thro' the ignorance of the defendant, that the firſt penalty was paid, an action on the caſe would lie againſt him for money had and received, as in the caſe of Moſes v. Macfarlan, page 1005.

The plaintiff has received from the ſervant already, more than ample ſatisfaction for the injury done him. He cannot therefore afterwards proceed againſt any other perſon for a further ſatisfaction.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo 3. Price v. Neale.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, whereby the plaintiff declares, that the defendant was indebted to him in 80 l. for money had and received to his uſe, and laid his damage to 100 l. the defendant pleaded the general iſſue, and iſſue was joined thereon.

“ Leiceſter, 22 November, 1760, Sir, ſix weeks
“ after date, pay to Mr. R. Ruding, or order,
“ ſed by Sir, yours, &c. B. Button. Di-
“ ham, Hammond and Laroche. Received the “ contents, J. Watſon, and ſon. Witneſs,
“ E. Neale.”

That the bill was indorſed to the defendant for a valuable conſideration, and notice of the bill was left at the plaintiff's houſe on the day the ſame became due, on which the plaintiff ſent his ſervant to the defendant to pay him the money, and take up the ſame, which was done.

That another bill was drawn as follows:

“ Leiceſter, 1 February, 1761, Sir, ſix weeks after
“ value received for Mr. T. Ploughfor; as ad-
“ viſed by Sir, yours, &c. B. Button. Directed “ to Mr. J. Price, Buſh-lane, Cannon-ſtreet, “ London.”
“ This bill was indorſed, R. Ruding, J. Watſon
“ and ſon. Witneſs, Smith, Wright and Co.”

That the plaintiff accepted this bill by writing on it accepted J. Price, and the plaintiff wrote on the back of ſuch bill, Meſſrs. Freame and Barclay, pray pay 40 l. for J. Price.

That this bill being ſo accepted, was indorſed to the defendant for a valuable conſideration, and left at his bankers for payment, and was paid by the plaintiff's order.

Thoſe bills were forged by one Lee, who has been ſince hanged for forgery.

The defendant acted innocently, and bona fide, without the leaſt privity or ſuſpicion of the ſaid forgeries, or of either of them, and paid the whole value thereof.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, and aſſeſſed damages 80 l. and coſts 40 s. ſubject to the opinion of the court on this queſtion,

“ Whether the plaintiff, under the circumſtances
“ of this caſe, can recover back from the defen“ dant the money he had paid on the ſaid bills, or ei“ ther of them?”

The plaintiff's council argued, that he ought to recover back the money in this action, as it was paid by him through miſtake, on a ſuppoſition that thoſe were genuine bills; and as he could never recover it againſt the drawer, becauſe in reality no drawer exiſted; nor againſt the perſon who forged the bill, becauſe he is hanged.

He ſaid, that the forgery of the bill was not a matter of belief only, but had been actually proved, and that the perſon who forged the ſame had been executed for the crime.

Thus the caſe ſtood on the accepted bill, but that his client's caſe was much ſtronger on the other bill, which was not accepted, for it did not ſtate that the bill was accepted before it was negociated; on the contrary, the conſideration for it was paid by the defendant before the plaintiff had ſeen it, ſo that the defendant took it on the credit of the indorſers, and not on the credit of the plaintiff; and therefore the caſe of Jenys v. Fowler at Guildhall before Lord Raymond, viz. that actual proof of the forgery would be no excuſe, will not hold in this caſe.

The defendants's council argued, that the plaintiff ought not to recover back the money from the defendant, for he denied it to be a payment by miſtake, and inſiſted that it was owing to the negligence of the plaintiff, who ſhould have been ſatisfied whether the bill was really drawn on him by Sutton; that in this caſe there was no fraud in the defendant, who has acted innocently, and bona fide, without the leaſt privity or ſuſpicion of the forgery, and appears to have paid the whole value for the bills.

Lord Mansfield obſerved that this was one of thoſe caſes that could not be made plainer by argument.

He ſaid it was an action on the caſe for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe, in which the plaintiff cannot recover the money, unleſs it be againſt conſcience in the defendant to retain it, for that theſe actions are always conſtrued liberally.

It can never be conſidered unconſcientious in the defendant to retain this money, when he has once received it on a bill of exchange, indorſed to him for a fair and valuable conſideration, which he had bona fide paid without the leaſt privity or ſuſpicion of a forgery.

In this caſe there was no fraud, no wrong. It was incumbent on the plaintiff to be ſatisfied that the bill drawn on him was the drawer's hand before he accepted or paid it, but it was not incumbent on the defendant to inquire into it. Here was notice given by the defendant to the plaintiff of a bill drawn on him, he ſends his ſervant to pay it, and take it up: the other bill he actually accepts; after which acceptance the defendant innocently and bona fide diſcounts the ſame. The plaintiff lies by for a conſiderable time after he had paid theſe bills, and then found out that they were forged, and the perſon who forged the ſame was hanged: he made no objection to them at the time of payment; if there was any neglect it was on the ſide of the plaintiff. The defendant had actually encouragement from the plaintiff himſelf for negociating the ſecond bill, from the plaintiff's having without any ſcruple paid the firſt; and he paid the whole value bona fide. This is a misfortune which has happened without the defendant's fault. If there was no neglect in the plaintiff, yet there is no reaſon to transfer the loſs from one innocent man to another. In the preſent caſe, if the fault was any where, it certainly was in the plaintiff, and not in the defendant.

Addition.

On a writ of error brought from C. B. to remove a record of quare impedit againſt the defendants, for hindering the plaintiff to preſent to the church of Bedall, two of the judges of this court were of opinion againſt the judgment in the C. B. for the variance between the pleading and the letters patents; the defendant having ſet forth a grant made to William Theekſtone, then Eſquire, afterwards Knight; and on oyer of the letters patent, it appeared to be made to William Theakſtone Knight.

Now, he could not be a Knight and an Eſquire at the ſame time; Knight is a word of dignity, and part of his name, but Eſquire is not; and ſo are all the old authorities.

A biſhop entered into a bond; the obligee was then an Eſquire; but afterwards knighted. An action of debt being brought againſt the biſhop by the executor of the obligee, as executor of ſuch a one, Eſquire, deceaſed, which was according to the bond. Rickhill, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, gave judgment, that the writ ſhould abate, becauſe he was not named Knight. Caſes in Law and Equity, 207, 208.

So, where the heir apparent of the Earl of Shrewſbury brought an action by the name of John Talbot, Knight, his father dying pending the ſuit. The queſtion was, Whether the writ ſhould abate, becauſe the plaintiff was then an Earl? Held, that it ſhould not, for this reaſon, viz. becauſe his dignity deſcended to him by the act of God; but if it had come to him by the act of the King, it had been otherwiſe. Bro. tit. Noſme, 61.

It is the ſame where there is an addition of Knight, when the perſon is not knighted; and where it is omitted, when he is really ſo: for in both caſes it is void in pleading grants, though not in a conveyance, becauſe Knight being made part of the name of the grantee, when in truth he was not ſo, he cannot be intended to be the ſame perſon mentioned in the grant. Bro. Grants, 50.

As to Lord Eure's caſe, who had a grant made to him by the name of Ralph Eure, Knight, Lord Eure; when he was not at that time a Knight; it is true, it was held good, becauſe the perſon is ſufficiently aſcertained by the addition of Lord Eure, there being but one Lord of that name in England: and therefore the addition of Knight, though falſe, ſhall not vitiate the true deſcription of the perſon. 2 Rol. Abr. 198.

So if a grant ſhould be made to John, Biſhop of Wincheſter, when his name is Peter, the grant is good; becauſe there is but one Biſhop of Wincheſter, and therefore he is ſufficiently deſcribed by that addition. Idem. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 302.

Robert F. being attainted by outlawry for high treaſon, by the name of R. F. Eſq; in term had his pardon allowed, and now brought a writ of error; and aſſigned for error, that at the time, and before, and after the finding of the indictment, he was known by the name of Robert F. yeoman, and not eſquire, as deſcribed in the indictment. Holt ſaid, it would have been a better aſſignment to have recited the ſtat. 1 H. 5. c. 15. but however, it may be ſufficient, that being a general law, and concerning the King, the court would take notice of it. But the doubt was, whether he had not eſtopped himſelf from taking advantage of that miſtake, by his manner of coming in and aſſigning it, which was, the aforeſaid R. F. comes and ſays, that he is the perſon mentioned in the record of the indictment; query therefore whether the aforeſaid did not admit the addition as in the indictment. The plaintiff in error's council ſaid, that it admitted no more than the identity of the perſon, and not the truth of the addition, the falſity of which, as well as the omiſſion, is error.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The true anſwer is, that there could be no eſtoppel; for the outlawry was returned Hilary, 1 W. & M. at which time he ſtood indicted by a wrong addition; but not rendering himſelf till long after, he had no opportunity to plead it, but could only uſe the King's pardon, or ſay he was not the perſon mentioned in the indictment, eſpecially it being confeſſed by the Attorney General. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 199.

Sir H. Bond brought a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry for high treaſon, and aſſigned for error, that whereas the ſtatute 1 H. 5. c. 5. enacts, that in every indictment, &c. the true addition of the party's profeſſion, faculty, myſtery, eſtate, degree, and place of abode ſhould be mentioned, wherefore in the indictment he not being named baronet, nor having other ſufficient addition, in hoc eſt erratum, i. e. is an error in this point, and the ſame as to the place of his abode; he aſſigned alſo another error in the proceſs of outlawry, viz. the want of a capias, which the Attorney General confeſſed; whereon his outlawry was reverſed; and being arraigned on the indictment, Holt ſaid, that Sir H. B. had his election, either to take advantage of the exception to the indictment, for want of addition, or to wave it, and plead the King's pardon; for the indictment is not to be quaſhed by the ſtatute, except the priſoner takes advantage of it; and accordingly he waved his exception, and pleaded his pardon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 198.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Martin v. Gell.

In an action on the caſe for goods ſold, the defendant pleaded that he was not an Eſquire, as called in the declaration, but ſimply a merchant. On demurrer, judgment was given for the defendant to anſwer over; becauſe the ſtatute of additions extends only to proceſs where outlawry lies, and outlawry does not lie on a bill of Middleſex. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 211.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. White v. Mullony.

A profeſſor of mathematics being offered as bail, by the deſcription of gentleman, Chief Juſtice Holt held him to be a gentleman by his profeſſion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 248.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Bennet v. Purcell.

In an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes brought againſt the defendant by the name of Tobias Purcell, Eſquire; it was pleaded in abatement, that the Tobias Purcell, againſt whom the bill is exhibited, is a gentleman, and not an eſquire. On demurrer, the council for the defendant urged, that the plaintiff ought to have replied poſitively that the defendant was an eſquire, and not a gentleman; and that the alledging it with a habitus et reputatus fuit, i. e. accounted and reputed, was not good, becauſe the addition ought to be a true addition: And Powell, Juſtice, inclined to that opinion. But Chief Juſtice Holt held, that in theſe caſes the addition was only a deſcription of the perſon; and common reputation was ſufficient for it, the ſuit being by bill: but it would have been otherwiſe on an original, on which proceſs of outlawry lies; the ſtat. 1 H. 5. requiring an addition in ſuch caſes: accordingly the defendant was adjudged to anſwer over. Vide Raym. vol. 11. page 849.

In debt on bond, the plaintiff declared by the name of Edward Naſh, gentleman; it was pleaded in abatement that the plaintiff is no gentleman; to which the plaintiff demurred, which is ill, becauſe it amounts to a confeſſion that he is no gentleman, and then not the ſame perſon named in the declaration; he ought to have replied, that he is a gentleman. Adjudged, that the writ ſhould abate. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 986.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Hoſkins.

A ſervant being indicted for a treſpaſs committed by him, by his maſter's command, by the name of A. B. ſervant to J. S. exception was taken, that the word ſervant was no addition.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Lord Banbury v. Wood.

In a writ of replevin, want of addition to the pluries being pleaded in abatement, it was adjudged by the court, that an addition is unneceſſary to any viſcontiel writ. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 85.

Trinity, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Franklin.

The defendant being indicted for uſing the trade of a ſempſtreſs, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip to it, &c. Judge Powell, took an exception to the indictment, that the defendant was called labourer, which he ſaid was not a good addition for a woman. Vide Raym. vol. 11. p. 1179.

Hilary, 1 Geo. Nutton v. Crow. Error.

The writ of error being directed to Thomas Lord Trevor, Chief Juſtice of our Bench; and the return, the anſwer of Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, Chief Juſtice, &c. pleas inrolled before Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, &c. the court was moved to quaſh the writ:

Becauſe Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, who returned the record, could not poſſibly be the ſame perſon with Thomas Lord Trevor, to whom the writ was directed; and in ſupport of this objection, Yelv. 211. Cro. Car. 371. Dyer, 300. and 2 Cro. 341. were cited; and the defendant in error's council obſerved, if it be objected that there is but one Chief Juſtice of C. B. that a writ of error, cannot be directed to the Chief Juſtice by his name of office, but by his natural name: becauſe, if no return is made to the writ of error, an alias iſſues, then a pluries, and afterwards an attachment, which muſt be directed to him by his natural name; and the caſe is ſtronger here, becauſe the goods only, and not the perſon, of a peer, are liable to an attachment.

The council for the plaintiff in error, in oppoſition to the objection, cited Latch. 161. where a commiſſion of niſi prius being directed to Francis Harvey, Eſq; one of the juſtices of the Lord the King, of the Bench; the return was, that the trial was heard before Sir Francis Harvey, Knight, one of the juſtices, &c. yet held well, 1ſt. Becauſe he might be an Eſquire at the time when the commiſſion iſſued, and a Knight at the time of the trial. 2dly. Becauſe otherwiſe, all the trials of the circuit would be overturned; and inſiſted that Lord Delaware's caſe, Dyer, 300. was entirely determined on the pleading. He allowed that knight and eſquire, and knight and baronet, could not be one and the ſame perſon, as determined 38 H. 6. and 1 W. Jones, 346. but that B. knight and B. lord might be one and the ſame perſon; he cited the regiſter, 287. b. where the ſame perſon in the ſame writ is called in the beginning of the writ knight, and in the latter end thereof baron; and alſo Savill's caſe, Cro. Car. 205.

Per curiam. The writ of error muſt be quaſhed; names are for the diſtinguiſhing of perſons; ſuch a one knight, and ſuch a one lord, are two different names, and therefore to be intended different perſons. In records, and legal proceedings, the whole name muſt be ſet forth, and therefore Sir Thomas Trevor knight, here in the pleas, muſt be intended a Sir Thomas Trevor knight, who was no lord.

As to the caſes cited, the true diſtinction is, that where this alteration has been made in the addition, and held good, both the additions have become conſiſtent, from the difference of the times, ſince the perſon who was an eſquire at the time the writ was directed might be a knight at the return; and thus all thoſe caſes may remain good authorities.

The regiſter is nothing to the purpoſe; for the writ is only a direction that the perſon who, at the commencement of the action, was a knight, has now become a peer, and that the proceſs ſhould hereafter be againſt him as a peer; it does not import that the ſame perſon was at the ſame time both peer and knight, (though that be true.)

In anſwer to the objection, that the office aſcertains the perſon; there being but one Chief Juſtice of C. B. we muſt not judge by our own knowledge, or that of any other perſon, but by the record; beſides, the caſe of Fleming is a full anſwer to this argument.

The caſe of Rider v. Broderick being of a ſimilar nature, was adjudged in the ſame manner: and afterwards in this ſame term two other writs of error, viz. Fuller v. Davis, and Alexander v. Symonds, were quaſhed for the very ſame reaſon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 284.

The defendant was ſued by the addition of gentleman; and pleaded in abatement that he was a merchant, and not a gentleman. On demurrer, the court ordered the defendant to anſwer over; for the plaintiff has his election to ſue him either by his name of degree or myſtery, and this writ being brought by the addition of his degree he ought to have ſhewn what degree he was of, that the plaintiff might have a better writ. The like point was determined in Trin. 8 Geo. Maſon v. Ruſſel, where the defendant being ſued as a yeoman, he pleaded that he was a horner, and traverſed that he was a yeoman, and the ſame judgment given. Juſtice Eyre was of opinion, the defendant ought to have given the plaintiff a better writ in the ſame ſpecies of addition, but Pratt, C. J. doubted whether it was neceſſary to be in the ſame ſpecies. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 11. The ſame point adjudged Trin. 9 Geo. Horſepoole v. Harriſon. Vide Raym. vol. 11 p. 1541.

The defendant was ſued by original with the addition of late of London, merchant, to which original the defendant pleaded that for four years before he was reſident at Whitechapel, in Middleſex; and traverſed that at the time of the writ, or then late, or ſoon after he was of London, and made an affidavit that the contents of his plea were true, and Theloal's Digeſt lib. 6. was cited in maintenance of it.

On motion this plea was ſet aſide for by ſtat. 1 H. 5. cap. 5. the plaintiff has his election to name him of the place he was reſident in. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 924.

An addition after the alias dictus i. e. otherwiſe called, is ill; as for inſtance, where the indictment was againſt W. R. otherwiſe called W. R. of H. this being deemed no addition. 1 Bulſt. 296.

Thus where the precipe was directed to Richard Joyner, citizen and baker, otherwiſe called Richard Joyner, of London, Eſq; it was adjudged, that without the alias dictus, there was no addition of the vill; and that if the party is not ſufficiently named in the firſt part of the writ, the alias cannot aid or help it, becauſe it is only to make the writ agree with the deed, but is not material, being neither anſwerable, traverſable, or iſſuable. 2 Cro. 183.

And per Holt, Chief Juſtice, if W. R. of Wilts, commits felony at Weſtminſter, he is always indicted the name of W. R. of Weſtminſter, and the practice being always ſo, this may be properly ſaid to be his addition. Vide Noy 32. An action on debt was brought againſt W. R. yeoman, otherwiſe called W. R. of H. ſon and heir of R. R. and thus charged him as his heir, adjudged ill, becauſe the writ doth not name him heir in the premiſes, but in the alias dictus. 2 Leon. 183.

In treſpaſs againſt W. R. of H. chandler, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was a gentleman; on a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe he did not deny that he was a chandler; and if a gentleman exerciſes a trade, he may be called by the name of his trade, though he is a gentleman. Cro. Eliz. 334.

Amendment.

Hilary, 2 W. & M. Chettle v. Lees.

The plaintiff obtained a verdict, and the judgment was entered with a miſericordia, i. e. in mercy, inſtead of a capiatur, i. e. may be taken. The defendant's council moved to arreſt this judgment, becauſe it was an error not amendable by ſtat. 8 Hen. 6. for that only helps the miſpriſion of clerks in entries of judgments; but this is the fault of the court in giving judgment, and therefore in an aſſumpſit, where judgment was againſt the defendant; the entry was, that the plaintiff ſhould recover 100 l. aſſeſſed by the jury, and 5 l. adjudged for his increaſe of coſts by the jury, when it ſhould have been by the court. This was held not amendable.

So in debt againſt an executor, the word taken was entered inſtead of mercy, and the ſame was held not amendable.

The plaintiff's council argued, that in former times the courts were ſtrict in amending, but now, ſince there are ſo many ſtatutes of jeofailes, the judges have thought fit to amend any thing that may help and ſupport a judgment fairly obtained; the judgments being their own acts.

If a judgment be for the defendant on a demurrer, and the entry is, that on ſuch a day the aforeſaid plaintiff being ſolemnly called, came not, &c. which is the entry of a judgment on a nonſuit, and not on a demurrer; yet this is amendable.

So where judgment againſt the plaintiff, and there were ſeveral defendants, the entry was, that the plaintiff take nothing by his writ, and that the defendants go hence without a day, was wholly left out, but it was amended.

Amendments have been made on this very point, where, on a writ of error, on a judgment in dower, the record certified was, that the defendant was in mercy, who being in that caſe an infant, and appearing by guardian, ought not to be amerced, and therefore it was amended, and made, and nothing in mercy, becauſe an infant.

Per curiam. This is now remedied by ſtat. 16 and 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. which enacts, that judgment ſhall not be ſtayed after verdict for want of mercy, or the word taken. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 6.

On an appeal of murder, it was moved, that the appellee had pleaded a conviction of manſlaughter at the gaol-delivery at the Old Baily, and that he was allowed his clergy; but not ſhewing by what authority the court was held, that therefore the plea might be amended; it being before iſſue joined, or demurrer.

The court doubted whether this could be done by law, for the appellant could not amend, and therefore there was no reaſon why the appellee ſhould have that liberty.

In the preſent caſe, if you amend, you make a new roll, it is not like other caſes of amendments, where all is in paper, and warranted by the uſage of the court, for this is all on the plea roll.

No ſtatute extends to amendments on either ſide in an appeal, and it is not warranted by the courſe of the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 158.

The declaration ran thus: W. P. complains of W. M. in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea, &c. for that to wit, that W. P. (inſtead of W. M.) was indebted to W. P. &c.

After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved that it might be amended, as it was a miſtake of the clerk to make the plaintiff to be indebted to himſelf; and the court ordered that it ſhould be amended accordingly, without the help of the ſtatute; as where an action on the caſe was brought againſt an executor on the promiſe of the teſtator, who pleaded thereto non aſſumpſit, and ſaid nothing as to any promiſe of the teſtator; this was held to be good after verdict. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 162.

When a declaration becomes engroſſed on parchment, the court can mend no farther than is allowable by the ſtatutes of amendments, becauſe it is then a record; but while it is in paper the court may amend at pleaſure; being not within the ſtatutes of amendments. Salk. vol. 1. p. 47.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. Dighton v. Granvil.

In this cauſe a judgment was obtained in the reign of K. James 2d, in an action commenced in the reign of King Charles the ſecond, and debt was brought on the judgment in this court, after a writ of error allowed; which writ was, viz. in the record and writ, and alſo in the judgment on the complaint, which was in our court, &c. now the judgment and continuances being in K. James's reign, and the writ of error ſuppoſing all to be done in the time of the then King; an objection was made that the record was not well removed, for it ought to be, in giving judgment on the complaint, which was in the court of our late King, becauſe the loquela, i. e. the complaint, was begun in the reign of King James.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted that this was amendable by ſtat. 8 Hen. 6. eſpecially ſince the word loquela might extend to the whole; and it was amended accordingly.

The defendant pleaded a writ of error depending, and the record certified into the Exchequer Chamber, to which plea the plaintiff demurred.

It was now argued for the plaintiff, that this was no plea, becauſe debt will lie in this court after a writ of error brought, and it had been ſo adjudged: the reaſon is, becauſe by the writ of error the tranſcript only, and not the record itſelf, is removed; for if the judgment ſhould be affirmed in the Exchequer, the execution muſt be awarded in K. B. where the record of the original judgment remains.

It has been an opinion, that if error is brought in K. B. on a judgment obtained in the C. B. that pending the writ, debt will not lie on that judgment in that court, becauſe the record itſelf is removed, and ſo there can be no foundation for an action of debt there, but the reaſon is not the ſame in K. B. where the record is not removed, but the tranſcript only.

This opinion is even againſt the old books, viz. 4 Hen. 6. a writ of annuity was brought, and the plaintiff obtained judgment. The defendant brought a writ of error in K. B. and pending that writ, the plaintiff brought an action of debt on the judgment in the C. B. for a nomine pænæ, i. e. in nature of a penalty, for not paying the annuity on a day certain. The defendant pleaded the writ of error depending, but the court directed the defendant to anſwer over.

So in Eaſter term 18 Edw. 4. an action of treſpaſs was brought in C. B. and the parties were at iſſue, whether the plaintiff was the defendant's villain or not; and it was found for the plaintiff; on which the defendant brought a writ of error in B. R. and pending that writ the plaintiff in the original action brought debt in the C. B. on the judgment, and it was then objected, that ſuch an action would not lie, becauſe there was no record of any ſuch judgment before the court, that being removed by the writ of error; but the judges were of the contrary opinion, for they held that the judgment, though removed, was in force till reverſed.

Per curiam. At common law, before the ſtatute of Weſtminſter 2. if execution had not been ſued on a judgment in any perſonal action within a year and a day, the party muſt then have brought an action of debt on that judgment, for he could have no ſci. fa. on that judgment, but now that ſtatute applies a proper remedy, by giving the ſci. fa. on the judgment after a year and a day; and it has been held, that a writ of error pending was a good plea in abatement to ſuch a ſci. fa. but of late that maxim has been overruled, though it has been ſaid, that if there is a judgment precedent to a ſtatute from the ſame perſon who dies, and afterwards a writ of error is brought on the judgment, and pending the writ, the money due on that ſtatute is paid, and there is enough remaining to ſatisfy the judgment creditor, that the firſt payment to the cognizee is good, becauſe by the writ of error the execution of the judgment was ſuſpended.

In this caſe the demurrer was held good, and afterwards the defendant was ruled to anſwer over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 247.

A motion was made to amend an information for perjury, and oppoſed, becauſe the defendant had pleaded.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. As to amending after plea pleaded there is no great matter in that; I have known it amended after a record has been ſealed up, even juſt as the cauſe was going to be tried. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 47.

Hilary, 6 W. 3. Cradock v. Radford.

A judgment of twenty years ſtanding came this term to be revived by ſcire facias againſt the heir and tertenants, the judgment was, that the aforeſaid Thomas might recover inſtead of the aforeſaid Arthur, and therefore the court was moved that the roll might be brought in and amended, it being only the fault of the clerk.

The like amendment was allowed in the C. P. Michaelmas, 33 Eliz. where the judgment was that the ſame John be in mercy, inſtead of Thomas.

The ſame where the judgment was, that the aforeſaid George be taken, when it ſhould have been Elias; for where the parties are named right in the record, and where the name of one of them is miſplaced or miſtaken for the other, it is reaſonable, that the record ſhould be amended, to entitle the plaintiff to an honeſt debt.

It has been held to be amended in a much ſtronger caſe, viz. where the miſpriſion of the clerk has been in the very point of the judgment, as in ejectment, the plaintiff had a verdict for a meſſuage, ten acres of meadow and thirteen acres of paſture. Here there was no land in the verdict, and leſs meadow and paſture than in the judgment, yet it was amended on the ſtat. for the verdict is to guide the judgment, and ſo it ought to have been entered accordingly.

The defendant's council urged, that it was not amendable, being an error in the judgment, which muſt be conſidered as the act of the court, and not of the clerk, as where a capiatur is entered of miſericordia; or it is granted by the court, inſtead of it is conſidered, &c. for theſe are erroneous in point of law, and the very ſame caſe with this was held not to be amendable. See Eaſter, 43 Eliz.

So where the judgment was, that the plaintiff ſhould recover 100 l. aſſeſſed by the jury. and 5 l. adjudged by the jury for his increaſe of coſts, when it ſhould have been by the court, it was not amended, becauſe it was the fault of the court in the judgment itſelf.

On the ground of theſe authorities, the court held that theſe amendments might be made, and directed the ſame accordingly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 372.

On an indictment for murder, the defendant pleaded that he was Earl of Banbury, &c. the Attorney General replied, &c. the Earl of Banbury moved to amend his plea, and had leave, (Holt doubting) becauſe the pleadings were neither perfected nor entered on record: and there having been ſeveral amendments in criminal caſes. Vide 2 Cro. 529. 2 Ro. Rep. 59. Sid. 225, 243. Cro. Car. 144. *N. In a judgment on a mutuatus, the bill appeared to be filed on a certain day, viz. memorandum, that on Friday, &c. which day happened to be before the debt became due.

This was aſſigned for error on a writ of error brought to reverſe this judgment, and now the court was moved on behalf of the plaintiff to make the memorandum of another day, ſo that it might agree with the judgment; but it was denied. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 367.

In ejectment againſt ſeven defendants, who entered into the common rule for confeſſing leaſe, entry, and ouſter, and pleading to iſſue: The plea-roll was right, ſo was the venire, diſtringas, and the jurata, but the iſſue in the niſi prius roll was between the plaintiff and five defendants only, which was tried, and a verdict given for the plaintiff, and an amendment being moved for, it was oppoſed, becauſe intended to alter the verdict, to ſubject the jury to an attaint, to make another iſſue, and to make two defendants guilty who were not tried: per curiam, nothing but the title of the leſſor can be enquired into, and the iſſue depends on his title, which is not altered by this amendment. And it muſt be conſidered that all the ſeven entered into the common rule, and that the plea-roll, &c. are all right, and this cannot be intended other than the ſame iſſue, and the amendment is only to rectify a plain miſtake, and make that the iſſue which was apparently intended to be ſo. Accordingly the amendment was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 107. Salk. vol. 1. p. 48.

Chief Juſtice. The queſtion is, if this writ of error be amendable. It appears here, that the writ of error is not good, for all the parties to the firſt judgment ought to join in error, and it appears they have not done ſo, for it is not ſaying, he, that is omitted, is dead, the writ of error is ill; but ſuppoſing that this is only a miſtake of the curſitor, the queſtion is, if the ſame be amendable, and we are of opinion that it is not, becauſe a writ of error is a writ to reverſe a judgment, and the ſtatutes were only made to amend writs for the ſupport of the judgment. So is ſtat. 8 Hen. 6. cap. 12.

If this miſtake was amendable, we think it ought not to be at the motion of the defendant, for no man can pray to amend another's plea or writ; he may take advantage of it, but cannot pray to have it amended, for every man may ſue or plead as he thinks fit; but this would force him to ſue in another manner, and it is not within any of the ſtatutes of amendment.

The ſecond point is grounded on the reaſon in Blackmore's caſe, 8 Rep. 158. b. they have power of amendment in affirmance of judgments, and in no caſe whatever did the court amend to ſet aſide a judgment, but only to ſupport it, and ſuch was the intention of all the ſtatutes.

Caſe. The late Earl of Strafford, in 1676, gave a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment at the plaintiff's ſuit; the ſame was given to one Sympſon an attorney in the country, and ſent to one Wall who was his entering Clerk, and the judgment was entered accordingly, that he recover his debt and damages, and a blank was left in the judgment paper, what ſum ſhould be inſerted for the damages.

Wall, the entering clerk, died ſoon after, and the warrant of attorney and his papers were all loſt, but Sympſon who was ſtill living, made an affidavit of this fact.

A motion was made by the plaintiff's council for leave to inſert a ſum certain for damages and coſts, which was oppoſed by the defendant's council for the following reaſons.

1ſt. Becauſe nothing appeared on the judgment to direct what ſuch amendment ſhould be, as a declaration, which may be amended by writ, or one roll by another, &c.

2d. If any ſuch thing had appeared in the preſent caſe, yet this judgment could not be amended, becauſe the ſame was of another term, the judgment being now nineteen years old; and though it ſhould be allowed amendable as an act of the court, if in the ſame term wherein the judgment was entered, yet being now ſo many years ſince the act was done, it cannot now be amended.

3d. Neither can it be amended, if it ſhould be conſidered as the miſpriſion of the clerk, for at common law ſuch a miſpriſion in proceſs was not amendable in another term, and it is not warranted by ſtat. 8 H. 6. which extends to records as well as to proceſs, and alſo to pleas, warrants of attorney, original and judicial writs, pannels, and returns, in all which caſes the negligence of the clerk is to be examined, reformed, and amended in the affirmance of the judgment.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that the court might put in any ſum to make the judgment perfect, though it was uncertain what ſum they ſhould allow for coſts, becauſe it does not appear what was confeſſed, ſince the warrant of attorney was loſt, and this may be done, ſince it appears to be the neglect of the clerk to enter the judgment before coſts were taxed.

The words omitted are the act of the court, who had power at common law to amend their own judgments before any ſtatute of amendments was made, tho' in another term; for example, in 4. Edw. 3. 9. b. a precipe quod reddat was brought, and the defendants were eſſoined to three weeks of St. Michael, which was adjourned to The Morrow of the Purification, when it ſhould have been in eight days of the Purification, but it was amended; now the alteration of the eſſoign in that caſe was more than in this.

So where a writ of error was brought in this court on a judgment in replevin for the defendants, and an error aſſigned in the entry of the judgment, in which theſe words were omitted, viz. that the plaintiff take nothing by his writ, but be in mercy for his falſe charge, and that the defendants go hence without a day; it was amended, and all theſe words were inſerted in another term.

So where judgment general was given againſt an executor, and it was not entered of the goods of the teſtator in the hands of the defendant adminiſtered, yet that was amended in Lord Hale's time, and in the laſt term, in the C. B. ſeveral continuances were omitted, and on great debate it was amended.

Per curiam. This is amendable, if the court had any thing to amend it by. It is the act of the court, and yet judgment is not given by them as to damages. It might have been amended in the ſame term, for though it is entered on the roll, yet the court hath power to amend any fault in a record the ſame term wherein it was entered. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 147.

It was moved to amend a fault in the jurata after verdict found for the plaintiff at the aſſiſes in Suſſex. It was the jury between the plaintiff and defendant of a plea, &c. is reſpited before our Lord the King, and our Lady the Queen, at Weſtminſter, &c. unleſs our Juſtices, &c. of aſſiſe ſhall firſt come, &c. 20th day of March; it ſhould have been before our Lord the King only, and the day of niſi prius was miſtaken, for the aſſiſes were the 23d day of March. The record was right by which the plaintiff prayed it to be amended; and for authorities, the caſe of Merchant v. Reaſon was cited, where the record was of a plea of debt on the ſtatute 2 Edw. 6. for not ſetting out tythes, and the jurata in the record of niſi prius was of a plea of treſpaſs. This was amended after a verdict for the plaintiff, becauſe it was only a miſpriſion of the clerk.

So where it was on a niſi prius, that challenge was made to the ſheriff after iſſue joined, and a venire facias awarded to the coroner; but the record was, that the venire facias was awarded to the ſheriff, which was not entered at the time of the trial, but is uſually made up afterwards in time of vacation; yet this being only a miſpriſion of the clerk, ſhall be amended by the record.

On the other ſide it was inſiſted, that this was not amendable, for the juſtices of niſi prius had no authority to take ſuch a record.

The miſpriſion of a clerk in a writ of niſi prius is amendable by the ſtatute 8 H. 6. but then it muſt have ſufficient matter expreſſed, or implied, to give authority to the judge to try the iſſue, for without that writ he cannot try the cauſe. And therefore in debt againſt the defendant, a huſbandman, the queſtion was, Whether he was ſo on the day of iſſuing the writ? And the writ of niſi prius, by which the cauſe was tried, takes notice that the defendant was a huſbandman; but the material part of the iſſue was left out, to wit, whether he was ſo on the day of iſſuing the writ or not? There was a verdict for the plaintiff; and though the record was right, the court would not ſuffer the writ of niſi prius to be amended, becauſe by that writ the judges had no power to try the iſſue in the record.

In all the caſes where the record of niſi prius has been amended by the roll, the writ of diſtringas has been right, which, together with the niſi prius, is a ſufficient authority for the judge to try the cauſe; but here the diſtringas was wrong, for it was William & Mary, by the grace of God, &c. which could not be, for the Queen died in December, and the cauſe was tried the 23d March following; for which reaſon the court held this caſe was not amendable. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 211.

In ejectment, the declaration was of Trinity term laſt paſt, on the demiſe of J. L. and A. his wife, for lands in Blymhill, com. Salop, dated 10th April, 1697, and the ouſter is laid to be afterwards, to wit, the ſame 10th day of April, 1697.

The defendant's attorney entered into the common rule to confeſs leaſe, entry, and ouſter, and to try the cauſe at bar; and the ſaid cauſe was tried accordingly laſt Michaelmas term, which was in the year 1696, and which was half a year before the plaintiff had any title as appeared by the declaration, whereupon the defendant's council moved to ſtay the entry of the judgment obtained; the plaintiff had a verdict the ſame term the cauſe was tried, by reaſon of the miſtake of the year of our Lord in the demiſe, which ſhould have been 1696, inſtead of 1697, and the defendants had a rule accordingly; on the firſt day of the laſt term, the defendants moved it again, and the rule was continued till the plaintiff ſhould move the court, which he did by his council laſt term, to amend the declaration, and make the demiſe to be in the year 1696, inſtead of 1697.

The declaration delivered to the tenant in poſſeſſion was right; and a full defence being made at the trial, the judgment may be well entered, notwithſtanding this miſtake, and this is warranted by the ſtatute of repleader, 32 Hen. 8. which enacts, that on all actions after iſſue joined, judgment ſhall be given notwithſtanding any miſpleading, lack of colour, inſufficient pleading, miſcontinuance, diſcontinuance, or miſconveying of proceſs, miſjoining of iſſue, &c. or any other default or negligence of any of the parties, their counſellors, or attornies, which are large and general words, but will not juſtify the amendment in the caſe.

This court has changed the plaintiff in ejectment, after a declaration delivered, he being a witneſs to prove a deed in the cauſe. See Sid. 24.

They have enlarged the term where the cauſe has been long in agitation, and it was never denied to amend where there is any thing to amend by.

An ejectment is an action brought by conſent, and more immediately under the power of this court than any other action, for it is a matter of form ſet out by the court,

Now, the declaration below againſt the caſual ejector being right, that being in nature of an original, in whoſe room the defendants are to come in by rule of court,

It is plainly the miſpriſion of the clerk, and therefore it may be alſo well amended within the ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. cap. 15. eſpecially when the amendment is in affirmance of the judgment.

The council on the other ſide argued, that if by theſe general words in the ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. every thing may be amended, then all motions in arreſt of judgment would be vain, and to no purpoſe, becauſe were there ever ſo many errors either in title, ſubſtance, or form, they may be all amended, but the practice is otherwiſe.

As to the reaſon offered why the court ſhould make an amendment in this caſe, becauſe they have altered a plaintiff in the ſame action, that can be of little force, for it is not material who is plaintiff in ejectment, for he is only a nominal perſon, and therefore judgment ſhould be entered againſt him after he is dead, becauſe he is not concerned in intereſt.

This miſtake was ſeen before the trial, and the plaintiff moved the court twice, but they would not alter it, yet the plaintiff proceeded to try the cauſe, and would not have the court make a new record, a new leaſe, and a new ouſter, which could not be done without the conſent of both parties.

All amendments extend to forms and miſtakes of clerks, but not to titles and ſubſtance as this is.

That the court ſhould give leave to amend this declaration, becauſe they enlarge the term where the cauſe has been long depending; certainly that can ſignify but little to this purpoſe, becauſe where difficulties ariſe, the court takes time to conſider the matter for two or three years together, rather than give a haſty judgment; now, this being the act of the court, and no default of the parties, therefore they may well enlarge the term.

It cannot be ſaid, with any colour of reaſon, that this action is more under the power of this court than any other, for proceedings in ejectment are as regular as in any other caſes whatſoever.

In the caſe of Thompſon v. Leach, an ejectment was brought for ſo many acres ligni, i. e. of wood cut down, but the court would not amend it, and put in the word boſci, i. e. of wood ſtanding, and therefore the plaintiff having declared of ſeveral other things, care was taken to ſeparate the damages by the verdict.

Now, this being matter of ſubſtance, it cannot be amended by ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. becauſe the ſame does not extend to this caſe, for it muſt be after judgment, and in affirmance of the ſame, and the preſent motion is made in arreſt of judgment.

The later ſtatutes do not extend to it, but only matter of form, ſo that it will be difficult for the plaintiff to ſhew any particular proviſion in thoſe acts to ſuit with this caſe.

The court denied to enlarge the term in an ejectment in the caſe of Hutchins v. Baſſet, which was hung up many years by privilege of parliament.

This is not the miſpriſion of the clerk, and therefore it cannot now be amended in another term; the law was formerly held to be ſo in an action of treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, and carrying away his goods; which words were left out of the declaration; this was not allowed to be amended in another term, for the plaintiff is to declare at his peril.

The caſe of Pemble v. Stern, 1 Sid. 416. is no authority to direct the preſent caſe, becauſe that was a ſpecial verdict in ejectment; and an exception was taken to the declaration, becauſe it was of a park, without ſaying how many acres, and of pannage, of which an ejectment would not lie. The court being divided on another point, a rule was made to adjourn the ſame into the Exchequer Chamber, and before the record was certified, one of the juſtices againſt the judgment for the plaintiff died, and then there being but three judges in court, a motion was made for judgment according to the opinion of the other two judges; the plaintiff having releaſed the damages for theſe things, without the conſent of the defendant, which could not be done by law, it was oppoſed by the defendant's council, who at laſt conſented, becauſe he found otherwiſe thoſe two judges would give judgment againſt his client. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 332.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Addingſon v. Oakley.

The plaintiff had a verdict at the aſſizes at Oxford, and a motion was made to ſtay the judgment till he brought in the poſtea, for it did not appear to the court on what day the aſſizes was held, for the record of niſi prius was, to wit, unleſs the juſtices of our Lord the King of aſſize in the county aforeſaid, aſſigned to hold pleas, &c. on Thurſday the 16*th day of* March, at Oxford, &c. The diſtringas for the jury to appear was, if they ſhall firſt come on Thurſday the 26*th day of* March at Oxford. So was the jurata.

The defendant's council deſired, that it might be referred to the maſter of the office to be examined, but the court would not allow it, for it was to examine matter of fact againſt a record. The court held, that the defendant could not take advantage of this after judgment, for if the clerk of the aſſize will enter judgment for the plaintiff inſtead of the defendant, he has no remedy, but by action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 398.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Dubartine v. Chancellor.

An action was brought againſt the defendant for lying with the plaintiff's wife, he pleaded in abatement, and there being a judgment to anſwer over, iſſue was joined, and the cauſe was tried in the country, and the plaintiff had a verdict.

The defendant moved to ſet aſide the judgment, becauſe the plea in abatement was not entered on the niſi prius roll; the plea roll is right, but the niſi prius roll ſhall not be amended by that, and therefore the court ſet the judgment aſide. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 392.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Johnſon v. Nayler.

This was on a writ of execution, bearing teſte in vacation, on motion to have the ſame amended, the caſe of Smith v. Harwood, in Jones 41. and Dyer 129, were cited, but the court would not grant the motion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 247.

On an action on a penal ſtatute, and the ſum miſtaken in the dclaration, the court gave leave to amend the ſame, the writ being general. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 248.

An indictment wanted the words in com. i. e. in the county, and on motion, the court would not amend the ſame, but otherwiſe on an information. Note, it is matter of ſubſtance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 229.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Harper v. Davys.

On an aſſumpſit the plea was entered in Eaſter term, the memorandum was of a bill entered in Hilary term, on iſſue joined, the cauſe was tried at niſi prius, and the verdict ſet aſide, a new trial being granted, and tried this term in London; in the new niſi prius roll, the placitas were of this term, and that the party appeared and pleaded this term, and verdict thereon, and now judgment was arreſted, becauſe the iſſue on the plea roll is of Eaſter term, and the new trial is but a continuance of the ſame cauſe, and ſo the record of niſi prius differs from the plea roll; and thus adjudged in the caſe of Dubartine v. Chancellor. 5 Mod. Rep. page 399. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 274.

On a ſci. fa. on recognizance to pay money at a certain day, the defendant pleaded ſolvit ad diem, and iſſue joined, and a verdict given at niſi prius for the plaintiff.

The defendant's council moved to ſet ſuch verdict aſide, becauſe the diſtringas and jurata were returnable in three weeks from the day of the Holy Trinity, unleſs John Holt, &c. ſhall firſt come on the 27*th of* June; which 27th June was the day after tres Trin. but the award on the plea roll being tres Mich. it was moved to amend this miſtake of the clerk, becauſe in all caſes in which there is a record to amend by, and the amendment does not alter the point in iſſue, the court may give leave to amend, here the award on the roll is right, ſo is the iſſue. The judge at niſi prius had authority to try the cauſe, by ſtatute W. 2 Cap. 30. which requires only that a day and place certain be appointed in the ſhire, and this is a plain miſpriſion of the clerk in writing tres Trin. for tres Mich. See 1 Cro. 595. 2 Cro. 353. Dyer 260. and the caſe of Sir R. Barnard, Michaelmas, 8 W. 3.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though the day of return of the poſtea ſhould be miſtaken, yet if the cauſe was tried on the right day it would be good; but in this caſe the day of niſi prius being an impoſſible day, and the judges authority confined thereto, a trial on another day will be without authority, and therefore not amendable.

If the diſtringas and jurata had been right, the niſi prius roll might have been amended, as it was in Barnard's caſe before cited; wherefore here the trial was ſet aſide. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 274.

The clerk of the treaſury of the C. B. attended with the record, and it was moved that the tranſcript here might be amended by it, oppoſed till the coſts in error allowed.

Per Holt Chief Juſtice, you ſhould have inſiſted for the coſts in C. B. before the party had liberty to amend. This way of amending the record here by the record there, is the courſe of the court, and only to ſave a certiorari; for if the record be right below, on diminution alledged, the party may have a certiorari of common right. Therefore theſe amendments cannot be oppoſed; nor did I ever know it done. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 40.

Two bail had entered into a recognizance in the C. B. whereby they acknowledged themſelves to be indebted in 2000 l. to the plaintiff, on condition that the defendant in an action there, ſhould pay the principal debt, or render his body, &c. a ſci. fa. was brought after judgment againſt the bail, to which the bail pleaded no capias againſt the principal, to which there was a replication and demurrer, on which judgment was given for the plaintiff, that he ſhould recover ſeparate ſums of 2000 l. againſt them: on a writ of error brought in this court of ſuch judgment, the defendants aſſigned for error, viz. that the writ of ſci. fa. demanded judgment only of one 2000 l. which was all they were bound for, and the judgment was for two ſeveral ſums of 2000 l. and ſo a variance, and in ſupport was cited 1 Sid. 239.

The court agreed that this was error, but doubted whether the writ and judgment being ill entered, this fault in the entry was not amendable; but they agreed this could not be done here, it being a record of C. B. which this court muſt take as they find it; but the way to have entered the judgment here, had been to enter it for 2000 l. againſt two ſeparately. Palm. 546. 2 H. 4. 13. but the court ſeemed to think that the writ being well, was a good ground for amendment in the C. B. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 303.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. Weſt v. Weſt.

Per curiam, on amending a declaration, the plaintiff has his election to pay coſts, or grant an imparlance, the defendant may plead de novo, for the imparlance ſets aſide his former plea; if he pays coſts, he is let in to plead again, ſo it be ſome new matter, for this reaſon, becauſe it might be the fault which the plaintiff amends that was the occaſion of his pleading that plea; but there he ſhall not have liberty to plead the ſame plea over again, and if he pleads de novo, it muſt be a plea to ſtand by, and if he will not plead a new plea, the old one muſt ſtand. After a plea in bar, one cannot plead in abatement, and the amendment and imparlance will not let one in to do it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 442.

On motion, the curſitor who had made out a writ of error wrong, contrary to his inſtructions, came and made affidavit that his inſtructions were right, and thereupon he was ruled to amend it niſi according to Blackmore's caſe.

The writ was to certify a record of a judgment in the time of the King, and the record certified was in the time of the King and Queen, and it was moved to amend the writ. And it was ſaid if this had been an original on a bond, bearing date in the time of the King and Queen, and the officer had made it on a bond in the time of the King only, it would be amended, ſo it ought here, he varying from his inſtructions. It was agreed that want of form in an original is not at all amendable, as debt and detinue, inſtead of detinue, or vice verſa; ſo if judgment be againſt five, and one of them dies, and error is brought, and laid to the damage of four, without mentioning the fifth, this was not amended, becauſe want of ſkill in the clerk. See caſe Walker v. Stokes; but theſe are faults in the eſſential part of the writ, whereas this is but a plain miſtake in not following inſtructions, debt was againſt an heir, and not ſaid in declaration that he bound his heirs, amended. 1 Leon. 134.

The council on the other ſide ſaid, this original is very different from others, it being to reverſe a judgment, and therefore out of the letter and meaning of the ſtat. 8 Hen. 6. Cap. 12. The words of that ſtatute are, That the judges before whom the record is, ſhall amend writs, &c. in affirmance of judgment, in what ſhall ſeem to them to be miſtakes of clerks; ſo their power of amendment is to affirm, not to reverſe judgments, and quoted 1 Roll. Abr. 154. Cro. Jac. 154. that the record is not removed. Dyer 105. a. 206. Roll. Abr. 754. And this amendment contended for, would indeed make it a new writ, and there is no fault in the writ, but that it commands them to ſend a record, which they have not, and they ſend another. Vide 32 Hen. 6. Cap. 12.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The deſign of all writs of error is to deſtroy the judgment, and the ſtatute of 8 Hen-6. is in oppoſition to that, and this is a good writ, and there is no authority to amend a good writ; and a record in the late reign, is not one in this reign; and if a writ of error of ſuch a judgment ſhould ſay in our court, yet there is no inſtance of amending writs of error.

Gould, Juſtice, cited the caſe of Cradock v. Wills, where the like fault was amended on his motion, after twenty years time, and that the caſe in Styles was then denied to be law.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Owen v. Atkinſon.

After plea pleaded, a replication and rejoinder to part, and iſſue, notice of trial, with proviſo as to the other, and a rule ſerved to make up the iſſue, to carry it down to trial, and the niſi prius roll being engroſſed on parchment, but all the proceedings above continuing on paper, the plaintiff had leave to amend, on payment of coſts.

Note. Here the record of niſi prius was made up, tho' the record above was not; and that was ſaid to be done frequently, and it is never denied to amend on payment of coſts, while things continue in paper. Note alſo, a cauſe cannot be carried down to trial by proviſo till the iſſue is made up: and therefore the defendant ought to ſerve a rule on the plaintiff, to make up the iſſue. *Vide Mod. Per curiam. Let it be amended, for it is no part of the declaration, but only the ſtyle of the record; and the court further declared, that after demurrer, the party has four days in term to join in demurrer, or waive, and plead the general iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 123.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Wood v. Branford. Error.

In dower; it appeared on record certified above, this being a writ of error, that the defendant being an infant, had appeared by attorney, and this aſſigned for error. And after in nullo eſt erratum, i. e. no error has been committed, and demurrer thereon; it was ſuggeſted that there was an admittance of a guardian below, and a warrant for receiving of the guardian.

Per curiam. If the caſe be as repreſented, it is good cauſe to amend the record; and as a precedent, the caſe of Waldegrave v. Lane, 5 W. & M. was cited. And the court further ſaid, that after a good error in fact alledged, if the party will not join iſſue thereon, but plead in nullo eſt erratum, the fact is admitted to be true, and it is a good cauſe of demurrer. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 124.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Poitvin v. Tregeagle.

The plaintiff ſued out a latitat againſt the defendant, returnable in Hilary term, 13*th W.* 3. and in the ſame term declared againſt the defendant, and alſo delivered a declaration by the bye in aſſumpſit on ſeveral promiſes, to which laſt declaration the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit: Iſſue being joined, and notice of trial given, the plaintiff found that his Chriſtian name was miſtaken, viz. John where it ſhould be Peter.

The cauſe being in the paper, the plaintiff's council moved for leave to amend the declaration, which was granted on payment of coſts; when the plaintiff's attorney came before the maſter to have the coſts taxed, the maſter refuſed to tax the ſame, becauſe in this caſe the plaintiff could not have leave to amend, this being only a declaration by the bye.

On this being moved again, the plaintiff's council urged, that ſuch amendment might well be granted, though it was a declaration by the bye, for ſince the delivery of the declaration was regular, in this manner it would be a declaration to all purpoſes, and therefore would partake of all advantages that other declarations enjoyed, that it was in effect founded on the latitat in the other action, and therefore in this matter the name of the plaintiff might be well amended by it, that ſuch amendment would be no prejudice to the defendant, becauſe if he nonſuited John Poitvin, yet he could not levy the coſts on Peter Poitvin.

Powys and Gould, Juſtices, held that ſuch amendment could not be granted, becauſe there is no writ by which the declaration can be amended, and therefore refuſed to give any directions thereon. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 771.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Le Noyer's Caſe.

In an inferior court the record was made in the part of iſſuing the proceſs, preceptum fuit i. e. he was commanded, inſtead of preceptum eſt, i. e. he is comanded; and as the draught by council, delivered to the clerk, to enter up by, was drawn right, the court was moved for leave to amend the record by it.

Per curiam. There never was an inſtance of an amendment by the draught of a council; becauſe it is a thing of no authority, alterable at pleaſure, and to change it is no offence: the caſe ſtated of a bond is quite different, for a bond is an authentic matter; and an alteration therein is forgery, and if the party himſelf does it, beſides the forgery, he avoids the whole bond; and the ſtatute is to amend where there is a letter too much or too little, through the miſtake of the clerk. And Chief Juſtice Holt ſaid, he would gladly have an action brought againſt an attorney who commits ſuch a fault in entry, contrary to the advice of council; they ſometimes being guilty thereof out of malice, and ſometimes through preſumption: beſides no diminution lies of a record of an inferior court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. 102.

In aſſumpſit brought by an adminiſtrator for goods ſold and delivered by his inteſtate, and a promiſe likewiſe to him; the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos to the plaintiff, i. e. he had not aſſumed within ſix years, and iſſue thereon, and a verdict given for the plaintiff. This being moved in arreſt of judgment, it appearing thus on the record of niſi prius; the court ſaid, if the paper-book, or copy of the iſſue, is right, we will amend it; and made a queſtion, Whether it be not within the ſtatute of Oxford? Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 49.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Sanders v. Lentor. Error.

On a writ of error on a judgment in the court at Northampton, the record removed, was preceptum fuit i. e. was commanded, inſtead of preceptum eſt, i. e. is commanded, and meſſes inſtead of miſſis, the draught below was right, having been ſettled by council. On a motion to amend the record by the draught, which the clerk makes oath was right below, it was denied, becauſe it was conſidered as no more than a private paper in their own cuſtody, of which the court could not take notice; and if done by contrivance as alledged, the defendant might bring his action. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 32.

In an action on the caſe, Sir John being ſued only by the title of baronet, pleaded in abatement that he was knight and baronet; the plaintiff replying, that he was baronet only, iſſue was joined thereon. On motion to amend on payment of coſts, and to alter the declaration, by inſerting the word knight, the proceedings being on paper, it was denied by the court, becauſe there was nothing by which this amendment could be made, the latitat not being ſo. The plaintiff's council being then informed, that the latitat was knight only, prayed leave to make the declaration agreeable to the latitat; urging, that the omiſſion of baronet in this caſe being a ſuit by bill, was not material, baronet not being part of the name, as knight is; and ſuits by bill not being within the ſtatute of additions. Powell, Juſtice, ſeemed of this opinion, and ſaid, that the books warrant ſuch a difference; and cited 32 H. 6. 30. a. which ſays, that a baron need only be named as knight or eſquire in a writ; with which caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, agreed: but obſerved, that the reaſon was, that at that time barons were ſo by tenure, and were ſummoned to parliament by writ, and not created by letters patent as at preſent: but that then the law was otherwiſe of titles of dignity, as of earl, which was part of the name: and it is now otherwiſe of barons, when they are created by letters patent; it being at preſent a title of dignity, and parcel of the name. The law is the ſame with reſpect to baronet, which is made a title of dignity by letters patent, and therefore a baronet ought to be named ſo in all judicial proceedings, otherwiſe they will abate: and that it is a new title, is no objection; for ſo is viſcount firſt uſed in the reign of H. 6. marquis in the reign of Rich. 2. and duke in the reign of Edw. 3. The bill was accordingly abated. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 859.

In an action on the ſtatute of uſury, the memorandum was general, of the firſt day of the term, but bail was not put in till the middle of the term, and the court gave leave to the plaintiff to enter up a ſpecial memorandum, for the defendant is not in court till bail is filed, and this is only to make the entry, according to the truth, which appears on record; and the court ſaid it was an amendment at the common law, and not on the ſtatutes. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 977.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Annonymous.

Mr. Williams moved to quaſh an indictment for want of an addition; the defendant was indicted by the name of J. S. ſervant, which he ſaid is not a good addition within the ſtatute.

Per Holt, and the court. It is a good addition, for it is certain. He would have taken ſome exceptions to the caption, but it was not allowed, for coming in of this term, ſuch errors are amendable in the ſame term. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 968.

The defendant gave a warrant of attorney the 2d April, 1701, to enter up a judgment againſt him of Hilary term before, or any other ſubſequent term, a judgment was entered accordingly, and in entering the ſame up, the memorandum was, that in Hilary term, before our Sovereign Lady the Queen at Weſtminter, came the plaintiff, and brought, &c. and the bill was an indebitatus aſſumpſit, on a mutuatus, and the mutuatus was laid the 2d April 1701, the day the warrant of attorney bore date, which was after Hilary term, 1700, of which the judgment was entered, and a writ of error was brought on this judgment in the Exchequer Chamber.

The plaintiff's council moved to amend this record by the judgment-paper on which the mutuatus appeared to be right of the 2d of January 1700; and it was alſo entered on the bottom of the judgment-paper, J. S. for the plaintiff, J. N. for the defendant; and alſo, on the top of the roll, the warrants of attorney were entered, viz. the plaintiff puts in his place J. S, &c. and the defendant puts in his place J. N. &c. he inſiſted that the court might amend a record by the inſtructions given to the clerk, as in 1 Cro. 147.

As to the ſecond thing to be amended, viz. to put in by J. S. his attorney, he argued, that the warrant of attorney, entered on the top of the plea-roll, was ſufficient warrant to amend that by; that the warrants of attorney were never filed in this court, but that formerly the way was, to enter, ſuch a one puts in his place, &c. ſuch a one, &c. on a diſtinct roll; but that in the time of Chief Juſtice Wright, that courſe was altered, and it was entered as it is now on the top of the plea-roll; and it being now entered on the roll, that the plaintiff has made ſuch a one his attorney, that ſhews plainly to the court that he ſues by attorney, and is a ſufficient warrant for the court to make this amendment by; and that the court had amended warrants of attorney, Dyer, 105, 225. March 133. that this was leſs than that, for the only doubt here was, Whether the attorney ſhould be intended to continue, when the plaintiff has once made one, till he comes and appears expreſsly in his proper perſon? that on a claim of conuſance, or on a writ of error, the attorney continues. Stat. 21. Edw. 3. cap. 61.

Holt denied that the attorney continued on the writ of error. And the plaintiff's council ſaid, that the amendment in this caſe ought rather to be favoured, becauſe it was a proceeding by conſent, like the caſe of fines and common recoveries. 5 Co. 45. and he ſaid, that the entry of J. S. for the plaintiff, at the bottom of the declaration, was a further warrant to amend by.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. As to the firſt miſtake in the time of the mutuatus, that is a plain miſtake, the book in the office has often been allowed to be a foundation to amend by, ſo in this caſe, the paper on which the maſter ſigned the judgment is right, and that was the warrant by which the attorney was to make up the roll, and therefore he was clearly of opinion that ought to be amended.

As to the other matter, that it did not appear whether the plaintiff ſued in perſon, or by attorney, and therefore, whether the court ſhould not add, by J. S.

his attorney. It is plain the ſuit was to be by attorney, by the warrants, and therefore when it ſtands indifferently on record, whether he ſued by attorney or not, it appearing he had an attorney, we muſt therefore intend he ſued by attorney: for to what end did he make an attorney, if he intended to ſue in perſon? Beſides, it is the practice, if the plaintiff ſues in perſon, to enter at the bottom of the declaration, the plaintiff in his proper perſon, or the defendant in his proper perſon; and if one ſues in perſon, the other by attorney, the plaintiff in his proper perſon, J. N. for the defendant, and therefore the judgment paper being J. S. for the plaintiff, ſhews that the plaintiff ſued by attorney, and is a ſufficient warrant to amend this, as well as the other fault in the mutuatus.

Powys and Gould, Juſtices, agreed with Holt in the whole. Powell, Juſtice, did alſo agree with him as to both amendments, taking the judgment-paper for the reaſon; but he diſagreed as to the ſecond amendment, taking the entry of the warrant of attorney on the plea-roll for the foundation only, and putting the judgment-paper out of the caſe, becauſe, tho' that proved the parties had attornies in court, yet, notwithſtanding that, the plaintiff had his election, to ſue either in perſon or by attorney, and that entry did not prove he ſued by attorney, and therefore was no authority to amend by.

Both the amendments were granted, on the defendant in error's paying coſts, and conſenting that the judgment ſhould be affirmed without coſts, becauſe there was a good error at the time of the error brought. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 895.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Staple v. Heydon.

When a repleader is awarded, the amendment muſt be given where the plea which makes the iſſue bad begins to be faulty; and therefore if one makes himſelf a bad title to his declaration, to which there is a bad bar, and thereupon a bad replication, on which there is iſſue, there the repleader muſt be awarded and entered on record, and the plaintiff ſhall declare, de novo, &c. but if the bar be good, or the plea be good, and the replication bad, and iſſue thereon, there a repleader will be only as to the replication; but if the bar and replication be both bad, and a repleader is awarded, it muſt be as to both. 3 Keb. 664. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 2.

The defendant was indicted for wilful and corrupt perjury, and the indictment reciting the record of the trial, at which it was ſuppoſed the perjury was committed, being a feigned iſſue out of Chancery, ſet forth, that there happened a diſcourſe between Lord W. and Sir W. R. R. S. R. R. and J. S. concerning the boundaries of certain lands, and Lord W. affirmed A. to be a boundary. The ſaid Sir W. R. R. S. R. R. and J. S. affirmed that A. was not the boundary; whereon a wager was laid, and mutual promiſes were made between Lord W. and them the ſaid Sir W. R. R. S. R. R. and J. S.

At the trial of the indictment this variance was aſſigned between the record they took on them to write, and the indictment, that the affirmation that A. was not a boundary, was in the record laid to have been by Sir W. R. R. S. R. R. and J. S. whereas the indictment laid it to have been by Sir W. R. R. S. and J. S. omitting R. R. ſo this record now produced in the court was not the record deſcribed in the indictment, and ſeemed a good exception; for by Holt, Chief Juſtice, if you bring an aſſumpſit againſt two, and give evidence only of an aſſumpſit by one, you are gone.

Another variance was, that in one of the denominations of lands, in the record it was barnap, and in the indictment barnep; another word in the record was orientati, and in the indictment orientali, and all theſe being in the deſcription of the record, ſeemed fatal.

But another fault yet groſſer was, that the record of the trial, at which the perjury was alledged, was not entered up, ſo it did not appear that ever there was a trial.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, denied the minutes of it for evidence, and quoted a caſe where a rank perjury had gone unpuniſhed for ever, for that omiſſion, for that he ſaid was final, ſo as the party could never be tried thereon again; but in this caſe he ſaid, that by reaſon of the other exceptions, the indictment being inſufficient, they might indict him anew, for an acquittal on a bad indictment would not be a plea to a good one; whereas if the indictment had been good, an acquittal on the laſt fault had been peremptory; and here the indictment being brought to trial by the defendant, if he had made it up variant from what it is on the plea roll, an acquittal on it will be void; and beſides, the defendant has forfeited his recognizance whereby he was obliged to bring down the indictment to trial: and whereas here were two indictments againſt the defendant, and he had brought them down both, and put them into court, he now, to bring which he pleaſed on firſt, withdrew one of them.

He directed him to put it in again, and it was inſiſted on that the Queen had her election to bring on which of her cauſes ſhe pleaſed, and therefore they would bring on that firſt which the defendant would have come on laſt.

It is true, the Queen has that election where ſhe brings on her cauſes herſelf, but here the defendant brings it on, and he is to do the firſt act, and therefore has his election; but if you will enter a non pros on that which they deſire to bring on, you thereby inforce them to bring on the other: but to ouſt all controverſy, the defendant having put in that which he would prefer firſt, it was firſt called.

Another exception was, that the record of the original trial began, Memorandum that at Weſtminſter, before our Lady the Queen, and John Holt, Knight, Chief Juſtice &c. and his brethren, &c. whereas there is no court ſo ſtyled but it ought to be before our Lady the Queen only. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 167.

An information was exhibited againſt the defendant by the Attorney General in Eaſter term laſt, for contriving, compoſing, and publiſhing a certain ſeditious libel, intituled The Obſervator, the defendant pleaded not guilty; in Trinity term a venire fac. was iſſued out to the ſheriffs of London, (the fact being laid there) returnable on Monday after three weeks of Saint Michael, and the diſtringas was then awarded on the roll in the common form, with the niſi prius on Saturday after the Morrow of All Souls; but the diſtringas through miſtake was teſted the 24th October, viz. the day after the return of the ven. fac. and a verdict for the Queen.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment.

1ſt. That the venire and diſtringas were made returnable at a day certain; whereas the fact ariſing in another county, it ought to have been at a common day.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In caſe of information, or other proceedings originally commenced in this court, the proceſs may be at a day certain, though into another county, and ſo it has been lately ſettled here in a caſe where the court took it into conſideration, and ruled it ſo on a certificate of all the clerks; but if an indictment be removed hither by certiorari, and after it is carried down to trial, there the proceſs muſt not be returned at a day certain, but at a common day; beſides there is great reaſon it ſhould be ſo here, for the information is exhibited at a day certain, and the defendant's appearance to it is ſo too, and he pleads to it at a day certain, and then why ſhould not the proceſs be ſo too? The plea is on Monday after the Morrow of the Holy Trinity, and that is certain, for the Morrow of the Holy Trinity without more is certain in the C. B. except it be where they proceed to bill or in aſſize, they muſt go by common days, and in this court in aſſize, we may go by a certain day, and where one is ſued here as preſent in court, all muſt be by a day certain; and ſo of proceedings by bill in any county of England; and ſince the Attorney General, by reaſon of the univerſal juriſdiction of this court, may file a bill here for a crime committed in any county of England, he may make the proceſs returnable at a day certain, and he has his election of the one or the other. The court allows the other points, and the difference is between things originally begun here, and brought hither by certiorari.

2d. That though the diſtringas was well awarded on the roll on the day of the return of the venire, which was the day for both parties in court, yet the iſſuing a diſtringas the day after, and teſted the day after, was without warrant, as not being according to the award of the court, for by the ſtatute of niſi prius, the proceſs of niſi prius is to be awarded in the preſence of the parties, and it ought to bear teſte on the ſame day, or elſe it is a diſcontinuance.

This caſe was afterwards ſolemnly argued by the council on both ſides, when the court gave their opinion.

Gould Juſtice. I hold it amendable at common law, for otherwiſe what mean all the amendments in indictments and informations quoted in this matter.

Powys, Juſtice, Concurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is not amendable, 1. This is an omiſſion in a material point, viz. in the teſte which by law ſhould have been the 23*d* and not the 24*th*, for the 23*d* is the day the defendant has in court on the ven. fac. and therefore the writ giving further day ſhould have iſſued on that day. Powys, Juſtice, recanted his opinion inſtantly, and Gould Juſtice ſeemed doubtful of the opinion he had given. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. 268.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Buckſome v. Hoſkin Error.

A writ of error was brought of a judgment in ejectment in the C. B. and the defendant in error ſued out a ſcire facias quare executionem non, to compel the plaintiff to aſſign his errors, and there was a variance in the ſcire facias from the judgment, for the judgment was of two meſſuages, and the ſcire facias recited it to be but of one.

The plaintiff's council in error perceiving the variance, pleaded nul tiel record of the judgment, and the defendant's council moved that the ſcire facias might be amended, becauſe it was but a miſtake of the clerk in varying from the record which was his inſtructions, and he cited 2 Vent. 49. where an original in treſpaſs of treſpaſſes done in two Kings reigns againſt our peace, was amended and made againſt our peace, and againſt the peace of James our late King, by the curſitor's inſtructions.

Holt Chief Juſtice, This is a good ſcire facias, but only it does not indeed come up to your caſe. In that caſe in Ventris the original was wrong, and therefore it was amended.

Powell, Juſtice, agreed, and that it did not appear to them, but there might be ſuch a judgment as was recited in the ſcire facias, and for this reaſon the court refuſed to amend it. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1057.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Williams v. Hoſkins.

A judgment in ejectment for two meſſuages, and after a year a ſci. fa. was taken out, reciting a judgment obtained for one meſſuage only. To this ſci. fa. the defendant pleaded nul tiel record, and the plaintiff moved to amend the ſame.

Per curiam. This cannot be, for this is a good writ for any thing that appears on the face of it, and provided there were a judgment for one meſſuage, this writ would be a good writ to revive, ſo being good in itſelf, though not appoſite to this purpoſe, to amend would be to make a new writ, or to alter a good writ, and fit it to another purpoſe; and to amend the writ would falſify the defendant's plea, which was good at the time when it was pleaded, and this ought not to be: the caſe of Napiere v. Sir John Germaine was cited, where after a miſnomer pleaded, the court refuſed to amend, becauſe it would falſify the plea, but if the fault had appeared in the very writ, it might be amended, and there the plaintiff for his expedition took another writ.

Per curiam. That he might do without getting this quaſhed, for if this writ abates, then it is not the ſame cauſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 310.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Bullock v. Parſons.

On iſſue joined in an action of debt, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and the defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the diſtringas was of a plea with a blank omitting debt; the venire facias was right, and the council ſaid that the court would intend this was a diſtringas in another cauſe depending between the ſame parties, which Holt, Chief Juſtice, denied.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that this was a void diſtringas, and conſequently aided now after a verdict by the ſtatutes of Jeofailes, and if the court would not take it ſo, but to be only an ill diſtringas, yet they would amend it by the venire facias, and for that cited Hob. 246. where in treſpaſs the venire facias and habeas corpora were a plea of debt, and after a verdict amended. The defendant's council cited 2 Cro. 528, where in an iſſue joined on a ſcire facias, the venire facias was in a plea of debt, and ill. Holt, Chief Juſtice, declared, that the caſe in Hobart had been held otherwiſe, and the defendant's council ſaid, that the judge had no authority to try the cauſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that the judge of niſi prius's authority was not by the diſtringas, but by the commiſſion of Aſſize, for that by the ſtatute of niſi prius, 13 Ed. 1. cap. 30. which gives the trial by niſi prius, it is to be before judges of Aſſize, and the diſtringas is only to bring the jury before them, and at firſt the trials of niſi prius were had on the venire facias, and the clauſe of niſi prius is by that ſtatute expreſsly ordered to be inſerted in the venire facias. Then came the ſtatute 42 Ed. 3. cap. 11. and ordered that no inqueſt but aſſizes and deliverance of gaols ſhould be taken by writ of niſi prius, nor in other manner, before that the names of all them that ſhall paſs in the ſame inqueſts, be returned into the court; and by reaſon of that ſtatute, trials by niſi prius came to be on the diſtringas, and the intent of that ſtatute was, that by the jury being returned of record in court, the party might have an opportunity to ſee the panel, and to prepare himſelf to make his challanges.

Powell, Juſtice, agreed with the Chief Juſtice, only he ſaid, that the reaſon of trials being had on the diſtringas, was to prevent an inconvenience that was frequent heretofore, for the defendants to caſt an eſſoign at niſi prius when all things were ready for trial, for the defendants being by the ſtatute of Marlb. cap. 13. to have but one eſſoign after iſſue joined; and on the return of the venire facias when the trial was not had thereon, but that was returned above, the defendant muſt be eſſoinged above, and could have no eſſoign below on the diſtringas, and ſo the miſchief was helped.

As to the fault in the diſtringas being aided after a verdict, the court took the difference between no diſtringas, and a bad one, in the firſt caſe it is helped, otherwiſe in the laſt; and Powell Juſtice ſaid, he knew an ill diſtringas dropped once at the bar.

The whole court held that the diſtringas was amendable, and gave judgment for the plaintiff niſi. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1143.

On a ſci. fa. againſt bail, the defendant pleaded payment of the money by the principal, &c. The plaintiff replied non ſolvit, &c. this he prayed might be enquired by the country, and the aforeſaid defendant did ſo likewiſe. The defendant demurred, and the paper-book was made up without ſtriking out the defendant did ſo likewiſe; the record was a record of laſt term, and this term the cauſe came on in the paper, and this exception was taken by the defendant's council, and the cauſe ſtood for further conſideration, and in the mean time the plaintiff's council came and moved for leave to ſtrike out theſe words and the aforeſaid defendant does ſo likewiſe.

The court held that it was a thing of courſe, for the party that takes the iſſue to join the iſſue for the other, on a ſuppoſition that they will join in the iſſue to maintain the fact they have alledged, and therefore if they will not join in the iſſue, but will demur, they ought to ſtrike it out, and the leaving it in is a trick, and therefore the court gave leave to ſtrike it out. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1137.

The court were of opinion the entry of a ſpecial verdict, though in a criminal proſecution, may be amended, if not entered according to the notes taken; and the roll may be amended. Juſtice Gould cited Raym. 460, and ſaid, the court frequently amended informations. Query, if the court would amend in a caſe in which they had not the minutes there.

Per curiam. If the notes and the verdict vary, the court will amend according to the notes, otherwiſe not. If a jury find for the Queen, and the verdict is entered for the defendant, yet at common law it is amendable; and it was agreed in Dr. Drake's caſe. If in a ſpecial verdict, the clerk takes the minutes right, and the verdict is entered up wrong, the court will amend the roll according to the minutes, though in a criminal proſecution. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 84.

Lord Pembroke petitioned the Houſe of Lords to ſet aſide an amendment made of a fine and common recovery in the grand ſeſſions in Wales, whereby he had loſt the benefit of a writ of error: and whether the fine and recovery were amendable in the ſaid particulars, and the ſaid amendments warranted by law, was referred by the houſe to the judges. One was, whereas the writ of covenant was teſted ſix months after the dedimus for the caption, the court of grand ſeſſions had amended it.

Per Holt, & al. certified, that the writ of covenant being an original, was not amendable either by the common law or by any ſtatute: that neither the 14 Ed. 3. nor the 8 H. 6. warrant ſuch an amendment: that there is no difference as to this purpoſe between actions amicable and adverſary; for nobody pretends to mend a miſtake in a deed itſelf, and yet that ſurely is as much a common aſſurance as a recovery, and that Gage's caſe, 5 Co. 45. is miſreported, and not law. A bill was accordingly allowed, but thrown out in the Lower Houſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 53. Raym. vol. 2. page 1066.

Bold's Caſe.

A verdict general or ſpecial may be amended by the notes in the book of the Clerk of Aſſize, if there be a miſpriſion: but this is to be intended in civil and not in criminal caſes. Vide Keil. 1. 3 Cro. 149. In aſſumpſit, the defendant pleaded payment for part, and non aſſumpſit for the reſt, and the jury found for both, quod non aſſumpſit, whereas for one it ſhould have been non ſolvit; and the record, was delivered to the clerk of the aſſizes to amend, becauſe it was his miſpriſion; it appearing, the jury found both iſſues for the plaintiff. 3 Cro. 149. 150. Cro. Car. 145, 338. 4 Co. 52. 2 Cro. 185. A ſpecial verdict has been amended by the notes of council in the entry; and that after a writ of error brought.

Per curiam. It is but what was found, and we may amend here what they might in C. B. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 53.

On motion to amend a ſci. fa. againſt bail on a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. where the clerk, who had the judgment before him, had recited in the writ, that Randal had recovered againſt James, whereas the judgment was, that James had recovered againſt Randal; which was a variance from the record, the judgment recorded being miſrecited in the writ:

Mr. Eyres ſaid there was a judgment recovered againſt Vavaſor, and that judgment was affirmed here with coſts, for delay of execution; and the only thing they can amend by, muſt be the writ of error.

Raymond, who made the motion, inſiſted it was only a mere miſtake of the clerk's, in not purſuing his inſtructions, and that ſuch miſtake may be amended after a writ of error.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If it be amendable at one time, it is ſo at another; if it may be amended before a writ of error, it may be amended after a writ of error brought.

Powell, Juſtice. A man can never bring a writ of error to reverſe a judgment awarded in his favour; for there muſt be a damage, an injury recited, which cannot be of a judgment that is given for him. This is a query. But on the whole, the court held, that the writ of ſci. fa. in this caſe was amendable. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 139.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Withers v. Baker.

In this caſe, Chief Juſtice Holt declared, that by the courſe of the court, a man may amend his declaration the ſecond term; but that when the declaration is amended, new rules for pleading muſt be given The plaintiff the ſecond term may amend, but not change the venue, though iſſue be not joined, nor in any caſe afterwards. For in tranſitory actions, the plaintiff has his election to lay his action where he pleaſes, therefore he ſhall not change it, though the defendant may, on cauſe ſhewn. Vid. Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 198.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Smith v. Bowen.

The appellee, Bowen, having demurred to the appeal of murder, the following exceptions were taken to it.

1ſt. That the murder is laid to be done in the afternoon about ten of the clock of the ſame day, now if the murder be in the night, by ſtat. Glouceſter, c. 9. it muſt be pleaded, in the night of the ſame day; and though in July it be not dark at ten, yet it muſt be ſo pleaded.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In murder this is ſufficient; but in an indictment for burglary it would have been bad; for there it muſt be ſaid, in the night, &c. becauſe the crime is not burglary unleſs committed in the night.

2dly. It does not ſay the aſſault was by force and arms, only he came with force and arms, and made an aſſault; and cited Wilſon v. Laws, 4 Mod.

3dly. There is no place ſet forth where the ſtroke was given; for the words are, on the day, and at the place aforeſaid, made an aſſault; now, before is mentioned where the pledges lived; and afterwards, where he came with force and arms; now the word aforeſaid may refer to the place aforementioned, viz. where the pledges lived; ſo that no venue is laid to the aſſault.

4thly. In the appeal it is wrote murdum, for murdrum, and Geore for George. But on examination of the bill that was filed, it was right. Then the appellant's council moved, that the roll might be amended by the bill, which was oppoſed by the council for the appellee, who ſaid that none of the ſtatutes for amendments extend to appeals; and cited Tuclein's caſe, and Hoyle v. Pitt. 6 Mod. 164. 268.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. The with force and arms extends to all, and not only to the word came. See Co. Entries 59. And this is not like the caſe of battery or treſpaſs, for there a fine is due to the Queen.

As to the third exception, aforeſaid is good, for the place mentioned where the pledges live, is not part of the appeal.

As to the fourth exception, there needs no amendment; but if there does, it may be amended. Suppoſe in an action of treſpaſs, there is an omiſſion of with force and arms in the declaration, and the original is right, the declaration may be amended by it. As to the miſtake of Geore, for George, it is in the freſh ſuit, which, ſince the ſtatute of Glouceſter, need not be ſet forth; for if an appeal is proſecuted within a year and a day, it is ſufficient. But he ſaid there was a miſtake in awarding the venire, it being by ceſſet proceſſus, i. e. let the proceſs be diſcontinued, when in his opinion the right way was, by the ſheriff has not returned the writ.

As to the amendment, Juſtice Powell ſaid, that by the common law the roll might be amended by the bill, and cited 7 H. 4. c. 27. and Brook, title, amendment, 101. where an appeal is amended; but the original in appeal is not amendable. 8 Co. 156.

Powis and Gould were of the ſame opinion; but on the objection ſtated by Holt, the matter was put off to the next day; when on a further argument the court delivered their opinion as follows:

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that on conſideration they were of opinion, that this is the moſt proper way; for it is in vain to proceed to iſſue until the demurrer be determined, for if the bill abates, there is an end.

As to the amending the appeal by the original bill, it is amendable at common law; but if not, yet it is by ſtat. Edw. 3. c. 6. and cited Blackmore's caſe; for appeals are not excepted out of that ſtatute.

It was doubted whether a plea might be amended after judgment on error, and that was on the word proceſs, which was thought not to extend to any plea after judgment on error; to amend which, ſtat. 9 H. 5. c. 4. was made, which it did, by adding the word record; and ſtat. 4 H. 6. cap. 3. made that perpetual: in none of which ſtatutes appeals are excepted. Stat. 8. H. 6. enlarges the power of the judges, but in this appeals are excepted; he cited the caſe of Sir H. Tufton v. Sir John Aſhley, Cro. Car. 144. an amendment in a quo warranto, and concluded that it ſhould be amended; for the aforeſaid ſtatutes extend to appeals, where by the record itſelf it appears to be a miſtake of the clerk.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, there were very few things amendable at common law; a miſpriſion of a clerk was not, if there was nothing to amend it by; but this is amending one part of the roll by the other, viz. the recital by the bill; in this caſe the bill is verbatim the ſame as the count, but in moſt caſes it is otherwiſe.

As to the ſtatutes, I ſee no reaſon why an appeal, which is a civil proceſs, is not within them, where it is not particularly excepted. But I ground my opinion on the common law.

As to the diſcontinuance, I think one way is as good as the other; without the order of the court it would be a diſcontinuance; but we have power to ſtay the iſſue till after the demurrer; and this appears to be ſo by the entry, viz. let the proceſs be diſcontinued until the ſaid matter in law be terminated in ſome lawful manner; and that this way is uſual as well as the other, the precedents cited ſhew. Powell and Gould coincided in this opinion for the ſame reaſons.

And the court ordered the roll to be amended. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 230.

An information was exhibited againſt the defendant by the addition of gentleman; the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was an upholſterer, and not a gentleman; and a rule being obtained at the ſide bar to amend the information, the defendant's council at the time of ſhewing cauſe why it ſhould not be amended, ſaid, that as they had taken advantage of this miſtake by pleading in abatement, the court could not amend it, and cited Buckſom v. Hoſkins, Michaelmas, 3 Ann, in this court, where after nul tiel record pleaded to a ſcire facias, which miſrecited a judgment, an amendment was denied, and criminal matters are not within the ſtatutes of amendments.

Another council on behalf of the defendant ſaid, that there was no precedent to warrant an amendment after taking advantage of it by pleading, and all the caſes mentioned of amendments immediately before trial in informations, are only miſpriſions of clerks.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, that informations are the ſuggeſtions of the Attorney General, which he may amend any time before trial, but it is a queſtion whether it can be done after advantage taken of it by pleading, as in the preſent caſe. He obſerved, that informations are within the ſtatute of additions; but this ought not to be amended to falſify the defendant's plea, though iſſue be not joined; and that a miſnomer in an indictment was not amendable, and he ſaw no difference between that and an information. If one be indicted by his right name, and he pleads a miſnomer in abatement, and you indict him again, he is eſtopped to ſay that the name he gives himſelf in his plea is not his right name. Adjourned to ſearch for precedents. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1307.

Statutes of amendment extend only to pleadings of record; therefore pleadings while in paper are amendable by common law.

Anciently all pleas were by word of mouth at the bar; and then, if any error was ſpecified in them, it was preſently amended. Since that cuſtom is changed, the motion to amend, becauſe ill in paper, ſucceeded in the room; and it is a motion that the court cannot refuſe; they may refuſe it, if the party deſiring it refuſes to pay coſts, or the amendment deſired ſhould amount to a new plea. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 88.

On a motion to amend the declaration, this being a popular action on the ſtatute of uſury, and the defendant having pleaded a plea in abatement, to which the plaintiff had demurred; there were two faults in the declaration; firſt, it ſhould have been, the action accrued; the word action was omitted, and the whole reſpecting the charge was wrong, and different from the ſums mentioned to be forfeited.

Per curiam. All is in paper; this may be amended, but indeed if there had been ſuch an amendment as would alter the action, then we would not a low them to amend, becauſe another perſon might have brought the action, as you would mend it. Vide Forteſcue, page 277.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. Garner v. Anderſon.

In a replevin out of the county court, the plaintiff declared for taking his cart and four horſes in Nightingale Lane, in the pariſh of Stepney. The defendant pleads in abatement, that he took the goods in Nightingale Lane, in the pariſh of St. John Wapping; abſque hoc, i. e. without this, that he took them in Nightingale Lane, in the pariſh of Stepney: and ſets forth his title to the goods as a deodand.

The plaintiff's council moved to amend the declaration, and alledged the place to be in the pariſh of St. John Wapping; for the one ſide of that lane to the cauſe-way is, by act of parliament, in the pariſh of Stepney, and the other ſide in the pariſh of St. John Wapping, and the goods were taken in that ſide of the lane which is in Wapping. The fact was, that a ſervant of the plaintiff's was driving a cart, and by chance run over and killed a child; upon which the defendant ſeiſed the cart and horſes as a deodand, and the ſervant was tried for the murder, and found, by accident.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that if this ſhould be amended, all pleas in abatement will be ſet aſide. Eaſter, 2 Ann. Lapeyre v. Germain, an action of aſſumpſit was brought by bill againſt the defendant, as a knight, he pleads in abatement that he is a knight and baronet; and the court refuſed an amendment. Hil. 1 Geo. Mears v. Bowes, in C. B. was a ſimilar caſe, and the court would not grant an amendment. Nothing is removed out of the county court but the plaint only; and therefore if iſſue is joined in the county court, the plaintiff muſt declare anew.

Chief Juſtice. In the caſe of Lapeyre v. Germain there could not be any amendment, becauſe the commencement of the ſuit was wrong, and nothing to amend by. The foundation of amendments by the court, whilſt the proceedings remain in paper before they are recorded, is, that theſe papers, delivered to and fro, ſupply the declaring and pleading by word of mouth at the bar, and may be amended as eaſily as if ſpoke at the bar. Theſe faults, ſtiled errors of the clerk, are amendable after the proceedings are recorded.

Afterwards, upon deliberation, the court granted leave to amend, upon payment of coſts. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 11.

Trinity, 5 Geo. The King v. Nixon.

The court refuſed to quaſh an information upon motion, which had been exhibited by rule of court. Eyre, Juſtice, obſerving, that ſuch informations are amendable. Vide Strange vol. 1. page 185.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Stratton v. Burgis.

An attorney undertakes to appear for the defendant, an infant.

Per curiam. He is obliged to do it in a proper manner, and having entered it by his attorney, when it ſhould have been by his guardian, it may be amended. Vide Strange vol. 1. page 114.

In debt on 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 25, againſt an officer who preſided at the election of members of parliament, for refuſing to give a copy of the poll; after judgment for the plaintiff in B. R. and error brought in the Exchequer Chamber, the plaintiff moved to amend in ſeveral particulars, which he was ordered to give a note of to the other ſide. And now they come to ſhew cauſe againſt their being amended.

The firſt amendment deſired was in the warrant of attorney, where the defendant was ſtiled bailiff bugi for burgi.

Serjeant Cheſhyre. There is nothing to amend this by, as there was in the caſe of Cooke v. The Dutcheſs of Hamilton, where they produced the common rule in ejectment, and that was the foundation for putting in the attorney's name.

2. To put the word vic. into the diſtringas. It is Rex fidei defenſor, &c. Somerſet' Salutem, omitting vic. There is likewiſe nothing to amend this by; no award of it upon the roll, as there is of the venire facias. And it does not appear but it might be deſigned to be directed to the coroner.

3. They would amend the teſte of the venire, which in other words is, to ſolve a diſcontinuance. The award is in fifteen days of St. Martin, and they have taken it out teſted the firſt day of Hilary term, and now they would teſte it in Michaelmas term.

4. The other amendment they would make, is, to add continuances. Of them they have no need, having a verdict, which cures the want of them.

This is a proceeding on a penal law, and therefore the court will be ſtricter than in common actions. And as the ſtatutes of jeofails will not help them, they muſt ſhew it to be amendable at common law. In the caſe of the Queen v. Tutchin, which was an information for a libel, where the diſtringas was teſted the day after the return of the venire, the court on great debate refuſed an amendment.

The queſtion is, whether this be a penal or popular ſtatute, within the exception of the ſtatutes of jeofails? I agree, where a man is intitled to an action at common law, and an act of parliament comes and gives him an encreaſe of damages; that it is not to be taken as a penal ſtatute. 9 C. 71. 3 Bulſt. 378. But this is not the caſe. Any perſon who demands the poll may have the action if he be refuſed it, and that ſhews it to be a popular ſtatute.

All amendments are either at common law or by ſtatute. Nothing was amendable, at common law, but in the ſame term, 8 Co. Blackmore's caſe, Salk. 50. By 14 E. 3. c. 6. and 8 H. 6. c. 12. ſuch faults only are amendable, as proceed from miſtake, but when a man deſignedly makes it teſted of one term, when it ought to be of another, that is matter of judgment. Show. 80. The direction of a writ is a more eſſential part than the teſte of it, or the return. It cannot be a writ unleſs it be directed to ſomebody, but it may be good without a return, as where it is vicontiel. Where there were two ſheriffs, and the writ was directed vicecomiti; there indeed it was made vicecomitibus, becauſe there was a direction, though an improper one. 2 Cro. 188. Yelv. 110.

At common law nothing was amendable but the act of the court. If vic. is to be put in now, it will be giving an authority after the execution of it. In the caſe of Sloper v. Child, in Cro. Jac. the word vic. was put in, but that was becauſe the award of the venire warranted it, which the award here does not, for it is of a ſubſequent term, and at a time when the defendant had no day in court. In Cro. Eliz. 820. the return of the venire was held amendable, but not the teſte, becauſe that is never mentioned in the awarding it upon the roll.

The council on the other ſide ſaid, the ſtatutes of amendments do not except popular actions, as the ſtatutes of jeofails do. 3 Lev. 375. In a qui tam &c. on the ſtatute 31 Eliz. for 5 l. for ſelling a horſe in Smithfield, not tolled, there was an amendment. So Salk. 324. 1 Roll. Abr. 205. pl. 3. Cro. Car. 275, 278. Jones 320. 1 Roll. Abr. 202. pl. 7. 1 Brownl. 156. upon the ſtatute of hue and cry the day of committing the robbery was amended. It appears the writ was intended to be directed to the ſheriff, for there is in it com' tuo, and therefore we may put in vic. according to Yelv. 69. Cro. Jac. Sloper v. Child. So the teſte of writs have been amended. 2 Cro. 442. Yelv. 64. Cro. Car. 38. 2 Cro. 64. 2 Brownlow 102. Moor 599. Cro. El. 183. Moor 684. Cro. El. 203. 2. Cro. 162. Moor 465. Cro. El. 467. Noy. 57. 2 Jones 41. And we may add the continuances, according to 1 Roll. Abr. 200, 205, 206. pl. 6.

The crown has no part of this penalty, but the party grieved has it all; and he has an antecedent right before bringing the action, which a common informer has not. He ſhall have coſts. 1 Roll. Abr. 516. pl. 5. Sir W. Jones 447. 1 Ven. 133. Cro. Car. 539. As to the warrant of attorney, we needed not put in any addition. The other is right, and that is ſomething to amend by. Then as to the vic', this writ is returned by the ſheriff; ſo no colour to ſay it might be intended to go to the coroner. In C. B. the laſt term, between Child and Sloper, the venire was to the ſheriff of Warwickſhire, and the habeas corpora to the ſheriff of Nottingham, and this was amended. 3 Mod. 78. So 8 W. 3. B. R. Wright v. the Inhabitants of Penhurſt, the venire was amended from de placito huerii et clamoris, to de placito tranſgr' et contempt', contra ſtatut' de hue et cry. As to the teſte, vide Hardreſs 321. 1 Roll. Abr. 205. 2 Cro. 211.

The court doubted as to the continuance, but held all the reſt amendable. And Eyre J. quoted Kite v. Epiſcopum Worceſter, Eaſt. 7 W. 3. where one of the defendant's names was omitted in the diſtringas, and it was amended after trial. Adjourned. And afterwards, when it came on again, the court declared for all the amendments, except the want of continuances, which they had debated again. And for the amendment the former arguments were inſiſted on; and 1 Roll. Abr. 200. pl. 27. Yelv. 156. 26 H. 6. amendment 33. were cited. In anſwer to which it was inſiſted, that continuances were the act of the court, and the ſtatute 8 H. 6. extends only to the miſpriſions of the clerk. 8 Co. 156. b. Stiles 338. 3 Lev. 431. And towards the end of the term the Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the court, that the continuances might be entered at any time, as well after as before the judgment; and a diſtinction was taken between miniſterial and judicial acts, the firſt of which were at common law amendable at any time; but the latter not after the ſame term. And as to amendments of judicial acts, a difference was made between amendments which deface and alter the record, and ſuch as are only additional to it, in order to eke it out and compleat it. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 136.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Gauld v. Coulthurſt. Error.

The judgment in error was teſted in Hilary term, of which the judgment was. But the plaintiff did not enter continuances upon it till Trinity term, which occaſioned the writ of error to be quaſhed. And now the queſtion was, as to coſts. And all the court agreed, that this not being a fault in the writ of error at the time of bringing it, but being occaſioned by the act of the defendant in error, which the plaintiff could neither foreſee nor prevent; it was not a caſe within 4 & 5 of Ann. c. 16. which gives coſts againſt the plaintiff in error, upon quaſhing defective writs of error. Then another queſtion aroſe, whether the plaintiff in error ſhould not have his coſts in this caſe, being defeated of the benefit of this writ of error by the artifice of the defendants in error? And as to this point, the Chief Juſtice, and Eyre Juſtice, were againſt giving coſts, and Powys and Forteſcue Juſtices, were of the contrary opinion: ſo the court being divided, the writ was quaſhed without coſts on either ſide. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 139.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Power v. Jones. Error.

The defendant brought a writ of error, and aſſigned infancy and appearance by attorney; Strange moved that the attorney might be obliged to ſet it right, and cited Goodright v. Right, and Stratton v. Burgiſs: but the court ſaid, they could not do it in this caſe, becauſe here was no expreſs undertaking to appear, as there was in thoſe caſes; if there had, the court would oblige the attorney to do it in a proper manner. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 445.

The court at the ſide bar made a rule to amend the return of a ſcire facias from die veneris in craſtino Sancti Martini to die Sabbati, Friday being the feaſt of St. Martin; and now it was moved to diſcharge it, becauſe not a proper motion for the ſide bar; nor can the court amend the writ, but the proper way would be to quaſh it. I was council in maintenance of the rule, but had little to ſay for it, ſo it was diſcharged; and I moved to quaſh the writ, which was ordered accordingly. Vide Strange vol. 1. page 401.

Trinity, 8 Geo. Mayhoe v. Archer.

On a ſpecial verdict, the caſe was thus; (viz.) the jury found, that Richard Baxter rented a farm, for which he paid 300 l. per annum; and that he planted potatoes on part of the lands which he farmed, and that he bought great quantities of potatoes to utter and ſell again for profit, and that for ſeveral years paſt he dealt with ſeveral perſons in potatoes, at ſeveral times and places, and had employed warehouſes where he put potatoes, and had ſerved ſeveral markets therewith, and had ſold great quantities thereof for profit, and for his living, &c.

On this ſpecial verdict there were two points raiſed:

1ſt, If the jury have found enough to make Baxter a trader within any of the ſtatutes made againſt bankrupts.

2d, Whether a farmer who ſells potatoes, though he buys ſeveral great quantities thereof, and gets his living thereby, is within any of the ſaid acts.

In Trinity term following, the council for the plaintiff finding the judges differed in opinion, moved for a new venire, or that the court would give leave to amend this ſpecial verdict upon the affidavit of one of the witneſſes at the trial, that Baxter bought potatoes ſeveral years, to the value of five hundred pounds per annum; and thereupon a rule was made for the other ſide to ſhew cauſe why the verdict ſhould not be amended; and the cauſe which they ſhewed was, that though this witneſs had ſworn the ſame thing at the trial, yet it was without precedent to have a verdict (which is a record) amended by ſuch an affidavit; for though it was the ſame which was given in evidence before, yet the jury did not believe it; or probably there might be other evidence at the trial to diſprove it.

But the court was of opinion, that a ſpecial verdict might be amended by notes taken by the clerk at the trial, or on proof of the certainty of what was then given in evidence; and the ſame was ruled accordingly, upon payment of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 48.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Huxſer v. Gapan.

In trover for a ring, the defendant moved for leave to bring it into court, and that it might be ſtruck out of the declaration.

This being an action for damages founded on a ſuppoſed converſion, the motion was denied, but if it had been an action of detinue, it would have been granted.

Then the plaintiff moved for leave to amend his declaration, and add more counts to it, having only declared for 15 s. damages, and this to give the court juriſdiction; and though this was ſtrongly oppoſed on the other ſide, he had leave to amend.

Per curiam. In trover the converſion is the point in iſſue, for which the time and place ſhould certainly be alledged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 176.

In an action of debt on a covenant contained in an indenture of leaſe, the defendant pleads, that after making the leaſe, and before any rent due and payable, one K. P. after making the ſaid indenture, having a prior and better right and title to the premiſſes than had been granted to the defendant, againſt his will entered into the premiſſes, and by due proceſs and courſe of law expelled and evicted the defendant. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe that the defendant in his plea had not ſet forth what right or title the ſaid K. P. had to the premiſſes, nor by, or from whom ſuch title accrued to her; nor had traverſed or confeſſed the title ſet up by the plaintiff; nor had ſet forth by what proceſs, nor out of what court iſſuing, the ſaid K. P. did evict him. And on this demurrer the defendant joined ſo long ago as Eaſter term laſt, and the cauſe was made a concilium. But ſoon after the cauſe was ſet down in the paper for argument, the council for the defendant moved to amend the plea. The motion was oppoſed, and it was inſiſted that the application was now too late, the plaintiff having been delayed of his trial laſt aſſizes, and the cauſe being now in the paper; and the caſe of The King v. Edwards, Michaelmas, 8th of the preſent King, was cited; where, after the defendant had demurred, and an aſſizes paſt, and he afterwards applied to withdraw his demurrer and plead, the court refuſed, becauſe the trial had been delayed.

Lord Hardwicke. The great objection to this motion is, that the plaintiff has loſt his trial, and if this be allowed it will be a certain method of delay. Formerly in all amendments the party was to ſhew that the proceedings were all in paper, though of late that has been got over.

Lee. The caſe of The King v. Edwards was exactly ſimilar, and the court refuſed it becauſe tending to delay.

Page. Amendments have ſometimes been allowed, even when the cauſe was come down to trial; and I remember, in the caſe of Dyte v. The Biſhop of Worceſter, in ejectment, after trial had, the plaintiff found he had left out the name of one of the defendants in the niſi prius roll, and was allowed to amend it: but I believe all amendments allowed of when the cauſe was ſo far advanced, have been on the motion of the plaintiff.

The court would not allow the amendment to be made. Vide Caſes Temp. Ld. Hardwicke, p. 171.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Ruſſel v. Thoyre.

In debt upon a bail-bond, the memorandum was of Trinity term, and I excepted, that the aſſignment appeared to be in November following. Then the plaintiff moved to amend, but I objected there was nothing to amend by.

Per curiam. We cannot amend it, as it now ſtands; but we will give leave to file a new bill as of Michaelmas term, with a ſpecial memorandum; which the plaintiff afterwards did, and then amended of courſe, on payment of coſts. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 585.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Wilkinſon v. Mayer.

In an action of covenant, judgment having been given for the plaintiff, a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer-Chamber by the defendant; and in Trinity term following, it was moved to amend the venire facias, for this being an action of covenant, and the defendant having pleaded ſeveral pleas, and the plaintiff having replied to one, and demurred to the reſt; the venire facias was drawn in the uſual form, viz. as well to try the iſſue as to enquire of the damages; theſe laſt words, viz. to enquire of the damages, ought to be ſtruck out.

To which it was anſwered, that if the court ſhould give leave to amend this record after a writ of error brought, it is but reaſonable that the plaintiff in the original action ſhould pay coſts; for it is probable, that the writ of error was brought by the defendant for this very fault.

Thereupon, the counſel for the defendant in error offered to pay coſts, ſo as the plaintiff would waive his writ of error, for then it will appear, that it was brought for this very fault; but if he would not waive it, the defendant had leave to amend without paying coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 232.

After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, for that no iſſue was joined in the cauſe; it being, and therefore prays that it may be enquired of by the country; then theſe words ſhould follow, and the aforeſaid (the defendant) likewiſe, which were omitted.

On the other ſide it was ſaid, that there is no occaſion for amending the iſſue, becauſe the appearance of the defendant is entered on the poſtea; beſides, at the worſt, it is only an informal iſſue, and that is amendable.

In indictments for treaſon there is no ſimiliter, i. e. likewiſe, entered; and this court muſt be guided by precedents, whether it is in this caſe amendable.

And at another day the following caſes were cited, to ſhew that it was amendable; (viz.) In Fitzherbert amendment, fo. 32. an action was brought againſt ſeveral; they all pleaded, and in the replication one only joined in iſſue by a ſimiliter, and yet it was held amendable; and in Dyer 160. the entry was, and the aforeſaid likewiſe, leaving out the words the defendant, and it was held amendable; and in the following caſes, Rol. Rep. 200. Cro. El. 752. Cro. Car. 435. miſentries were adjudged to be amendable; and it was Lord Coke's opinion, that the miſpriſion of a clerk in a record may be amended; and in the caſe of Davis v. Acherley, in an action on three promiſſory notes, the defendant pleaded as to two of them, that the drawee has not indorſed, and as to the third non aſſumpſit generally, and the aforeſaid (the plaintiff) likewiſe; and after verdict for the plaintiff, he was allowed to enter his judgment on the firſt iſſue; therefore if any amendment is neceſſary, it muſt be in this caſe, eſpecially ſince it is plain by the poſtea that the defendant appeared.

In every material iſſue joined, there muſt be a verdict on one ſide, otherwiſe there can be no judgment; and the plaintiff would now have judgment for damages on a verdict found on informal iſſue, as he alledges it to be, but on no iſſue joined, as the defendant ſays; now there is a difference between immaterial, and informal iſſue joined, and where there is no iſſue at all joined, and where there is no iſſue at all joined; and the caſes cited in the margin are, where the iſſues were informally joined; as where it is ſaid in the entry, and the aforeſaid defendant likewiſe, where it ſhould be the aforeſaid plaintiff likewiſe; in which caſe the iſſue is tendered by the defendant; but in the principal caſe the iſſue was tendered by the plaintiff, and never joined by the defendant; ſo there was no iſſue at all, which ſeemed to the court not amendable. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 377. & Strange, vol. 1. p. 641.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Weldon v. Buckler. Error.

Scire facias againſt the pledges in a plaint in replevin, which plaint was removed into the court of Common Pleas, where the plaintiff declared, &c. and the defendant avowed the taking, &c. as a diſtreſs for rent, and had judgment to have a return irrepleviable; and thereupon a writ of error was brought in B. R. and the judgment was affirmed, and then a precept was directed to the ſheriff to make a return of the goods to the defendant, and he (the ſheriff) returned an elongata, i. e. that he could find no chattels whereof to make deliverance; whereon the defendant brought a ſcire facias againſt the pledges, in which he ſet forth, that he had recovered judgment in the court of Common Pleas, as appears by the record &c. in C. B. which judgment was affirmed in error in the court of King's Bench, as appears, &c. The defendants plead that the record remains in C. B.

On ſpecial demurrer for the plaintiff, it was argued, that a writ of error upon a judgment in C. B. removes the record itſelf, and not the tranſcript only; for execution is awarded by this court if the judgment is affirmed. A writ of error returnable in the Exchequer-chamber, is different; for there the tranſcript only is removed.

The defendant's council excepted to the ſcire facias for inconſiſtency: it ſhews that judgment was recovered in C. B. as by the record in C. B. doth more fully appear; that error was brought in B. R. where judgment was affirmed, as by the record, remaining in the King's Bench, doth more fully appear.

Per curiam. Sci. fa.'s have been often amended; however, let the plaintiff diſcontinue, on payment of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 314.

In error on a judgment in C. B. in ejectment, on four demiſes of a different commencement and continuance: verdict for the plaintiff againſt two defendants only as to one third part of twenty-eight acres of meadow; and as to the reſt of the premiſes, and all the other defendants, not guilty: upon which there is judgment, that the plaintiff ſhall recover his aforeſaid term &c. againſt the two defendants who are found guilty, and that the acquitted defendants ſhall recover 7 l. coſts.

On this judgment, the two defendants, who were found guilty as to part, bring a writ of error, and aſſign the general errors. And Strange, for the plaintiff in error, objected, that the verdict and judgment are uncertain.

1. For that the plaintiff declares on four ſeveral demiſes of a different commencement and continuance, and yet the judgment is only to recover his term aforeſaid in the ſingular number, without determining which of the terms he ſhall recover. Hilary, 4 Geo. B. R. Hodſon v. Backhouſe: the writ of error was concerning a certain tranſgreſſion and ejectment of a farm, inſtead of farms, there being two demiſes: and quaſhed.

2. It is impoſſible for the ſheriff, upon this judgment, to know what he is to deliver poſſeſſion of, for there are four demiſes of four different twenty-eight acres of meadow, and whether the plaintiff is to have thoſe which A. demiſed, or thoſe which B. or C. or D. demiſed, is uncertain; it ſhould have been, to recover the twenty-eight acres of meadow, which the firſt, ſecond, third, or fourth leſſor demiſed. 1 Book of Judgments, 74. 2 Ditto, 119. 2 Roll. Abr. 694. 1 Roll. Abr. 779. By this verdict nobody can ſay which of the leſſors titles is eſtabliſhed, nor can either of them bring an action upon it for the meſne profits.

The council for the defendants contra, did not offer to anſwer the objections, but ſaid they would try below, and get it ſet right, at preſent he took an exception to the writ of error, that it was only a record of one ejectment between the plaintiff and the two defendants who are found guilty; whereas it appears by the record, that there were eleven other indictments to the ſuit: and tho' the writ can be brought only by theſe two, to the great damage of themſelves, yet the ſuit muſt be deſcribed as it really was.

Per curiam. So it ſhould, and the caſe of Cook and the Dutcheſs of Hamilton was cited. Then Strange inſiſted that it was amendable by the late act; and of that opinion was the court; and as to the objections to the judgment, it was adjourned, to give the defendant in error an opportunity to ſet it right if he could. Vide Strange. vol. 1. p. 682.

In an action on the caſe upon two promiſes, there was judgment for the plaintiff, as to the firſt promiſe; and as to the ſecond, a nolle proſ. A writ of enquiry being taken out to inquire what damages the plaintiff had ſuſtained by reaſon of the promiſes, on the return of this it was moved to amend the writ, and make it by reaſon of the non performance of the aforeſaid firſt promiſe, and on the authority of Baker v. Campbell, Eaſt. 4 Ann, B. R. the writ was amended in this caſe; the record of the judgment by default being a warrant to amend by. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 684.

To a ſcire facias on the crown ſide on a recognizance for keeping the peace, the defendant as to the breach aſſigned, pleaded not guilty, but concluded with an averment, inſtead of concluding to the country; and after a demurrer, it was moved to amend the plea: and the court gave leave to amend it accordingly. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 686.

Hilary, 13 Geo. The King v. Seaward.

On an information againſt the defendant for giving a challenge; the defendant pleaded in abatement, that he was a ſurgeon, and not a gentleman, as ſtiled in the information, which the court gave leave to amend on payment of coſts, this being a ſuit not carried on by the crown; and in Eaſter, 9 Ann, the Queen v. The Town of Malmſbury, a miſtake in the name of a corporation was amended after a plea in abatement. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1472. Strange, vol. 2. page 739.

In an action on the caſe on a bill of exchange; the defendant pleaded that the bill was firſt exhibited 23 October, 12 Geo. and that he had not aſſumed on himſelf within ſix years before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill; to which the plaintiff replied, that the action firſt commenced 28 November, 11 Geo. and that the defendant promiſed within ſix years before that time; to which the defendant demurred. The defendant's council inſiſted, that it was not enough to ſay the action was firſt commenced ſuch a day, without ſhewing the proceſs, and continuing it down to the time of the declaration, Salk. 420. The plaintiff's council urged, Tho. Ent. 438. which is in the ſame form as this. But the court would not allow that as a ſufficient authority; and Lutw. 256. was cited as a caſe in point: whereupon it was adjourned. And at another day, it was moved to amend the replication, by ſetting out the latitat, and adding the continuances; and Winkworth v. Clark was cited, where they were ſent for up after a writ of error; it appearing there (as it did in this caſe) that there were regular continuances, P. 4 Geo. and as to its being after a demurrer, cited the caſe of Ruſſel v. Martin, and Thorpe, Stra. vol. 1. page 583.

The defendant's council, in oppoſition thereto, cited Hales v. Hales, in C. B. Paſ. 11 Geo. where they refuſed to let the plaintiff add continuances after a demurrer.

Per curiam. The authorities of our own court warrant it, and therefore let the replication be amended, on payment of coſts.

And afterwards the pleadings being cloſed, it appeared that the plaintiff declared on two bills of exchange, and ſeveral other promiſes; the defendant, as to the two firſt counts on the bills of exchange, pleads, that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years; and as to the other accounts, non aſſumpſit generally, the plaintiff replies, that on ſuch a day he ſued out a latitat, which he continued down to the preſent declaration, and avers, that the cauſe of action aroſe within ſix years before the ſuing out the latitat. The defendant rejoins; proteſtando, that there was no ſuch writ iſſued as ſet out by the plaintiff; for the plea ſays, that after the ſix years were expired, viz. ſuch a day, the plaintiff firſt ſued out a latitat, which he ſets forth, and that he appeared to it, and that the plaintiff declared on it as above; and traverſes, that he appeared and put in bail to the writ mentioned in the replication; et hoc paratus eſt verificare, i. e. and this he is ready to verify. The plaintiff demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that this rejoinder is contrary to the record of the appearance, and is a negative pregnant. The defendant joined in demurrer.

The plaintiff's council argued, that the rejoinder was contrary to the record; and this is not a denial of their being ſuch a record, but an offer to put in iſſue the effect of it; and the plaintiff could not take iſſue, and carry it to a jury, to inquire which writ the appearance related to. The only iſſue the defendant could have taken was, whether the cauſe of action accrued within ſix years before the teſte of the firſt latitat.

Here is a proteſtando, that there is no ſuch writ, and then the traverſe admits it, and offers to try whether the defendant's appearance was on that or another.

Second objection. If this were a matter iſſuable, yet there being a negative and an affirmative, the rejoinder is ill in its preſent ſtate, for it ought to have concluded to the country.

The defendant's council did not offer to ſupport the rejoinder, but inſiſted, that the replication was ill; for the plaintiff ſhould have averred, that he actually ſued out and proſecuted ſuch writ, to avoid the ſtatute; but here he only ſays, that the court awarded ſuch a writ, and then ſets forth the continuances on it, which is not ſufficient. Thom. Ent. 151. Brownl. 104. Salk. 420.

The plaintiff ſhould likewiſe have ſhewn, that a bill of Middleſex was taken out precedent to the latitat, for that is the foundation of a latitat, and ought always to iſſue firſt.

The court were of opinion that the rejoinder was ill, and that the writ and continuances were ſufficiently ſet forth.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice, at firſt doubted whether the plaintiff ought not to have ſhewn that a bill of Middleſex iſſued before the latitat, becauſe the bill is the foundation of the latitat; but afterwards he agreed with the reſt of the court, that it was not neceſſary. Styles, 156. 1 Sid. 53. 60. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 734.

In an action on a South Sea contract, the plaintiff declared it was for ſtock in the company trading ad maria auſtrialia, called the South Sea company. It was inſiſted on the trial that auſtralia was the proper word without an i. and therefore the evidence did not ſupport the declaration, and it was agreed to take a verdict for the plaintiff, and to apply to the court, and after a great debate a new trial was granted, for it was a different corporation, and if the word auſtrial' was to be rejected, it would not do, for then it would be a company trading to all ſeas, whereas they trade in the South Seas only; and the Anglice called the South Sea company will not do where there is a proper Latin word which is not made uſe of. James Oſborn's caſe 10 Co. 130.

The plaintiff afterwards had leave to amend his declaration on payment of coſts. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 787.

The roll of the judgment was carried in, in Trinity term 1720, and docquetted; but before filed, was miſlaid and loſt. The court was moved for leave to file a new roll, the defendant being dead, and the executrix conſenting: and King qui tam v. Bolton, Stra. vol. 1. p. 117. and Needham v. Grano, were cited, and after a rule to ſhew cauſe, the ſame was made abſolute, for there being a docquet, it could be no deceit upon purchaſers. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 833.

A writ of error was brought by Canning to reverſe a judgment given againſt him in C. B. after a verdict in ejectment, wherein he was defendant. The writ of error was teſted 23 October, 12 Geo. 1. and returnable in eight days of St. Martin, Michaelmas, 12 Geo. 1. and by the record certified, the judgment appeared not to be given till Hilary term following, 12 Geo. 1. whereupon it was held clearly the record was not well removed by this writ of error.

The plaintiff's council in error moved, that the writ of error might be amended by ſtatute 5 Geo. 1. cap. 13. but on reading the ſtatute the court were clearly of opinion it could not be done, for it would be to amend the writ contrary to the truth of the caſe, for the judgment, in fact, was not given till Hilary term, 12 Geo. 1. and therefore this was not ſuch a variance as was intended to be amended by that act. The motion for an amendment was denied. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1531.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. Muttit v. Denny.

In ejectment againſt two defendants, it was ſaid, that they entered, expelled, and removed. And after verdict for the plaintiff, a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, and the court held it to be ill. But at another day, they ordered it to be amended, though there was nothing to amend by, on the authority of Cro. Jac. 306. Salk. 48, and then the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 807.

Elkins recovered judgment in a ſcire facias againſt Paine, Field, and two others, in the Marſhalſea, as bail for one Croſby, and Paine, and Field only brought a writ of error which was ill, and the record not removed thereby.

The council for Paine and Field moved that the writ of error might be amended by virtue of the ſtataute of the 5th Geo. 1. cap. 13. But the court held the writ was not amendable, the other defendants not having joined in the writ of error, and the writ was quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1532.

After error in the Exchequer Chamber, the tranſcript was brought back and amended in B. R. by the original record. And it was held neceſſary to make the amendment here, as this differs from the caſe of a writ of error from C. B. becauſe the Common Pleas ſends up the record, and the King's Bench ſends only a tranſcript. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 837.

In this cauſe the court gave leave to amend a fault in the writ of error brought, being of opinion that the ſtatute does not give coſts on amending as it does on quaſhing. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 863.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 2. The King v. Hayes.

The defendant was indicted for forging a bond, and on the trial there appeared a variance in the addition of the obligor, on which a ſpecial verdict was found; the Chief Juſtice doubting whether it was a variance or not, it being peroch. for paroch, i. e. pariſh; and after the verdict was drawn up, the proſecutor moved for leave to amend the niſi prius roll by the record of the indictment, which was right, and alledged that the record of niſi prius had been made up by the clerk in court of the defendant, who might be ſuſpected to have made it wrong on purpoſe.

The court ſeemed to think this was amendable at common law, there being ſomething to amend by, but they ſaid there was no occaſion to give any opinion on that, ſince they were warranted to amend it, as being a fault committed by the defendant, who ought not to take advantage of it.

The variance being thus removed out of the caſe, the cauſe was put into the paper to be argued on the ſpecial verdict, and the defendant's council attempting to ſpeak, it was inſiſted, that the defendant ought to be in court, as on motions in arreſt of judgment; to which it was anſwered, that a motion in arreſt of judgment is after a verdict; whereas, till this ſpecial verdict is argued and determined, the defendant is not to be looked on as guilty; and the court thought this a reaſonable diſtinction, and ſuffered the defendant's council to go on.

For the defendant it was argued, that it was an imperfect verdict; the indictment is for three diſtinct facts; 1. For forging a bond. 2. For publiſhing ſuch a bond ſo by him forged; and, 3. For publiſhing a bond knowing it to be forged. To theſe three offences the defendant pleads not guilty, and the jury were charged to enquire of the whole, and in their verdict they find, that he forged a bond in the words and figures following, and that he publiſhed the ſame, but they ſay nothing as to the three offences, but conclude, that if on this evidence the court is of opinion he is guilty of the facts charged in the indictment, then they find him guilty; and if the court think him not guilty, they find accordingly.

On this ſtate of the caſe it was inſiſted on, that the jury ought to find all the iſſues with which they are charged; and ſince the evidence extended to two facts only, they ſhould have found him not guilty as to the third. 3 Lev. 55. In treſpaſs for taking a gown and mantua; it was found ſpecially, that the defendant took the gown for a tax, and ſaid nothing as to the mantua, and held a diſcontinuance. Cro. Eliz. 133. 2 Roll. Abr. 722. pl. 19. and 2 Sid. 86. It is ſaid that in all ſpecial verdicts, the judges will not adjudge of any matter of fact but that which the jury declare to be true of their own finding. Trials per pais, 236. Here the court are ſpecially tied down to ſay, Whether on the evidence laid before them the defendant is guilty of all the facts, and that they cannot ſay, becauſe there is no evidence as to one. Co. Litt. 227. a. A verdict that finds part of the iſſue, and nothing as to the reſt, is inſufficient for the whole, as in an information of intruſion into a meſſuage, and one hundred acres of land, if the jury finds as to the land, and nothing as to the houſe, it is void for the whole. Godb. 57. 2 Leon. 194. Hard. 166.

The court held, that as the verdict ſtood, they could not give judgment that the defendant was guilty of all the offences, the evidence only warranting them to adjudge him guilty of the two firſt, the laſt not being confined to the ſame bond; or if it was, yet every publication is a diſtinct offence, but then they thought themſelves not tied up by the ſpecial concluſion, but that the whole evidence being laid before them, they were to do what the jury ought to have done, and therefore they adjudged, that on the matter referred to them by the jury, it appeared to the court that the defendant was guilty of the forgery and firſt publication, and not guilty of the reſt.

Judgment not having been ſigned, the court was of opinion the defendant might move any thing in arreſt of judgment; and it having been taken notice of by the council for the King, that the forgery was laid to be againſt the form of the ſtatute, and the judgment prayed on the ſtatute, it was then objected by the council for the defendant, that all the proceedings againſt him were void; for that the certiorari, the venire, and diſtringas were, as if it had been an indictment at common law, and many precedents were cited, where the proceſs always run, de quibuſdam tranſgreſſionibus et contemptibus contra formam ſtatuti, i. e. concerning certain offences and contempts againſt the form of the ſtatute, and indeed that diſtinction had been kept up in all theforms of the Crown-Office, but the court thought it not neceſſary, for a certiorari to remove all indictments, will remove one for forgery on the ſtatute, and the jury are ſummoned to try whether he is guilty of the offence whereof he is indicted, which is a ſufficient warning to appear in the cauſe, and therefore they pronounced the judgment on the ſtatute, and the defendant ſtood in the pillory at Charing-Croſs, had one ear cut off, and then was carried to the King's Bench to ſuffer a year's impriſonment; during which he moved for the liberty of the rules, which was denied, he being in execution. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 843.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Hatton v. Walker.

The defendant concluded his plea with, wherefore he prays judgment, but (inſtead of if) the plaintiff ought to maintain his action. On demurrer the plaintiff ſhewed it for cauſe, and the defendant joined in demurrer, and coming after to amend by the draught under the council's hand, it was objected, that the intent of requiring miſtakes in point of form to be ſhewn, for cauſe of demurrer, was to give the party an opportunity to amend before he proceeded any further; but if after notice of his fault, he will be ſo hardy as to join in demurrer, he is not entitled to the favour of amending; and the court ſtrongly inclined againſt giving leave to amend, till at another day, the council for the plaintiff cited Cro. Car. 144. and Hil. 8 Ann, in B. R. Brownjohn v. D'oyley, where the avowry was amended by the draught under the council's hand, after there had been a demurrer, and the cauſe made a concilium; on the authority whereof, the court gave leave to amend in the preſent caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 846.

An ejectment was brought againſt the Company, and Mr. E.; after a verdict for the plaintiff. Mr. E. died, and a writ of error is brought, laying the judgment to be to the great damage of the Company, and of Mary E. the daughter and heir, and ſhe and the company jointly aſſign errors.

It was moved to amend the writ and aſſignment, by ſtriking out her name; and on conſideration the court were of opinion that it was amendable by ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. cap. 13. not only as a variance from the original record, which is really no way to the damage of M. E. but alſo by virtue of the general words other defect. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 892.

The plaintiffs declare as executors, on a promiſe to their teſtator, and iſſue was joined on a plea of the ſtatute of limitations. Then the plaintiffs moved to amend, by laying the promiſe to have been made to themſelves, and cited 3 Lev. 347, where in an action on the ſtatute of hue and cry, the allegation of the oath was amended, and ſaid to be by the ſervant inſtead of the maſter.

And, on the authority of this caſe, the court ordered the amendment, on payment of coſts, and liberty for the defendant to plead anew. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 890.

Eaſter, 4. Geo. 2. Gardner v. Merrott.

There was a variance between the writ of error and the record, and as it ſtood in the paper, the court obſerved it, but neither party would move to amend it for fear of paying coſts, on which the court ſaid the ſtatute 5 Geo. 1. cap. 13. would warrant their amending it, which they did without coſts. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 902.

On a writ of error brought by Gardiner to reverſe a judgment given in C. B. againſt him in an action of aſſault and battery brought againſt him by Merrot, the writ of error deſcribed the record to be of a loquela i. e. a plaint in the C. B. by writ, by Steven Merrott v. Giles Gardiner, and the record removed was between Stephen Merrot v. Giles Gardiner, and conſequently there was a variance, &c. But this court made a rule that the writ of error ſhould be amended and made agreeable to the record by virtue of the ſtatute of 5 Geo. 1. cap. 13. intituled an act for the amendment of writs of error, &c. and they held they could do it by that act without prayer of either party, the variance appearing to them on the record, and gave no coſts, becauſe the ſtatute has directed no coſts to be given on ſuch amendment. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1587.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 2. The King v. Charleſworth.

On an information for forging a warrant of attorney to acknowledge ſatisfaction on a judgment of Eaſter term. After iſſue joined, the record appearing to be of Hilary term, the information was amended without coſts (the proſecutor having been admitted a pauper) and without giving the defendant leave to plead anew. The Queen v. Simmonds, Hil. 10 Ann 3 Lev. 347, was cited as an authority, where the title of an act ſet forth in an information was amended. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 871.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. The King v. Clendon.

An information was laid for an aſſault in Middleſex, and the court refuſed to amend it by laying it in London. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 911.

It was adjudged that the election in amending to pay coſts or give an imparlance, was in the defendant, and not in the plaintiff, and ſaid to be the practice of C. B. Vide Strange, vol. page 950.

On a writ of quo warranto againſt the defendant, who claimed to be Mayor of Cheſter, the defendant juſtified under a charter and bye-law, by which the Mayor is to be choſen by all his fellow-citizens of the city, and of the ſuburbs and hamlets, inhabiting within the ſame, or a major part of them; and lays his election to be by the majority of the citizens of Cheſter. To this there was a demurrer and joinder in demurrer. And when it came into the paper, the defendant's council perceived, that they had left out thoſe citizens who inhabited within the ſuburbs and hamlets, whereupon they moved to amend, and ſhewed by affidavit that the proſecutor had not loſt a trial, and offered to pay coſts, and likewiſe produced an affidavit, that it was not a voluntary miſtake.

After long debate and many caſes cited, the court gave leave to amend, and chiefly for reaſons peculiar to this caſe, 1. Becauſe otherwiſe the office would be loſt without trial of the right. 2. This cannot be made uſe of as a trick to gain time, becauſe of the affidavit made in this caſe. 3. Here has been no trial loſt, ſo that the proſecutor may ſtill try the merits in time. 4. The proſecutor was not driven to demur; for if he had gone to iſſue, and it had been found for the defendant, yet as a defect of title appears in the plea, he would have been intituled to a judgment of ouſter. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 976.

After a ſpecial demurrer, joinder, and argument, the plaintiff had leave to amend by the bill on the file. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 554.

A writ of error was brought of a judgment in favour of his Majeſty in the court of grand ſeſſions in Wales, in a quare impedit by the King againſt the Biſhop of Llandaff, and others, for the church of St. Andrew, in the county of Glamorgan, and the general errors aſſigned.

Per curiam. In this caſe there are three principal points to be conſidered: 1. Whether it is neceſſary to alledge a preſentation? 2. If neceſſary, whether the commendam amounts to a preſentation, or excuſes the want of alledging one? And 3d. Whether the verdict which finds that the late Queen was ſeiſed in fee, as of an advowſon in groſs, cures ſuch defect? We are unanimouſly of opinion, that it was neceſſary to alledge a preſentation, and the commendam will not ſerve the purpoſe; but we are alſo of opinion that the verdict has ſet all right. Accordingly the judgment muſt be affirmed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1006.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Bern v. Bern.

A writ of Dower was brought in C. B. in Ireland, as to part of premiſes in the count, the tenant pleaded ne unque ſeiſi que dower; iſſue upon this, and a verdict for the demandant, judgment thereon, and in mercy. As to the reſidue of the land contained in the count, the tenant pleaded, that the huſband being an infant at the time of the marriage; there was a diſcourſe berween him and the defendant's father, ſhe being likewiſe an infant, about the marriage, and that it was agreed between them, that when the demandant's huſband ſhould come of age he ſhould ſettle a rent-charge of ſuch a value on the demandant in lieu of her dower; and that when he came of age he made ſuch ſettlement accordingly. To this there was a demurrer; but before judgment given upon it, one W. S. came in, according to the ſtatute of Glouceſter, and is received pro intereſſe ſuo, i. e. for his intereſt therein; and pleads that the grandfather of the defendant's huſband being ſeiſed in fee of the lands in queſtion, made a leaſe of them to his anceſtor, for the term of ninety-nine years, part of which term is unexpired; and the demandant comes in and confeſſes that this W. S. is entitled to the term: then there is judgment for the demandant on the demurrer, et quod tenens ſit in miſericordia; i. e. and that the perſon holding may be in mercy; on which judgment is given to deliver ſeiſin of the premiſes to the demandant, but that execution ſtay till the expiration of the ſaid term. Upon error in B. R. in Ireland, the judgment was affirmed. Error brought in B. R. on both judgments.

The plaintiffs in error's council ſaid, that the judgment is erroneous, becauſe, 1ſt. Among others is demanded a meſſuage or work-houſe; now this is equally uncertain as the words meſſuage or tenement, which has been determined bad; and things ought to be ſet forth with certainty in dower as well as in ejectment. A ſeiſin is to be given on one as well as poſſeſſion on the other.

That the plea is a good bar, as it is ſaid that a jointure was made in ſatisfaction.

That there is a miſtake in the ſcire facias iſſuing out of B. R. in Ireland, it being made returnable at a day certain; that this is a miſcontinuance, not aided by verdict, according to the ſtatute of jeofailes, ſince it is ſubſequent to it, 1 Inſt. 335. where one proceſs is awarded inſtead of another, or when a day is given which is not legal, it is a miſcontinuance. Sid. 306. 1 Vent. 7. that this fault of the ſcire facias is not cured by appearance.

That there are two amerciaments of the tenant, whereas he ought not to have been puniſhed the laſt time, it being for no default of his, but on the receipt of tenant for years.

The defendant's council ſaid, that as to the firſt objection, the reaſon why meſſuage or tenement has been held bad is, becauſe of the uncertainty of the laſt word, which takes in corporeal and incorporeal inheritances, and therefore, tythes, &c. which are tenements, cannot be called meſſuages: meſſuage or houſe would be good; and here the laſt word, work-houſe, is a more particular deſcription of what was before called a meſſuage.

2d, Objection. This bar cannot be good; 1ſt. Becauſe the original agreement was not in writing, and therefore void by the ſtatute of frauds: and, ſecondly, becauſe the huſband was an infant, and therefore his aſſent not binding to him.

As to the objection to the ſcire facias, it is to be underſtood only as a proceſs to bring in the plaintiff to aſſign his errors, and his coming in on it has cured the fault. 1 Inſt. 325.

As to the two amerciaments, the ſtat. 16 and 17 Car. 2. c. 8. enacts, that no judgment after verdict, &c. ſhall be reverſed for want of a miſericordia, or capiatur; and that all defects of a like nature ſhall be amended in the court where error is brought, that in the laſt general words this fault is included.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. The court muſt take notice of C. B. in Ireland proceeding by original: and it is certain that where proceſs in the original action is returnable at a common return day, ſo muſt likewiſe the proceſs on a writ of error. But ſtat. 32 H. 8. c. 30. ſays, that no judgment ſhall be ſtaid by reaſon of any diſcontinuances after verdict, which words have been extended in ſome caſes to diſcontinuances made after verdict: that the only doubt is relating to the two amerciaments. At common law, before the ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. if an amerciament was entered inſtead of a capiatur, though it was for the benefit of the defendant, yet, as it was the judgment of the court, he might aſſign that for error himſelf. Here is a conſideration of law, though we know in fact, that came to nothing.

But at length the court ordered it to be amended upon the ſtatute, and the firſt miſericordia to be ſtruck out, as it ſtood upon the paper without requiring a diſtinct motion for that purpoſe.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. The Bank of England v. Morrice.

To a plea of ſeveral ſpecialties in an action on ſimple contract, the plaintiffs replied aſſets ultra, which was found for them, but the verdict ſet aſide. They then moved for leave to alter their replication, and reply fraud, and cited 3 Lev. 361. but the court ſaid there muſt have been ſome conſent in that caſe, elſe it is an authority for withdrawing all vitious pleadings at any time; and here it might be dangerous, becauſe the defendant on the former iſſue might have paid away aſſets, as knowing that replication could not hurt her: it was therefore denied to amend. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1002.

An aſſault was laid twenty-one different ways, and on motion to ſtrike ſome of the courts out of the indictment, the court ſaid it could not be done, being the finding of the grand jury, but they thought the clerks in the crown office only ought to draw the indictment, and then the court could puniſh them for the oppreſſion. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 1026.

Trinity, 10 Geo. 2. Bean v. Elton.

A writ of inquiry was executed in Trinity term 1728, and coſts taxed on it, but no final judgment entered up, and now there being occaſion to prove the debt in Chancery, the writ of inquiry could not be found, and a rule was made for a new writ of inquiry and inquiſition according to the ſheriff's notes, and that the maſter ſhould indorſe the coſts, which by the commitment book appeared to have been taxed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1077.

A motion was made by the council for the plaintiff in error, to quaſh a ſci. fac. quare executionem non, &c. nibil, returned. The command of the writ is, that he have here this writ, and the names of thoſe by whoſe oaths he has ſummoned; and he objects, that this is wrong, becauſe the ſummons is not to be made by oath.

The council for the defendant in error ſaid, the word oath may be rejected as ſurpluſage; but, however, this is but a proceſs to bring them to aſſign errors, and is amendable.

Lord Hardwicke. It is true, theſe ſci. facias's are conſidered as proceſs to bring in the party to aſſign error; and for that reaſon, if he comes in on it, he can take no advantage of any miſtake in the writ, it being conſidered only as a proceſs to bring him in; but now the queſtion is, Whether before he comes he may not take advantage of a fault in the writ? And I think he may, for he may not afterwards; for he ſhall be taken, then to have waived it, as on appearance to other proceſs; and this is a fault in the writ; the word oath cannot be rejected, becauſe there will not be a ſufficient command in the writ then remaining; but however, the court is not in ſtrict juſtice bound to quaſh; but if the party prays it, may order an amendment; the caſe where the return was bad is quite different.

After error brought, the court amended a judgment which ran that the plaintiff ſhould recover inſtead of do recover, as the miſpriſion of the clerk. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1132.

Eaſter, 14 Geo. 2. Wilder v. Handy.

In treſpaſs for killing a dog, after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration ran by recital, Whereas, &c. But a bill being filed right (the time of filing the court refuſed to enquire into) and on citing the caſe of Smith v. Fuller in C. B. Mich. 8 W. 3. and Cumb. 4. the court ordered it to be amended, though they were ſenſible that, for want of applying to amend, many judgments had been arreſted. Vide Strange, vol. p. 1151.

On error brought here on a judgment in Ireland, which ran that the plaintiff ſhall recover, it was amended to do recover, on the authority of Blakey v. Birmingham, Eaſter, 13 Geo. 2. above cited. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1156.

An order of two juſtices was made without ſaying it was on complaint of the churchwardens and overſeers, nor that one of the juſtices was of the quorum, nor that the pauper (who was a certificate man) was become actually charged. On appeal to the ſeſſions, they ſet all this right, under 5 Geo. 2. cap. 19. which impowers them to amend defects in form, and proceed to the merits.

Per curiam. This is going too far, they are to amend defects in form before they go into the merits, whereas here they muſt go into the merits before they can introduce the amendment. It was never deſigned they ſhould inſert new facts, but only amend the informal way of ſetting out the facts which were ſtated. The order therefore for the amendment muſt be quaſhed, and alſo the original order. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1158.

In treſpaſs it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was with a quod cum i. e. that when, but the plaintiff filing a right bill, the court amended the declaration by it, though for want of thinking of this before, many judgments had been arreſted. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1162.

Hilary, 15 Geo. 2. Stroud v. Tilly.

Per curiam. Though a plaintiff cannot regularly move to change the venue, yet he may in effect do it, by moving to amend; and it was done ſo in this caſe by ſtriking out Dorſetſhire, and inſerting Middleſex. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1162.

After error brought in the Exchequer Chamber, the judgment was amended, by adding the introductory words to the awarding a writ of inquiry, viz. that the plaintiff ought to recover his damages againſt the defendant, this being only a conſequence of determining that the replication demurred to by the defendant was good. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1182.

On the authority of Stroud v. Tilly the court ſuffered the plaintiff to amend the venue after the defendant had changed ſuch venue, on the common affidavit. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1202.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. Sale v. Crompton.

A warrant of attorney had been given in 1732, to confeſs a judgment for Crompton, but the letter r having been left out in the record of the judgment, the name appeared to be Compton. The court being moved for leave to amend by the warrant, it was refuſed, out of an apprehenſion that purchaſers might ſuffer inconveniencies thereby. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1209.

Trinity, 17 Geo. 2. Goodtitle v. Meymott.

In the declaration delivered to the tenant in poſſeſſion, the ſaid James inſtead of John, was ſaid to enter by virtue of the demiſe, and the court refuſed to amend the miſtake, conſidering the declaration as a proceſs. And Mr. Juſtice Wright cited a caſe, Hil. 15 Geo. 2. where the premiſes were laid to lie in Twickenham and Iſleworth, or one of them, and the court refuſed to permit the plaintiff to amend by ſtriking out the diſjunctive word. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1211.

In an action on a covenant broken, the breach aſſigned, was non-payment of 270 l. mortgage-money; and on the trial a verdict was obtained for 274 l. 11 s. damages, and entered ſo in the judge's minutes, but the clerk of the niſi prius had only marked 1 s. damages on the diſtringas.

The court was moved to alter the indorſement, by making it to agree with the minutes of the judge, and the matter appearing to be as above ſtated, the court ordered it to be amended. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1197.

The plaintiff having recovered double damages and coſts, in an action on ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 7. againſt the defendant as ſheriff of Denbighſhire, for a falſe return on an election for Knight of the ſhire; on which judgment error was brought: the plaintiff moved to amend, by adding a continuance, and a miſericordia, the want whereof, it was apprehended, would not be aided, if this was deemed a penal ſtatute; for which reaſon the motion was oppoſed, actions on penal ſtatutes being excepted out of the ſtatutes of jeofails.

Per curiam. There is nothing excepted out of the ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. (which is properly a ſtatute of amendment) but appeals and indictments of treaſon and felony. And in a caſe of this ſort, Trinity, 1 Geo. 1. in B. R. Philips v. Smith, amendments were made. The plaintiff therefore may aſſign errors anew. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1227.

On a trial at bar of a traverſe to an inquiſition of lunacy, one of the jury was called by the name of Henry, who informed the court that he was chriſtened by the name of Harry, but acknowledged that he was the perſon ſummoned. The council for the defendant refuſing to have it altered by conſent, the court directed the amendment to be made ex officio, by virtue of the ſtat. 8 H. 6. c. 12. & 15. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1214.

The term in ejectment being near expiring, it was amended, without any conſent, from five to ten years. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1272.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Robinſon v. Raley.

An amendment ſhall not be made after the matter is on record; (as giving leave "to withdraw a demurrer and plead to iſſue" after other iſſues joined in the ſame cauſe have been tried, and verdicts found with contingent damages:) for the whole muſt be ſuppoſed to be ſtill in paper. Vide Bur. vol. 1. page 322.

This was on a motion to ſhew cauſe why the plaintiff ſhould not be at liberty to withdraw his replication, and reply de novo, i. e. anew, on whicha rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained, which was afterwards made abſolute.

Lord Manſfield ſaid he conſidered this as an amendment, and that this mode of application was adopted to prevent the defacing the roll; that of late the court was leſs ſtrict than formerly with reſpect to amendments, which was more beneficial to ſuitors; however, the court will always take care that amendments ſhall not injure or delay the oppoſite party. Vide. Bur. vol. 2. page 756.

In ejectment after verdict, the defendants council moved in arreſt of judgment on the following ground: the leaſe declared on, was laid to be made the 33 of Geo. 3. to hold from the quarter day then laſt paſt, which was impoſſible, it being then but the firſt year of his preſent Majeſty's reign.

The error was, the pleadings were intituled Hilary term, 1 Geo. 3. and the leaſe was laid to be made 33 Geo. 3. to hold as before mentioned, on which a rule was granted to ſhew cauſe. The matter being argued by council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Denniſon, Juſtice. You cannot alter the title if it be defective; in the preſent caſe it is only a title improperly ſet out, it cannot be doubted, but a proper title was proved at the trial.

If the demiſe had been laid in the thirty-third year of his late Majeſty, the court would have ſupplied the words King Geo. 2.

In the preſent caſe, the deſcription is not uncertain, but only a title wrong ſet out by miſtake of the clerk, and this being in ejectment, is a ſtronger reaſon for our over-ruling this nice objection. I think there is no need of any amendment.

Wilmot, Juſtice, was of the ſame opinion.

In an action qui tam for uſury brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant; the plaintiff moved for leave to amend the declaration, by altering the date of the note, (all being on paper) on which he obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe, which on argument by council on both ſides, was made abſolute.

Lord Manſfield ſaid, the rule was, that while matters are in paper, the party may amend. In this caſe the plaintiff has only miſtaken a date. In the Exchequer they will amend penal informations. He obſerved, that the ſtatutes of amendment do not extend to penal actions, yet in the preſent caſe it is an amendment at common law.

Denniſon, Juſtice, obſerved, that there was no difference between civil and penal actions, where the application is as for an amendment at common law, and the proceedings are in paper.

Accordingly, the rule was ordered to be made abſolute for the amendment. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1098, 1099.

Appeal.

On an appeal of murder for killing the plaintiff's huſband, brought againſt the defendant, late of the pariſh of St. James's, Weſtminſter, in the county of Middleſex, gentleman, the defendant in his proper perſon came, and craved oyer of the writ and return, and then by A. B. his attorney, pleads in abatement, that there is a pariſh named St. James's, within the liberty of Weſtminſter, but no pariſh named St. James's Weſtminſter only. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and this matter being adjourned by the court till the next term, it was adjudged for the defendant, becauſe, 1ſt. The demurrer confeſſes the matter pleaded in abatement, to wit, that there is no ſuch pariſh, which is a good plea. 2dly. The plea being brought by attorney, ought not to have been received; and though received, yet being wrong, it is void, and in conſequence the cauſe is diſcontinued by the adjournment. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 59.

On an appeal of murder, the plaintiff counts at bar in his own perſon, but the roll put into court, where the count was entered, was by attorney; and an exception was taken, that the appellant was nonſuited; for that he appeared by attorney, where he ought to come in perſon, and ſuch appearance is void, and he is ſo nonſuited by default; and if not a nonſuit, the appeal is diſcontinued, for he ought to appear inſtantly, which he has not done; for at the day of the return of the writ, the appellant ought to have counted inſtantly, but his count was by attorney, which is no count; and then the appeal is diſcontinued.

Per curiam. The appellant here ſhall not be nonſuited; for none can be nonſuited who is not demanded, but he was demanded; wherefore appearance by attorney cannot be a nonſuit. 2 Inſt. 313. In appeal of mayhem, the plaintiff came by attorney, which could not be, and the plaintiff was demanded, and for default, nonſuited; but there it is plain, if he had appeared on demand he could not have been nonſuited: ſo here, if the appellee would nonſuit the appellant, he ought to have demanded him; but here the appellant was preſent, and viewed by the court, and ſhall not be nonſuited, if demanded at a day when he is not demandable at. Then as to the diſcontinuance, that cannot be before imparlance; but the day the court took to adviſe ſhall not make a continuance, but ſhall be intended the firſt day. It is true, the appellant had a day by the roll, and by the writ, and on every one of them is demandable. Now, here he appears on the day given by the writ, and has counted, and that in his proper perſon, as he ought; and though the roll be by his attorney, that ſhall be altered; though an appeal cannot be altered at common law, nor by any ſtatute of jeofails, yet it may be altered according to the truth of fact, before it is filed, or becomes a record; whereupon the roll was amended, and the defendant pleaded not guilty. And it was ſaid in this caſe, that where a grand jury or inqueſt finds a man guilty, he is ouſted of battel on appeal. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 20.

On an appeal of murder, the writ concluded, and have then there this writ.

The declaration ran, that the deceaſed was at the pariſh of Clapham, in the peace of the King, ſuch a day and year, and that before noon of the ſame day came prædicti, i. e. the aforeſaid W. P. and, quidem, D. S. &c. meaning one.

An exception was taken to the writ on account of the word then, which is never uſed in original writs. To this it was anſwered, that the word then is mere ſurpluſage, and 1 Leon. 73. cited.

Another exception was taken to theſe words of the declaration, before noon of the ſame day the appellee came, &c. without mentioning the particular hour; and the ſtatute of Glouceſter requires the certainty both of the day and hour, &c.

In anſwer to this objection, it was inſiſted, that the year and day are to be accounted from the day of his death, the hour is not material; for if it had been about eight o'clock it had been good.

It was further objected to the declaration, that it ſaid, came, prædicti, i. e. the aforeſaid W. P. and one D. S. which was nonſenſe, and bad Latin, and could not be ſurpluſage in an appeal; for if the word prædicti is wholly rejected, it does not appear which of them killed the perſon; and the word quidem for quidam is alſo falſe Latin.

It was anſwered, that falſe Latin will not vitiate indictments, neither ſhall it be allowed to vacate declarations in appeals; it may abate an original writ, but ſhall not vitiate any judicial writ, declaration, or pleading, agreeable to the ſecond reſolution in Oſborn's caſe, 20 Rep. 133. a.

It is true, in an aſſiſe, the writ ran, that the ſheriff ſhould ſummon the tenants to appear before the aforeſaid juſtices at Weſtminſter, and no juſtices were mentioned before; but the writ was not abated for this omiſſion, and the judgment only ſtopped a little while, for it does not appear that it was vacated on that account. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 159.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. Banſon v. Offley.

On an appeal brought by the wife for the murder of her huſband, the declaration charges, that on ſuch a day and year, one Offley did aſſault, and wound her huſband, in the county of H. of which wound he afterwards on ſuch a day died, at R. in the county of C. and that one Lippon was aiding the ſaid Offley, &c. The cauſe being tried, the jury found that Lippon gave the wound, and that Offley was aſſiſting him therein. On motion in arreſt of judgment, the appellee's council inſiſted, that the count and the verdict in appeals muſt be certain, otherwiſe no judgment could be given againſt the appellee, but in this caſe the verdict found another perſon gave the wound, and not he againſt whom the appellant had declared.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This is an exception which might as well be made on an indictment as to a count in an appeal, for both ought to be equally certain. The preſent appeal is certain enough, for he who gave the ſtroke, and he who was aſſiſting in it, are both equally guilty.

The appellee's council raiſed another objection, viz. that the cauſe was tried in a wrong county, for it was by a jury in C. when it ought to be by a jury of both counties, ſince the wound was given in one county, and the party died in another.

Per curiam. By the ſtat. 2 & 3 Edw. 6. it is enacted, that an indictment found by a jury of that county where the death happens, ſhall be as effectual in law as if the wound which was the cauſe of the party's death had been given in the ſame county. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 39.

Trinity, 6 W. & M. Wilſon v. Law.

On an appeal of murder, the appellee having craved oyer of the writ and declaration, demurred; and as to the felony and murder, pleaded not guilty.

1ſt. To the words, about one o'clock of the ſame day aſſaulted, as uncertain.

2dly. That there was no direct charge againſt the defendant, the words in the declaration being, ſtruck, ſtabbed, and perforated, &c. when, according to all the precedents, it ſhould have been, gave a mortal wound.

3dly. The venue is illegal; the fact being alledged to have been committed in the pariſh, &c. when ſtat. of Glouceſter expreſsly requires it to be laid in ſome vill or town.

4thly. The return is, I have cauſed to be attached, when it ought to have been, I have attached, like as the writ of capias, the return whereof is, I have taken, and never, I have cauſed to be taken.

Now, it cannot be objected, that this is helped by the appearance of the defendant; it is true, he came in and appeared on the return, but he demurred for this fault, and is now in court to ſhew this inſufficient return. Neither is it an objection to ſay, that the ſheriff's return is not traverſable, as in an appeal of murder, the original was returnable in eight days of St. Michael, which was the firſt return of Michaelmas term, but was not delivered to the ſheriff till the 6th of November following, who returned tarde, i. e. came to my hands too late, which, though true, it was held the party might traverſe. And the caſe of Morgan v. Egerton, Michaelmas, 8 James, was relied on as an authority in point, viz. in an appeal of murder, the writ was returnable in eight days of St. Michael, the old ſheriff returned, I have taken the body, and have it ready, &c. and the new ſheriff, before the priſoners were delivered over to him, returned, that writ was delivered to me, indorſed as above; on a demurrer, this was held a bad return, becauſe he had returned nothing done by himſelf, nor ſaid any thing about the body of the priſoner, and the declaration being againſt the defendant in cuſtody of the ſheriff, it does not appear that the new ſheriff ever had him in his cuſtody, and he ſhall not be intended to be in cuſtody of the old ſheriff, becauſe he is no officer of the court after a new ſheriff is choſen; and though the party then appeared voluntarily, yet it was held that ſuch an appearance will not make good that which was defective before on the return itſelf.

The council for the appellant anſwered only the laſt, as being the moſt material exception, viz. that there was no difference between, I have cauſed to be attached, and, I have attached, where the return was not made by a bailiff of a liberty, and this could not be intended to be a return by a bailiff of a franchiſe, becauſe that is always ſpecial, viz. I have commanded the bailiff of the liberty, which is not in this caſe, ſo it muſt be a return by the ſheriff himſelf, and it might have been done by an itinerant bailiff, and it is then the act of the ſheriff himſelf, for what he has cauſed to be done by another, ſhall be taken to be done by him.

In attachments, the common return is, the within named defendant is attached by pledges, which, being in the preſent tenſe, is ſo uncertain, that it cannot be ſaid by whom he was attached; yet ſuch returns are held good. But the words which follow in this return make it very certain; for after, I have cauſed to be attached, the ſheriff ſays, whoſe body I have ready, as is within commanded me.

Per curiam. By ſtat. of Glouceſter, the time and place where the fact was committed ought to be expreſſed with certainty, or otherwiſe the appeal ſhall be abated; now, about one o'clock, is a certain and ſufficient averment of the time, being within the compaſs of an hour; and though in the caſe of Morgan v. Egerton, three judges were of a contrary opinion, yet even there, Coke and Williams held that it was certain enough; and their opinion ſeems better warranted by law than that of their brethren, and the authorities ever ſince have been agreeable thereto.

It is true, the fact cannot be alledged to have been done with ſuch a ſeeming uncertainty as, he gave a mortal wound about the breaſt, nor with reſpect to the year or day; but the hour need not be aſcertained with preciſion, becauſe there is more difficulty in aſcertaining the very hour than the day or year, which are longer meaſures of time, and therefore more certain. Lord Coke, however, was of opinion, that the appellant need not give in evidence the preciſe hour, or even the day mentioned in the declaration.

2dly. The charge is direct againſt the defendant, by the word perforated, &c. and would have been more uncertain by the word gave, &c.

3dly. It ſhall be intended, that the pariſh is a vill, unleſs ſhewn to be otherwiſe by the defendant.

4thly. I have cauſed to be attached, as within it is commanded me, is a full anſwer to the writ; the uſual return to a levari facias is, I have cauſed to be levied; ſo in a ſci. fac. againſt K. the ſheriff returned, I have given notice to K. as is directed by the writ, without ſaying the within named K. yet it was held that thoſe words ſupply that omiſſion.

In reſcous, the return was, that the party was reſcued out of the hands of the bailiff; it was objected, that it ſhould have been out of the hands of the ſheriff, unleſs the arreſt was by a bailiff of a franchiſe; yet the return was held good: and ſo it was in this caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 290.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Sutton v. Sparrow.

On an appeal of murder for the death of her huſband; the appeal was carried down to be tried at niſi prius in Yorkſhire laſt aſſiſes, where both parties appeared, but the appellant did not put in the record to try the iſſue; and now the council for the defendant moved, that the appeal being not tried, it was either a nonſuit or a diſcontinuance: but Holt was of opinion that it was neither, but ordered the appellant to pay coſts, for not going on to trial; it was then moved that the appellant might be called in, which was done; her attorney appearing, it was held ſufficient; the appeal being brought by a woman. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 65.

On the day on which an appeal was returnable, a motion was made, that the appellant ſhould be demanded.

Per curiam. There is no writ returned, ſo no appeal pending; and the ſheriff has all this day, while the court ſits, to make a return; but it was agreed, if the writ was returned, the appellees might come and have the appellant demanded, and if he did not come, they ſhould be diſcharged. And a motion for the appellant, that the ſheriff ſhould return his writ, was denied, there being no affidavit that it was delivered to the ſheriff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 349.

On an appeal for murder, the appellee pleaded a former conviction for the ſame offence; and on oyer of the record and conviction being craved, it was moved that the ſame might be entered in theſe words, &c.

Per curiam. We will grant oyer of the record, but it ſhall not be entered in theſe words, becauſe it is a record of the ſame court. On oyer given, ſeveral variances appeared, ſo that the appellant's council objected, that the defendant had failed of his record, on which the appellee prayed to amend the ſame, being all in paper, but the appellant's council objected, that a former conviction was only pleaded for delay, and that it was no bar within the meaning of ſtat. 3. Hen. 7. The court ſaid, that before that ſtatute, a former conviction or acquittal were good pleas in bar of an appeal, and that the ſtatute has only the two pleas of a former acquittal, or attaint, but that a former conviction remains as at common law. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 38.

The appellee was indicted at the ſeſſions of Gaol-delivery for the county of C. for the murder of R. A. and was thereon tried and convicted of manſlaughter. Immediately on ſuch verdict J. A. brother of the ſaid R. put into court a bill of appeal of Murder, and prayed by his counſel that it might be received and filed, and that the defendant might be thereon arraigned. But before the appellee was arraigned, he demanded the benefit of his clergy: and then the bill of appeal was by the appellant's counſel read in open court, and the appellee appeared to it and prayed to be bailed, but refuſed to plead; on which he was remanded to gaol until, &c. This whole proceeding was entered upon the record of the indictment, together with the conviction of manſlaughter, and returned into this court on a certiorari, and the appeal was alſo returned, but on the record thereof no mention was made of any proceedings. The appellee was alſo brought up to the bar by habeas corpus, the return whereof being read, the appellant moved for a copy of it, but the court ſaid, it muſt be firſt filed, for it is not before us till filed, and we can order nothing concerning it till it is properly before us.

After the habeas was filed, the appellee prayed his clergy: to hinder which the appellant took exceptions to the indictment, conviction, and trial.

Per curiam. This is the King's record, in which you cannot aſſign errors; you are a ſtranger; and perhaps the priſoner has releaſed theſe errors to the King; and you have no warrant of attorney filed, and ought not to ſpeak or be heard in the cauſe; ſo the priſoner was not admitted to his clergy then: on which it was moved by his council, that he might be bailed; but the appellant oppoſed it, unleſs he might be permitted to arraign the appeal, or unleſs the appellee would give bail to the appeal; for if he ſhould get at large before the arraignment of their appeal, they could have no proceſs againſt him to bring him in again, and thereby the appeal would be loſt.

Per curiam. An appeal by bill is always againſt a perſon in cuſtody, and he muſt be in cuſtody, or elſe you cannot arraign him.

The council for the proſecution urged, he ought not to be bailed, becauſe he was found guilty of manſlaughter, and no clergy allowed.

But per curiam. Juſtices of oyer and terminer cannot bail in ſuch caſes, but this court may do it at diſcretion. Accordingly he was bailed generally on the Crown-ſide to appear from day to day.

Afterwards the Solicitor General came and prayed judgment for the King againſt the priſoner on the indictment: and the defendant being aſked, what he had to ſay, why judgment ſhould not paſs againſt him, prayed his clergy.

Per curiam. Had the defendant prayed it at the ſeſſion of Gaol-delivery, it could not have been denied him there: but here, we cannot give judgment againſt him without aſking what he has to ſay why judgment ſhould not be given: nor can we deny him here, what could not have been denied him there: on which his clergy was allowed him, and he was tried by the Ordinary of ——— who gave him a pſalm to read, whereof he read the firſt verſe: and then the judge aſked the ordinary, can he read or not? Who anſwered, he can read. Whereon the executioner burnt him without the bar on the brawn of the left hand, and then the appellee prayed to be diſcharged, the court ſaid to the priſoner, you muſt ſtill ſtand upon your recognizance, and, if you would diſcharge the appeal, you muſt ſue out a ſcire facias againſt the appellant, and if he doth not appear, nonſuit him. On which a ſcire facias was taken out returnable at a common day: and no return being made by the ſheriff, the priſoner moved again to be diſcharged, but the court ſaid the priſoner muſt take a new day, and procure a return, unleſs he can get the appellant to appear gratis, as he may if he pleaſes; and accordingly the appellant did appear; when it became a queſtion, whether the appellee ought to be arraigned again on the bill of appeal: but it was the opinion of the court, that the appellant muſt arraign the appellee de novo, i. e. anew, but is not to make a new count; for the arraignment is no commencer but a revivor thereof, like a re-ſummons. See 2 Ro. Rep. 478. On this the appeal was arraigned by the appellant's counſel, who read the count, and the clerk of the crown going to arraign him likewiſe, it was objected by the appellee's counſel, that the appeal being commenced before juſtices of oyer and terminer, and not by them determined, was therefore diſcontinued, and ſo no appeal depending: and that this objection came in proper time now, leſt they might, by the arraignment being completed, be eſtopped.

Per curiam. Though the appeal was without a day, yet it was not diſcontinued, and the return of the certiorari makes a continuance, and is ſufficient to continue it againſt the priſoner.

Then it being queſtioned, on what ſide the appellee ſhould be arraigned; the court ſaid, a civil cauſe is always on the plda ſide, unleſs it comes in by attachment, and ſo it was ruled in this caſe; the next doubt was, how the appellant ought to appear and proſecute: the court was of opinion every appeal muſt be commenced in perſon, but may be proſecuted by attorney, unleſs where wager of battel lies; in ſuch caſe he muſt commence in perſon and proſecute in perſon alſo. But where there is no wager of battel, there it may be proſecuted by attorney, for which there muſt be a ſpecial warrant of attorney filed: and if the plaintiff appear by attorney, when he ought not, &c. this is a diſcontinuance.

On the appellee's moving to be bailed, the court ſaid he muſt be firſt committed to the Marſhal on the appeal, and the bail muſt be body for body: and that the recognizance may be either to the King or to the party, as it was in Primroſe's caſe; yet it was held the better courſe to take it to the King; and ſo it was done in this caſe.

At laſt, on the appellee's prayer, he was allowed to ſtand upon the old recognizance till another day, that he might have time to find bail, and to plead, and every thing to be entered as of this day.

At the time appointed the appellee pleaded the indictment and conviction of manſlaughter at the ſeſſions of gaol-delivery, which was removed into this court, and that no judgment was thereon given; and that at the time of the conviction he was, and yet is a clerk, and then prayed his clergy, and offered to read as a clerk, if the court would have admitted him thereto; and that afterwards, to wit, Monday next after the Morrow of the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary laſt, being demanded by this court why judgment ſhould not be given againſt him, he prayed the benefit of clergy; which being allowed, he read as clerk, and was burnt in the hand, as by the record, &c. with the uſual averments; and as to the felony and murder he pleaded not guilty; to which the plaintiff replied, that he demanded the appellee to plead at the ſeſſions of gaol-delivery, and that he refuſed, and thereon the appellee demurred.

The replication being ill, the queſtion was on the bar, viz. whether a conviction of manſlaughter on an indictment of murder, and clergy allowed, could be a bar to an appeal precedent or concurrent with the indictment, for both being returned of the ſame ſeſſions, which is conſidered but as one day in law, the appeal was concurrent with the indictment, and precedent to the conviction thereon, the appellee's council inſiſted this was a caſe at common law, and not within ſtat. 3 Hen. 7. cap. 1. which extends not to an appeal antecedent, but ſubſequent to the indictment; but the court were of opinion, that a former conviction or acquitial was a good bar to an appeal, for that no man's life ought to be endangered twice for the ſame offence, which would have been the caſe, had not ſtat. 3 Hen. 7. altered it, by which an acquittal or conviction on an indictment is made a bar in an appeal, unleſs clergy be taken thereon. The words of the ſtatute being general, viz. in an appeal, without ſaying brought, or to be brought, and therefore extended to all appeals, ſubſequent, antecedent, or concurrent; as to clergy it has been adjudged, that praying of clergy, is having the ſame within the ſtatute, for by praying his clergy, the priſoner has done all that he could, and the default of the court in not granting it, when they ſhould have done ſo, ought not to turn to his prejudice: here was no regular prayer made for clergy at the gaol-delivery; becauſe the defendant was not called by the court to receive judgment. If the court neglect their duty, it ought not to prejudice the priſoner; and therefore the plea in this caſe was held a good bar to the appeal, but the appellee was not diſcharged till the Michaelmas term following. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 108, 109. 157. Salk. vol. 1. page 61.

By ſtatute 12 Car. 2. cap. 23. certain impoſitions are given to the King upon beer, ale, and other liquors, for the increaſing his Majeſty's revenue; and the forfeitures and offences within that act, which are committed within the limits of the chief office of exciſe in London, are to be determined by the commiſſioners and governors of exciſe appointed by the King, or the major part of them; or in caſe of an appeal, then by the commiſſioners of appeal for regulating that duty.

By ſtat. 15 Car. 2. an additional act was made for the better collecting the ſaid duty, and preventing the abuſes therein, by which it was enacted, that no common brewer ſhall ſet up, or alter, any brewing veſſels, without notice thereof given to the office of exciſe, or ſhall uſe or keep any private or concealed ſtorehouſe, cellar, or other place for the laying any beer, ale, or worts in caſks, other than thoſe uſed in his common brewhouſe, and which are openly diſcovered or known, upon pain to forfeit 50*l.* for every tun, fat, back, copper, and cooler, ſet up, and made uſe of without ſuch notice given as aforeſaid.

By this ſtatute it is enacted, that before an appeal ſhall be made, the appellant is firſt to lay down the ſingle duty of exciſe in the hands of the commiſſioners, and to give ſecurity to the commiſſioners of appeals for the fine and forfeiture which was adjudged againſt him, if the judgment ſhould be affirmed on the appeal, and likewiſe to pay double coſts; but if reverſed, then the informer is to pay double coſts.

The plaintiff's council offered for a prohibition, that by the laws of England, when an iſſue is joined between the parties, it ought to be tried by the evidence of witneſſes viva voce, and not by notes or minutes of their teſtimony. That an information was exhibited againſt him before the commiſſioners of the duty of exciſe, ſtating, that he was a common brewer, and did keep a private ſtorehouſe, without acquainting the ſaid commiſſioners therewith; whereupon he was found guilty, and that he appealed from their ſentence to the commiſſioners of appeals, before whom the informer did produce, as evidence, the minutes taken before the commiſſioners of exciſe, and that the witneſſes who gave evidence there were ſtill alive; which minutes were allowed as evidence by the commiſſioners of appeals, &c. and now the queſtion was, Whether a prohibition ſhould be granted, directed to them not to admit ſuch evidence.

The defendant's council argued, that where a juriſdiction is created by act of parliament, which gives an appeal, that muſt be the laſt reſort, and in that caſe this court may command them to execute their power, but cannot reform their judgment.

Per curiam. The common law does not require that witneſſes ſhall be examined viva voce, but where the trial is by jury.

Theſe depoſitions were taken in court, where the evidence is entered, and when that is done, the party has nothing to do but to appeal from an injury, ſuppoſed to be done by an inferior court; and it is very fair to tranſmit that evidence which was given before them, and upon which they gave their judgment.

It is true, they would have the commiſſioners of appeals try the cauſe de novo, which is contrary to the very nature of an appeal. This ſtatute directs, that the commiſſioners ſhall proceed by the oath of witneſſes, or the confeſſion of the party: and the laſt reſort is in the commiſſioners of appeals, if they do not meddle with what is out of their juriſdiction; which is not the complaint now, but only of the courſe and method of the proceedings.

The caſe of Shotter v. Friend, which was lately adjudged in this court, comes near this caſe; for there a prohibition was granted to the conſiſtory court of the biſhop of Winton, aftet ſentence, becauſe they refuſed to allow the proof of a payment of a legacy by one witneſs: but a prohibition was never yet granted to any eccleſiaſtical court for proceeding according to ſuch evidence as is allowed by the common law; for which reaſons, nothing was done then; but ſoon after, on further conſideration, a prohibition was granted, for that, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 271.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Stout v. Towler.

Spencer Cowper and one Maſon and Rogers having been indicted and acquitted at Hertford aſſizes of the murder of Sarah Stout, an appeal was brought within the year by an infant twelve years of age, next heir to the deceaſed, but not mentioned in the writ to be an infant, and delivered to the under ſheriff Towler's clerk, in the abſence of Towler; the appellant, after teſte, and before the return of the writ, choſe the mother of the deceaſed for his guardian, who was accordingly admitted as ſuch before Chief Juſtice Holt, at his chambers. After the writ was returnable, the mother of the appellant, at the inſtance of Cowper, comes and demands the writ of the ſheriff; who, without any aſſurance that the infant was the appellant, or that the perſon who accompanied him was his mother, delivered the writ to them, which they deſtroyed.

The ſheriff confeſſing the above particulars, and being examined by interrogatories, confeſſing further, that on the receipt of the writ he had ſent a copy thereof to Cowper, the brother of the defendant, and likewiſe notice to the defendant himſelf; it was urged in his behalf, that the infant having no guardian when the writ was ſued out, it was not legally obtained. 2dly, That admitting it was properly ſued out, the appellant had a right to demand it of the ſheriff, who could not refuſe to deliver it, without rendering himſelf liable to an action, in caſe of an acquittal, if he executed the ſame after ſuch denial, and thereby ſubjected the appellant to fine and impriſonment. See 3 Bulſt. 97. 1 Rol. Rep. 240. Latch 19. That the ſheriff in that caſe muſt take notice of the plaintiff at his peril, and the appellant's being an infant does not alter the caſe; for the law, if it enables him to ſue out a writ, will enable him to recall or diſcontinue it; thus a feme covert, i.e. a married woman, levying a fine, may lay the uſes of it. And in 1 Rol. Abr. 288. an infant diſcontinued the appeal, againſt the conſent of his guardian. 3dly, This court was not poſſeſſed of the writ till the return, for till then it was not pending; and therefore what has been done in relation thereto cannot be a contempt of the court, or examinable here. 4thly, The exiſtence of a guardian here is not material, becauſe he has nothing to do till the writ is returned; and till ſuch return made, the ſole right is in the infant.

To which it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that the uſe of a guardian is to purſue the writ when it is before the court, and not, as here, to complain of the officer for not making a return; and that any body might ſue out the writ for the infant, as well as enter on a diſſeiſor of him; and there is nobody in law whoſe writ it is, before the return, but the infant's. 2dly, A perſon of age may come and recal the writ; but the preſent appellant being an infant, it is otherwiſe, and he could not releaſe this ſuit; and if he, at the return of the writ, had been preſent in court, and the guardian not there, he ſhould have been nonſuited, which puts an end to the appeal. Latch 173. And this ſhews that the infant, after admitted by guardian, has nothing more to do with the matter. The court indeed, in their diſcretion, may ſuffer him to diſcharge his guardian, and diſavow the action; but it muſt be done in court, and the court may refuſe to do it if they think fit. And if an infant pending a ſuit in treſpaſs, &c. comes of age, and judgment is given againſt him, he ſhall be fined. The law in this caſe takes care, that the guardian appointed by the court, ſhall ſue for the infant; and it would be ſtrange, if an infant who can only proſecute by his guardian, ſhould be able to diſcontinue his writ; or by himſelf diſcontinue out of court, what he cannot by himſelf continue in court. As to the third objection, though the court had not poſſeſſion of the writ till it was returned, yet certainly they may bring their officer to an account for what writs he has returnable in this court, and puniſh him for any abuſe in relation thereto; and ſuch miſdemeanor is a contempt of the court; and Chief Juſtice Holt cited the caſe of Starkey, ſteward of Windſor court, where it was adjudged that a miſdemeanor in an inferior court is an offence againſt this court; and alſo the caſe of 28 H. 6. 28, where a ſheriff was fined 40 l. for refuſing to make a return; and ſaid, if any ſheriff had ſerved him ſo, he would have laid him by the heels. And obſerved, that in this caſe, it would have been better, if the writ had mentioned that the appellant was an infant, though it was well without it: and returning the writ to an infant and a ſtranger here, is the ſame as if he had delivered it to a ſtranger; if we ſuffer this to go unpuniſhed, the King's ſubjects muſt expect little juſtice, as the ſheriffs will then have it in their power to anticipate our juſtice. And this is not a private matter, but the King is concerned; for though the appellants are nonſuited, yet the King may proceed on it, and if the appellee has been acquitted before, he muſt plead it, for we cannot take notice of it.

Note, In this caſe, the year having expired, a new writ could not be granted of courſe; wherefore the appellants petitioned the Lord Keeper for a new writ, who on conſultation with Treby, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, Sir John Trevor, Maſter of the Rolls, and Juſtice Powell, agreed it was a diſcretionary matter, but not proper to be done. Some, Treby in particular, alledging, that an appeal was an odious revengeful proſecution, and therefore ought not to be encouraged; Holt, with great vehemence declared, that he was ſurpriſed that any Engliſhman ſhould brand an appeal with ſuch a name, that he himſelf conſidered it as a noble proſecution, and a true badge of Engliſh liberty, and referred to the ſtat. of Glouceſt. and the commentary thereon, in 2 Inſtit. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 373.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Wilmott v. Tyler.

The defendant was found guilty of manſlaughter on an indictment for murder; and the court at the Old Bailey being diſſatisfied with the verdict, ſentenced him to eleven months impriſonment, according to the ſtatute 18 El. c. 7. And being thus in the ſheriff's cuſtody, an appeal was brought; to which the ſheriff returned cepi corpus, i. e. I have taken the body, but that he could not bring it without a habeas corpus.

Per curiam. The return is not good; for it ſhould have been, I have taken the body, and have it ready, and then the appellant may have a habeas corpus returnable immediately; and you muſt be well adviſed how you file this return; and the return being amended, a habeas corpus taken, and the appellee brought to the bar; and the appellant called, who appeared; after the appellee's arraignment, the council for him demanded oyer of the writ, and time to plead.

Per curiam. Of right you ought to plead inſtantly; but ſince the defendant has had his clergy before on the indictment, and ſo has a ſpecial matter to plead, you ought to have convenient time to plead; but it muſt be as it were inſtantly, and as of this day, and no imparlance entered; and the defendant was committed to the cuſtody of the marſhal. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12, p. 416.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Colt v. Smith.

On an appeal of murder, for the death of the appellant's brother, a conviction of manſlaughter and clergy allowed, was pleaded in bar, and held to be good; but it was alſo agreed, that if the indictment on which the defendant was convicted was vitious, or if this plea was ill pleaded, the defendant muſt plead to iſſue. And therefore an exception was taken to the indictment, that the breadth of the wound was not ſet forth; but not allowed, becauſe the depth of the wound, and the place where it was, were aſcertained; and the reaſon why ſuch preciſion is requiſite, is, that the wound may appear to be the ſame identical wound, and a mortal wound; and both theſe ends are anſwered by the deſcription thereof as ſet forth in the indictment. The indictment was alſo excepted againſt, for that it ſet forth, that two other perſons were preſent and abetting, without ſaying in what county. But this exception was alſo not allowed; becauſe, however that might be with reſpect to the abettors, it could be no exception for the preſent defendant, who was charged as principal, it being laid in the indictment, where he was.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The benefit of clergy, and burning in the hand, is no judgment. And if a man is convicted of manſlaughter, and no judgment of death given, autrefois convict. i. e. a former conviction, is not a good bar of an appeal, but conviction and benefit of clergy is: and if a perſon is convicted of manſlaughter on an appeal, the king may pardon the burning in the hand, which proves that it is no judgment, or elſe the king could not pardon it. And ſtat. H. 7. has taken away the judgment of delivering over to the clergy, but directs a mark to be put on the party. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 642.

The defendant being brought into court at another day, put in his ſpecial plea, and was remanded: and on a future day the matter was made a concilium in his abſence.

And now it appeared, on oyer of the writ, there were not fifteen days between the teſte and return thereof; ſo the plea was, with a proteſtando that the appellee ought not to anſwer the writ, for want of a ſufficient number of days between it's teſte and return; and in his plea ſets forth the indictment before the grand jury, &c. and a capias thereon at large, directed to the ſheriff of London, by virtue whereof he was taken, &c. that at the gaol-delivery of Newgate, at the Old Bailey Juſtice-hall, in the pariſh of &c. before ſuch and ſuch juſtices of aſſize and their aſſociates of gaol-delivery at Newgate, the indictment was delivered in: and that he the appellee was by the ſheriff of London brought into court, and ſets forth his arraignment, and plea of not guilty; that a jury was then and there impanelled, viz. A. B. &c. that the jury found him guilty of manſlaughter; that he was immediately aſked what he had to ſay, why judgment ſhould not paſs; that he prayed his clergy, which was allowed him; that he then and there read as a clerk, and was burnt in the hand, and confined eleven months by the court; and avers identity of perſon, wound, &c. and ſo concludes, that he ought not to be put to anſwer again. To this a demurrer, and joinder in it.

1ſt It was objected, that it appeared that the judges before whom the trial was, were judges of gaol-delivery of Newgate; and it does not appear the defendant was in the gaol of Newgate.

Anſwer. That objection would deſtroy all proceedings at the gaol-delivery; the indictment is found before juſtices of the peace, and by them ſent to the juſtices of gaol-delivery; and the commiſſion runs for juſtices of gaol-delivery for London, and another for Middleſex. And the general run of precedents is, that the party came in in cuſtody of the ſheriff, to whoſe cuſtody, for the cauſe aforeſaid, he was committed; and ſince he ſays he was in cuſtody of the ſheriff of London, and ſince Newgate is the county gaol both of London and Middleſex, we ſhall intend him in the ſheriff's cuſtody in Newgate, as by law he ought to be: and we muſt intend Newgate to be the county gaol, for that it does not appear to be a franchiſe; and that objection has been frequently over-ruled.

2d Objection. The Old Bailey, where the court is ſaid to have been kept, is ſaid to be in the pariſh &c. in the ward of Farringdon without London, which is nonſenſe.

Anſwer. Ward of Farringdon extra is the name of the ward, and extra does not denote it to be out of the county of London, but it is for oppoſition to Farringdon within the city walls.

3d Objection. Juſtices of gaol-delivery cannot try any indictment but what is found before themſelves.

Anſwer. It was ſo at common law, but altered by the ſtatute.

4th Objection. The verdict, as pleaded, is contradictory; for they ſay he was acquitted of the felony and murder, and afterwards that he was found guilty of manſlaughter, which is felony.

Anſwer. That might have been expreſſed better; but it muſt be underſtood, that they found him not guilty of the felony and murder, as ſet forth, &c. but guilty of felony and manſlaughter.

Then it was inſiſted on, that though the writ were naught for want of the due number of days between the teſte and return, yet now the defendant not having pleaded it in abatement, but taken it by a proteſtando, he had waved the advantage of it.

But to that it was anſwered by the other ſide, that ſince it appeared to the court by the oyer on record to be vicious, they muſt take notice of it officially.

Then it was inſiſted on, that by pleading in chief he had admitted the writ good; for if he had pleaded in abatement, he ſhould not plead in chief, till the matter in abatement were determined; for by pleading in chief at the ſame time, he would have waved the abatement; and for this 7 Ed. 4. 15 a. was ſtrongly inſiſted on. But note; that book only ſays, that where a man pleads ſuch matter in abatement, which denies the appellant's right of appeal, as that he is a baſtard, or that another is his heir, he ought not to plead in chief, becauſe ſuch a plea would admit him capable of ſuing contrary to the plea in abatement; but in that very caſe, held by the ſerjeants at bar, he may plead over in favour of life. And ſo in this caſe the court held was the conſtant courſe for expedition; and the book of 7 Ed. 4. 15. agrees the appellee ought to plead over, where he does not deny the appellant's title to the action, which is not done here.

Objection. This trial was now above a year ago; and they conclude, as appears by the record in the Old Bailey, whereas by an act of parliament all the records of gaol-delivery are to be moved into the Exchequer, into the cuſtody of the treaſurer; and though a record be not local in itſelf, yet if they plead it in a certain place we may traverſe it.

Holt. Suppoſe they do not remove the record, ſhall that turn to the prejudice of another? And that act of which you ſpeak is grown obſolete, for indeed they do for the moſt part remove them into this court; and if you pleaded nul tiel record, a certiorari would go to the judge of gaol-delivery; and if he did not certify a record, then it were for your advantage. And he remembered a caſe of appeal, where the appellee pleaded a falſe addition in abatement; viz. that he was an inhabitant of A. abſque hoc that he was an inhabitant of B. as it was laid, and he was ordered to anſwer over to the charge; and though he might have pleaded a conviction of manſlaughter, and allowance of clergy, yet to lie open to the appeal, he pleaded not guilty. And it came to trial on both iſſues; and as to the iſſue of not guilty, he was found guilty of manſlaughter; and the other found ſpecially, that the appellee was accidentally at B. and not otherwiſe an inhabitant there; and ſo the queſtion was, whether he could be ſaid to be an inhabitant at B.? but that point never received any determination; and the conſtant practice is, to lay him an inhabitant where the fact is committed. And in favour of life he may plead a ſpecial matter in bar, and not guilty too; but for expediton's ſake, if he pleads in abatement, the court will make him plead in bar, beſides; and the praying oyer of the writ, makes it part of the record. And, per curiam, the conviction of manſlaughter and clergy is a good bar of the appeal, without diſpute; but the only doubt is, whether we ſhall give judgment on the writ, or on the plea in bar; for if we give it on the bar, and the writ be inſufficient, our judgment will avail nothing, according to Vaux's caſe, 4 Co. for it will be no more than an acquittal on a bad writ, and then they may arraign him again; and though Vaux's caſe be after verdict, and this on a demurrer, that makes no difference.

And at another day,

Per curiam; we all agree that final judgment ought to be given: for though clearly the writ is bad for want of fifteen days between the teſte and return, ſo as if non eſt inventus, i. e. he is not to be found, had been returned, and the defendant ſued to an outlawry, it had been erroneous; yet ſince he appeared to it, and pleaded in chief, he has loſt that advantage; for the reaſon why there ought to be fifteen days between the teſte and return, appears upon conſideration of the ſtatute concerning articles on paper, c. 5. 2 Inſt. 576. by which ſtatute it is neceſſary there ſhould be fifteen days between the teſte and return of writs; and thus it was anciently, for it was computed a man might travel twenty miles a day, and therefore fifteen day's journey was held ſufficient to come from any part in England; and the reaſon was, that the party might have ſufficient time to appear and prepare an anſwer; and if the proceſs was too ſtreight, it was erroneous; but if the defendant, by appearing and pleading in chief, diſpenſes with this favour, he may, and thereby make the writ good. 9 Ed. 4. 18. 12 Ed. 4. 11. A ſcire facias on a fine wanted the due number of days between the teſte and return, and that writ partakes of the nature of a real action; yet if the party appeared, and pleaded to it, it made it good. If a writ of covenant to levy a fine want fifteen days between the teſte and return, yet if the party appear, and a fine be levied, it is good. This indeed has been ſince queſtioned by ſome judges, but was adjudged to be a ſtated doctrine, and needs no new ſettlement; for if the defendant appears and anſwers, without taking advantage of this fault of the writ, as if it were in aſſize, and he not attached fifteen days before, the fault of the writ is thereby cured.

And therefore the court gave judgment for the defendant, on the plea in bar. The appellant's council, notwithſtanding, moved inſtantly for leave to charge the defendant in cuſtody of the marſhal, the judgment being in bar on a bad writ, according to Vaux's caſe, 4 Co. at which the court was very angry, it being to arraign their judgment to their face, but ſaid they could not help it; and the motion was granted, but the matter was never moved again. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 448.

Per curiam. The original writ of appeal ought to be returned non eſt inventus, i. e. he is not to be found, before a capias is awarded. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 554.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Culliford's Caſe.

He being acquitted on an indictment of murder in the country, and an appeal brought, and time given by the judge of aſſize, till the next aſſize, to plead; during the interval, the appellant brings a habeas corpus and certiorari to remove the record, and body of the appellee up hither, and at a judge's chambers, the parties agreed, ſo that the appellee was let go on bail. The agreement being now perfected, and a releaſe given by the appellant, the appellee appearing on his recognizance, his council moved to have him diſcharged, producing the releaſe, and the appellant's council appeared to conſent to the ſame.

Per curiam. The certiorari and habeas corpus muſt be returned here, and then when we are poſſeſſed of the record, he muſt be arraigned on it, and then plead the releaſe; or if the appellant be not ready at the return to arraign the appellee, and does not appear, the appellee ſhall have a ſcire facias to compel him ſo to do, and if he does not appear at the return of ſuch writ, he ſhall be nonſuited, but the appellee is not thereby diſcharged, for here being a record againſt him, he ſhall be thereon arraigned at the ſuit of the Queen, and then he may plead a former acquittal, for there being a record againſt him, that record muſt be diſcharged. This caſe was compared to that where two indictments are againſt a perſon for one fact, as one by the coroner's inqueſt, and another by the grand jury, and he is arraigned, tried, and acquitted on one of them, yet he is not thereby diſcharged, but ſhall be arraigned anew on the other, to which he may plead the former acquittal on the other, but now the common courſe is to try the party on both the indictments at once. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 219.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Brown v. Dyer.

In this caſe it was obſerved, that in an appeal for murder brought againſt three perſons, and judgment thereon, they may join in a writ of error, though in law they are ſeveral judgments; or they may have ſeveral writs, according to the nature of the caſe; if there are ſeveral judgments on one recognizance, and no joint words, in that caſe it was doubted whether the writ ought to be ſeveral; it was held that the proper way was to have judgment according to the form of the recognizance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 70.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. Young v. Slaughterford.

The defendant was indicted at Kingſton aſſizes for the murder of J. Y. and the jury there acquitted him againſt evidence. Holt, Chief Juſtice, who tried him, remanded him, and ordered an appeal to be brought againſt him, and the appellee being brought up by habeas corpus, and committed to the Marſhalſea, an appeal was accordingly brought, and being ſet to the bar, and arraigned, he pleaded in abatement, that the vill in which he was reſident, was Shauford, abſque hoc that it was Shalford.

The appellant's council ſaid, that the appellee's plea was not to be received without an affidavit ſince the act for the amendment of the law, it being a dilatory plea. At firſt the court ſeemed to think that the plea could not be received without an affidavit, criminal cauſes not being excepted out of the act, (the exception of appeals in acts relating only to the preceding clauſe) but the appellee being brought up the next day, the court was of opinion, that the plea might be read without an affidavit, becauſe though this plea for the moſt part is dilatory, yet it is not ſo in this caſe, for the appellee muſt plead over, and iſſue joined on that, as well as on not guilty, and both may be tried at the ſame time; and accordingly the plea was received and read by his council, and both parties immediately joined iſſue. The court ordered that a venire ſhould be iſſued out, bearing teſte the firſt day of term, and that the appellee ſhould be tried at the bar, on which the appellee was remanded to the cuſtody of the Marſhal, becauſe none would be bound body for body for him, the court ſaid there muſt be four bail in an appeal of murder. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 217.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. Smith v. Bowen.

The defendant was indicted for the murder of one Smith, and found guilty, but obtained the Queen's pardon; the appellant, an infant, as brother and heir to the deceaſed, lodges an appeal in his proper perſon againſt the ſaid defendant before the juſtices of oyer and terminer, and goal delivery; which being removed by certiorari into this court, the appellant's council moved that he might be admitted by guardian in this court, which they refuſed, as coming too late, for it ought to have been commenced by guardian at firſt, and they ſhould have moved to have had him admitted by guardian in this court. The court ſaid, that if the defendant pleads this in abatement, the appellant might confeſs his plea, and commence a new appeal by bill, for a nonſuit is peremptory, but an abatement is not.

The appellee being brought to the bar, and the appellant being in court, his council would have abated the writ, and brought a new appeal by bill, but the court would not let them.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that this was not like the caſe of Watts v. Brains, 3 Co. Entries, for there the writ was void.

The appellee being again brought to the bar, his council refuſed to plead the infancy in abatement, intending to take advantage of it after trial; the court ſaid, that ſince they would not plead the infancy in abatement, the court would abate the firſt appeal officially, and ordered it to be entered, that the ſaid appellant being in court, and it appearing on inſpection of him, that he was under age, therefore, the court officially does abate the appeal.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that if the appellant had not been in court then, there muſt have been a writ to have brought him there for inſpection; on which the appellant brought another appeal by bill, and declared againſt him in cuſtody of the Marſhal, and the appellee being arraigned, immediately demurred to the appeal, and pleaded not guilty; the court ordered the abatement of the firſt appeal to be entered as the firſt day of the term, and that the pleading to the ſecond, ſhould be entered immediately, that the demurrer might be firſt determined, and for that end made it a conſilium to be argued in Trinity term following. See page 64 of this work under head Amendment.

The appellee prayed to be admitted to bail, which the court ſaid they could do, on iſſue joined, demurrer, or where they take time to conſider of a matter, if he could find four ſufficient bail, who would be bound body for body, but thoſe offered not being approved of, he was remanded to the Marſhalſea. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 216.

Eaſter, 11 Ann. Widdrington v. Charleton.

In an appeal brought by the wife for the murder of her huſband, on a demurrer, theſe two points were inſiſted on;

1ſt. That in the writ, the t in the word appellant, abbreviated, was turned up, and therefore the writ was not ſenſe; and in the eye of the law no writ at all. See 3 Cro. 182. 467. Michaelmas, 1693. Ball v. Roe.

2d. Exception was, That there was a diſcontinuance; for in the exigent, the words, that having murdered her huſband, therefore ſhe appeals againſt him, were omitted, and therefore it did not appear that this exigent was ſued out in this action.

To the firſt objection it was anſwered, that the turning up of the t being no known abbreviation, ſhould go for nothing.

To the ſecond, it was obſerved, that this was an exigent ſued out between the ſame parties, that the capias was; and that there is no variance between the capias and exigent, though there is ſomething more contained in the capias than what is in the exigent. On prayer of Oyer of the meſne proceſs in this action, this exigent was recited, and thereby admitted to be the exigent in this ſuit.

It was further argued, that this diſcontinuance, if it was one, was aided by appearance, and that the difference is, that appearance and pleading over aids a diſcontinuance, but that appearance and demurrer is not law. Stat. 9 H. 5. fol. 2. 2 Cro. 284. *Roll. Trinity, 4 Geo. The Inhabitants of Almonſbury v. the Inhabitants of Hodsfield in Yorkſhire.

An appeal was made to ſeſſions againſt an order of removal, and not ſaid by whom the appeal was made: it was objected, that this was a limited juriſdiction, and that it ought to appear by whom the appeal was made; yet there being ſeveral precedents conformable thereto, though four to one in oppoſition to it, and not to overturn a great number of orders, (the clerk reporting that moſt of thoſe from the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire were ſo;) for this reaſon only, the court confirmed the order. Vide Forteſcue, p. 301.

The council for the inhabitants of Norton excepted to an order of ſeſſions, made in this matter, for diſcharging an order of removal, becauſe the juſtices order was dated the 21ſt June, and the ſeſſions order was not till Michaelmas ſeſſions following, ſo that midſummer ſeſſions intervened.

It was anſwered, that by the expreſs words of the ſtatute, the appeal is to be the next ſeſſions after the parties find themſelves aggrieved, which is not till the removal, and for ought appears in this caſe, Michaelmas ſeſſions might be the next ſeſſions after the grievance, and ſo held in the caſe of the pariſh of Milbrook v. St. John's in Southampton, Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 1. in this court.

The court agreed to this determination, and the order of ſeſſions was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 831.

Hilary, 3 Geo 2. Pyle v. Grant.

In an appeal of murder, it appeared the defendant was convicted on the indictment, but pardoned on the report of the judge; and after iſſue joined on the appeal, he moved the court to be bailed, which was refuſed, the preſumption being againſt him contrary to Bambridge's caſe. A trial at bar being ordered in this caſe, the appellant having taken no ſtep to bring it on, on the day appointed moved to put it off to a further day, on which the court took the appellee's own recognizance in 500 l. to appear the laſt day of the term; and ordered that nothing ſhould be done as previous to the day appointed for the trial, that if there was a diſcontinuance, the appellee might take advantage of it: and on the laſt day of the term the appellee was diſcharged, the appellant not appearing. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 858.

The defendant Bambridge having been proſecuted on the report of the committee of the Houſe of Commons, for the murder of the plaintiff's huſband, who was a priſoner in the Fleet, under the cuſtody of Bambridge, the warden; and having on the trial been honourably acquitted, on the proſecutor's own evidence, was followed with an appeal, to which Corbet, who on croſs examination appeared to be a material witneſs for Bambridge, was now alſo made an appellee, and the writ running, becauſe Mary Caſtel, widow, has made you ſecure to proſecute her plaint by Thomas Wagſtaff, and Foſton Stracy, contrary to the uſual form, which is, if the appellant ſhall have made us, i. e. the King, ſecure. Application was made to the Lord Chancellor King to ſuperſede this writ on affidavits, that the appellees were both in cuſtody on it, but that no ſecurity had been given, and the writ ſetting forth the ſame as an act done before the emanation of it, the ſheriff had not taken any, as he would have done, if it had been put by way of condition, if ſhe ſhall have made. It was argued, that the ſtatute of Weſtminſter, 2 cap. 12. giving the appellee a remedy againſt the appellant, her pledges and abettors, it was not a matter of form, but ſecurity ſhould be entered into by perſons of ability. To which the Attorney General anſwered, that it was ſufficient if there were pledges at any time before judgment. Sir T. Jones, 154. 9 Co. Dr. Huſſey's caſe, Cro. Jac. 413.

In reply it was obſerved, that at that rate the appellee would never have any remedy againſt the pledges; for if he was convicted he would be entitled to none, and if he was acquitted, the appellant would never pray judgment, and it would be an artifice to elude the law; but notwithſtanding, the Chancellor would do nothing in it, but ſaid, if the, becauſe ſhe ſhall have made you, were wrong, the defendant might have advantage of it, and therefore refuſed to make any order.

In Michaelmas term following, the writ being returned, and the appellees brought up by habeas corpus, and turned over to the King's Bench, it was here moved to have the proceedings ſet aſide on the ſame affidavit of there being no pledges, and the court were of opinion it was a very good objection, and a foundation to ſuperſede the writ, but ſaid it was not in their power ſo to do, for they muſt take the writ as they found it, and not hear affidavits to contradict the ſuggeſtions of the writ, and therefore the having ſecurity being recited as an act done, they muſt take it to be ſo, and could not relieve.

On this the appeal was arraigned, ſtating, that the appellant's huſband was a priſoner in the Fleet, under the cuſtody of Bambridge, the warden, who made an aſſault on him, and, contrary to his will, carried him to the houſe of Corbet, a victualling-houſe within the Fleet, and there impriſoned him, where one White then lay ill of the ſmall-pox, which Caſtell had never had; that the appellees had notice of this, and were deſired to ſuffer him to remove to another place in the priſon, which they refuſed, and afterwards Caſtell fell ill of that diſtemper, and died in Corbet's houſe, whereby the count concludes the appellees were guilty of his murder.

Without ſtaying for a copy of the declaration, the appellees immediately pleaded not guilty, and iſſue was joined.

The appellees council moved that they might be bailed; and on debate, the court were of opinion to bail Bambridge, and not Corbet: the reaſons they offered were, that Bambridge had been acquitted, which was a ſtrong preſumption of innocence; and the judge before whom he was tried had certified that he was very well ſatisfied with the verdict: they ſaid they would bail in all caſes after an acquittal on the indictment, unleſs the judge was diſſatisfied with the acquittal, and it was for that reaſon they denied bail in Slaughterford's caſe.

As to Corbet, there was no foundation to bail, for they denied that it was of courſe to bail in an appeal: ſo Bambridge was bailed by two perſons, body for body, who juſtified in 1000*l*. each. In this caſe the court agreed, that in an appeal by writ on the civil ſide, two bail only are required, but had it been on the crown ſide by certiorari, there muſt have been four.

The appellees council moved the court to fix a time for the trial, having agreed to take ſhort notice; but it being by original, there was a neceſſity to have fifteen days between the teſte and the return of the diſtringas, and they could not be tried on the venire, becauſe being in London, there could be no trial at bar, (the citizens not being to be brought out of the city) and as it muſt be tried at niſi prius, there muſt be a diſtringas.

Towards the end of the term, the appellees moved to be diſcharged, there being a diſcontinuance, for that no venire had been taken out, and in appeals, which are a recent proſecution, every delay is a diſcontinuance, in ſupport of which, Cro. Jac. 283. & Yelv. 204, were cited.

On conſideration, the court held that it was not neceſſary to take out the writ, and make it returnable ſooner than it might be, though it muſt bear teſte the day that iſſue is joined, and then the appellant took out a venire, teſted 23 October, and returnable 25 November, which the court conſidered as an affected delay, and therefore admitted the other appellee, Corbet, to bail. They obſerved, that the cauſe might have been tried the ſittings after the term, and then on acquittal, he muſt have been immediately diſcharged by the judge of niſi prius, according to ſtat. 14 Hen. 5. cap. 1.

The appellees being out on bail, appeared on the ſeveral continuance days, according to their recognizance, and the appellant alſo appeared. The beginning of the term the appellees moved for a rule on Mr. T. the officer, who keeps the records at the Old Bailey, to attend the trial with the record of Bambridge's acquittal; (he not being allowed a copy of it) but the court refuſed to make a rule, and ſaid if the record was brought, it would be no evidence.

On the 26th of January, the trial came on at Guildhall before the Chief Juſtice, and in the courſe of the evidence, the appellant's council called a quaker, and inſiſted that this is a civil ſuit, in which he might be a witneſs, but the judge ſaid it was to this purpoſe a criminal proceeding, and therefore he could not be a witneſs; after a long examination of witneſſes, the judge directed the jury, that if they believed Caſtell was ſo carried to Corbet's againſt his conſent, and was there detained, and that Bambridge and Corbet knew the ſmall pox was there, and that Caſtell had not had it, but feared it, and deſired to be removed, or not be carried there at all, that he caught the ſmall pox of White, and died thereof, then the appellees would be guilty of murder, but if any of theſe facts were not proved to the ſatisfaction of the jury, they ought to be acquitted, and there being no pretence to charge either of the appellees, the jury brought them in not guilty.

On the acquittal the appellees moved the court for leave to proceed againſt the appellant, (who was then in court) on ſtat. Weſtminſter 2. cap. 12. but the judge ſaid he was only to try the iſſue, and that the application was proper above, or by writ of conſpiracy, and all he could do was to record the verdict.

In February following, the appellees appeared in court, and having given a rule on the poſtea, which they then produced, and nobody appearing to ſay any thing againſt them, they were diſcharged. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 854. Fitz-Gibbons page 94.

In Eaſter term, 10 Geo. 2. A rule was made by this court to ſhew cauſe why the order of ſeſſions, and alſo the original order made in this cauſe for quaſhing the original order made in the ſame cauſe, for removing W. C. his wife, and E. and A. their children, from Hedingham Sible to Finchingfield, (both in Eſſex) ſhould not be quaſhed, and why the original order ſhould not be affirmed.

In this preſent term, the original order made in this cauſe for the removal of the above pauper, his wife and children, was quaſhed, and ſo was the certiorari, as to the four orders firſt mentioned in the return to it.

The ſame day a certiorari was granted to remove all orders made by the juſtices for Eſſex, between the inhabitants of Finchingfield, and the inhabitants of Hedingham Sible, concerning the ſettlement of the ſaid pauper and his family.

In this caſe there was five orders.

The court were of opinion, that the four firſt of theſe orders were not properly deſcribed in the certiorari, (there being a variance in the words, his and their children.) They ſaid the fifth order was well removed, being rightly deſcribed, but the ſame was given up as a bad one, having been made while the matter was depending before the ſeſſions.

The court therefore quaſhed this laſt order, which was well removed, and quaſhed the certiorari, as to the four other orders which were not well removed by ſuch certiorari, for want of the paupers being properly deſcribed therein.

This matter coming again before the court on the ſecond certiorari; the council for Hedingham Sible, objected, that the third of the ſaid orders not having continued the appeal by a proper adjournment, but only referring it to the judges of aſſize, without reſerving the determination to themſelves after ſuch opinion, that therefore it was a diſcontinuance of the appeal, and the ſeſſions could not take the matter up again, conſequently the fourth order diſcharging the original order, was bad.

The council for Finchingfield did not attempt to ſupport the matter.

Lee. Chief Juſtice ſaid, the former order was only a conditional reference to the judge of aſſize, without any continuance or adjournment, and that therefore the latter could not be valid.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions (being the fourth of the five orders) be quaſhed, and let the original order (for removing the pauper and family from Headingham Sible to Finchingfield) be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. page 114.

Hilary, 10 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Llanrhydd.

Two juſtices for the county of Denbigh, removed a pauper and her three children, from Llanrhydd to Denbigh. On an appeal to the ſeſſions by Denbigh, the order of the ſeſſions was quaſhed, but the inhabitants of Llanrhydd not being ſatisfied with the opinion of the court, moved to have the facts found ſpecially, which accordingly was agreed to be as follows:

That J. M. Eſq; and J. J. Clerk, removed the above paupers by an order properly ſigned, dated 28 May, 1768, from the ſaid pariſh of Llanrhydd to Ruthen, who were accordingly delivered to the officers of Ruthen, who maintained them for a while, and for ſome time after at the joint expence of both pariſhes: and notice of appeal to the ſaid order being ſerved on the officers of Llanrhydd, by the officers of Ruthen, on the morning of the quarter ſeſſions, previous to the filing of the ſaid appeal, the officers of Llanrhydd conſented to take the paupers back, without troubling the pariſhioners of Ruthen to appeal againſt ſuch order: whereon the ſaid pariſhioners of Llanrhydd, by order ſigned by J. Y. and D. P. clerks, dated 11th of Jan. 1769, removed the ſaid paupers to the pariſh of Denbigh, in the ſaid county; which pariſh appealed againſt the order, and on ſuch appeal, the ſettlement of the ſaid paupers was proved to be at Denbigh. But it appearing in evidence on behalf of Denbigh, that the ſaid order of J. M. and J. J. removing them to Ruthen, as aforeſaid, had not been appealed againſt, the order of removal from Llanrhydd to Denbigh was quaſhed.

On motion to quaſh this order of ſeſſions, and a rule obtained to ſhew cauſe, it was objected, that though an order of removal ſubmitted to, and not appealed from, is concluſive on the non-appealing pariſh, yet this general maxim is to be underſtood to relate only to a ſubſiſting order, and not to a deſerted one.

The council on behalf of the pariſh of Denbigh replied, it was not in the power of private perſons to put an end to the order for removing theſe paupers to Ruthen, whilſt an appeal was thus ſubſiſting, and they being removed to Ruthen by the order, and Ruthen not having appealed, conſequently Ruthen is concluded to diſpute their belonging to that pariſh. The court being of opinion againſt him on this point, he then objected to the original order for the laſt removal, for that the county is only mentioned in the margin, and not in the body of it, and cited Raym. vol. 2. Mich. 8 Ann, anonymous, where an order of two juſtices was quaſhed on this exception.

Lord Mansfield obſerved, the caſe cited goes on the notion of an order's being like an indictment; but that an order of removal is not like an indictment. And Mr. Juſtice Aſton ſaid, that he thought the caſe cited had been over-ruled.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of ſeſſions to remove a pauper, his wife, and family, from the townſhip of Kirkby Stephen, com. Weſtmoreland, to the townſhip of Wharton, in the ſame county, grounded on an original order of removal from Newport to Kirkby Stephen, ſhould not be quaſhed: after hearing council on both ſides,

Lord Mansfield ſaid, the original order made for the removal from Newport to the pariſh of Kirkby Stephen muſt mean the townſhip of Kirkby Stephen; the townſhip was as a pariſh for this purpoſe of a removal to it, the poor within the pariſh not being maintained by the whole pariſh, but by the particular townſhip to which they reſpectively belong. The townſhip of Kirkby Stephen ought in this caſe to have appealed. They could not get rid of this order but by appealing, and if they had appealed, the truth might have appeared; and when the facts had appeared to the juſtices, on the whole truth being diſcloſed, the pauper might in the end of the inquiry have been ſent to Wharton.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged, and the order of ſeſſions affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 3. p. 664.

Appearance.

Michaelmas, 3 W. & M. Chew v. Briggs.

Held by Chief Juſtice Holt, that an appearance does not help a diſcontinuance, as it does a miſcontinuance; and it is a queſtion, whether diſcontinuance in proceſs be helped by the ſtatute of jeoſails, though diſcontinuance in pleading may be helped. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 8.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. Colethirſt v. Wiſeman. Error.

In Error brought of a judgment on an action on the caſe in the inferior court of Hull; the error aſſigned was, that a capias was the firſt proceſs; and Yelv. 158. was cited in ſupport of the objection.

Per curiam. That caſe is not law, and it has often been ruled ſo; for it is but a miſconveyance of proceſs, and helped by appearance. The judgment was accordingly affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 47.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Wilſon v. Law.

On an appeal for murder, Eyre, Juſtice, was of opinion, that if the return of an appeal had been ill, the appearance of the appellee would not aid the ſame; for appearance aids only when the party comes in and pleads to iſſue; but when the party comes and demurs on the proceſs, appearance will not aid any defect in the ſame; and cited the following authorities in ſupport thereof, 1 Roll. Abr. 780. 1 Bulſtr. 142. 2 Cro. 284. Bradley v. Banks. Yelv. 204. To this the other judges gave no opinion. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 21.

In an action on the caſe for ſtopping the plaintiff's light; Chief Juſtice Holt held, that the filing a writ of habeas corpus is not an appearance, but that a procedendo may iſſue notwithſtanding; but if bail, either common or ſpecial, be put in, then no procedendo to iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 215.

An order of ſeſſions being made for aſſeſſing to repair a bridge purſuant to a private act of parliament; the order was removed by certiorari into this court.

Chief Juſtice Holt declared, that by the antient rule of the court, there could not be a voluntary appearance without a writ was taken out; but even now, there muſt be a writ taken out before or after; for without a writ the parties have no day in court, without which they cannot appear; and that he ſaw no difference between a voluntary appearance, and an appearance on a cepi corpus, i. e. an arreſt; for ſurely the plaintiff ought not to be put in a worſe condition for his good nature in not arreſting the defendant. If a writ is returnable on The Morrow of All Souls, and the defendant voluntary appears to it, it will be tne ſame as if he appeared on an arreſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 404.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, and ſaid, that whenſoever a writ is awarded returnable the day of the return, it is always a day to both parties to appear; and though the writ be returned, not ſerved, yet the defendant may appear to prevent any ill conſequences. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 616.

Foſter being indicted for a battery; after appearance, made the affair up with the proſecutor, who agreed to ſtop all proceedings on the indictment; but notwithſtanding, the defendant not appearing the next term, was ſued to an outlawry.

Per Chief Juſtice Holt. The only ſure way had been, on agreement with the proſecutor, to have ſubmitted to a fine, which in that caſe would have been moderate, or to have got a non pros entered. And an appearance to an indictment differs from an appearance in a civil action, where once an appearance, it is an appearance to the end of the ſuit; but an appearance to an indictment is of courſe only of that term, and then, if it is not proſecuted, the defendant is out of court the next term, and may be outlawed; and the outlawry is a conviction while it ſtands unreverſed: and the defendant's only way now is, to ſubmit to a fine on the outlawry. He might have got an attorney to appear for him on the new act of parliament. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 448.

His lordſhip ſtood on his recognizance for his keeping the peace towards his lady; and a motion was made to have his attendance diſcharged in regard of his ill ſtate of health, his lordſhip ſpitting blood, and being adviſed to go abroad for his health by his phyſicians.

Per curiam. By the courſe of the court, no perſon is ever diſcharged ſo till the laſt day of term, unleſs at the requeſt of the Attorney General; though it may abſolutely be done, his attendance being only from day to day: the court therefore ordered his lordſhip's council to produce affidavits of the truth of what was offered, and to move the matter again on another day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 448.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. The King v. ———

The defendant being indicted for uſing a trade three months, from the day of to the day of not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip to that trade, &c. on not guilty pleaded, was found guilty for one month, and acquitted of the reſt. The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was uncertain for which of the three months the defendant was found guilty; and therefore he could not plead this conviction in bar of another indictment for the ſame offence.

Per curiam. The defendant may plead a conviction for one month, abſque hoc, that he was guilty in any other month.

On a motion to ſet aſide a judgment in treſpaſs, after judgment by default, and a writ of enquiry executed, becauſe the Eſſoign day of Eaſter term was Sunday, which not being a court day, it was held on the Monday, and the declaration in this caſe was delivered on the Sunday, which could not be by ſtat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 7. which reſtrains proceſs in law from being executed on Sundays. If this doctrine ſhould be allowed, the plaintiff would gain a term by it, where the day ought to be the Eſſoign day of Eaſter term, and therefore the declaration ought to be of the ſame term; but the declaration being delivered before the Eſſoign day, which was held on Monday, it will be a declaration of Hilary term.

The plaintiff's council urged, that the delivery of a declaration was not ſervice of proceſs; and that in the caſe, Alleſon v. Brookbank, Hilary, 11 W. 2. it had been held, that the ſervice of a citation on a Sunday was good, and not reſtrained by ſtat. Charles 2. which was allowed by Holt, Chief Juſtice, who ſeemed to think that the delivery of a declaration on the Sunday was ill, becauſe the ſtatute intended to reſtrain all ſorts of legal proceedings: but Powys' and Gould, Juſtices, were of a different opinion, and ſaid, ſuch delivery was but as it were a notice; and as a letter, and not a proceſs: yet, it appearing to the court, that the defendant had appeared, and that a writ of inquiry had been executed, they would not intermeddle; and ſaid, that had made all good: and therefore the judgment was ordered to remain. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 705.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, affirmed, that formerly, when a writ iſſued out of this court it was entered on a roll, ſo that though the officer did not return the writ at the day, yet the defendant might appear at the day, and ſhould be received ſo to do; either to ſave a penalty, or his inheritance; and the practice was the ſame in the Common Pleas; they entered the writ on a roll, by way of recital, viz. Dominus Rex miſit breve ſuum clauſum in hæc verba, &c. i. e. our Lord the King ſent his writ cloſed in theſe words, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 64.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Fanſhaw v. Morriſon. Error.

On a writ of error of a judgment in the C. B. on a ſci. fa. on a recognizance, the recognizance was entered into, on bringing a writ of error on a judgment in the Common Pleas, in an action of debt; and was conditioned that if the plaintiff in error ſhould be nonſuited, or the writ of error ſhould be diſcontinued through his default, or the judgment ſhould be affirmed, that then the plaintiff ſhould pay, &c. The defendant pleads (after oyer of the ſci. fa. and the conviction) that the plaintiff in the writ of error did proſecute the writ of error with effect, and did aſſign errors, and that the plea on the abovesaid writ of error is as yet pending undetermined.

The plaintiff replied, that the judgment was affirmed, abſque hoc, that the plea is ſtill pending undetermined. And to this there was a demurrer, and judgment was given for the plaintiff below.

This caſe was formerly debated on an exception to the manner of aſſigning the breach in the ſci. fa. and that exception was allowed, but on the plaintiff's applying to the C. B. that default was amended, and an exception was taken to the traverſe in the replication, that it was a traverſe of a matter of record, which was ill, becauſe a matter of record could not be put in iſſue to be tried by the country; whereas he ought to have replied, that the judgment was affirmed, as appears by the record. This exception was taken laſt term, and the cauſe adjourned over thereon. And on a future day, another exception was made, that the defendant appeared contrary to the return of the writ, both the ſci. fa's. being returned nihil.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, that the books held that two nihils returned, amounted to a ſci. feci, and that on two nihils returned the plaintiff would have judgment.

Powell, Juſtice ſaid, that the defendant's appearance was well, becauſe the ſci. fa's. were entered on the roll, and the defendant had a day by the roll. So that exception was over-ruled. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1138.

Hilary, 12 Ann. The Queen v. Green.

On a motion to quaſh a conviction on the ſtatute 8 Anne, againſt a baker for ſelling of bread; among others, an exception was taken to the conviction, that the ſame ſets forth, that being duly ſummoned, and not appearing, they proceeded, &c. whereas natural juſtice requires that the defendant ſhould have had a reaſonable time allowed him for the making his defence.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, this was a material objection, it not being ſaid that he was ſummoned to appear at a certain time, or any time, or when the ſummons was made.

Powys, junior. It is to be conſidered, whether when it is ſaid that he was duly ſummoned, the word debite, i. e. duly, does not import all reaſonable circumſtances relating to that ſummons, and I think it does; and of this opinion was the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 213.

Trinity, 13 Ann. The Queen v. Simpſon.

On a conviction for deer-ſtealing before juſtices, on the ſtatute 3 & 4. W. & M. cap. 10. the following exceptions were taken:

1ſt. That no certain time was laid when the offence was committed, but only that between ſuch a time and ſuch a time, the defendant did ſteal one deer.

2dly. That the conviction was behind his back, and without hearing him; that he was ſummoned, but the act gives no power to proceed by way of ſummons.

3dly. That the ſummons is inſufficient, ſuppoſing the juſtices could proceed in that way; the defendant is ſummoned to appear at Bolton, which muſt be underſtood to be a vill, and then how ſhould he know the houſe where the juſtices will be.

Then it is to appear on ſuch a day, but the time of the day is not mentioned; perhaps the juſtices might come at five o'clock in the morning, and the defendant not being there at that time, was convicted, though he came afterwards.

4thly. Though in the information the offence may be ſaid to be committed between ſuch a time and ſuch a time, yet the proof muſt be certain; the oath taken is no more than that the defendant did within ſuch a time and ſuch a time, ſteal one deer, ſo that the ſame is left as uncertain on the evidence as on the information, and then it does not appear that the evidence relates to the ſame deer, it ſhould have been, the deer in the aforeſaid information mentioned.

To the firſt exception, it was obſerved, that the ſame had been taken in the caſe of King v. Chandler, and there over-ruled; and that it was the conſtant courſe of informations in the court of Exchequer to ſet forth the time, as in this information.

To the ſecond exception, it was anſwered, that no way of proceeding was directed by the ſtatute, and therefore the ſtatute being ſilent as to the mode of proceeding, it muſt be left to the diſcretion of the juſtices; that the way of proceeding by ſummons was agreeable to reaſon and juſtice, it giving the defendant time and opportunity to make his defence. The want of ſummons has been objected in caſes on ſtatutes, that did not direct the proceedings to be by way of ſummons. See the Queen v. Peach, Michaelmas, 3 Ann. This caſe was enforced by precedents where under ſtatute 3 & 4 W. & M. the proceedings had been by ſummons.

To the third exception, it was anſwered, that this exception ſuppoſes very great abſurdities, as that the defendant cannot find the juſtice out, and that the juſtice ſhould come at an unreaſonable hour, &c.

2dly. That the return which muſt be taken as true is an anſwer to the exception; for the return is, that the defendant duly ſummoned to appear at this time and this place, did not appear; ſo that at whatever time or place he was convicted, it muſt be now preſumed that he was ſummoned to appear at that time and place.

To the fourth exception, it was anſwered, that it was next to impoſſible for the witneſs to be able to ſwear to the very day, and not to be intended that there were more deer ſtolen than one.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It is more agreeable to the courſe of the common law, that the defendant ſhould be ſummoned; there is no ground in the exception as to the evidence, we muſt take time to look into precedents.

Eyre, Juſtice. As to the exception, that the time ſhould have been ſtated with more certainty than that between ſuch a time and ſuch a time, &c. that is ſufficiently ſettled in the caſe of King v. Chandler.

It is true, that the at this time and this place, cannot be confined to a particular hour or place, but then, we cannot ſuppoſe but that a magiſtrate will adminiſter juſtice with integrity; and it is the duty of the party ſummoned to attend his time and place.

In informations and indictments, no judgment can be given unleſs the defendant appears. The defendant, if he does not appear, may have judgment of outlawry paſs againſt him for his contempt. If the judges of ſuperior courts cannot proceed to judgment, unleſs the defendant appears, a fortiori, juſtices of the peace cannot.

Some ſtatutes give juſtices of the peace a power of proceeding on default, but the exception proves the rule in the thing not excepted; it ſeems therefore that the defendant ſhould have been apprehended by a warrant.

Powys, junior. The deſign of the ſtatute is to give a ſummary way of proceeding: the defendant has been ſummoned, which is inſufficient; it would be abſurd to ſuppoſe that he ſhould take advantage of his own contempt.

In Michaelmas term, 3 Geo. 1. this caſe came again before the court, on a queſtion reſerved, viz. Whether on the ſtatute of 3 & 4 W. & M. about deer-ſtealing, the juſtice of peace might convict the offender in his abſence on his default to appear, being duly ſummoned? Or whether the juſtices ought not, by iſſuing out their warrant for apprehending the party, to have compelled him to appear? after hearing council on both ſides, the Judges gave their opinion.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. A court may, perhaps, in prudence, not care to give judgment in the abſence of the party, but I ſee no reaſon but that it may be done on the ground of Mawgridge's caſe.

An execution cannot be awarded but in the preſence of the party; and the reaſon is, that there may poſſibly be a miſtake of the perſon; ſomething may have happened ſubſequent to the judgment why execution ſhould not be awarded, which, if ſo, it is but reaſonable the party ſhould have an opportunity to inſiſt on it; in this caſe had the defendant appeared judgment might have been given in his abſence..

I am of opinion that the ſummons muſt be perſonal, and therefore it is as eaſy to take the party as to ſummon him.

The ſtatute plainly ſuppoſes, that the juſtices have a power to apprehend the party, or the clauſe in the act would be a nugatory clauſe, which ſuppoſes the offender may be apprehended. The expreſſion in the act of detaining does likewiſe ſuppoſe the party preſent, or otherwiſe the ſtatute would have run thus, in caſe he be preſent.

It is a general maxim, that a ſtatute ought to be interpreted by the rules of common law; and ſince the preſent caſe is in nature of a treſpaſs, for which a capias, by the common law, lies, and the juſtices by the ſtatute have a power to apprehend him: I think at preſent that the juſtices ought to have the party before them.

Pratt, Juſtice. If a juſtice of peace has a power of iſſuing out his warrant for bringing the party before him, it muſt be given him either by the expreſs words of the ſtatute, or as a power incident to the juriſdiction the act inveſts him with; if the latter, he muſt have the ſame power allowed him in all ſummary proceedings.

If a ſummons be ſufficient, I know not why the ſame ſhould not do here, by leaving the ſame at the uſual place of his abode, where the party cannot be found, and in that caſe a perſon may be ſummoned when he cannot be taken. The court adjourned this matter.

In Hilary term, 3 Geo. 1. this matter came on again for the opinion of the court, when the convictions removed here by certiorari were adjudged good. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 248. 341. 379.

Michaelma s, 3 Geo. The Queen v. Simpſon.

In this caſe, Forteſcue, Solicitor General, cited Bagge's caſe 11 Co. 93. where a perſon may be disfranchiſed, and loſe his freehold, if when duly ſummoned, he will not appear, and ſaid the conſtant practice was to proceed to disfranchiſement in the abſence of the party, if he being duly ſummoned, refuſes to appear.

In Glide's caſe, Trin. 4 W. & M. it was determined, that if the party lives out of the town, he need not be ſummoned, becauſe it was his duty to attend. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 343.

Hilary, 6 Geo. The King v. Johnſon.

The defendant being convicted on ſtat. 5 Ann. c. 14. for keeping a gun, not being qualified; an exception was taken, that in this caſe there was not a reaſonable ſummons, for it was made on the 5th of October, to appear the ſame day, which might be impoſſible, on account of diſtance, the ſummons being ſerved late, and his witneſſes might not be got together on ſo ſhort a warning, then it is to appear at the pariſh aforeſaid, whereas there are two pariſhes mentioned before, ſo the man might have gone to one, whilſt they were convicting him at the other. Salk. 181.

The council for the proſecution replied, The defendant, appeared at the time, and made his defence, ſo that cures all defects in the ſummons.

Per curiam. The anſwer is right.

It was then objected, that the ſtatute requires the conviction to be by juſtices of the county where the offence was committed, and that does not appear in this caſe.

Per curiam. That muſt appear, or elſe they have no juriſdiction. The council for the proſecution ſaid, it does, for they diſtribute part of the penalty to the poor of the pariſh of Chelfield in com. Kent, within which pariſh the offence aforeſaid was committed. And the juſtices are the juſtices of the county of Kent, and ſtile themſelves ſo. Adjourned. Mich. 7. Geo. this conviction was quaſhed; the court being of opinion, that their juriſdiction muſt appear otherwiſe than out of their own mouths. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 261.

On error brought on a judgment on C. B. on an indebitatus aſſumpſit by nil dicit, and a writ of inquiry executed, and final judgment given for the plaintiff in the original ſuit, the following exception was taken by the council for the plaintiff in error. The record is, that the defendants below veniunt & nil dicunt in barram, &c. i. e. come and ſay nothing in bar, &c. but does not ſay they appeared by attorney, as it ought; and the law is ſo ſtrict in this point, that the omiſſion of the Chriſtian name of the attorney is error. 1 Roll. Rep. 536. Hewſon's caſe: nor is it ſaid, that the defendant's appeared in propriis perſonis, i. e. in their own perſons. But not allowed, becauſe the word veniunt i. e. they come, imports in proper perſon, if it is not ſaid that it was by attorney.

The ſecond error aſſigned was, that the writ of inquiry was returnable quinden. Paſch. i. e. in fifteen days of Eaſter, and the inquiſition was returned to be taken the 25th of April, which was the 15th day of Eaſter, and therefore ill; becauſe the law making no fractions of the day, the inquiſition could not be taken on the day of the return of the writ: but not allowed; for the court will ſuppoſe that the inquiſition was taken on the day before the writ was returned, which is well enough, for it may be executed on that day, and might have been executed before the writ was returned, otherwiſe the inquiſition could not have been returned.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment after a verdict in the court of the borough of Knareſborough againſt Blenkinſon and Waite in an action of treſpaſs for breaking and entering Iles's houſe, and taking away his goods; the writ of error was directed to the ſteward of the court of the borough of Knareſborough in the county of York, and the writ of error was returned by the Earl of Burlington, as ſteward of that court; and the pleas were in the court of the Lord the King for the borough of Knareſborough in the county of York, at ——— in the borough aforeſaid, within the juriſdiction of the ſaid court, according to the uſage and cuſtom of the aforeſaid borough, from time, whereof the memory of man knows not to the contrary, uſed and approved, Monday 22*d* June, 1724, before Threſher, under-ſteward of the court.

Exception was taken by the council for the plaintiff in error, 1. that it did not appear, that the underſteward had power to hold the court; for the writ of error was directed to the ſteward, who is to be ſuppoſed to be the judge, and he returns the writ; and it is not ſaid the under ſteward was appointed by deputation in writing from him, nor that he had power to conſtitute a deputy: but not allowed, for, per curiam, that the court was held according to the cuſtom uſed time out of mind, imports that by the cuſtom the under ſteward might hold the court, and there was no neceſſity to ſhew how he was appointed.

The ſecond exception was, that the plaint was ſaid to be of a plea of treſpaſs generally, without mentioning whether, on the caſe, or with force and arms; which it was inſiſted was ill, and in ſupport thereof Hales v. Moore in Styles Rep. 86. was cited, where in error on a judgment in an inferior court, the plaint was of a plea of debt generally, which was ſaid to be uncertain, becauſe the defendants could not know what was demanded: and Bacon, Juſtice, held it a good exception, and a rule was made for reverſal niſi, &c. but not allowed, the court aſcertaining which ſort of treſpaſs it was for, viz. vi & armis; and treſpaſs vi & armis is an action of treſpaſs. And as to the caſe of debt, in the K. B. the bills are of a plea of debt generally.

A third exception was made, that the firſt proceſs was a capias, whereas it ought to be an attachment. 1 Roll. Abr. 780. c. 6. In debt, if a capias is the firſt proceſs, and not a ſummons, though the defendant appears and pleads to iſſue, and found againſt him, yet it is error, and not aided by the appearance, 3 & 4 Jac. 1. but not allowed; for the court were of opinion, it is aided by the defendant's appearance. And a caſe ſimilar to that before cited in Roll. Abr. 780, was adjudged directly contrary, 11 Jac. 1 Inch v. Goodfield, which is ſince the former caſe.

Trinity, 10 Geo. 2. Stone v. Atwol.

By ſtat. 12. Geo. c. 29. if the defendant does not file common bail in time, the plaintiff may do it for him: in the preſent caſe the defendant was an infant, and had appointed no guardian by whom to appear; and the court made a rule that the plaintiff ſhould name a guardian for him, if he ſhould ſtill refuſe to do it himſelf. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1076.

Apprentice.

Trinity, 4 W. & M. White v. England.

An action of debt was brought on the ſtat. 5 Eliz. againſt the defendant for uſing the trade of a tyler, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip for ſeven years.

The defendant pleaded, that his father was a freeman of London, and that he was his eldeſt ſon; and that in right of patrimony, he might uſe his trade.

On a demurrer to this plea, the council did not rely thereon, but took exceptions to the declaration, becauſe it is not ſhewn that the trade of a tyler was an art or myſtery uſed in England at the time of the making of the ſtatute.

To which it was anſwered, that it was a trade mentioned in the ſtatute, and by conſequence muſt be then uſed; but the plaintiff was adviſed to make his demurrer, which he did, and paid coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 145.

A man took an apprentice in huſbandry, according to ſtat. 5 Eliz. but died before his apprentice was out of his time; and the apprentice being impotent, and a cripple, the juſtice of peace, by order of ſeſſions, ſent him to his deceaſed maſter's executor, and ordered him to keep him; and the order was quaſhed here, becauſe of the great inconvenience that might enſue if the executor ſhould be forced to obey it; for perhaps he may not have ſufficient aſſets, and it cannot be tried whether he has or not, on a proceeding at ſeſſions: beſides, the executor may live in another county, and then cannot be charged with this order.

Per Eyres, Juſtice. An apprenticeſhip is a perſonal truſt between maſter and ſervant, and is determined by the death of either, becauſe the end and deſign of it cannot be obtained; for the executor may not underſtand the trade in which the apprentice is to be inſtructed. An action of covenant may lie againſt the executor on the contract of the teſtator; but there he may make his defence, by pleading aſſets, or debts of an higher nature.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. By the cuſtom of London in theſe caſes, the executor is to put the apprentice to another maſter of the ſame trade; and in other places it would be hard to conſtrue the death of the maſter a diſcharge of the covenants; he obſerved, that it has been held, that the covenant for inſtruction failed, but that the boy ſtill continues an apprentice with the executor, with reſpect to his maintenance, who is liable to an action of covenant, unleſs he inſtructs the lad, or finds him another maſter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 27.

The ſame caſe is to be found in Salkeld, vol. 1. p. 67. and vol. 3. p. 42. entituled, the King v. Peck, Michaelmas, 10 W. 3.

Michaelmas, 7 W. & M. Anonymous.

If an apprentice be diſcharged from his maſter, the ſtatute requires the diſcharge to be under the hands and ſeals of four juſtices; but in a certiorari to remove an order of ſeſſions thereon, it is ſufficient that the order takes notice of the diſcharge ſo made, and it is not neceſſary to certify the diſcharge itſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 83.

On an order of ſeſſions being removed into this court by certiorari, the following exceptions were taken to quaſh it.

1. The order is, that the ſervant ſhall be diſcharged from his maſter, but the maſter is not diſcharged from his covenants to the ſervant, therefore the order being not mutual, is void.

To which it was anſwered, that it is not neceſſary it ſhould be mutual; for when the ſervant is diſcharged, the other is no longer a maſter.

2. The ſtatute never intended to give the juſtices in ſeſſions a general power to meddle with maſters in all trades, but only in ſuch which were then uſed in England, and therein particularly mentioned; and it provides, that if ſuch maſter (which muſt be in one of thoſe trades) ſhall miſuſe his apprentice, then the juſtices may interpoſe: but a ſurgeon is not named in that act; and it being a penal law, it ſhall not be extended according to equity, to comprehend any other trade but what is expreſsly named in the act.

This objection was anſwered, viz. that a ſurgeon is a trade within the ſtatute, for it is a manual occupation, and that is particularly mentioned in the act.

But it has been held, that this ſtatute extends to more trades than thoſe mentioned in it; for the apprentice of a merchant hath been diſcharged from his maſter by an order of ſeſſions, and yet a merchant is not named in that act; beſides, it is not a penal, but a remedial law, to regulate maſters and apprentices.

3. The juſtices of peace have no authority to diſcharge an apprentice, but where he was compelled by them to ſerve; and in ſuch caſe it is reaſonable, that the contracts which were made by their authority ſhould be diſſolved by the ſame power; but they cannot diſcharge any voluntary agreements made between the parties.

If they make an order for the payment of ſervants wages, it is good, becauſe they have power to compel the ſervice; but for the wages of a coachman, or the like, they have no power to make an order, becauſe they cannot compel a man to ſerve in that capacity. A juſtice of peace in Middleſex made an order for the payment of a ſeaman's wages, and on action brought againſt him, the plaintiff recovered 30 l. damages.

4. But if juſtices of peace had any power, they have not purſued it; for it does not appear that they who ſet their hands and ſeals to the diſcharge were preſent in ſeſſions, and at the examination of the matter, it being only ſet forth in the order, that the juſtices of the peace of the county whoſe hands and ſeals are thereunto ſet, &c. and thoſe may be juſtices acting out of ſeſſions.

Afterwards this matter being moved again; the order was quaſhed for the ſecond and third exceptions taken to it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 138.

Punting's Caſe.

The order of the juſtices made to diſcharge an apprentice was quaſhed, becauſe he was put out to the Trade of a Tallow Chandler, which is a trade not mentioned in the ſtat. 5 Eliz. another exception was, that it was under the hands and ſeals of three juſtices, when the ſtatute requires there ſhould be four. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 41.

Anonymous.

The maſter brought an action of covenant againſt his apprentice for departing from his ſervice at ſuch a time. The defendant juſtified by virtue of a licence from his maſter to depart at that time; and iſſue being joined thereon; Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that on ſuch a declaration the maſter ſhall not give evidence of the defendant's departing without leave at any other time, becauſe in this caſe the time is material and not tranſitory, as in treſpaſs and other caſes. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 42.

The lad ſerved ſeven years as an apprentice beyond ſea, but was not bound.

The juſtices may compel a maſter to take an apprentice put out by them, becauſe by the ſtatute they are to put ſuch apprentice out, and therefore they muſt be conſtrued to have a power to oblige the maſter to receive him. If the maſter turns the apprentice away, the juſtices can make him refund. 1 Lev. 191. On an order made at the ſeſſions to diſcharge the apprentice, it did not appear that the apprentice had applied himſelf firſt to a juſtice of peace.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The Juſtices have a power to make an order, and if the ſame is diſobeyed by the maſter, the ſeſſions cannot intermeddle, but on complaint the juſtices may bind the maſter to the ſeſſions, whereby they have cognizance of the complaint againſt the maſter.

Turton and Gould Juſtices, ſaid, the juſtices could not bind over. This matter was adjourned. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 67.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Dillon's Caſe.

Per curiam. The juſtices may diſcharge an apprentice, and may order a reſtitution of the money within the equity of the ſtatute. If the maſter being bound to anſwer at the ſeſſions, does not appear, it is a forfeiture of his recognizance, but yet at the ſame time the juſtices may proceed to make an order againſt him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 67.

The defendant being indicted for uſing the trade of a taylor, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip ſeven years, the indictment was quaſhed, becauſe only ſaid not having ſerved as an apprentice within the kingdom of England or Wales, for perhaps he did ſerve an apprenticeſhip beyond the ſeas, and if it were any where, it ſuffices. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 67.

The defendant was indicted on ſtat. 5 Eliz. for uſing the trade of a Feltmonger, not having ſerved ſeven years to it, and it was moved to be quaſhed; becauſe not a trade known at the time of making the ſtatute. Vide 2 Cro. 499. That a hemp-dreſſer was not a trade within the ſtatute. But after a rule niſi had been obtained, Holt ſaid, that it was proper a jury ſhould try whether it was a trade then, or not; and why not as well as try a preſcription; and therefore was againſt quaſhing it on that exception; and affirmed that the trade of a Wool-comber was within the ſtatute, though the contrary had been adjudged in 4 Jac. 2. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 311.

Hilary,

Hilary, 12 W. 3. The King v. Margaſon.

Per Holt. A maſter cannot aſſign over his apprentice, as he may another chattel, but it muſt be with his own conſent.

Per eundem. There needs no notice to churchwardens, &c. of a ſervant's coming into a pariſh to gain a ſettlement; becauſe the juſtices of peace, though there had been notice, cannot diſturb him. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 441.

An order of ſeſſions was for the diſcharging an apprentice from his maſter, on ſtat. 5 of Eliz. and two exceptions taken to it: 1ſt, That the firſt proceeding was at the quarter ſeſſions, whereas it ought to have begun by complaint to two juſtices; and for this Hawkſworth and Hillary's caſe, in 1 Saund. was cited; to which was oppoſed 1 Vent. 174. 2dly, That it appeared the maſter was not preſent. Holt was then ſtrongly againſt the order on the firſt exception, becauſe they ought to have followed the method preſcribed by the ſtatute, the ſtatute directing that the endeavours of a juſtice of the peace ſhould be firſt uſed; and if the party of whom complaint was made had not complied with the juſtice's propoſal, then that he ſhould give a bond to appear at ſeſſions, and that as it were by appeal: but if the party had promiſed to obey the juſtice of peace's orders, but afterwards would not ſtand to them, the only way was to complain anew, and the juſtice to attach him, and bind him to ſeſſions.

But in the caſes of The King v. Johnſon, and The King v. Fenwick, it was unanimouſly reſolved, the order made at ſeſſions, on the firſt ſtep, was good; and Holt ſaid, he was brought to that reſolution rather from the neceſſity of the thing, the practice being univerſally ſo, than any reaſon he ſaw for it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 349.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Lacy v. Kynaſton.

Per Holt. Trover lies for the maſter, for a ticket or other writing intituling his apprentice to money earned by him during the apprenticeſhip; but here the trover was againſt the executor of the apprentice for a ticket given out after the death of the apprentice, for money earned by him during his apprenticeſhip; and becauſe it never was in the apprentice's poſſeſſion, the action was not maintainable; but after the executor receives the money, the maſter may have aſſumpſit for ſo much money received to his uſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 415.

The following exceptions were taken to an order for diſcharging an apprentice; 1ſt, That the complaint was made originally at ſeſſions, without any previous application to a ſingle juſtice out of ſeſſions. And 2dly, That the juſtices had ordered money to be returned.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The order was good. If it had been a new queſtion, I ſhould have held a prior application to ſome juſtice out of ſeſſions neceſſary; but after ſo many orders affirmed in this court, without any application to a juſtice, 'tis too late to unſettle that point. As to the ſecond point, I have no doubt about that, it being a power conſequential on their juriſdiction to diſcharge. Vide Salkeld, vol. 1. p. 68.

A boy was put out apprentice to a maſter in one pariſh, who by deed aſſigned and turned him over to another maſter, where he ſerved his time, in the pariſh of A. and the boy being now poor, the queſtion was, whether he had gained a legal ſettlement in A. and an order of two juſtices was for removing him to another town, as not legally ſettled in A. becauſe an apprentice is not aſſignable in law.

Per curiam. True, an apprentice is not aſſignable; yet here the boy ſerved during his apprenticeſhip in the pariſh of A. and if one maſter makes a contract with another, that the other ſhall have the ſervice of his apprentice, that is good between themſelves; and though the words be, grant, aſſign, and turn over, which indeed cannot alter the legal intereſt of the apprentice; yet it amounts to an agreement, that he ſhall ſerve the other during the time; like the caſe where one aſſigns a bond over to another, which in its nature is not aſſignable over, but if he does aſſign it over, it is a good agreement that the aſſignee ſhall have the money to his own uſe; and ſo is the caſe of Deering v. Farringdon. So here in ſtrictneſs, an apprentice is not aſſignable over, yet by agreement between the maſters, it may be ſo far done, as that covenant lies for an interruption of enjoyment of his ſervice; then the apprentice ſerving on ſuch an aſſignment is a good ſervice of an apprentice; and therefore ſufficient to give him a ſettlement in A. and the order was quaſhed.

The original writ of appeal ought to be returned non eſt inventus, before a capias awarded. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 553. Raymond, vol. 1. p. 683.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Barber v. Dennis.

A waterman's widow took an apprentice, who went to ſea, and earned two ſailors tickets, which came to the hands of the defendant: the widow brought an action of trover for the tickets, and obtained judgment in her favour; for what the apprentice gains he gains for his maſter; and whether legally an apprentice or not, is immaterial, it is enough if he is ſo in fact. Salkeld, vol. 1. p. 68.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Gould.

On a motion to quaſh an indictment brought againſt the defendant, for that one A. a poor boy, being put out to him as an apprentice, under ſtat. 5. Eliz. cap. 4. he vi et armis, refuſed to provide for him.

The defendant's council made the following exceptions to the indictment:

1ſt. That the matter was not indictable.

2dly. That if it was indictable, there ſhould have been firſt an application to a juſtice of peace, and after wards an appeal to the ſeſſions, and then, perhaps, for diſobedience to their orders, an indictment would lie.

3dly. The indictment is laid to have been vi et armis, i. e. with force and arms, which is abſurd, it being for a nonfeazance.

Per curiam. If this had been the caſe of a common apprentice, an indictment would not lie; formerly it has been held generally, and by the whole court, in Pyne's caſe, that the juſtices could not compel a man to take an apprentice on the ſtatute, but ſince the contrary opinion has prevailed: if we allow the juſtices ſuch power of neceſſary conſequence, we muſt allow an indictment for diſobedience to their orders, either in not receiving, or in receiving, and after turning off, or not providing for ſuch apprentice; and tho' an act of parliament preſcribes an eaſier way of proceeding by complaint, as is urged, yet that does not hinder an indictment; and though the vi et armis in this caſe is abſurd, yet it is only ſurpluſage, which will not vitiate the indictment, and therefore the court refuſed to quaſh it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 163.

A lad, twenty-one years of age, was bound an apprentice to his father for ſeven years, and ſerved him for two or three years, and they parted by conſent; the father diſcharged his ſon, and delivered him his indenture, but did not cancel it, and he lived as an hired ſervant in another place; and he was adjudged by the juſtices to be ſettled where he was an apprentice.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the ſeal had been torn off he had been diſcharged. Vide Forteſcue, p. 312.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Fitzhugh v. Dennington. Error.

On error brought on a judgment in the Marſhalſea court in debt on a bond, where the defendant, on oyer of the condition, which recited, that the plaintiff was become an apprentice to the defendant for ſeven years, and then the condition was, that if the defendant, at the end of ſeven years, ſhould make, procure or cauſe the plaintiff to be made free of the company of joiners of London, if thereunto requeſted, then the obligation to be void. To this action the defendant pleaded, that at the end of the ſaid ſeven years, or after, till the time of the action brought, he was not requeſted. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and judgment was given for the plaintiff below, ſuppoſing the requeſt not material, or if it were, the plea ſhould have been (that he never was requeſted) and not to tye it up to a requeſt at the end of the ſeven years or after, for he might have requeſted before the end of the ſeven years, to make him free at the end of the ſeven years.

The council for the plaintiff in error inſiſted, that if in this caſe the requeſt had not been expreſsly made part of the condition, yet the plea had not been good; and made this diſtinction; when there is a duty made by the bond, then there needs no averment of a requeſt; otherwiſe when the bond is for doing a collateral act, as in this caſe; and, in ſupport of his opinion, cited 1 Browl. 13. but whenever the condition is to do a thing when thereunto required, or if thereunto required, there the requeſt is part of the condition, and to be averred.

Per curiam. The requeſt is material here, and the meaning is plain from the recital, that the defendant was to have made the plaintiff free at the end of ſeven years, (that is, when his time was out) if the plaintiff pleaſed; which was to be ſignified to the defendant by requeſt, and the requeſt muſt be when the condition could be performed, viz. at the end of ſeven years, and not before; and if it was a good requeſt within the ſeven years, that ought to be ſhewn on the plaintiff's ſide, otherwiſe it ſhall not be intended, for it cannot be ſuppoſed one would requeſt a thing to be done, before it was to be, or could be done: therefore the court reverſed the judgment Niſi.

This matter coming on again in the ſame term, the council for the defendant in error urged that the plea was naught, and therefore the judgment ought to be affirmed; and quoted ſeveral authorities in ſupport of his aſſertion.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The obligor was to make him free at the end of ſeven years, or eight years, if thereunto requeſted. When a man is to do a thing by ſuch a time, if requeſted; in that caſe, if the thing in its nature may be done at the time of requeſt, then the requeſt is to be on the laſt convenient part of that time: for example, if a man is bound to pay money on Lady Day, if requeſted, then the requeſt is to be on the laſt convenient time before ſun-ſet of that day, on which ſuch ſum may be paid; in this caſe the condition being at the end of ſeven or eight years, if the plea had been, that he did not requeſt at the end of ſeven years, without going further, it had been bad.

Powell, Juſtice, ſeemed to incline, that a requeſt in a day or two after the ſeven years would be well, though he agreed, that in a demand for rent it muſt be on the laſt convenient time of the day, becauſe there the law appoints a place where the requeſt is to be made. In this caſe it muſt be a perſonal requeſt, and no place is appointed for making the ſame.

All the judges agreed that the plea was good, though they differed about the time on which the requeſt was to have been made; viz. whether on the laſt day of the ſeven years, or after. They unanimouſly reverſed the judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 227, 259.

On an indictment againſt the defendant for inticing an apprentice to take away his maſter's goods, after conviction, his council took the following exceptions to the indictment.

1ſt, That it was not directly ſaid that the apprentice did actually take away the goods, but only that the defendant did intice him to take them away, and did receive them from him; which is a ſtrong argument indeed that they were taken away, but no direct poſitive charge, as the fact ought to be laid in an indictment; and cited the caſe of The Queen v. Daniel, in point.

2dly, That it was not ſaid in the indictment, where the houſe and ſhop of R. T. was; and, conſequently, no venue where the ſuppoſed taking by the apprentice was.

Per curiam. The indictment on the caſe of The Queen v. Daniel went on two points; the one was for ſeducing an apprentice from his maſter, the other for perſuading him to take away his goods: as to the firſt, which was the only point in judgment, we hold the offence not indictable, and there was no venue laid for the ſecond.

The court were all of opinion, that the charge ought to be direct, and not argumentative; and that it was not enough to lay an inticement, without an act done in purſuance of it. In the indictment is ſhewn a ſpecial matter, viz. that the defendant did receive them, but does not ſhew that the goods were taken away; and if the act was felony, as the indictment charges, the defendant would only be acceſſary, and that could not be, without a principal fact committed. In this caſe you might have charged the defendant as a principal, for he that perſuades another to commit a treſpaſs is a principal, and the taking of the apprentice here, is the taking of the defendant, but you do not ſhew where that was. The court all agreed that an indictment cannot be maintained, but gave them time till the next term, to maintain it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 288. Raymond, vol. 2. page 1116.

One Symonds, a taylor by trade, an inhabitant of St. Giles, removed to Weybridge with a certificate, and there took an apprentice, who ſerved out his time, ſet up his trade, and lived two years in Weybridge. But his old maſter being become chargeable, the juſtices made an order to remove Symonds, and his ſaid late apprentice, as part of his family, to St. Giles; which order was moved to be quaſhed, becauſe the word family muſt not be taken in ſo extenſive a ſenſe. And this term the order was adjudged ill by this court.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, The words of ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. are, that he and his family and children born there, ſhall be removed, unleſs they have gained another ſettlement there. Beſides, this apprentice never came with a certificate; the act ſays, any that moves himſelf, he and his family ſhall be removed; that is, they who came along with him ſhall go back, and no other than them and the children born after; and for them a ſpecial proviſion is made in the act. 2dly, He inhabited two years after the expiration of his apprenticeſhip, which is another ſettlement. Therefore he is well ſettled at Weybridge, and cannot be removed to St. Giles's.

Powis, Juſtice, obſerved, that this was like the caſe of St. Bride's v. The Savoy; where a lodger in the Savoy rented a ſhop in Fleet Street, but gained no ſettlement there, and took a ſervant or apprentice, who ſerved his time with the ſaid lodger: this was adjudged a good ſettlement for the lad, though the maſter himſelf had never gained one; becauſe the ſervice being performed in the pariſh of St. Bride's, it gained the ſervant a legal ſettlement. And the notice to be given according to the ſtatute, does not extend to a ſervant or an apprentice.

Gould, Juſtice. As he lived two years in Weybridge after the expiration of his apprenticeſhip, he could not be removed; but if the maſter had been removed during his apprenticeſhip, it had been another caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 204. Forteſcue, page 315.

An order of two juſtices was made to remove a pauper from St. Albans to the pariſh of St. Botolph, which ſays "that on complaint being made to them, &c. on examination it appears, he is likely to become chargeable; and it appearing that he was bound apprentice in the pariſh of St. Botolph, and that he there ſerved as long as his maſter lived, they therefore adjudged that to be the place of his laſt legal ſettlement, &c."

The court was moved to quaſh this order for its uncertainty; 1ſt. Becauſe it does not appear that the pauper was bound by indenture, and if he was not ſo bound, he does not gain a ſettlement by his ſervitude, 2dly, It does not appear how long he ſerved, the order only ſays that he ſerved as long as his maſter lived, which might not be above a week, therefore it is uncertain.

The council on the other ſide, in ſupport of the order, aſſerted, that it is a queſtion whether the mere act of binding of itſelf does not conſtitute a ſettlement, and the forty days mentioned in the ſtatute only regards the reſidence. 2dly, The juſtices do adjudge St. Botolph's, Biſhopſgate, to be the place of his laſt legal ſettlement, which is enough for them to remove him. But per curiam, the court concluded the place of his laſt legal ſettlement from the premiſes which are ill; and the order ſays, therefore we do adjudge, &c. and for the reaſons offered, the order muſt be quaſhed for uncertainty.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that notice is to be given when a perſon comes into a pariſh, but is not neceſſary in the caſe of an apprentice or ſervant; and barely binding a lad apprentice, does not gain a ſettlement, unleſs he ſerves forty days. And the borough of St. Albans is excepted out of the ſtatute which directs, that when an order is made by juſtices of corporations, the appeal muſt be at the next quarter ſeſſions. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 205.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Shepherd v. Maidſtone.

In debt on bond, the breach aſſigned was, that ſo many rupees the property of the Eaſt India Company, came to the hands of the defendant, who was engaged to ſerve the Company as a factor at Fort St. George for five years, which ſum of money he unlawfully and fraudulently embezzeled, and to his own uſe converted, &c. againſt the tenor of the indenture, &c.

On demurrer, the queſtion being, whether the breach aſſigned was a breach of the condition of the bond.

Reſolved by the court, that it was not:

Indeed in caſe of an apprentice, the caſe is different; for he was only in cuſtody of his maſter's goods and caſh, and therefore the breach here aſſigned would have been a forfeiture of his indentures. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 144.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Mitchell v. Reynolds.

An action of debt being brought on a bond thus conditioned, that whereas A. had taken the ſhop of B. who was a baker, for the term of ſo many years, and had given B. ſo much money for it, the condition of the obligation was ſuch, that if during the term aforeſaid, B. ſhould not exerciſe the trade of a baker within the pariſh where the ſhop was, that then the bond ſhould be void; otherwiſe remain in full force, &c. And whether this be a good or a void bond is the queſtion.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion, that the bond is good, and that the true diſtinction is not between bond and promiſe, that bond ſhould be void, and promiſe good; but between contracts, whether by bond, covenant, or promiſe, entered into on no conſideration, or a vicious one, whether it be by bond, covenant, or promiſe, that the former will be good, the latter void.

Freedom to trade is as much bound by conſent as cuſtom: and the caſe of penalties made for the enforcement of ſuch a cuſtom, ſeems a ſtronger caſe; for there the party is, as it were, judge in his own caſe; whereas here the penalty is fixed by conſent of both ſides.

Such an agreement in taking an apprentice is good; and may be conſidered not as a prejudicial or reſtraining agreement, but as a favourable and advantageous one, as putting an apprentice in a capacity of getting his living in any part of England, except where it would be to the prejudice of his maſter, when without it he can gain it no where. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 130.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. The King v. Barnes.

A. is bound out by the juſtices to B. who aſſigns him to C. and the ſeſſions, reciting the ſpecial matter, adjudge the aſſignment void, and order him to be returned to B.

Per curiam. The ſeſſions had no power to judge of the validity of a deed, or to hinder a man from aſſigning his apprentice. The covenant to provide for him is well performed, if the perſon to whom he is bound aſſigns him to another to provide for him. And apprentices bound out by juſtices may be aſſigned as well as others. Wherefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 48.

A. was bound apprentice to a ſeafaring man, and ſerved him for a quarter of a year, in the day time, on land in St. Mary Colechurch, but lay every night on ſhip-board in Ratcliff. The juſtices ſent him to St. Mary Colechurch, where the ſervice was. The order quaſhed.

Per curiam. A man properly inhabits where he lies; as where an houſe is in two leets, he is to be ſummoned to that in which his bed is. Vide Forteſcue, p. 306.

The ſeſſion's order reciting, that J. H. was bound out by indenture, as the ſtatute requires, to J. P. and being lame, and having the king's evil, and in the opinion of ſurgeons incurable; therefore the ſeſſions diſcharged the maſter from his apprentice, and four juſtices ſign the order.

The council for the order of ſeſſion moved to confirm it, becauſe the maſter cannot now have the end of the binding, which was the ſervice of his apprentice.

The council againſt the order ſaid, the ſtatute only impowers the juſtices to diſcharge for miſbehaviour, and not for ſickneſs; beſides, allowing they had a power to diſcharge, yet, in this caſe, they have not executed it as the ſtatute requires, for it is not inrolled, neither is it mentioned to be by a juſtice of the quorum. There muſt be four juſtices, one of the quorum.

Both exceptions to the form were held good, but the court quaſhed the order as to the ſubſtance, for the maſter takes him for better and worſe, and is to provide for him in ſickneſs and in health. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 99.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. The King v. Vandeleer.

The juſtices at the ſeſſions ordered an apprentice, who had been ill uſed, and not taken care of by his maſter, to be diſcharged, and that the maſter having received 5 l. with him, ſhould refund 3 l. as a further proviſion for ſuch apprentice.

The council for the defendant moved to quaſh this order of ſeſſions, becauſe ſtatute 5 Eliz. cap. 4. which gives the juſtices power to diſcharge apprentice on complaint to them, gives them no authority to order any money to be returned.

Per curiam. It is very hard, that if the maſter miſuſes his apprentice the next day after he is bound, he ſhould pay back nothing if he is diſcharged; if ſo, it will be an encouragement to maſters to treat their apprentices ill; but as the ſtatute is ſilent, the order muſt be quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 69. Salk. 68. 490.

Hilary, 5 Geo. The King v. Gill.

Per curiam. It has been often determined in this court, that the ſeſſions have an original juriſdiction to diſcharge apprentices, therefore we will not ſuffer it now to be made a queſtion, though it might be doubted on the ſtatute itſelf; in theſe orders it muſt be ſet forth, that the maſter appeared, or was ſummoned, as was held in the caſe of the Queen v. Rutter; and for want of this, the order in this caſe was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 143.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. The Inhabitants of Buckington, or Puckington, v. the Inhabitants of St. Michael Sibington in Somerſetſhire.

An order made by two juſtices for removing a pauper to Buckington, as the place of his laſt legal ſettlement, and an order confirming the ſame made at the quarter ſeſſions, being removed into the King's Bench by certiorari: the fact ſtated ſpecially in the order of ſeſſions was, that Richard Allen was bound an apprentice to J. S. in Buckington, and ſerved him in that pariſh ſix months; that afterwards J. S. broke; on which Allen, without J. S.'s direction or conſent, hired himſelf as a ſervant to J. N. who lived in St. Michael Sibington, and ſerved him there two years: that afterwards J. S. delivered up to Allen his indentures of apprenticeſhip.

The court was unanimouſly of opinion, that Allen gained no ſettlement by his ſervice at Sibington, he having let himſelf without his maſter's conſent; and tho' the maſter had failed, yet that did not determine the apprenticeſhip; and the maſter's delivering up the indenture afterwards, if it ſhould be conſidered as a ſubſequent conſent, will not make his hiring himſelf good, ſo as to gain a ſettlement by his ſervice with J. N. but if he had let himſelf to J. N. with J. S.'s conſent, his ſervice would have made a conſent. 1 Salk. 68. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 553. Pariſhes of Caſtor and Eccles. But Allen was ſettled in Buckington, where he was bound apprentice, and lived and ſerved his maſter above forty days.

Trinity, 10 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. John the Baptiſt, within the Borough of the Devizes, Com. Wilts.

By order of two juſtices, one Warren, a pauper, was removed from St. John the Baptiſt to Biſhops Cannings. On an appeal to the quarter ſeſſions, the order of the juſtices was quaſhed, and the pauper returned to St. John the Baptiſt, as the place of his laſt legal ſettlement:

On which a certiorari was brought, and theſe orders were removed into this court.

The order of ſeſſions ſtated, (among other things) that J. W. junior, father of the children, (who were removed by the order) was, by indenture dated 25th March, 1712, and executed two years after the date thereof, bound apprentice to J. P. in which indenture were contained two covenants, in the words following:

Firſt covenant. And the ſaid J. W. the father, doth hereby for himſelf, his executors, and adminiſtrators, covenant and agree, to and with the ſaid J. P. his executors and aſſigns, that he the ſaid J. W. the father, his executors and adminiſtrators, ſhall and will, at his and their own proper coſts and charges, provide and allow, unto and for his ſaid ſon, ſufficient and neceſſary meat, drink, waſhing, lodging, and apparel, and all other things fit and convenient for an apprentice of the ſaid trade, during the laſt five years of the ſaid term.

Second covenant. And the ſaid J. P. for his part, doth hereby for himſelf, his executors and aſſigns, covenant, promiſe, and agree, to and with the ſaid J. W. the father, his executors and adminiſtrators, that he the ſaid J. P. his executors and aſſigns, ſhall and will, well and truly pay, or cauſe to be paid to the ſaid J. W. the father, his executors and adminiſtrators, the ſum of 2 s. 6 d. of lawful money, &c. by the week, weekly, during the third year of the ſaid term of ſeven years; except ſuch time or times as he the ſaid J. W. the apprentice ſhall by ſickneſs, or any other accident, be unable to work at the ſaid trade; and 3 s. of like money aforeſaid by the week, weekly, during the fourth year of the ſaid term, and 3 s. 6 d. of like money, &c. by the week, weekly, during the fifth year of the ſaid term; and 4 s. of like money, &c. by the week, weekly, during the laſt two years of the ſaid term of ſeven years, (except ſuch time or times of inability as aforeſaid:) that in purſuance of the ſaid indenture, the ſaid J. W. began to ſerve the ſaid J. P. in his open ſhop, in the ſaid pariſh of St. John's, but had his meat, drink, waſhing, and lodging, during all the time with his father in St. James's, other than on market days and Saturdays, when he received his meat and drink with his maſter in St. John's, but that he never lodged one night with his ſaid maſter, or elſewhere in the pariſh of St. John's, during his ſaid apprenticeſhip, or ſervice aforeſaid.

It was further ſworn on behalf of St. James's, that the ſaid monies payable to the ſaid father, by virtue of the ſaid indenture, were paid accordingly, and were in lieu and conſideration for his maintenance and lodging as aforeſaid.

The court, on hearing council on both ſides, quaſhed the ſaid order, being of opinion, that the pauper gained no ſettlement in St. John's pariſh by apprenticeſhip, becauſe ſerving as an apprentice will not make a ſettlement, but the ſettlement muſt be gained by inhabiting, which can only be where the party lodges. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 285. Raymond, vol. 2. page 1371.

Michaelmas, 10 G. Whitley v. Loftus.

In an action of covenant on an indenture of apprenticeſhip, wherein the plaintiff covenanted with the father and ſon (the apprentice), and they on the other ſide covenanted with him, and this action was brought jointly againſt the father and the ſon; for that the ſon had covenanted faithfully to accompt, at his maſter's (the plaintiff's) requeſt, for all ſuch of his maſter's goods as ſhould come to his hands; and the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant (the ſon) had not accompted, &c.

On a plea of they have not broken the covenants, the plaintiff had a verdict; and now it was moved in arreſt of judgment:

1. That the declaration was ill, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth any requeſt made to the ſon to accompt, which he ought to have done, that the defendant might have an opportunity to traverſe it.

Another objection was, that the plea is too general; two breaches being aſſigned. Beſides, it is no plea, for one breach is in the negative, that he did not accompt.

To which it was anſwered, that the breach is laid in this manner, that he did not accompt, by reaſon whereof he broke his covenant, which is an affirmative. Beſides this is an exception taken by the defendant to his own plea, and is after a verdict which cures an informal iſſue.

Beſides this being a joint action againſt the father and the ſon, the breach aſſigned only againſt the ſon, cannot maintain this judgment.

Neither ought the action to be brought againſt the father, for he did not covenant that his ſon ſhould truly account, &c. he only covenanted for himſelf ſeparately, to pay the money which he was to give the plaintiff for taking the ſon apprentice; and the clauſe in the latter end of theſe articles is ſo in the ſingular number, viz. that each of them, (the father and ſon) binds himſelf for the true performance thereof; ſo that the father cannot properly be ſaid to be bound for his ſon, but only for himſelf.

It was argued, on the other ſide, that this was a covenant entered into by the maſter (the plaintiff) on the one part, and by the ſon, with the conſent of his father, on the binding part, but by both father and ſon as to all other purpoſes; for though the ſon only is bound apprentice, yet they both covenant for the true performance of all covenants, &c. the words in the cloſe of the articles being, viz. that each of them binds himſelf,

And even from the nature of theſe covenants, the father is always bound for the ſon; for otherwiſe maſters could not rely on the covenants of their apprentices, who are commonly under age, and ſo by law not capable of conſidering what covenants they make; and conſequently, in this caſe, the father ſhall be taken to covenant for the performance of his ſon's part, as well as his own.

The court was of opinion, that the very end of binding the father was to anſwer the wrong which might be done by the ſon to his maſter; therefore he muſt be anſwerable for his ſon's true performance of the articles; it is a joint covenant, and amounts to the ſame as if it had been in this form: It is agreed between the parties, that &c. it is true, at the end of the articles the covenant is in the ſingular number, viz. that each of them did bind himſelf, and it muſt be ſo where the ſon is bound to perform the thing for which the covenant was made; and this clauſe is uſually inſerted, that the covenants may be taken diſtributively, viz. that each of the covenanters ſhould perform his part; the latter part makes the former covenants joint or ſeveral; and this makes the covenant of the ſon bind the father, who covenanted for him as well as himſelf. The plea and iſſue is good after a verdict. Wherefore the plaintiff had judgment awarded in his favour. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 191.

Trinity, 12 Geo. The King v. Davie.

An order of ſeſſions for diſcharging an apprentice was quaſhed, and the only reaſons offered for ſuch diſcharge was, that the maſter declared in open court he would not take him again.

The court ſaid, that, this was not a poin tnow to be diſputed, but allowed that the ſeſſions had an original juriſdiction to diſcharge apprentices. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 704.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. The King v. Collingbourn.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, removed into this court by certiorari, for diſcharging an apprentice, who appeared by the order to have been bound, before the Chamberlain, to a glazier, a freeman of London; the court was moved to quaſh the order, becauſe the apprentice being bound before the Chamberlain of London, the juſtices of peace had no power to diſcharge him, but he ought to be diſcharged by the Chamberlain; for in ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. the liberties and privileges of the citizens of London, as to having and retaining apprentices are expreſsly ſaved, and it is declared that this ſtatute ſhall not be prejudicial to them. But not allowed.

Per curiam. The apprentice being out of London, and ſerving his maſter out of the city, there can be no proceedings againſt him before the Chamberlain; but the juſtices of the peace have a juriſdiction to diſcharge him, notwithſtanding he was bound in that city.

A ſecond exception was taken to the order, that the juſtices could not diſcharge the apprentice, becauſe the trade to which he was bound, viz. a glazier, was not within the ſtatute 5 of Eliz. but not allowed; for though formerly it was held the trade ought to be a trade within the ſtatute, yet it has been ſince reſolved otherwiſe, particularly in the caſe of Hone an apprentice. The King v. Taunton, 6 Geo. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1410. Strange, vol. 1. page 663.

A poor boy was bound out apprentice by indenture, and the maſter received 20 s. with him; he ſerved three years; but the maſter never paid the duty of 6 d. in the pound according to ſtat. 8 Ann c. 9. ſec. 39. which ſays, that if the duty is not paid, the indenture ſhall be void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever.

Forteſcue, Juſtice, who went the circuit, held it a ſettlement, becauſe the maſter had ſix months to pay the duty in, ſo that during thoſe ſix months a ſettlement was gained: and it ſhould not be in the power of the maſter to defeat it by any matter done afterwards. And purſuant to this opinion, the ſeſſions held it a ſettlement.

But on debate in this court, the order was quaſhed; for they ſaid it was making the indenture good to one purpoſe, when the act of parliament had made it void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever; and though it was a hard caſe, they could not break through the poſitive words of the act. Wherefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 904.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. Arglis v. Heaſeman.

In this caſe the court was moved to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for diſcharging an apprentice.

1. Becauſe that this is an original application to the ſeſſions, whereas they have no original juriſdiction; their juriſdiction in theſe caſes ariſes from ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſec. 35. and in Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 138. the King v. Gately, an order was granted for going originally to the ſeſſions.

2. Becauſe, if the ſeſſions have an original juriſdiction, yet it is limited, upon the appearance of the maſter, or ſome default made by him, which ought to be ſhewn in the order, and nothing of that appears in this order.

3. Becauſe the juriſdiction in this caſe is not rightly exerciſed, for the reaſon they give, and they are bound to give a reaſon, is for unkind uſage from the maſter; now the act gives them juriſdiction, if the maſter miſuſes the apprentice, or evil intreats him, and the alledging unkind uſage comes not up to that: and though the order ſays further, that the maſter refuſes to continue him in his ſervice, or to entertain him according to the indentures, that will not make it better; for in the caſe of the King v. Davie, Stra. 704. ſeſ. caſ. 282. pl. 221. Fel. 225. Trin. 12 Geo. 1. an order ſtated, that the maſter declared he would not take his apprentice, and held to be no ſufficient reaſon; and the order was quaſhed.

Lord Hardwicke. As to the firſt objection, the later caſes have been, that the ſeſſions have an original juriſdiction. The ſecond objection, in my opinion, is not to be got over. In caſes of convictions, appearance has always been held neceſſary, but in caſes of orders in general, the court in many caſes will preſume that every thing has been done right, and that diſtinction, I agree, was confirmed in the caſe of the King v. Lloyd, 2 Stra. 296. but then, that preſumption is only in caſe of orders on ſtatutes, which do not in expreſs terms require an appearance; but now we are on an act which gives the juſtices authority to proceed on the appearance of the party, ſo that it is made an eſſential requiſite by the act to ſound their juriſdiction.

As to the third exception; in general, it is not neceſſary to ſet out the reaſons of their judgment; but here the act requires it, and it is rightly ſaid, that uſing unkindly is not ſuch miſuſing as is intended bythe act; and if the following reaſon, viz. his refuſing to continue the lad in his ſervice is to be underſtood as an abſolute refuſal to let him continue with him, and not only as a refuſal to entertain according to his articles; that neither will be a ground for this order, becauſe the juſtices have a power to compel the maſter to take him again, as was done in the caſe of the King v. Davie.

However, this is more doubtful; but on the ſecond exception, the order muſt be quaſhed. Vide caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 101. Stra. vol. 2. p. 1013.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, it was ſtated, that James Blythe, in 1706, was put apprentice in St. Peter's for four years, by indenture; and that he lived there, and ſerved the time; but inaſmuch as he was not bound for ſeven years, as required by ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. the ſeſſions adjudged it no ſettlement.

The forty-firſt ſection of that ſtatute was inſiſted on, to ſupport the order; which declares, "That all indentures, covenants, and bargains, of, or for the having or taking any apprentice, otherwiſe to be made or taken than is by that ſtatute ordained, ſhall be clearly void in law to all intents and purpoſes." And one of the ſame regulations is, that the binding ſhall be for ſeven years. And the caſe of Cureden v. Laland was relied on, Eaſt. 4 Geo. 2. where the apprenticeſhip was for ſeven years, but the indentures never ſtampt; and held to be no ſettlement.

Notwithſtanding this, the court was of opinion, here was a ſettlement; and quaſhed the order. It appears, that between the twenty-ſixth and forty-firſt ſections, there are many regulations concerning what ſort of perſons ſhould take apprentices, and what not, which are never regarded. And it would be of miſchievous conſequence now, to refer this laſt ſection back to all the reſt. They ſaid, the word void muſt be conſtrued voidable. Here the indenture has had its effect, and neither maſter nor ſervant have taken advantage of the objection: and as to the caſe of Cureden v. Laland, on ſtat. 8 Ann. c. 9. there were words prohibiting the giving the indenture in evidence; and admitting improper evidence is always a ground to quaſh. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1067.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the queſtion was, whether a boy bound over by juſtices (the boy being no party to the indenture) had gained a ſettlement, it being only ſtated that his binding was allowed and approved of by two juſtices. Now ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. requires that one of them ſhould be of the quorum. And for this omiſſion the court quaſhed the order. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1110.

On a ſpecial order it was ſtated, that an apprentice, on the death of his maſter, was with his own conſent turned over by the widow (who had not adminiſtered) to another maſter, whom he ſerved. And the court held it a good ſettlement in the laſt pariſh, within the reaſon of the caſe of The Holy Trinity v. Shoreditch, Mich. 3 Geo. 1. where A. was bound to B. but ſerved C. all the while in another pariſh, and there gained a ſettlement. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1115.

On the ſettlement of an apprentice, it was ſtated, that the mother propoſed to put him out to an inhabitant of Northoram, who refuſed to take him, becauſe he wanted cloaths; on which the grandfather agreed, that he would pay 30*s.* to the maſter, to cloath the boy withal: in purſuance of which, the maſter laid out 30*s.* in cloaths for him, and he was bound by indenture, in which no mention is made of the 30*s.* nor was any duty paid: that the grandfather paid the 30*s.* and the apprentice ſerved out his time, which the ſeſſions adjudge to be a ſettlement.

Per curiam. The order muſt be confirmed: for this is not like the caſe of Curenden v. Laland, where there was money actually given to the maſter for his own uſe; here the maſter is a mere agent of the grandfather's, to lay out 30*s.* for him. And it could make no difference, whether the maſter did it, or any body elſe. This is not a caſe within the intent of ſtat. 8 Ann. cap. 9. ſect. 39. the poſitive words of which, in a caſe expreſsly within it, obliged the court, in the caſe cited, to hold it no ſettlement. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1132.

An indictment for not receiving an apprentice was quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear to be a binding within ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. and the court ſaid, that was not barely matter of evidence, but the circumſtances muſt be averred. They would not meddle with the general queſtion, whether an indictment would lie or not. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1268.

In debt on a bond, conditioned for M. A.'s performance of the covenants in an indenture of apprenticeſhip; whereby he was bound to the plaintiff's teſtator, who was a mariner: the defendant pleaded, that A. ſerved faithfully to the death of the teſtator: the plaintiff replied, that ſince the death of the teſtator, A. had abſented himſelf from her ſervice. On demurrer, and after argument at bar,

Per curiam. We are unanimouſly of opinion, that the defendant ought to have judgment; and the executrix can maintain no ſuch action. The binding was to the man, to learn his art, and ſerve him, without any mention of executors: And as the words are confined, ſo is the nature of the contract; for it is fiduciary, and the lad is bound from a perſonal knowledge of the integrity and ability of the maſter, Hob. 134. Vaugh. 182. 3 Keb. 519. and 1 Keb. 820. 1 Sid. 216. and we deny the caſe in 1 Lev. 177. Hil. 8 Ann. Horne v. Blake. An award, that an apprentice ſhould be aſſigned, was held void; unleſs there was a cuſtom, or the concurrence of the apprentice. And they held it was not material, that according to Cro. Eliz. 553. the aſſets were liable on the maſter's covenant to maintain. Therefore judgment was awarded for the defendant. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1266.

This was a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, confirming an order of two juſtices made for removing J. L. from Falmouth to Mawnan. The council for the motion ſaid, the determination of the ſeſſions in this caſe was contrary to law, being founded on her having ſerved an apprenticeſhip in Mawnan.

The exception taken was, that it was only a parol binding, not by indenture; whereas the ſtatute 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. is confined to a binding by indenture, on which exception a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained, and a motion now made to make the ſame abſolute, which not being oppoſed by the council on the other ſide, the ſame was ordered accordingly. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 290.

This was a motion made to quaſh an order of two juſtices, confirmed by ſeſſions on an appeal, for removing A. H. wife of J. H. and her four children, from St. Saviour's, Southwark, to St. Helen's, on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

The caſe ſet forth the minute circumſtances and parol evidence concerning an indenture of apprenticeſhip (not produced) of J. H. the father, to W. H. his grandfather, on which it appeared, that there was a ſtrong preſumption that it was never ſtamped.

The council who moved to quaſh theſe orders made two exceptions to the original order, and two to the order of ſeſſions.

To the original order, he ſaid, 1ſt. It ſends the woman from her huſband.

2dly. It adjudges St. Helen's to be the place of her ſettlement, whereas it ought to have been the huſband's.

To the order of Seſſions, he ſaid, 1ſt. There is only parol evidence of an indenture, which ought to have been produced.

2dly. It does not appear to have been ſtamped.

On ſhewing cauſe, it was urged by the council, that the paupers were ſettled at St. Helen's, and cited the following caſes in ſupport thereof, 2 Salk. 470. Dumbleton v. Beckford, and The King v. St. Mary, Cheſter, Hilary, 14 Geo. 2.

The council for St. Helen's ſaid, the caſe from Salkeld was a ſtrange one, and that the Cheſter caſe was never determined.

Per curiam. This matter is not ſufficiently ſtated to ſhew the binding is within the act, therefore, let both orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. page 292.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made to diſcharge an order of two juſtices for the removal of G. W. from Eakring to Selſon. The caſe ſtated to the court was:

That G. W. a pauper of Eakring, was put out apprentice by indentures properly executed to R. T. to ſerve him as a pariſh apprentice, till he ſhould accompliſh his age of 21 years. The apprentice ſerved his maſter under theſe indentures for ſeveral years; about 3 years before he attained the age of 21, he ran away from his ſaid maſter and loitered for ſome time about the country. In June 1749, the maſter died, and at Martinmas following the ſaid apprentice hired himſelf as a ſervant to W. F. of Selſon, for a year, and ſerved him the time: at Martinmas 1750, he hired himſelf to the ſaid maſter for another year, and ſerved the time, and received all his wages to his own uſe, the executors of the maſter to whom he was bound out apprentice taking no notice of him.

The ſaid G. W. did not attain his age of 21 years, till January 1750, and the ſeſſions were of opinion, that the ſaid G. W. did not by virtue of ſuch hiring and ſervice at Selſon, under the circumſtances aforeſaid, gain a ſettlement in the ſaid pariſh, and therefore diſcharged the original order.

The council for quaſhing the order of ſeſſions urged, that after the maſter's death, the apprentice was at liberty to hire himſelf. That as he was hired for a year, and ſerved a year in Selſon, his legal ſettlement was there. An apprenticeſhip is a perſonal truſt between the maſter and ſervant, and determinable by the death of either party, and cited 1 Salk. 66. The King v. Peck, Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. in ſupport thereof.

The council who was to ſhew cauſe owned he could not defend it, but offered two objections to the original order.

1ſt. That the pariſh of Eakring is at firſt mentioned in it, and it then goes on and ſays, "And has lately intruded himſelf into your ſaid town of Eakring," So that it is uncertain whether Eakring is a town or pariſh, which are different things.

2*d. Objection*. The pauper was only alledged to be likely to become chargeable there; Now chargeable there, does not imply that the pauper was likely to become chargeable to the pariſh, which it is neceſſary that the order ſhould ſtate.

Three judges held the firſt objection to be over nice, and over-ruled the ſame.

Deniſon and Foſter, Juſtices, thought the ſame concerning the ſecond objection, and Wright, Juſtice, ſaid, the word there did not neceſſarily import that the pauper was likely to become ſo to the pariſh.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices for the removal of J. B. his wife and children from Uttoxeter in Staffordſhire, to Sudbury in Derbyſhire, which order was confirmed by an appeal to ſeſſions a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. J. B. his wife and family were certificated from Sudbury to Uttoxeter, J. B. died there, and the wife and ſon became chargeable in 1731, on which they were ſent back from Uttoxeter to Sudbury, where the wife died on the 18th of Auguſt, 1732, the ſon was bound by indenture as a pariſh apprentice from Sudbury to E. B. of Uttoxeter, and ſerved out his apprenticeſhip there, and has done no act ſince to gain a ſettlement in Sudbury.

The juſtices removed him as a certificate man, which order of removal is appealed from, and confirmed by the ſeſſions; they conſidering the certificate as ſtill in force, which was oppoſed, alledging that the pauper had gained a ſettlement in Uttoxeter under his indenture.

The council for the motion ſaid, that this was a caſe not within the 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 11. which confines certificate perſons to two methods only of gaining a ſettlement. On ſhewing cauſe, this reaſoning was oppoſed by the council on the other ſide, and after much debate, the court gave their opinion.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion, that the removal of J. B. from Uttoxeter to Sudbury, did reſtore him as fully as if there had been no certificate at all. A certificate can have its effect but once, and the removal is the effect, which once had, the certificate ceaſes, the intention being to ſecure the pariſh which receives ſuch certificate perſons from being obliged to ſupport the pauper and his family, ſhould they become chargeable.

Then as to what effect this certificate ſhall have after this removal back again, and after it has once had its intended effect.

The conſtruction of the 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. on the ground and reaſon of certificates is, that many poor perſons who are chargeable to the places where they live, merely for want of work, may, and would maintain themſelves in other places where their labour is wanted, without being burthenſome to any place, when continuing them for ever under the certificate, would diſcourage pariſhes from giving certificates to ſuch of their poor, whoſe labour might be uſeful and neceſſary elſewhere, for if this method of holding them down to their old certificate was to prevail, they would be chargeable with them for ever. The legiſlature in making this act was ſo far from thinking of the certificate continuing in force for ever, that it has taken care to ſecure the pariſh from inconveniencies that might ariſe to them by granting the certificate, by prohibiting the pauper's return to the pariſh under a penalty.

The certificate eſtops nothing but what is included in it.

It has been obſerved, that the order of removal of this man back again from Uttoxeter to Sudbury, was in affirmance of the certificate, and that the conſtruction contended for, would deſtroy the certificate, but it does not deſtroy it otherwiſe than by ſatisfying it. Therefore the orders made by the juſtices and ſeſſions muſt be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 373.

Trinity, 28 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of High and Low Biſhopſide.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made to diſcharge an order of two juſtices for the removal of J. T. his wife and ſon from the townſhip of High and Low Biſhopſide, to Dacre cum Buerley, (both in the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire;) a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. J. J. being an inhabitant legally ſettled in Menwith cum Darley, went from thence by certificate to Reade in the townſhip of High and Low Biſhopſide, where he lived ſome years. About eighteen years ago the ſaid J. J. purchaſed a freehold houſe for 10 l. in the townſhip of Dacre cum Buerley, and then quitted Biſhopſide, and went to live in Dacre cum Buerly, to which place he carried his certificate, and delivered it to the proper officer.

In February, 1744, J. T. the pauper was bound apprentice to J. J. by indenture, for the term of ſeven years, which he ſerved to his ſaid maſter, under the ſaid indenture, who all the time inhabited his houſe in the ſaid townſhip of Dacre cum Buerley.

The council for the motion urged, that this caſe depended on the act of 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. and 12 Ann, cap. 18.

The council againſt quaſhing the order of ſeſſions urged, that under ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. a pariſh may give a general certificate, not addreſſed to any particular pariſh, and in that caſe every pariſh to which ſuch pauper comes will be bound to receive him.

Per curiam. We are of opinion, that the pariſh of Dacre cum Buerley is the pariſh wherein the ſaid J. T. was ſettled by his ſervice under the ſaid indenture, and that the ſeſſions have done wrong in quaſhing the original order made for the removal of theſe paupers from Biſhopſide to Dacre cum Buerley: therefore, let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the original order be confirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 381.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices, confirmed by an order of ſeſſions, for removing J. W. his wife and family, from Wilford in Nottinghamſhire, to St. Peter's in Nottingham; a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. Beeſton pariſh gave one T. a certificate to St. Peter's; the ſaid T. took the pauper, J. W. to be his apprentice; and the ſaid J. W. ſerved him a conſiderable time in St. Peter's, afterwards T. removed to St. Mary's, where the ſaid J. W. ſerved him about a year.

The council for the rule moved to make the ſame abſolute, which was not oppoſed by the council on the other ſide, the caſe being the ſame as that of High and Low Biſhopſide.

Per curiam. Let the rule for quaſhing the orders be made abſolute, and let both the orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 391.

Michaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. Raynard v. Chace.

In an action of debt for a penalty on ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. for exerciſing the trade of a brewer without having ſerved an apprenticeſhip; a ſpecial verdict was given to the following effect: that the defendant and one Coxe were, during all the time charged in this count, as partners in the trade, and that the ſame was, and has been for four years, carried on in their joint names; that Coxe ſerved an apprenticeſhip, &c. but Chace never did; and that Coxe is a working brewer, and was paid a ſalary for his labour; which ſalary was always deducted, and allowed to him, previous to a diviſion of the profits; and the entries at the Exciſe Office were in their joint names: but that the defendant Chace never exerciſed the trade himſelf, but only ſhared the profits, and ſtood the riſques of the partnerſhip, and they find it to be a trade within ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

Queſtion; Whether the defendant is within ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. on this ſpecial finding?

The court were unanimouſly of opinion, that this was not an exerciſing the trade within the act; and accordingly judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 1. page 2.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made to quaſh an order of two juſtices, for removing F. O. his wife and child, from Auſtrey to Grindon in Warwickſhire, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. F. O. a pauper about ten years of age, was, in April 1744, bound apprentice by the churchwardens &c. of Grindon, to S. L. of the ſame pariſh, until he ſhould attain the age of 24, under ſtat. 43 Eliz.

The pauper inhabited with his ſaid maſter, and ſerved him under the ſaid indenture till Michaelmas 1754, when the maſter, in conſideration of 40*s.* paid him by his apprentice, agreed to diſcharge him therefrom; and a receipt and diſcharge was wrote on the back of the ſaid indenture, by the ſaid maſter.

The pauper, on leaving his ſaid maſter, hired himſelf for a year, and ſerved the ſame in the pariſh of Highham; at Michaelmas 1755, he hired himſelf for another year to one L. in the pariſh of Auſtrey aforeſaid, and ſerved the year in the ſaid pariſh, and received his wages.

The pauper, 12*th July* 1757, was upwards of twenty-three years of age, but had not attained twenty-four years.

The exception taken to the ſeſſion's order was, that the maſter and the apprentice could not agree to part, nor could the maſter diſcharge ſuch an apprentice without the conſent of the pariſh officers; and therefore he gained no ſettlement by his being hired and ſerving a year, in Higham and in Auſtrey.

Lord Mansfield, on inquiry, finding the apprentice was not of age, ſaid, there was nothing in the caſe; the conſent of an infant apprentice cannot be valid, and therefore his ſubſequent ſervices muſt be naught.

The two other judges on the bench concurred with him in opinion.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the order of the juſtices be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 441.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Weſtbury.

An apprentice to a certificate man does not gain a ſettlement, where the maſter being uncertificated at the time of binding, obtains and delivers a certificate, before his apprentice has ſerved forty days; it being by ſtat. 12 Ann. cap. 18. a condition precedent to the apprentice's gaining a ſettlement, "that he muſt have been bound to, and ſerved for forty days, a maſter who did not either come into or reſide in the pariſh, by licence of a certificate. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 470.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Luke's in Middleſex,

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices, confirmed by ſeſſions, for removing W. H. his wife and two children, from St. Leonard's Shoreditch, to St. Luke's, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. W. H. at fifteen years of age, was bound apprentice by St. Peter's Cornhill, to one F. a ſhoemaker, till he ſhould attain the age of wenty-four years, and ſerved him three years. The maſter then removed to St. Luke's, and took the pauper with him, where he ſerved four years. The maſter then diſcharged him, and told him he might work for himſelf; but no perſon was preſent at their parting, nor were the indentures cancelled, or delivered up.

The pauper hired himſelf to ſeveral maſters of the trade, in different pariſhes, with whom he worked and received wages; and ſaid, he believed F. never knew with whom he worked, nor did he ever aſk him for his earnings, or did he ever account with him for the ſame, or did the ſaid F. ever provide for him after he diſcharged him as aforeſaid.

The pauper worked and lodged the laſt forty days before he attained the age of twenty-four years in the pariſh of St. Leonard Shoreditch.

The council for the motion to quaſh the order made two objections; viz.

2dly, The indentures were never cancelled or delivered up, and therefore he was not properly diſcharged.

The council in ſupport of the orders urged, that it was not a ſervice by the apprentice, in St. Leonard's, with the conſent of his maſter, and therefore not a ſervice under the indenture. The maſter and apprentice had long before parted.

Lord Mansfield. The indenture remained in force, and therefore the relation between the maſter and apprentice continued. His ſervice in St. Leonard's cannot be conſidered either as a ſervice of his firſt maſter, or as an aſſignment of the indenture.

Wilmot, Juſtice. The apprentice's ſettlement in St. Luke's continued. He could not make a contract by way of hiring and ſervice, or do any act to gain a ſettlement.

Per curiam, unanimouſly. Let the rule be diſcharged, and the orders be confirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 542.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Ecleſal-Bierlow in Sheffield.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices, confirmed by ſeſſions, for removing S. W. with his two children, from Warſlow and Elſtone in Alſtonfield, in the county of Stafford, to Eccleſal-Bierlow in Sheffield, in the county of York, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. The pauper, at ſixteen, was bound out apprentice to W. W. cutler, an inhabitant of the townſhip of Eccleſal-Bierlow, for eight years; and reſided there under the ſaid indenture, upwards of five years: On his attaining the age of twenty-one years, he and his maſter came to an agreement to cancel the indentures, and the ſame were properly cancelled between them.

The pauper afterwards was hired for a year to R. M. of Warſlow, and ſerved the ſame, and received his whole wages, and has gained no ſettlement ſince.

The queſtion before the court was, whether an apprentice of full age (bound out. when under age, by the pariſh) can agree to cancel the indentures, and afterwards gain a ſettlement for himſelf by hiring and ſervice for a year.

Lord Mansfield. There ſeems no neceſſity for the pariſh officers joining in the conſent to diſcharge this apprentice; there is no authority for it. The ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. impowers them to bind the man child out apprentice, till he comes to the age of twenty-four; (for without this act he could not be bound out longer than till twenty-one) and two juſtices are to aſſent to this binding. The diſcharge of the apprentice is a matter between the maſter and apprentice only, and if the maſter agrees, the contract may be diſſolved.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute, and let both the orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 562.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made to quaſh an order of two juſtices, for the removing of M. F. widow, and her five children, from St. Matthew's Bethnal Green, to St. Botolph's Aldgate, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. J. F. huſband of the ſaid M. F. and father of the ſaid children, was brought up at the charity-ſchool of St. John Wapping, com. Middleſex. In 1747, he was bound apprentice by indenture, to J. R. a blackſmith, for ſeven years; and ſerved the whole time, under the ſaid indenture, with his ſaid maſter in St. Botolph's aforeſaid. When he was put out apprentice, the ſum of 5*l.* was inſerted in the ſaid indenture, as a conſideration for putting him out apprentice to his ſaid maſter, paid out of a voluntary yearly contribution of the inhabitants of St. John, Wapping, &c. That the ſaid indenture of apprenticeſhip was not ſtamped with any ſtamp denoting 6*d.* in the pound to have been paid by the ſaid maſter for every pound of the ſaid 5*l.* ſo paid to the ſaid maſter as aforeſaid. That the ſaid J. F. in 1754, hired a dwelling-houſe in the pariſh of Aldgate, within the county of the city of London, of one W. W. for five months, during the remainder of a term the ſaid W. W. had therein, and for which the ſaid J. F. agreed to pay the ſaid W. W. the ſum of 4*l.* The ſaid J. F. came with his family to ſettle in the ſaid houſe, and remained therein five months and upwards. That the ſaid houſe was, at ſuch time as the ſaid J. F. hired the ſame, worth, to be let, 10*l.* by the year.

The council for the motion propoſed two queſtions.

1ſt, Whether a ſettlement was gained by the apprenticeſhip? For as it was a charity binding, and the money being paid out of a charity, it may be queſtioned, whether it was neceſſary that the indenture ſhould be ſtamped, as directed by ſtat. 8 Ann. cap. 9.

2d, Whether a taking for five months, paying only 4*l.* could be deemed a taking of a tenement of 10*l.* per ann. value, when 4*l.* for five months is not equivalent to 10*l.* for a year.

1ſt Point. It is a public charity, and a very laudable one: it is not neceſſary that it ſhould be a permanent charity.

The diſtinction between public and private charities is, a private one might be calculated to evade the act, a public one cannot be ſuppoſed to be ſo; but this is a public charity, within the reaſon and letter of the ſtatute.

2d Point. We are concluded from treating this tenement as being under 10*l. per ann.* value, by the finding of the juſtices, who have poſitively declared the tenement was, at the time of taking, worth, to be let, 10*l. per ann.* therefore I am clear on both points.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged, and the order of ſeſſions affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 574.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made to diſcharge an order for removing J. H. his wife and children, from Caſtleton to Hundersfield in com. Lancaſter, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe, J. H. was by indenture of 2d. April, 1741, bound apprentice to J. R. of Caſtleton, hatter, for the term of ſeven years, and worked, dieted, and lodged with his maſter, there for four years and a half, and then married a woman who lived in Hundersfield, after the marriage the apprentice worked and dieted all along with his maſter, in the day time, where his maſter lived, lodged, and carried on his trade; but he lodged at nights with his wife at her father's houſe in Hundersfield, until the expiration of the apprenticeſhip, which was about two years and a half from the time of his marriage. The maſter was acquainted with the intended marriage of his apprentice, and did not take advantage of the covenant in the indenture, ſo as to vacate the ſame, nor did he before the marriage, or at any time after, find fault with his apprentice for ſo doing. The maſter was not aſked, nor did give leave to his apprentice to lodge in Hundersfield, though he knew of the ſame.

The council for and againſt the motion allowed, that the caſe was improperly ſtated; there being no queſtion ſtated, nor is there any adjudication, that the pauper had gained no other ſettlement elſewhere.

Lord Mansfield, I take it for granted, that the ſeſſions meant to ſtate theſe facts only on which they doubted. The point on which they doubted is manifeſt, viz. Whether the apprentice gained a ſettlement in Hundersfield, by lodging there at nights, and you agree it to have been ſettled, that the place where an apprentice lies is the place of his legal ſettlement.

Therefore unleſs you deſire that it may be ſent back again to be reſtated, it is better to ſave the expence of further proceedings. Therefore let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing the order of ſeſſions, and affirming the original order. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 569.

Arbitration and Award.

Eaſter, 3 W. & M. Crofts v. Hannis.

An award without performance is a good bar, but not an accord without ſatisfaction. At this day the ſubmiſſion of both parties is a mutual promiſe whereupon an indebitatus aſſumpſit lies. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 4.

Trinity, 3 W. & M. Chew v. Briggs.

If an award be made, that a general releaſe to the time of award be given, a releaſe to the time of the ſubmiſſion is a good general releaſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 7.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. Matthew v. Ollerton.

In debt on an award, and a verdict for the plaintiff, a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, and the exception taken was, that the matter in difference was referred to the plaintiff himſelf, who made an award.

Not allowed. And the caſe of Serjeant Hard's was recollected by juſtice Dolben, viz. the Serjeant took a horſe from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's bailiff for a deodand; and the Archbiſhop brought his action, and it coming to a trial at the aſſizes in Kent, the Serjeant, by rule of court, referred it to the Archbiſhop to ſet the price of the horſe, which was done accordingly; and the Serjeant afterwards moved the court to ſet aſide the award, for the reaſon now offered; but it was denied by lord Hale. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 226.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Hooper v. Pierce.

In debt on a bond to ſtand to the award of two, and if they could not agree to nominate an umpire, and ſubmiſſion was of all actions, ſuits, and demands to the time of ſubmiſſion. The defendant pleaded no award made: the plaintiff in his replication ſets forth an award made by the umpire, viz. that they ſhould mutually releaſe all demands to each other to the time of the umpirage, and aſſigns a breach: the defendant demurs; and it was objected, that this award was void, becauſe releaſes are appointed to be made of a time out of the ſubmiſſion.

Per curiam. Though antiently ſuch an opinion was entertained, yet, for a long time ſuch an award has been held good: and that for two reaſons, 1ſt. It ſhall not be intended, unleſs the contrary be ſhewn, that any other matter aroſe between the ſubmiſſion and the making the award; and if no matter did ariſe, the arbitrator has awarded no more than he ſhould do; and ſince that, a ſecond reaſon has been added, that ſuppoſing other matters to have ariſen, yet as to that, the award is void; the general words being to be expounded of all matters in controverſy at the time of the ſubmiſſion; and as to other matters ariſing ſince, to be void: and if in ſuch caſe, the party ſubmitting to the award ſhould make a releaſe to the time of the ſubmiſſion, it would be a good performance of the award. Judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 116.

Hilary. 8 W. 3. Cooper v. Pierce.

It was adjudged in this caſe, that an award to make general releaſes, until the time of the award, is good: becauſe as to meſne acts between the ſubmiſſion and award, the award is void, and therefore it does not exceed the ſubmiſſion. And therefore in this caſe, where an action was brought to perform ſuch award, judgment was given for the plaintiff. 3 Mod. 264. Vid. Raymond, vol. 1. page 115.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Stevens v. Matthews.

Reſolved, that if a perſon ſubmits a particular controverſy to arbitration, and the arbitrators award general releaſes, which are executed, they releaſe no more than the particular controverſy.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, if the arbitrators award releaſes from the beginning of the world until the time of making the ſaid award, and the party releaſes until the time of the ſubmiſſion, this is a good performance of the award. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. page 115.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Bedam v. Clerkſon.

In debt on bond, dated the 5th of April, 4 W. & M. conditioned, that if the defendant ſhould perform the award of J. S. of all actions and demands, ſo that the award be made, and ready to be delivered, by three o'clock on the afternoon of the 6th of April, (which was the next day) that then, &c. the defendant pleads, that J. S. made no award of the premiſes, till three o'clock of the aforeſaid day, ſpecified in the aforeſaid condition. The plaintiff replies, and ſhews, that J. S. made an award after entering into the bond, and before three o'clock in the afternoon of the aforeſaid day, viz. at eleven o'clock, that the defendant ſhould pay to W. the plaintiff's ſolicitor 28 s. and that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff, on the 14th of April, 8*l.* and that he ſhould deliver to the plaintiff a certain writing obligatory, or bond, then in his poſſeſſion, and that the parties ſhould then ſign general releaſes, &c. and then aſſigns for a breach, that the defendant did not pay to the plaintiff the 8*l.* the defendant demurred; and his council argued, that the award is not good: for the award to pay 28 s. to W. who is a ſtranger, is ill; except in ſome caſes, where it appears that it is for the plaintiff's benefit, or to diſcharge money owing by him; but nothing of this kind appears, and therefore as to that the award is ill, which the court granted.

2d Except. The award is, that the defendant ſhould deliver to the plaintiff a certain writing &c. which is altogether uncertain; for it does not lay of what ſum the bond was, nor what the penalty, nor of whom it was obtained; and therefore it is void, for the uncertainty in that reſpect; which the court likewiſe allowed. He then argued, that it was an award but of one ſide, and conſequently ill; for the releaſes cannot be performed until the bond is delivered to the plaintiff, which can never be, becauſe it is uncertain what bond is meant; and the releaſes cannot be executed until the bond is delivered to the plaintiff, for the words of the award are, that the defendant ſhould deliver to the plaintiff a certain writing &c. and that then they ſhould execute general releaſes on both ſides. Now the ad tunc, i. e. then, ſhews that the releaſes ſhould not be executed until the bond ſhould be delivered to the plaintiff. So that the arbitrator has awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 8 l. which is all of the award that is good. And ſo it is an award of one ſide. But not allowed.

Per curiam, the ad tunc, i. e. then, refers to the 14th of April, and not to the delivery of the bond to the plaintiff; ſo that the award is mutual enough, for when the defendant has paid the 8*l.* he may demand a general releaſe.

Per curiam. It is as good a word as can be uſed.

The plaintiff's council took exception, that the plea was ill. For the defendant pleads, that the arbitrator made no award before three o'clock of the aforeſaid day; now there are two third hours, and perhaps the award was not made before the firſt third hour, and yet it might be made before the third hour in the afternoon, and therefore the defendant ought to have ſaid, before three o'clock in the afternoon of the aforeſaid day, for want of which, in the afternoon, the plea is ill.

Per curiam. This had been ill, if the plaintiff had demurred to it, but now the replication has made it good. But becauſe the award was mutual enough, and a good breach aſſigned, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raymond vol. 1. page 123.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Reynolds v. Gray.

A motion was made for an attachment againſt the defendant, for refuſing to perform an award made by an umpire on a ſubmiſſion by a rule of court, which after ſome diſpute, was referred.

Per curiam. If the ſubmiſſion be to refer the matter in controverſy to arbitrators, and they do not make an award by ſuch a day, they ſhall not make an umpire; and there the arbitrators cannot chuſe an umpire till the day is paſt for the making their award; and when they have choſen one generally, they cannot afterwards chuſe another, becauſe they have executed their authority: but if they chuſe him conditionally, that he will accept it, and he refuſes, they may chuſe another, becauſe they never executed their authority. Vide Mod. vol. 12. p. 120.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. Freeman v. Bernard.

On an aſſumpſit for the ſale of hops, the defendant pleaded ſubmiſſion to arbitrators, who awarded, that each party ſhould releaſe all actions to each other; that he tendered ſuch a releaſe, and was, and ſtill is ready to releaſe, and ſo prays judgment whether the action, &c. to which the plaintiff demurred; the queſtion was, whether the defendant's plea was a good bar.

Holt, C. J. ſaid, there is no queſtion but if they had awarded a ſum of money to be paid, or a horſe, or any thing in ſatisfaction, the very awarding of this, tho' not actually delivered, would have been a good bar. But now in this caſe, there is nothing awarded, but only a way and means mutually to diſcharge all actions:

tions: now there is a great difference between awarding the doing any thing in ſatisfaction, and the awarding the releaſe of an action; for when a thing is awarded to be done in ſatisfaction, that raiſes a new duty in lieu of the old one diſcharged, as if money be awarded to be paid, debt lies for it; but in the caſe of a releaſe, there is only a method ordered to diſcharge the action: if the award itſelf diſcharges the action there needs no releaſe to be given, becauſe the action was gone before; but the action being not diſcharged till the releaſe comes, it cannot be a bar till it is actually executed and delivered. Judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 130.

In debt on a bond conditioned, that the defendant on behalf of De Ruiter, ſhould ſtand to the award of C. and M. of all matters between the defendant, as attorney to De Ruiter, on the one part, and the plaintiff on the other, concerning certain accounts between the plaintiff and De Ruiter; the defendant pleads no award made; the plaintiff replies, and ſets forth an award to have been made concerning the premiſes, that the defendant, on behalf of De Ruiter, ſhould pay to the plaintiff 45 l. 6 s. 10 d. and that then the plaintiff, and defendant on the behalf of De Ruiter, ſhould execute mutual releaſes to each other, to the uſe of each other, of all actions, matters, &c. concerning thoſe accounts, and aſſigns a breach in non-payment of the money. On demurrer, it was reſolved, 1ſt. The ſubmiſſion of the debt is good: for the defendant puts himſelf in the place of De Ruiter, and is bound to perform the award. 2dly. That this award is a void award, becauſe not mutual, but of the one part only: for firſt the mutual releaſes are to be made between the plaintiff and defendant, where they ought to have been between the plaintiff and De Ruiter, or to have been delivered to Debarry for the uſe of De Ruiter, for a releaſe to Debarry, can by no means benefit De Ruiter; we would, if we could, have conſtrued it to be a releaſe to Debarry for the uſe of De Ruiter; but the words, to the uſe of each other, exclude this conſtruction. The laſt time this caſe was argued it was inſiſted, that this award was good, if there had been no releaſes at all awarded; as to which there hath been ſome doubt if ſuch award be made concerning the premiſes, which this is not. It is pleaded, indeed, and averred to be concerning the premiſes; but when the award is ſet out, that ſays no ſuch thing. But ſuppoſing it to have been made concerning the premiſes, yet, when he comes and does not reſt on that, there is a void thing awarded on the behalf of De Ruiter. It is plain, that the arbitrators did not rely on the payment of the money to be ſatisfaction, but on the releaſes too, which ſpoils the whole award; and this is grounded on Capel and Holland's caſe, Style, 44. Allen, 10. 1 Roll. Abr. 254. and on Hale v. Maſſye's caſe, 1 Roll. Abr. 254. If in this caſe it had been ſaid, that money ſhould have been paid in ſatisfaction of all accounts, or that they had examined all accounts, and on ſtating thereof, there had appeared ſo much due to Bacon, and that they had awarded the money to be paid for all accounts; the ſubſequent matter would not have vitiated it as in the caſe of Burbridge v. Raymond, 1 Roll. Abr. 255. therefore judgment for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 129.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Selby v. Ruſſel.

In debt on a bond for the performance of an award, it was inſiſted on for the defendant, that the award was void, becauſe there was no final determination of the matter ſubmitted, but ſeveral things ſeemed to be ſubmitted to a future determination.

The court ſeemed to be of this opinion; Holt ſaying, that where matters are ſubmitted, they ought to award all abſolutely, without referring to any future examination: and that he knew but one caſe where arbitrators may refer to a future act; and that is, where they award the payment of ſuch coſts as an officer of the court ſhall tax, which has been allowed.

But the matter was adjourned to a future day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 139.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where an award is made by rule of court, it ſhall not be ſet aſide; unleſs there was practice with the arbitrators, or ſome irregularity, as want of notice of the meeting. Alſo you ſhall not take exceptions to the formality of it, but ſhall perform it. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 71.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. ——— v. Palmer.

A ſubmiſſion to an award was of all matters in controverſy by rule of court, and an award made, that ſo much money ſhould be paid on one ſide, and nothing was awarded on the other ſide; and the court was moved to ſet it aſide, as being an award only ex parte.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The common exceptions againſt an award, will not hold here, it being an award on ſubmiſſion by rule of court, for though there be no releaſe awarded on one ſide, yet the ſubmiſſion was of all matters in controverſy; and we will not grant an attachment before they tender a releaſe, for if a perſon comes to have aid of the court, he ſhall do that which is fair and equitable before he obtains it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 234.

In debt on a bond conditioned to perform an award, the defendant pleaded no award made. The plaintiff replied and ſhewed the award, and aſſigned a breach, &c. The defendant demurred, and his council took exceptions to the award. 1. That the award did not purſue the ſubmiſſion; which was, that it ſhould be ready to be delivered at London, and the pleading that the arbitrators made the award at Weſtminſter, ready to be delivered at London, as in the caſe in 2 Cro. 577.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If it is made, it is ready to be delivered; and therefore if (ready to be delivered) had been omitted, it had been well enough, the alledging the award to be of and concerning the premiſes, ſupplies all averments.

2d. Exception, the arbitrators have awarded the bonds of ſubmiſſion to be ſurrendered, which exceeded their authority.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. As to that, it is void, for they could not award any thing concerning them; and if as this caſe is, they had awarded general releaſes to have been given after the delivery of the bonds of ſubmiſſion; the award had been bad, becauſe it would not have been mutual, in regard that the releaſes would have been given after the performance of an act, which they had not power to award, that the defendant ſhould do; and conſequently it is void, and ſo nothing to be done on the part of the plaintiff to the defendant, but only that the defendant ſhould pay money to the plaintiff.

3d. Exception, the plaintiff does not aver that he was ready at the place to receive the money.

Holt. C. J. There is no need, becauſe the defendant ought to do the firſt act, and therefore if he does not come and tender the money, though the plaintiff be not there to receive it, the bond will be forfeited.

4th Exception, the award as to the general releaſes is uncertain, viz. that they ſhould execute mutual general releaſes, according to the extent of the ſubmiſſion.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The ſubmiſſion is ſpecial, of all controverſies between the plaintiff, and defendant as adminiſtrator, &c. ſo that explaining the generality of the award, Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 533.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Chandler v. Driver.

A ſubmiſſion to an award being by rule of court, a motion was made for an attachment for non-performance.

Per curiam. There ought to be an affidavit of an award demanded, &c. and we never grant an attachment for non-payment of money, on an award the firſt day, though the defendant be to do the firſt act. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 317.

Michaelmas, 12 W 3. Anonymous.

Where a matter was referred by rule of court to the determination of the judges of aſſize, it was moved that their determination might be made a rule of court.

Holt, Chief Juſtice: where a matter is referred to arbitrators by rule of court, and they make their award, we will compel a performance of it as much as if the award were part of the rule; ſo a new rule is needleſs. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 71.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Clapcott v. Davy.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit & quantum meruit brought by the plaintiff for work done, and goods ſold and delivered, the defendant pleaded an award, by which it was awarded, that the plaintiff for the work done, &c. ſhould accept a bill of ſale, of the eighth part of the Ship Fortune; and that the plaintiff and defendant ſhould give to each other general releaſes. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and for cauſe of demurrer took the following exceptions to the plea.

1ſt Exception, That the award is pleaded to extend to all the promiſes, whereas it appears, that it extends but to the work done, and therefore the defendant ſhould have pleaded non aſſumpſit to the promiſe for the goods ſold and delivered, and for want of this the plea is ill. For an award is no plea in bar, unleſs ſomething be awarded in ſatisfaction of the plaintiff's demand; and nothing being awarded for the goods ſold and delivered, it is ill. For though there is a general releaſe awarded, yet of itſelf that will be no bar, according to the caſe of Freeman v. Barnard, Trinity, 9 W. 3. though the ſuing of an action in ſuch caſe, may be a breach of the award, on which the defendant might bring his action.

2d. Exception, That the award was, that the plaintiff ſhould accept the bill of ſale, and the defendant was not awarded to deliver it, and ſo nothing was awarded to the plaintiff in ſatisfaction for the work done, and he compared it to the caſe in 2 Saund. 298. & Yelv. 98.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, that nothing was awarded for the goods ſold and delivered, and therefore this caſe was the ſame with that of Freeman v. Barnard, nothing being awarded for that, but a general releaſe. If the bill of ſale had been awarded in full of all demands, it had been good. But this releaſe awarded here, is not a perfect bar, until it be executed. And as to the other matter, he ſaid, that the defendant is not enjoined to do it, which is the only ſatisfaction that the plaintiff ſhould have. But the award is only, that the plaintiff ſhould accept, and then the plaintiff cannot be barred, nothing being awarded to be done by the defendant in ſatisfaction.

At another day, the defendant's council urged, that if the firſt objection ſhould be allowed, the declaration might be ſo varied as to make no award pleadable: and to the ſecond objection, he cited a caſe very lately adjudged in the C. P. viz. Hooper v. Hurſt, where an award was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff 10 l. and fetch away his mare and colt; and on exception, it was held to be mutual, and implied a delivery by the plaintiff; and it was adjudged accordingly, for ſupporting of honeſt awards.

The plaintiff's council in anſwer ſaid, that the words of the award are, that the work done was rated at 32 l. for which, the plaintiff would accept a bill of ſale, &c. now no action for goods ſold and delivered can be brought for work done.

Per Gould, Juſtice. It is, without doubt, that if nothing be awarded but the general releaſes, the plea will be ill: then leaving them out of the caſe, this award cannot extend to this demand. For though it is objected, that the goods ſold and delivered is the ſame demand with that for work done, yet the court cannot take notice of that on ſuch generality. But if the defendant had ſhewn it by particular averments, it might have been conſtrued to be within that part of the award. And averments are admitted in pleading to make an award good.

2d. The ſecond objection ſeems to be a good objection, for an award cannot be made good by implication. If the defendant would not have delivered the bill of ſale, the plaintiff could not have aſſigned a breach of the award by implication; and judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 611.

In caſe, upon three ſeveral promiſes, and an award directing mutual releaſes, pleaded in bar.

Per curiam. This is no good plea, becauſe nothing is awarded that bears an action; but if there were any thing awarded, for which an action would lie, it would be a good plea, though it were not performed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 423.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Mitchel v. Harris.

In debt on an award, ſetting forth a ſubmiſſion to the award of A. and B. provided they made their award by ſuch a day; and if they did not agree, to the umpirage of ſuch perſon whom they ſhould chuſe; on no award pleaded; in reply it was confeſſed, that there was no award, but that the arbitrators had choſe an umpire on ſuch a day, which appeared to be within the time allowed them to make their award in; and the umpirage and breach were ſet forth.

To which the defendant rejoined, that they had not choſe an umpire after the laſt day which was allowed them to make their award: on demurrer it was objected, that it appeared the arbitrators had choſe their umpire too ſoon, viz. within the laſt day allowed them for making their award as arbitrators; and ſuch choice was void, for they could not choſe an umpire till their own authority was determined; for notwithſtanding ſuch chooſing of an umpire, they might make an award after any time before the end of the time allowed them.

It was anſwered, that by this ſubmiſſion the arbitrators had their election to make an award, or to chuſe an umpire by ſuch a day; and that by chooſing the umpire before the day, they had determined their election, and given the authority to the umpire.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, quoted the caſe of Twiſelden and Travers, where the ſubmiſſion was to the award of two, ſo that they made their award before midſummer; and if they could not agree, to ſtand to the umpirage of whoever they ſhould chuſe, ſo as he made his umpirage before that time, and held good; becauſe by the naming an umpire they had determined their authority and election: but if the ſubmiſſion had been to the award of A. and B. ſo that they made an award before midſummer; and if they did not agree, J. S. ſhould be umpire; and they do not agree; but J. S. makes an umpirage before midſummer, that umpirage is void. Judgment niſi for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 512.

The parties entered into mutual bonds, with reſpective conditions, that they ſhould reſpectively ſtand to the award to be made by J. S. of, &c. and if they ſhould conſent to make that ſubmiſſion by rule of court, according to the late act of parliament, that then the bonds ſhould be void. And now a motion was made, that this ſhould be made a rule of court, on affidavit of the execution of theſe bonds, but it was oppoſed, becauſe it was only parcel of the conditon, and the party chuſe rather to forfeit the penalty of the bond.

Per curiam. The conſent to make a ſubmiſſion a rule of court, ought not to be a part of the condition, but only inſerted in the condition, by the late act. Nevertheleſs, Holt, held that this was a plain evidence of the conſent of the parties, and if it were not ſo, the condition would ſignify nothing; for no ſubſequent conſent afterwards would be ſufficient within the act. and a rule was made that it ſhould be made a rule of court, *niſi, &c. Trinity, 13 W. 3. Foreland, or Furlong v. Thornigold, Hornigold, or Marygold.

In debt on a bond for the performance of an award; on no award pleaded, the plaintiff ſets forth part of the award, but not all, and concludes with a profert; the defendant craves oyer, and the award being ſet forth at large, demurs generally for the variance between the award replied, and that ſet forth on the oyer, and Smith v. Yeoman, 1 Saund. 319. was quoted, where the plaintiff in ſuch caſe, ought not only to ſet forth the award, but alſo to aſſign a breach; it was objected that it is enough to ſhew ſo much of the award, as to give himſelf cauſe of action, and to ſhew the award good, i. e. is mutual; and if there be any thing more in it, it ought to come from the defendant's ſide; as in the caſe of an action on an act of parliament. Vide 1 Leo. 72. In debt on an award, nothing was ſet forth, but the ſubmiſſion to the award of J. S. and that he awarded the defendant to pay the plaintiff 10 l. and held the action did lie, and that the plaintiff is bound to ſhew no more than makes for him, and the reſt ought to come from the defendant. Vide Lewis v. Scholaſtica in Plow. that one need ſay no more than is for his purpoſe. Palmer 511. That in order to good pleading, when the defendant pleads, they made no award, and the plaintiff ſhews an award and breach, the defendant ought to rejoin, they made no ſuch award.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You ſet out too little or too much, for you do not ſet out the whole award; but you ſay profert, as if you had ſet it out. But the queſtion will be, whether it will not be well on a general demurrer. 2 R. 3. 13. The iſſue is, they did not make the award; but ſuppoſe part of the award be well, and another part void, and ſo bad, that it vitiates even the whole award, and the plaintiff ſets out only the good part, and they made no ſuch award be pleaded, and then the whole award is ſet out. 18 Ed. 4. 32. Bro. Arbit. 39. 41. But in thoſe days they held an award void in part, to be ſo in all; as award that there ſhould be mutual releaſes for the purpoſe, and that one of the parties ſhould get a third perſon to be ſecurity for the payment of 10 l. to the other, ſuch award would have been held void in the whole in thoſe days, and ſo was the law, till James's 1ſt. time; when as appears in Hob. and Hutt. it was held an award might be good in part, and void in part; but here it was ſaid, that the plaintiff ought to ſet forth all the things awarded to be done by him, though perhaps he need not ſet out every thing to be done on the other ſide, and the omiſſion hereof in the declaration, and ſetting it out in the other part, is a ſubſtantial variance. But if a void part of the award be omitted, ſo it be ſuch a void part, as does not avoid the whole award, that may be well enough; for where an award contains ſeveral matters to be done on the plaintiff's ſide, all which are well awarded, and to be performed by the plaintiff, and he only ſets out enough to intitle himſelf to an action, and they come, and plead no award, and on oyer of the award, it appears, the plaintiff was to do more than he ſet forth, and that thoſe things were well awarded, that is, that the award was legal, as to them; the queſtion is, whether he ought not to ſhew all theſe things that he was to perform, or if the omitting any of them, be not a ſubſtantial variance? It was ſaid, that in debt on an award he need only ſet out enough to intitle him to the action; but that he ought to ſhew ſo much of the award, as was neceſſary to make it good. And Holt ſeemed to approve of the caſe in 1 Leo. 72. Vide Style 98. 1 Sid. 161, that debt lies on an award, without ſetting it all out. It was moved, that an award made by arbitrators, choſen by the conſent of the parties, at niſi prius at Guildhall, and whoſe ſubmiſſion was made by rule of court there, and afterwards made a rule of the King's Bench, might be ſet aſide, on affidavit of the miſmanagement of the arbitrators; and that they refuſed to hear what the defendant could ſay, after they had heard the plaintiff.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, warmly oppoſed this, as contrary to all practice that he had ever known, which was, that in ſuch caſe, the integrity of the arbitrators (whom the parties by conſent have choſen to be their judges) ſhall never be arraigned, no more than the integrity of any other judge. But Powel, Powys and Gould, Juſtices, ſaid, that it was abominable to give any countenance to ſuch proceedings, and that therefore they ought to be puniſhed, becauſe they abuſed the office of a judge. Trinity, 2 Ann. Bird v. Bird.

In debt on a bond, the defendant prayed oyer of the condition, which was for performing the award of J. S. and pleaded no award made. The plaintiff replied, and ſet forth an award; which was, that the plaintiff and defendant ſhould pay ſuch a certain ſum yearly to A. for the uſe of Mrs. B. their mother. The defendant's council took an exception to the award; that this was to award a thing to be done to a third perſon, who is a ſtranger to the ſubmiſſion, and conſequently of a matter out of the power of the arbitrators.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that a general award of money to a ſtranger was good; for it ſhall be intended the ſubmittants were bound as truſtees, or were liable to pay the ſame; and the payment ſhall be intended for their benefit, unleſs the contrary appear.

Powell, Juſtice, was of opinion, that it muſt appear to be for their benefit, and it ſhall not be ſo intended, unleſs it does appear; but in the principal caſe he held, that it ſhould be intended to be for their benefit, or rather that it appeared to be ſo, becauſe the payment was to be for the uſe of the mother. Vide 5 *Co. That the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 10*l.* in full of all demands, and alſo give him a general releaſe. 3. That on receipt of the 10*l.* the plaintiff ſhould alſo execute a releaſe to the defendant.

The defendant's council took the following exceptions to the award. 1ſt, It is not final; for it is only, that all ſuits now depending ſhould ceaſe, which is no more than that the party ſhould be nonſuited, which is not final, and therefore not good: it is true, no new ſuit can be brought while theſe are pending, becauſe theſe may be pleaded in abatement; nor can theſe be proſecuted becauſe of the award; but if either of the parties die, new ſuits may be proſecuted for the ſaid cauſes, notwithſtanding this award.

2d. The awarding a general releaſe would indeed make it a good award, if it were concluſive, but it is left in the plaintiff's election, whether he makes any or not; for the releaſe is ordered to be made on the receipt of the 10*l.* and it is not awarded that he ſhall receive it; and if he refuſes, he is not bound to releaſe.

3d. The releaſe is ordered to be till the time of the award; but we do not much inſiſt on that, the authorities being againſt us on a double reaſon: 1. That no cauſe of action ſhall be intended to have ariſen between the time of the ſubmiſſion and award, if it be not ſhewn. 2. That a releaſe to the time of the ſubmiſſion is a good releaſe in purſuance of the award; and the latter, in our opinion, is the better reaſon; for a man might have a cauſe of action accrue to him between the ſubmiſſion and award, and not know of it; and it were hard to put him under a neceſſity of releaſing it: and the reaſon why a releaſe to the time of ſubmiſſion is held good, is not becauſe it ſhall be intended to be the meaning of the arbitrators that it ſhould be ſo, but it is rather a controlling of their meaning, as far as it is void by conſtruction of law.

The council on the other ſide ſaid, the awarding that all duties ſhall ceaſe, is that they ſhall for ever ceaſe; and it extinguiſhes the duty; for if the words had been that all actions ſhould ceaſe, the duty had been gone; for if the remedy be gone, the right is gone: and the word ſuit is of a larger extent and ſenſe than action; for by releaſe of ſuits, one may bar himſelf of execution, which he cannot do by releaſe of action. 1 Rol. Abr. 261. p. 7. That ſuch award extinguiſhes the duty. Eaſt. 29 Car. 2. Strangford v. Green, and 11 W. 3. Ball v. Heſcot; in this court, the award was, that one of the parties ſhould pay the other ſo much money, on ſuch a day, and that all ſuits ſhould ceaſe till failure of payment; and good. 1 Lev. 58. Beſides, this ſum being awarded in full of all demands; and the ſubmiſſion being with an ita quod, i. e. ſo that, &c. it is in itſelf final. Aleyn. 26. 1 Rol. Abr. 260. pl. 55. 1 Sid. 154. 1 Lev. 132, 133. Hob. 190. Aleyn 85. Style 27. 1 Rol. Abr. 258, 259. 3 Cro. 851. 3 Cro. 448.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. As to the releaſe, you ſay that it is put on the party's own act, in receiving or refuſing the money, to releaſe or not; but it has been held in London, in Craven's caſe, in the latter end of Style, that where a thing is argued to be done on payment and receipt, that tender of the payment, and refuſal, intitles the party to it as much as an actual payment; and the authorities have been ſo ever ſince. Quære 9. Co. 79. Dyer 356. 1 Lut. 224, 227, 238. Lev. Ent. 30. 2 Sand. 96.

Then as to the next point, that all ſuits pending between the parties ſhould ceaſe; the queſtion is, whether this goes to the cauſe of action? A man releaſes his action, and has no other remedy for his right, but an action does not diſcharge the right of the thing. Now here is an action depending, if a man releaſes that action, he thereby releaſes the right of action; and, by the ſame reaſon, determining a ſuit determines the right of the thing, becauſe there is no remedy but by ſuit; then this award is final. If in treſpaſs the plaintiff after the laſt continuance releaſes the action, the right is gone; and if a releaſe would do it, why not an award? Indeed if the party had two remedies, one by action and another by entry, if he releaſed the action, he might notwithſtanding enter.

And as for the releaſe to the time of award made, it ſhall not be underſtood, that there was any cauſe of action meant, if it be not ſhewn; and if there be, the party may ſhew it, and ſay that he tendered a releaſe to the time of the ſubmiſſion.

Powell, Juſtice. I think all the three points are final; or if but one of them is ſo, the award will be good for ſo much, if that does not depend on another branch of the award, which is ill; and if there were any ſuits pending, the awarding they ſhould ceaſe, is that they ſhould be at an end for ever; and the words (now depending) were only to ſhew what ſort of actions they made their award of. And the ten pounds being awarded to be paid in full of all demands, ſhall be underſtood, in full of all demands to the time of ſubmiſſion, and not to the time of payment. And if money be awarded to be paid, and the other on receipt makes a releaſe, that I take to be an award to receive: and for this he quoted a caſe in the C. B. in his time, and 1 Rol. Ab. 254, 255. pl. 16.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Here the very awarding a ſum of money is a bar of actions; for by the awarding money to him, thereby a duty ariſes, and veſts in him, which is a good bar, wherever accord with ſatisfaction is a good plea; but antiently it has been held, that if the thing awarded be not money, but the doing of ſome collateral act, the party to whom it is awarded is without remedy, and therefore ſuch award would be void. But the contrary has been held ſince; for if two men ſubmit to the award of a third perſon, they two do alſo thereby promiſe expreſsly to abide by his determination; for agreeing to refer is a promiſe in itſelf; but where a ſum of money is ordered to be paid, it is immediately a duty; and if there was no more than an award to pay a ſum of money in ſatisfaction of all demands, it would be final. And judgment therefore was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 33.

In debt on a bond for performance of an award, the condition was, to ſtand to &c. ſo it were ready to be delivered at ſuch a time; on no award pleaded, and an award ſet forth, but not ſaid that it was ready to be delivered at the time.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. As ſoon as it was made it was ready to be delivered, and ſo it has been adjudged, but judgment was ſtayed on another exception. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 82.

In an action of debt for non-performance of an award, where the bond ſtates, ſo that it were made and ready to be delivered to the parties, or ſuch of them as ſhould deſire it by ſuch a day; no award was pleaded, and the plaintiff ſet out a parol award, and an averment that it was ready to be delivered to the ſaid parties. On demurrer, the words, ready to be delivered, it was ſaid, neceſſarily import, that the award was to have been in writing; and a caſe in the C. B. Trinity, 1 Ann, Wood v. Ardiſt, was cited as in point: and Hungate's caſe, 5 Co. 108. where the condition of the performance was, ſo that the award be made, and delivered to each of the parties, there being two defendants; and held that a delivery to one of them was ſufficient, yet if it could be a parol award, a publication of it to both would be ſufficient.

The council on the other ſide replied; a parol award may be delivered as well as a writing, as in common ſpeaking, to deliver a meſſage; to deliver himſelf well, when a man expreſſes his thoughts gracefully: and delivery is to be underſtood according to the ſubject matter; if it be of a writing, it muſt be manual; if of a parol matter, it muſt be an oral delivery: and relied on Dyer, 218. pl. 5. Co. Ent. 126. as caſes in point; and 3 Bulſt. 311. Capel v. Rogers, and ſaid that Benloe, 97. which caſe ſeems to differ from Dyer, is very obſcure in his report of the caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There are two diſtinct things to be done: 1ſt. The making; and, 2dly. To be ready to be delivered: if it had been, ſo as the ſaid award be ready to be delivered, it might be well: if it were in writing, it would be ſufficient to ſay, that it was made; for what is made in writing is then ready to be delivered, becauſe then it is deliverable: but the queſtion is, Whether a parol award be properly deliverable? Or whether we ſhall not underſtand the meaning of the words, ready to be delivered, to be a delivery in writing? And he and the court ſeemed clear it ſhould be ſo underſtood. But at another day, Holt, Chief Juſtice, having peruſed the above caſe in Dyer, and the record of it in Co. Ent. ſaid, they were very ſtrong authorities for the plaintiff, and that the award might have been made behind the parties backs, and delivered, viz. pronounced over again to their faces; and if ſo, what may be delivered may be ready to be delivered: and that the caſe, as it is in Benloe, was without meaning.

Powell, Juſtice. If the words had been only ſo as it be made and delivered, I would take delivery to be only to give the parties notice of the award; but, ready to be delivered, I think, muſt be a delivery in writing; and if iſſue was taken upon the readineſs of delivery, how ſhould it be tried?

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If it were a new thing, I ſhould be apt to think ſo too; but when I find ſo clear an authority in the caſe, and ſome reaſon for it, I cannot depart from it; and ſo ſaid Gould; but they were willing to be well ſatisfied of the caſe cited lately in the C. B. and therefore no rule was given.

In Trinity term following, this matter coming on again, the court delivered their opinion thereon as follows:

On mature conſideration, we are of opinion, that notwithſtanding the late caſe in C. B. a parol award is capable of a delivery, viz. A declaration of it to the parties, or either of them, if they deſire it; and that being ſo, as ſoon as the arbitrators have agreed on the award, it is ready to be delivered; and the readineſs of delivery needed not to have been averred, becauſe the alledging an award made, imports it; nor is the condition in the ſubmiſſion therefore vain; for if after the award made, the parties, or either of them, had come, and aſked the arbitrators what award they had made, and they had refuſed to tell, then the defendant might have pleaded that it was not ready to be delivered, ſhewing that matter: and perhaps, if the arbitrators had died in a ſhort time after the award made, ſo as the party could not have convenient time to aſk them; for the intent of the condition was, that the parties ſhould have notice of the award; and it is not eſſential to a parol award, that it ſhould be notified to both parties: and as to the aforeſaid ſum, though it was agreed the aforeſaid could not without tautology be applied to B. the party, becauſe of the word aforenamed before given him; yet, becauſe in ſenſe it could not be applied to the ſum, there being no ſum mentioned before, they all agreed that they would make a comma after the aforeſaid, and ſo join it to the party rather than ſuffer it to go to the ſum to vitiate the awdrd, and where an aforenamed may refer in good ſenſe to either of two antecedents, there it may vitiate, becauſe of uncertainty; but where it has but one thing to refer to, and joining it to that would make it nonſenſe, it ſhall be rejected as idle. Vide 2 Vent. 242. 3 Bulſt. 311. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 160. 176.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Winter v. Garlick.

An award was made, that one of the parties ſhould pay the other 10 l. and the coſts of a ſuit depending in an inferior court, and then to give mutual releaſes.

Per curiam. To pay ſuch coſts, as the maſter ſhall tax, is good; for that is certain which may be rendered certain, but this is uncertain, and carries it farther than has hitherto been allowed. Adjourned. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 76.

In treſpaſs for aſſault, &c. the defendant as to the with force and arms, pleads not guilty, and as to the reſt, pleads a ſubmiſſion to an award of all controverſies, and ſets forth an award made, viz. that the defendant ſhould provide two fowls at his dwelling houſe, in Old Bedlam in London, to be eat by the plaintiff and his friends on Wedneſday or Thurſday in ſuch a week, in ſatisfaction of the ſaid treſpaſs; and avers, that on Thurſday in the ſaid week he did provide the fowls at his houſe aforeſaid, &c. but that neither the plaintiff or his friends came there. To this it was replied, that Wedneſday was the day appointed for the treat, and a traverſe that it was Wedneſday or Thurſday. To which on a rejoinder and demurrer, it was urged that the bare award in this caſe was not a good bar, without an execution of it, becauſe it was of a collateral thing, of which the plaintiff could not have an action: and for this was cited Keilw. 121. for an accord without a ſatisfactory conſideration, cannot be good, and if we have no remedy for what is awarded, it is in the power of the defendant, whether he will ſatisfy us or not. 9 Ed. 19. a. 9 Co. 79. 17 Ed. 4. 8. a. accord, and tender and refuſal, is not a good bar; and the reaſon is, becauſe the action would not lie on the accord for the plaintiff. 16 Ed. 4. 8. 9. 1 Ro. Ab. 128. Style 245.

2d. Exception was, that the treſpaſs declared on was, wherefore with force and arms, &c. and there was no conſideration on ſubmiſſion of the with force and arms, and ſo this award could not be a bar to the declaration,

3d. Except. That it being at the election of the defendant to provide the fowls on Wedneſday or Thurſday, he ought to give the plaintiff notice on which of the days he would provide them, and the time of the day on which he would have them ready; for otherwiſe, if the plaintiff came on Wedneſday to his houſe with his friends, the defendant might ſay he would not provide the fowls till next day, and if the plaintiff did not come on Wedneſday, the defendant might ſay he provided them the day before.

4th. Except. In this caſe it was not enough to ſay, that he had provided the fowls, but he ſhould have tendered them, for the words of the award are, provide and give, &c.

5th Except. There is no venue laid where the fowls were provided, only ſaid to be at the defendant's houſe in Old Bedlam, London: and in London the venue ought to be laid in the ward, which is like a hundred, or in a pariſh at leaſt, which is in the nature of a bill in another county. To the firſt objection it was anſwered, that indeed the old authorities held that an award of a collateral matter in ſatisfaction of damages, was not a good plea in bar, without alledging performance; becauſe as was then held, no remedy lay on the award; but though it be true that no remedy lies on the award itſelf for it, yet an aſſumpſit lies on the ſubmiſſion, which is a promiſe of performance. Chief Juſtice Holt very ſtrongly inclined to that opinion, for he ſaid it had often been held latterly, that the mutual ſubmiſſion was an actual mutual promiſe of performance; and if this had been on a bond awarding a collateral matter, it had been a good award, becauſe the party has a remedy on the bond of ſubmiſſion, and if there be a remedy for the thing awarded, it need not be averred executed, and if ſo, the fourth objection, the want of pleading of a tender falls to the ground. As to the not ſubmitting the with force and arms, it concerns the Queen, and cannot be ſubmitted by the parties.

As to the third objection, it was anſwered, that the giving of notice was not neceſſary, for the defendant by the award had the advantage of an election given him: and to the fifth, that the not laying of a venue was helped by a verdict.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The want of a venue is only curable by ſuch a plea as admits the fact, for which it was neceſſary to lay a venue; as if debt be on a bond, and no venue laid where the bond was made, on demurrer it will be ill; but if the defendant pleads a releaſe, whereby the bond is admitted, that helps the declaration. But in this caſe, by reaſon of the frivolouſneſs of the action, the court gave no judgment, but adviſed the parties to compromiſe the matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 221.

In an action of debt, for non-performance of an award, the arbitration bond ſtates, ſeveral differences between the plaintiff and defendant, concerning a piece of ground ſouth of the plaintiff's houſe, adjoining to the River Thames, and uſed as a wharf, and the erecting ſeveral piles of boards and ſcaffolds thereon, to the nuiſance of the plaintiff's houſe, within the liberties of St. Bride's Hoſpital, London. The defendant pleaded no award made; and an award being ſet forth in the declaration, adjudging that the defendant ſhould enjoy the ſaid piece of ground as a wharf, and that the ſaid ſcaffolds ſhould be pulled down and removed; on demurrer to the defendant's plea, ſeveral exceptions were taken to the award.

1ſt Exception. It does not appear what the date of it was; ſo it may be made without authority, as before the ſubmiſſion; but not allowed; for it is alledged to have been made on ſuch a day, which appears to be within the time; and if no date be ſet out, it ſhall be intended it had none, and then it is good from the delivery, according to 5 Co. Clayton's caſe; and every writing or deed has a date in law, viz. the time of the delivery thereof, and a deed may bear date one day, and be delivered on another, and the day of delivery is the date, and the other the bearing date; and the making an award or deed, is that which gives it the eſſence and being of a deed or award; and that is the date of it.

2d Exception. It was objected, that the ſubmiſſion was of ground, &c. within the liberty of the Hoſpital of Bridewell, and of ſcaffolds, &c. newly erected; and the piece of ground mentioned in the award is not averred to be within that liberty, nor newly erected.

Per curiam. The award is ſaid to be of and concerning the premiſes, and therefore it ſhall be underſtood to be within the ſubmiſſion, if the contrary be not proved, which the defendant cannot now do after no award generally pleaded, for that would be a departure.

3d Exception, It is not awarded who ſhall pull down the ſcaffold, therefore the award is not final or certain, and void for uncertainty; and this is not to be helped by an averment or intendment of the court. Vide Style 365. 1 Roll. Abr. 164. 5 Co. 78. a. Cro. El. 432. Mo. 39. And the difference is, when a thing uncertain may in the nature of the thing be made good by averment or intendment, and when not; as if one covenants to give a bond or obligation for the enjoyment of land, there it muſt be to the value of the land, or if for payment of a certain ſum, it ſhall be in double the ſum. Cro. Jac. 116. But in an award it is not ſo, for to admit of averment is to admit the matter not determined, ſince the averment would be traverſable; and to intend would be to make, not to expound the award: and it is not an anſwer to ſay that it appears on the face of the award that the land was the defendant's, and therefore the nuiſance being thereon, it ought to be removed by him, who may come there without being a treſpaſſer.

For it does not neceſſarily appear, that the ground was his; the award being only, that he ſhould uſe it as a wharf; which rather ſhews, that it was diſputed whether it was his right before.

2dly, It does not ſhew it to be his now; for the words only are, that he ſhould uſe it as a wharf; that is, that he ſhould have liberty of wharfage there: and if it be admitted to be his ground before, (for if it were the ground of the plaintiff, the erection of the boards could not be a nuiſance to his houſe), yet a nuiſance is by law abateable by him to whom it is a nuiſance; and if it were not, the arbitrators might, by awarding the plaintiff to pull it down, enable him to do it, without becoming a treſpaſſer thereby. The award being left indefinite, whether the plaintiff or defendant ſhall pull it down, makes it void for uncertainty; and then this being aſſigned only for breach, though the award for other particulars was good, the plaintiff cannot recover; there appearing no cauſe of action on the whole record for him, according to Turner's caſe. 8 Co.

Holt, C. J. was of opinion, (though Powell, Powys, and Gould diſſented) that when the arbitrators declare it to be a nuiſance, and that it ſhould be removed, they ought to have mentioned who was to remove ſuch nuiſance. And though in point of law any perſon may remove what is to his nuiſance, yet in caſe of an award, which is by judges of equity as well as law, it muſt be intended that it was to be done by the party on whoſe ground it was. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 244.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Knight v. Burton.

In debt on a bond, conditioned for performance of an award, which was ſet forth, and a breach aſſigned: on demurrer, exception was taken,

1. That the award recited, that the parties were joint-tenants of ſuch land, and ordered they ſhould make partition by mutual conveyances, which was ſaid to be uncertain, and not making an end of the matter, by ſhewing what moiety or part the one ſhould have, and what the other. To which it was anſwered and reſolved, that it was well enough; for whereas they were joint tenants before, they would now become tenants in common.

2. It was objected, that could not be, for it was further awarded, the one ſhould have one half part or moiety, which ſhews they intended ſomewhat more than a tenancy in common, but left it uncertain; for dimidia pars, i. e. an half part is a moiety uncertain; and in this very award, they in other matters uſed the Latin word medietas for a moiety in certainty, as medietas of the profits of ſuch a ſhip to be delivered, which is to be underſtood of a moiety divided, for otherwiſe it could not be delivered.

Per curiam. Dimidia pars, or medietas, ſhall be reſpectively taken for a moiety divided, or undivided, according to the ſubject matter, as medietas of a thing to be delivered, ſhall be underſtood a divided moiety, becauſe it cannot be delivered, except it be divided; ſo dimidia pars, if it be ſuch a thing as cannot be reduced to a divided moiety, ſhall be underſtood a moiety undivided; as in dower, a woman demands a third part, if it be of ſuch a thing as is capable of having a third part divided made of it, it ſhall be ſo; but if it be of a third part of lands of a tenant in common, a mill, &c. it muſt be a third part undivided.

3d. Objection. That they awarded money to be paid, which of their own ſhewing, on the face of the award did not appear to be due; for it was, whereas ſo much money has been diſburſed by the one party, as is alledged; ſo, though if they had ſaid, whereas ſo much money has been diſburſed, it would be intended, it appeared to them to have been ſo, yet when they go further, and ſay, as it is alledged, that takes away ſuch intendment; for they ſhew their certainty of it was only becauſe it was alledged, which might be without any proof; or alledged by any perſon whatever: but it was reſolved, that alledged ſhould be underſtood as alledged, and not controverted or diſproved by the other ſide.

4th Objection. That it was awarded, that a ſuit between the parties in Chancery ſhould be diſmiſſed, which it was urged was ill; for that an award ought to be final, and that a ſuit in Chancery might be diſmiſſed, on payment of coſts, ſo as the party might begin again; indeed, if the diſmiſſing be abſolute, it is final; but if it be diſmiſſed, as is frequently done here, without prejudice, the party may begin again, and therefore an award of diſmiſſing a ſuit in Chancery is uncertain, but not final; and is like the awarding, that one of the parties in a ſuit at law be nonſuited, which is void.

Per curiam. It is true, awarding that one of the parties be nonſuited is void, for that is not final; but when the award is, that a ſuit commenced be diſmiſſed, that muſt be underſtood that it ſhall be diſmiſſed, and ceaſe for ever; that is a ſubſtantial diſmiſſion, and Ceſſer, and not the ſhadow of one; as if the condition of a bond be to deliver up another bond by ſuch a day to be cancelled, and the obligee before the day puts the firſt bond in ſuit, and obtains judgment thereon, and at the day tenders it to be cancelled according to the letter of the condition of the ſecond obligation, yet his obligation is forfeited; and diſmiſſing here is in Latin dimittere, anglice, to diſcharge; and to diſcharge a ſuit is to releaſe it, and therefore final. And if an action be depending on a bond, and after the laſt continuance, the plaintiff releaſes the action, that releaſes the duty: beſides, this award is, that what is awarded on the other ſide ſhould be in full of debts, dues, and demands, then owing; and the word demands extends to all things that the one party has a right to demand or exact of the other at the time of ſubmiſſion; and the words due and owing do not qualify or reſtrain it to a debt, or other ſpecial demand, that is more ſtrictly ſpeaking a duty; for whatever a man has a right to demand of another, may well be ſaid to be due and owing from the other to him; ſo it may extend to right of entry into land, to a ſuit for partition, &c.

Note. This was agreed to be a ſtated rule in awards, that are ſaid to be of and concerning the premiſes; that if the words uſed in them be in their own nature more comprehenſive, and ſo capable of being extended to things not within the ſubmiſſion, yet they ſhall be intended that there was no other matter between the parties for them to lay hold on, but what was ſubmitted, if the contrary be not ſhewn: ſo, on the other hand, if the words are more narrow, and leſs comprehenſive, than to take in all the matter of ſubmiſſion; yet it ſhall be intended, that no more was in controverſy than what the words naturally comprehend, if the contrary be not likewiſe ſhewn. Judgment niſi for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 231.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Bell v. Gipps. Error.

In debt on a bond, with a condition to perform an award; to which action the defendant pleaded no award; and the plaintiff in reply ſet out an award, whereby the defendant was to pay the plaintiff 21 l. and that the plaintiff ſhould deliver up to the defendant ſuch a bond, being the matter in controverſy between them to be cancelled, and that the plaintiff and defendant ſhould give to each other mutual releaſes to the day of the date of the ſaid bond; and the plaintiff aſſigned for breach the non-payment of the 21 l. On iſſue joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff in the C. B. On a writ of error brought on the judgment, the plaintiff in error's council took exception to the award, that it was not final, for the delivery up of the bond would not deſtroy the effect of it; but ſtill the plaintiff might bring an action on it. And as for the releaſe, that was to be only to the day of the date of the ſaid bond, which muſt be intended to be the bond that was to be delivered up, that being the bond that was laſt mentioned, and the controverſies ſubmitted were ſince that.

The defendant's council in error urged, that it did not appear that the bond to be delivered up had any date, and therefore the words muſt be applied to the bond of arbitration, which had a date; and alſo that the word dated ſignified delivery, and therefore it muſt be conſtrued to the day of the delivering up of the ſaid bond; and that it did not appear that there was any other matter in difference beſides this bond; and that the court would not intend any, and if there were none, the releaſe extending to diſcharge that bond, the award will be final. Beſides, the award was good without that, for there is money awarded to be paid on one ſide, and a bond to be delivered up on the other to be cancelled: and he cited 2 Vent. 242. that an award by parol ſhould be favourably expounded.

Holt, J. C. ſaid, that the award was good. For this bond, which is awarded to be delivered up, was the foundation of all the controverſies between the parties; at leaſt it does not appear, that there were any controverſies between them about any thing elſe, or that have ariſen ſince the date of the bond; and therefore the awarding the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, and a general releaſe to the defendant to the day of the date of that bond, will make an end of all the controverſies between them.

Powell, Juſtice, held, that the award was mutual and final, if the releaſe was left out of the caſe: and therefore the judgment in C. B. was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1141.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. Lupart v. Welſon.

An action of covenant was brought on an agreement to refer all matters in difference to an arbitration, a difference aroſe about a certain demand, and the arbitrators awarded 500 l. to be paid, and general releaſes to be given. It was argued, that though no expreſs words were in the covenant, that the defendant ſhould perform, yet it would be good by implication, and a variety of caſes were cited, particularly 8 Co. 82. 1 Lev. 113. 1 Vent. 69, &c. For wherever there is an equitable intereſt, it is ſufficient to ſubmit to an award. T. Jones 158.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The very referring a matter to arbitration is a mutual undertaking, that each party ſhall perform his part of the award; for otherwiſe it cannot be ſaid to be referred. Cannot a ſtranger covenant, that a third perſon ſhall perform the award between A. and B.? This indeed cannot bind the perſon to a performance, but it will be a breach of the other's bond. If a man aſſigns a bond, and afterwards brings an action thereon in his own name, this is a breach of the agreement; the very aſſignment importing a covenant, that the aſſignee ſhall bring the action in the name of the aſſignor, and recover and take the money to his own uſe. Formerly, if an award was made to pay a ſum of money, this might have been pleaded in bar, though without ſatisfaction; becauſe the law gave an action of debt for the money on the award, and ſo a remedy. And although that law is now altered, yet, when two perſons ſubmit to an award, this amounts to mutual promiſes. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 170.

Per Powys, Juſtice. The law in many caſes gives a double remedy, as ſuppoſe a clauſe in a will, that whatever controverſy ſhall ariſe on the conſtruction of it, ſhall be decided by ſuch and ſuch arbitrators; the parties will have their election to decide their controverſies, either by arbitrators, or by law. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. page 59.

Hilary, 12 Ann. Abrahat v. Brandon.

In this caſe the arbitrators taking notice of the difference between the parties, awarded, that the defendant ſhall pay to the plaintiff ſo much money on the 1ſt of April, ſo much on the 1ſt of May; and that the parties ſhall pay 1 l. 5 s. each to the arbitrators for their trouble; and that on payment of the money aforeſaid, on the 1ſt of May, the parties ſhould give mutual releaſes to each other to the time of the making the award.

It was objected to this award, that it was made on one ſide only; for nothing was awarded in favour of the defendant but the releaſe, for which the defendant had no remedy at law; the plaintiff not being by the award bound to make the releaſe until after payment of the money aforeſaid, on the 1ſt of May. Now, the money aforeſaid refers not only to the ſums awarded to be paid on the 1ſt of May, but to all the ſums, and therefore to the ſum awarded to be paid to the arbitrators, which part of the award is entirely void.

Beſides, the releaſe awarded by the arbitrators is a releaſe exceeding their power, which extends only to the time of ſubmiſſion; whereas the releaſe, according to the award, extends to the time of the award made.

The court were of opinion, that the award was good; for the money aforeſaid ſhall refer to all the ſums that concern the juſtice of the award, but not to that ſum which does not, and as to which the award is void.

And as to the ſecond objection, it is capable of two anſwers; one a common one, viz. that it ſhall not be intended that any new difference has ariſen between the time of the ſubmiſſion, and of making the award, unleſs it be ſhewn eſpecially that there has.

The other anſwer is, that a releaſe of all, &c. to the time of the ſubmiſſion, is a good performance of an award ordering a releaſe to be given of all, &c. to the time of the award. This opinion Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he had taken from Chief Juſtice Holt's own mouth, in the caſe of Freeman v. Barnard, 8 W. The council likewiſe quoted Lutw. 524. 549. to the ſame purpoſe. The reaſon is plain, becauſe that part of the releaſe which extends to the intermediate time, exceeds the power of the arbitrators. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 201.

There are two points in this caſe:

1ſt. Whether the award was a good award?

2d. Whether the breach was well aſſigned?

As to the firſt, the court were of opinion that the award was a void award, though it was not inſiſted on by the counſel, and that for this reaſon.

The award was made the 23d of June, and the award orders ſo much rent, which by the award itſelf appeared not to be due until the 24th, to be paid by A. to B. in ſatisfaction of 6 l. which the arbitrators did judge to be owing to B. Now, this rent being due on a day ſubſequent to the award, the clauſe in the award concerning it is void, Roll. Abr. 145. pl. 8. is an expreſs authority. And the reaſon is plain, viz. becauſe the rent may become extinct, either by ſurrender or eviction, before due. And this clauſe being void, the whole award becomes void too; for though an award may be void in part, and good for the reſt, yet this muſt not be when it is void in the part that concerns the juſtice of the award, which is the caſe here; for if mutual releaſes are to be given, though the rent be not paid according to the award, B. will be without remedy for that money which the arbitrators acknowledged to be due to him. Saund. 292. 2 Cro. 584.

But, 2dly. Suppoſing this to be a good award, we are of opinion that the breach is not well aſſigned; for the ſubmiſſion being of all ſuits, &c. between A. and B. and the award purſuing the very words of the ſubmiſſion, viz. that all ſuits, &c. between A. and B. ſhould ceaſe; it is evident that the parties to the award, nor the arbitrators, did deſign, the former that their ſubmiſſion, or the latter that their award ſhould extend to ſuits depending between A. and B. and others. But be the intention of the parties what it will, the law is plain, that the proſecution of a ſuit between A. and B. and others, is no breach of ſuch an award. 1 Roll. Abr. 249. the caſe of Brockas v. Sir John Savage, is a much ſtronger caſe, becauſe huſband and wife are to many purpoſes in law conſidered as one perſon. A certiorari to return the record of a ſuit between A. and B. after return of a record between A. and B. and B. C. the record not removed. Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. on an indictment in this court. Brown's caſe. The ſame law as to orders. Therefore judgment for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 204.

Trinity, 2 Geo. Clark v. Elwick.

The court was moved the preceding term, that one of the witneſſes to a ſubmiſſion to arbitration might be obliged to make affidavit thereof, in order to make it a rule of court, purſuant to ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 15.

It was inſiſted, that affidavits are voluntary; but the reaſon of the witneſs's refuſal in this caſe was, becauſe the award was unfairly made, and they had no other remedy to prevent the ſubmiſſion being made a rule of court.

Per curiam. The hardſhip of this particular caſe will not at all vary our rule, which muſt be a ſtanding method for the future. The act of parliament has appointed only this ſingle way by affidavit; and we will not ſuffer a witneſs to evade it by his refuſal. We force a witneſs to a bond by ſubpœna, and every witneſs does by his ſigning undertake to prove it when required. And Hilary, 6 Geo. Singleton v. Bradley, the ſame rule was granted.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. Anderſon v. Coxeter.

Per curiam. Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 15. which limits the time of complaining againſt awards to the laſt day of the next term, extends not to ſuch as are made in purſuance of an order of niſi prius, but only where the ſubmiſſion is by obligation: and nothing is a ground within the ſtatute for us to ſet aſide an award, but manifeſt corruption in the arbitrators; we will not unravel the matter, and examine into the juſtice and reaſonableneſs of what is awarded. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 301.

Hilary, 10 Geo. Morſe v. Surry.

In an action of debt on a bond for the performance of an award where the ſubmiſſion was of all actions, &c. between the plaintiff and defendant; the defendant pleaded no award made, the plaintiff replied, and ſet forth the award, wherein the arbitrators awarded, that the defendant and his wife ſhould pay 20 l. to the plaintiff on ſuch a day, in full ſatisfaction of all law charges due to him by the defendant's wife as executrix of one Bodily, her firſt huſband, and that both the plaintiff and the defendant ſhould equally pay to the arbitrators the charges of making the award, and that they ſhould execute mutual releaſes; the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant had not paid the 20 l. on the day.

The defendant's council took exception to the award; for that the ſubmiſſion being only of all differences between the plaintiff and defendant, the award that the defendant and his wife ſhould pay ſo much money to the plaintiff, is ill, becauſe no difference in which the wife is a party, is ſubmitted to the arbitrators. Rol. Abr. 246. pl. 4.

If A. and B. ſubmit to the arbitrament of J. S. of all ſuits and actions pending between them, the arbitrators cannot make an award of an action which B. and his wife have againſt A. for that is out of the ſubmiſſion.

Hilary, 12 Ann. Barnardiſton v. Fowler. An award that all proſecutions ſhould ceaſe in all actions between A. and B. will not extend to ſuits where A. is plaintiff againſt B. and others defendants.

2dly. The arbitrators have awarded money to be paid to themſelves, which is illegal.

The council for the plaintiff in reply ſaid, the caſe in Roll's Abridgment differs from this; becauſe there the wife had a demand, of which ſhe would have been barred, without being made a party to the ſubmiſſion. There is a caſe in Cro. Jac. 447. in point, where a ſubmiſſion was of all demands betwixt the plaintiff and defendant, and the award was that the defendant pay, whereas it was a debt from the defendant's wife as executrix, and yet held good.

2dly. Though that part is void, the reſt is good.

The court were of the ſame opinion, wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 212.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. Hales v. Taylor.

The plaintiff having brought an action againſt the defendant for turning away his water, the matter was referred to arbitration, and the arbitrators awarded the defendant to fill up a canal, to reſtore the ſtream to its former courſe, and to do ſeveral other matters relating to his water-works. The plaintiff afterwards applied to the court for an attachment for non-performance of the award, and ſeveral affidavits to prove the ſame were read. The defendant alſo produced affidavits to prove his compliance with the directions of the award.

The court ſaid, it was diſcretionary, whether they ſhould enforce the award by an attachment, and there being a contrariety of evidence, they would not determine it by affidavits, ſince the plaintiff was not without another remedy. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 695.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Philips v. Knightly.

In an action of debt on an award bond, the defendant pleaded no award made. The plaintiff replied, and ſets forth, that whereas ſeveral controverſies have ariſen between the plaintiff and defendant, and among others, that the plaintiff had brought an action qui tam, as well on the behalf of himſelf as for the poor of the pariſh of D. &c. againſt the defendant, &c. the plaintiff and the defendant for the adjuſting of the ſaid matters in difference between them, had ſubmitted to the award of J. S. and J. N. ſo as they made their award by ſuch a time, and if the arbitrators could not agree, or ſhould not make their award within that time, then to the umpirage of H. J. &c. and ſhews the arbitrators did not make their award, &c: but that the umpire on ſuch a day, made his umpirage, viz. that the defendant at ſuch a time and place ſhould pay the plaintiff ſuch a ſum, and that done, the plaintiff ſhould enter into a covenant with the defendant, to ſave him harmleſs from the coſts and damages of the qui tam action, and that thereon general releaſes ſhould be mutually executed, with regard to all the former matters in difference; and aſſigns for breach of the ſaid award, that the defendant did not pay the money according to the purport of the umpirage; to which the defendant demurs.

The defendant's council argued, that the umpirage was void: 1ſt. Becauſe the umpirage was made on the laſt day of the time allotted for the making of the award, and ſo at a time when the umpire had no power by the ſubmiſſion; for that the arbitrators might make their award on that day: but on the record being looked into, it was found the umpirage was made on the day after; and ſo this objection vaniſhed. 2dly. He inſiſted the umpirage was void in itſelf, becauſe it does not make an end of the matter, for it only provides a covenant for the defendant againſt the coſts and damages of the qui tam action, and then the plaintiff, notwithſtanding the umpirage, might proceed in his action, and defendant would have had no other remedy, but an action of covenant; or at leaſt the plaintiff might diſcontinue the action then depending, and bring a new action; ſo that it only tends to create a circuity of action; and does not make a final determination of the matter, as it ought: and then the umpirage does not aſcertain what the coſts and damages of the qui tam action may be, nor does it appoint how, or by whom, thoſe coſts and damages ſhall be ſettled; ſo that it leaves it to the law; and then it cannot be otherwiſe done than by bringing a new action.

The plaintiff's council ſaid, the preſent caſe reſembled that of Bardſey v. Clyſton, Cro. Car. 541. An award, that one obligor ſhould acquit the other of a bond, in which they were jointly bound, held good; ſo an award that a bond ſhould ſtand in its full force. Cro. Jac. 400. 1 Mod. 9. 1 Ro. Ab. 248. 249. 245. ſo that a ſecurity may be awarded; then to the uncertainty of the coſts and damages, he anſwered, that is certain which may be made certain.

The defendant's council anſwered to the firſt of theſe caſes, that it was no more than awarding the one co-obligor to pay all the money to the next, that it was no more than determining the bond to be a good bond; and certainly where the validity of a ſecurity is ſubmitted, the arbitrators may determine it to be good or bad, which makes an end of the matter: he admitted that an award of a ſecurity for the payment of a certain ſum in future, may be very good, for that is only giving him that is to pay time for payment of the money, and him that is to receive it a ſecurity, ſince it is not paid immediately. But in the preſent caſe, the party is put to an action of covenant, and ſo he muſt be recompenſed by a recovery in damages, which is the buſineſs of a jury.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. This ſeems only to give a new action, the coſts and damages are not aſcertained.

Lee, Juſtice. There muſt be a jury to aſcertain the coſts and damages, but awarding the ſecurity, ſeems good enough. Adjourned.

In Eaſter term following the matter was moved again, when the plaintiff's council admitted, that an award of a covenant to indemnify againſt the ſuit of a third perſon, and the coſts and damages therein, would be bad; but here the plaintiff is to covenant againſt an act, which it is in his own power to prevent, as by diſcontinuing the action formerly by him brought, and conſequently putting it beyond all poſſibility, that any damage could thereby ariſe to the defendant. To the objection that a ſecurity may not be awarded Salmon's caſe. 5 Co. 77. is a full anſwer; for there an award, that one of the parties ſhould enter into a bond to the other, was held bad, for no other reaſon, than not ſpecifying in what ſum the bond ſhould be; and the caſes mentioned on the former argument, were cited to the ſame point. It is not neceſſary that an award of itſelf makes an end of the matter in controverſy, for it may refer that to a future act; ſo is the caſe of Freeman v. Bernard, Cath. 378. An award that the parties ſhall execute mutual releaſes, is no bar to the demands on either ſide, till the releaſes are executed, and yet that was a good award; and either part may have an action for non-performance thereof: ſo in this caſe the plaintiff might both covenant to indemnify the defendant againſt the coſts and damages of the qui tam action, and might perform his ſaid covenant, and therefore would be liable to an action for an omiſſion of either; which was making a certain end of the matter then in controverſy.

On this argument, Lord Raymond, Mr. Juſtice Probyn, and Mr. Juſtice Lee, held it a good award, but the further conſideration of the matter was adjourned.

At another day this matter came on again, when the plaintiff's council moved for judgment, which the court gave as follows:

Mr. Juſtice Page held, this is not a good award, for it does not determine the qui tam action, and then the defendant might be vexed, and made liable to coſts and damages every day of his life, againſt which no other remedy is provided for him, but a covenant, and on that he muſt be put to his action for every new damage, and the recompence will be in the breaſt of a jury; and therefore the award will be the occaſion of a greater controverſy than was before. If a bond had been awarded for the indemnity of the party, it had provided a certain recompence, which might be recovered by one ſuit. The coſts and damages that might accrue by reaſon of the qui tam action, ought to have been aſcertained by the award, or the taxation thereof ſhould have been referred to the proper officer. 1 Sid. 358. 1 Salk. 75. And that not being done, the award is quite uncertain, and like that, by which it was awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay unto the plaintiff what was then due to him for taſk-work, and day work, which was held void, becauſe the whole of the ſaid work, was not ſtated thereby. 2 Saund. 292.

Lord Raymond obſerved, that the books are growing leſs and leſs nice every day in the conſtructions of awards. That the arbitrators could not award that the qui tam action ſhould be dropped, becauſe the poor of the pariſh who were intereſted in that ſuit, were not parties to the ſubmiſſion; and therefore they went as far as they might in providing the defendant ſhould be indemnified, by a covenant on the part of the plaintiff, which though not ſo certain as a bond, yet it is good, for there muſt be an action in both caſes: here the matter to be done by the plaintiff, was in his own power, and the award has given the defendant a ſufficent remedy in caſe of non-performance by the plaintiff, ſo that this award is as final, and as certain as the nature and circumſtances of the caſe would bear.

Probyn, Juſtice. The plaintiff might have dropped the qui tam action, which had made an end of the matter, and by this the defendant would have been indemnified. I cannot diſtinguiſh this from the caſe of Bardſey v. Clyſton. Cro. Car. 541. nor from 1 Mod. 9. as to the caſe in Saunders, it was part of the ſubmiſſion to ſettle what was due, the party might be reimburſed by one recovery in an action of covenant, and the covenant is as good as a bond.

Lee, Juſtice. Awards ſhould be certain and final, as far as may be from the nature of the thing, and therefore an award that there ſhall be a non-ſuit of the plaintiff in ſuch an action, is not good; becauſe that will not hinder the bringing of a new one. I found my opinion on this, that the preſent award was as final and certain as the matters in difference would bear, for it is not neceſſary that an award ſhould of itſelf put a final end to the matter. 2 Cro. 400. So an award that one of the parties ſhall procure a third perſon to do an act which he might be compelled to, is good: accordingly judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Fitz-Gibbons page 167. 270.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. Dilley v. Polhill.

In an action of debt, the plaintiff declared, that on the 7th March, 3 Geo. 2. the defendant by bond ſubmitted himſelf to the award of J. P. an arbitrator indifferently named and elected, as well on the part of the plaintiff, as of the defendant; ſo as the award be made in writing under his hand and ſeal, before the 20th of April. That, on the 18th April, the ſaid P. by a writing under his hand and ſeal, reciting, that an action had been brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for words, therefore, to end the diſpute, he awarded, that the defendant ſhould, on the 27th of April, between two and five in the afternoon, at the Cock and Lion in Dartford, pay the plaintiff ten guineas for his damages, and 6 l. 19 s. for his coſts; and that the plaintiff ſhould pay the defendant one ſhilling, after which both ſhould give mutual releaſes.

The defendant demurred to the plaintiff's declaration, and his council argued, that the plaintiff had not in his declaration ſhewn what was neceſſary to maintain his action, for he has not ſhewn that there was any ſubmiſſion on his part; and it is contrary, 1ſt, To the nature of an award, and 2dly. To the precedents.

1ſt, An award is the determination of a third perſon between two others, who ſubmit to his judgment. Theſe ſubmiſſions create a mutual obligation on both, to acquieſce in his deciſion. It is therefore contrary to the nature of an award, that the arbitrator ſhould determine any thing, with regard to one who does not ſubmit to his judgment: and in 1 Roll. Rep. 194. it is reſolved in aſſumpſit, that mutual promiſes ſhall bind, without any other conſideration.

2dly. The precedents are all contrary, and a ſtrong evidence what the law is. 2 Saund. 61. 127, 337. 1 Saund. 32. Ma. 359, 642. Raſt. 153 b. Co. Ent. 41. a. 64. a. Tho. Ent. 107, 116. Aſhton's Precedents, 188, 200. Litt. Rep. 312. 1 Leon. 72. 1 Roll. Rep. 5. Brownl. 181. Regiſt. 111 a.

The plaintiff's council allowed, that a mutual ſubmiſſion was neceſſary to be ſhewn; but inſiſted that it is ſufficiently averred, it being laid, that the arbitrator was elected for both; and that in declarations it is enough for the plaintiff to ſhew what makes for him, according to 1 Sid. 161. Litt. Rep. 312.

The defendant's council in reply obſerved, that the averment is not that the arbitrator was nominated by, but on the behalf of, the defendant, which might be done by a friend, to whoſe nomination the defendant might not ſubmit; and as to the caſe in 1 Sid. it is only ſaid by the council, and agreed by Twiſden, Juſtice, that if the plaintiff brings debt for money generally, without ſhewing the award to be of both parts, it is well enough; but not a word ſaid about the ſubmiſſion. And as to Litt. 312. that is only that the plaintiff need ſet out no more of the award than makes for him: but in that caſe it is averred, both ſubmitted. And for want of it here, it does not appear that the defendant had any remedy for the 1 s. or releaſe awarded to him.

Per curiam. There is a great deal of difference where the action is brought on the bond of ſubmiſſion, and where it is on the award: in the firſt caſe, the defendant, by craving oyer, ſhews that there were mutual ſubmiſſions, the condition always ſo reciting it: but in the other caſe it muſt be averred, before you can properly introduce your award: on the behalf, does not import him to be named by the defendant; and in debt on the bond, no award made, admits a ſubmiſſion: we think, therefore, that as a mutual ſubmiſſion is neceſſary to be ſhewn, there is nothing tantamount on this declaration. The plaintiff therefore diſcontinued his action, on payment of coſts. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 923.

Trinity, 7 Geo. 2. Shephard v. Brand.

On a motion to ſet aſide an award made on an order of reference to the three foremen of a ſpecial jury, exception was taken thereto.

2dly, That they had alſo taken money of the plaintiff alone for their charges, without any bill delivered in before the making their award.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. Arbitrators, who are judges to determine finally the differences between the parties, may, if they think fit, take on them to enquire of and give coſts as well as damages; and this court has no power to take notice of it, any otherwiſe than if they are exceſſive, without any reaſon given for it, as on evidence of ſome undue practice.

As to the ſecond point, where arbitrators (let their characters be otherwiſe never ſo unexceptionable) take money of one of the parties ſingly, whether for charges, or any thing elſe, before making their award, as this is a mattter of ſo tender a nature, that even the appearance of evil in it is to be avoided, and this practice may be of dangerous example, it is ſufficient cauſe to ſet aſide the award; for if this ſhould be ſuffered, it will be hard to diſtinguiſh what is corruption. Vide caſes temp. Ld. Hardwicke, page 53.

In an action of debt, brought on an arbitration bond; the defendant pleads no award; the plaintiff replies, and ſets forth an award, which, amongſt other things, awards that the defendant ſhall pay the plaintiff ſuch ſums as J. W. and J. G. ſhall ſettle for coſts, having regard to ſuch coſts as are uſually taxed by maſters in Chancery, and then mutual releaſes were awarded between the parties: and further, that the ſaid J. W. and J. G. ſettled the ſum of ——— to be due for coſts, in which they had regard, &c. and for breach the plaintiff aſſigns the non-payment of theſe coſts: to which replication the defendant demurred.

The defendant's council on the demurrer argued, that the award was bad; becauſe the arbitrators had delegated their authority; and cited the caſe of Winter v. Garlick, in 1 Salk. 75. and 6 Mod. 195.

The plaintiff's council, in reply, cited Cro. Car. 383. Beal v. Beal, where an award to pay the charges in ſuch a ſuit, held good. 1 Roll. Abr. 251. pl. 14. to pay his part of the voyage, held good; 2 Ventris 242. to pay the coſts expended about proſecuting the aforeſaid, &c. held good. The plaintiff's council urged that this taxation to be made by J. W. and J. G. is but a miniſterial act, and they may delegate their authority in miniſterial acts, though they cannot in judicial acts; for which diſtinction he cited S*tyle* 217. Cater v. Startue, and Palmer 146. Grove and others v. Craw and others.

Lord Hardwicke. One would go as far as poſſible to ſupport awards, where there is no objection to their being fairly made, but I doubt if this award be good. It is true, in the caſe of Winter v. Garlick, it was held that the arbitrators might award the party to pay the coſts to be taxed by the maſter, and even that is going beyond the general rule; but the reaſon of it ſeems to be, that arbitrators are judges between the parties, and, as it were, put in the place of the court by the parties; and as the court may give judgment for coſts, ſo arbitrators have been allowed to do alſo; but they muſt order them to be taxed by the maſter, as the court would do; now this is not ſo ordered, but for aught appears, the taxation is referred to perſons who are ignorant of the matter; and the caſes cited by the defendant's council are not contrary to this, for they are where coſts were awarded generally, which I think is well enough, for then they will be referred to the proper officer.

Probyn. Juſtice. I am inclined to think the award good, and that they may as well appoint theſe two perſons as they might the maſter; for it is no more than taking them to their aſſiſtance.

Lee, Juſtice. I think this is a direct delegation of their authority. And he cited the caſe of Robinſon v. Barneſly, laſt Hilary term, where an award that the parties ſhould give ſecurity fourteen days after their time was expired, was held to be bad: theſe perſons muſt be conſidered as their delegates; and in caſe of a private authority, it is a ſettled rule that they muſt execute it themſelves, and cannot delegate it. Indeed it may be different when referred to be taxed by the maſter, becauſe that is the ſettled way of taxing coſts, by the law of the land.

Lord Hardwicke. As to awards, there are three rules; 1ſt, That the arbitrators muſt make a final end, ſo as the parties may have the fruits of it without ſuit. 2d, That they cannot delegate their authority. 3d, The award muſt be made within the time limited. Now this award does not make a final end, for here is a matter to be done after the time expired; but it is ſaid, that as to coſts to be taxed, that is allowable; and it is true, it has been allowed to be referred to the proper officer, as in Winter v. Garlick; but it is there expreſsly ſaid, they muſt be ſettled by the arbitrators, or by the maſter; and that is reaſonable enough, becauſe the reference to the proper officer makes an end of it, for he is ſubject to the authority of the court, who, if he errs, can amend his errors ſummarily; but if referred to ſtrangers, the court cannot intermeddle. 2dly, The arbitrators muſt execute their authority themſelves, which they have not here done; indeed a diſtinction has been taken between judicial and miniſterial acts; but this is not a mere miniſterial act, and appears not to be ſo, from the penning of this award, for they are directed to have regard to ſuch coſts as a maſter would allow, which is certainly an act of judgment; but when the reference is to the maſter, it is in the eye of the court: ſuppoſe theſe two perſons had been miſtaken as to what coſts ſhould be allowed, how could it then be ſettled, but by a trial before a jury on averment, that it was ſo, or was not ſo? And this is no inconvenience; for they might, within the time limited, have had the aſſiſtance of theſe two men in this matter, and have made it part of their award.

Lee, Juſtice. By Cro. Jac. 315, 584. the arbitrators cannot reſerve an authority to themſelves after the time of the ſubmiſſion. Jenkins Cont. fo. 128. If the award be to releaſe to another, by the advice of J. S. it is good; and the reaſon given is, becauſe that reference is only for the execution of the arbitrement; for he lays it down as a rule, that the arbitrators cannot delegate their authority. It is true that in caſes of coſts it has been allowed to refer to the maſter, and the reaſon is, becauſe they have then made an award of coſts in the ſame manner as coſts are uſually given.

In Comberbach 456. An award, that if the plaintiff makes out before a judge any diſburſements laid out for the defendant, ſhall pay them likewiſe, held bad; but Holt, Chief Juſtice, there ſaid, they have no liberty to do any future act, unleſs it be by referring the matters in difference to a maſter of a court, to tax coſts; which is agreeable to what he ſays in Winter v. Garlick; reference to a maſter is proper execution of the arbitration, and is merely miniſterial, but reference to a ſtranger is judicial. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 181.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 2. Tipping v. Smith.

An award was made in this cauſe, (reciting that the defendant had beat the plaintiff) whereby it was awarded, that the defendant ſhould give ſecurity to pay the plaintiff an annual ſum for life; and that all manner of proceedings (if any) depending at law ſhould not be farther proſecuted. On demurrer, this award was held ill, being uncertain, and not final or mutual. It was uncertain, becauſe it did not determine what ſort of ſecurity ſhould be given: it was not final, it ſtaying only proceedings then depending, (if any) ſo that if the plaintiff had brought no ſuit he was at liberty ſo to do, or even to diſcontinue what was brought, and bring new ones. And it was not mutual, there being no releaſes, or any thing awarded to be done by the plaintiff. Therefore the court gave judgment for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1024.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. 2. Booth v. Garnett.

In debt on a bond, the condition whereof recited, that the plaintiff and one Gilbert had ſubmitted a diſpute to arbitration; and therefore if the defendant ſhould pay what Gilbert ſhould be awarded to pay (not exceeding 20 l.) the bond to be void. On the replication, it appeared that the award was for Gilbert to give the plaintiff his note for 18 l. payable at a future day.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that his bond was only to pay the money awarded; and therefore as the award was to do a collateral act, it was not within the condition.

The court ſaid, that awards were to have reaſonable conſtructions, and as the meaning of this was to give the party time, it was equal to ordering him to pay the money at a future day, without ſaying any thing of giving a note in the mean time: and therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2 .page 1082.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Harriſon v. Grundy.

The court held, that on ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 15. they could not receive any complaint to ſet aſide an award till the ſubmiſſion was made a rule of court; and that a conſent in the ſubmiſſion-bond to make the award a rule of court, inſtead of the ſubmiſſion, would not warrant their interpoſing. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1178.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Hawkins v. Colclough.

In an action of treſpaſs, for an aſſault, battery, and falſe impriſonment, brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, the defendant pleaded an award, (made pending the action) and a tender of the ſum awarded: to which plea the plaintiff demurred.

The award made was in theſe words: "Whereas
"there has been a ſuit at law between the parties,
"that hath run to a great expence on both ſides, and
"it being left to me to make an end of it; I deter-
"mine that they ſhall each of them pay their own
"charges at law, and that the defendant pay the "plaintiff five ſhillings, for his making the firſt breach
"in the law."

The plaintiff's council objected to the award, as being uncertain, and not final.

Firſt, It is uncertain, becauſe the ſubmiſſion is of ſeveral matters: and the award does not at all ſhew, which of them it means to determine, 1 Roll. Abr. 242. letter B. pl. 1. 252. pl. 10. He urged, that an averment, without a fact to ſupport it, is of no avail. 1 Lord Raym. 246. in the caſe of Bacon v. Dubarry.

This is an action of treſpaſs. The ſubmiſſion is of all treſpaſſes; and the award does not diſtinguiſh what treſpaſſes it determines. 1 Roll. Abr. 251. letter I. pl. 1. and pl. 3. and the caſe of Maw v. Samuel, in Popham 134. and 2 Ro. Rep. 1.

Second point. It is not final, which it ought to be.

An award muſt be final; but this award was made pending the action, and it does not put any end to it at all.

The defendant's council cited ſeveral caſes in ſupport of the award, and obſerved, that the preſent award (which was made by a cobler) recites that there was ſuch a ſuit, and that it being left to him to make an end of the ſuit, he determined as follows; viz. "That the ſaid J. H. and J. C. ſhould each of "them pay their own coſts and charges at law; and "that the ſaid J. C. ſhould pay the ſaid J. H. five
"ſhillings, for his making the firſt breach." And this may be pleaded in bar, in another action.

In this caſe the arbitrator certainly intended to make an end of this ſuit between the parties, and thought 5 s. adequate to the injury. To which arguments offered by the defendant's council, the plaintiff's council replied; when the court gave judgment.

Lord Mansfield. The queſtion before us is, whether this is a good award? Awards are now conſidered with greater latitude, and leſs ſtrictneſs, than formerly; and it is right they ſhould, becauſe they are made by judges of the parties own chuſing.

Awards muſt have theſe two properties, they muſt be certain, and final. The certainty is to be judged of according to a common intent, and conſiſtent with fair and probable preſumption.

In this caſe, the ſubmiſſion is in general terms; viz. Of all actions, controverſies, and ſuits, between them; and it appears that this ſuit only was depending between the parties, and therefore there is no probable preſumption of any other.

As to its being final, it ſeems to be a reaſonable and fair award.

The arbitrator thought it a trifle, and that both parties were in the wrong, and therefore awarded each to ſtand by his own coſts.

The 5 s. awarded to be paid is manifeſtly in ſatisfaction of this action, and of courſe is a diſcharge of it, being paid or tendered.

Deniſon and Foſter, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice; and the court gave judgment on the demurrer for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 274.

Eaſter, 30 G. 2. Perry v. Nicholſon.

On an action of debt, brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, on the non-performance of an award.

The plaintiff, in his declaration on this action, ſets forth the former action, and the reference and award made thereon, and avers, that there was, at the commencement of the action, or at the time of the reference, no other money any ways due to him the ſaid plaintiff, from the ſaid defendant, but the matter in difference in the ſaid cauſe, and that no other action was depending between them.

The ſum awarded to the plaintiff by the ſaid award, was 48*l.* 11 s. 10 d. and the coſts directed to be taxed thereby, was taxed by the maſter at 28*l.*

To which action the defendant pleads, that no ſuch award was made. The plaintiff replies, that there was ſuch an award. On which iſſue was joined.

The defendant's council reſted his client's defence on the award's not being ſufficiently ſet forth by the plaintiff in his declaration, and that the evidence varied from the charge.

Lord Mansfield. Nothing is more clear, than that in an action of debt on an award, a perſon need not ſtate in his declaration any more of the award than ſupports his caſe.

If there is any matter by way of condition, precedent to the payment of the money, the defendant may ſet it out in pleading.

Deniſon, Juſtice. The queſtion is, whether the award given in evidence is ſufficient to ſupport the award ſet forth in the declaration.

It has been ſettled that in actions on awards, (which are no ſpecialties) there is no occaſion to ſet forth the whole award; and cited 1 Leon 72. Smith v. Kerfoot. Litt. Rep. 312, 313. Leake v. Butler. 1 Salk. 72. Foreland v. Marygold. 1 Raymond 715. Foreland v. Hornigold

On ſhewing cauſe why an attachment ſhould not iſſue againſt Dr. Wilſon for refuſing to perform an award made purſuant to a ſubmiſſion entered into by a rule of this court in the above-mentioned cauſe then there depending; it became part of the queſtion, "Whether this was within the act of 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 15. for determining differences by arbitration?" And the court thought it was not, but that it ſtood on the common law, independant of the act, which was made to put ſubmiſſions to arbitration in caſes where there was no cauſe depending on the ſame fact, in the ſame manner as thoſe where there was a cauſe depending. But here was a cauſe depending at the time of the ſubmiſſion, and therefore the caſe was not within the proviſion of this act.

Lord Mansfield ſaid, that ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. was only declaratory of what the law was before in caſes where there was a cauſe depending in the court. He obſerved, that the court will not enter at all into the merits of the matter referred to arbitration, but only take into conſideration ſuch legal objections, as appear on the face of the award, and ſuch objections as go to the miſbehaviour of the arbitrators. Therefore the rule for an attachment was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 701.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 3. Biſſex v. Biſſex.

In an action of debt brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant on a bond, dated 28 March, 1764, to perform an award to be made and delivered on or before 21ſt May, then next following. The defendant pleaded, that the arbitrators did not make any award on or before 21ſt May. To this plea the plaintiff replied, that the arbitrators in the ſaid bond mentioned, after the making the ſame, to wit, 21ſt May, did make their award, whereby they ordered the defendant to pay to the plaintiff 56*l.* due on divers accounts, from J. B. deceaſed, the defendant's father. To the plaintiff's replication the defendant demurred ſpecially, and aſſigned the following cauſes of demurrer.

1ſt. It does not ſhew that the award was made, and ready to be delivered to the parties on or before the 21ſt day of May, but that the pretended time of making the ſaid award is included under a videlicet, and not made, or attempted to be made, part of the iſſue in this cauſe.

2dly. The award was made concerning tranſactions ſuppoſed to have paſſed between the plaintiff and the defendant's father, without ſhewing that ſuch tranſactions were ever ſubmitted to arbitration by the ſaid bond.

3dly. That the replication was a mere negative pregnant, neither confeſſing, traverſing, or denying the matter alledged by the defendant's plea.

The plaintiff joined in demurrer, on which this matter was brought on to be tried.

The defendant's council argued, that it did not appear that the award was made within the time limited, for the time of making ſuch award is not poſitively, directly, and preciſely alledged, but only comes under a videlicet. It is not alledged with ſufficient certainty for the defendant to have taken iſſue on.

The plaintiff's council in reply ſaid, the record ſhews the award was dated on the 21ſt May.

Wilmot, Juſtice. The award was in fact made on the 21ſt May.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Savil v. Roberts.

The caſe of Chamberlain v. Preſcott, being cited in the above cauſe, Holt, C. J. ſaid, that he had a manuſcript report thereof, drawn up by Bridgman, Chief Juſtice of C. B. wherein the caſe is thus ſtated. C. brought an action on the caſe againſt P. in which he declared, that the defendant P. cauſed him falſely and maliciouſly to be indicted on the ſtat. 8 Eliz. cap. 2. for having cauſed C. to be arreſted at the ſuit of S. without his conſent, of which he was acquitted, &c. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, in the King's Bench, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff. On which error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and after the Reſtoration, that caſe had a great debate; and the judgment of the King's Bench, for maintaining of the action, was reverſed. Bridgman, Chief Juſtice, was againſt all ſuch actions. But it appears by his report, that this was not the reaſon of the reverſal of the judgment, but becauſe C. was indicted for what was no offence at all; for, in fact, P. arreſted C. in his own name, and the name of S. for a debt due to them jointly, which was lawful, without the conſent of S. and if S. did not appear, if it were in a perſonal action, he might be nonſuited, if in a real action, ſummoned and ſevered: and therefore it was held to be no offence. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 380.

The defendant was arreſted on an excommunicatione capiendo. The ſignificavit expreſſed, that the defendant was excommunicated for contumacy in a ſuit, for withholding tythes, and other eccleſiaſtical dues. The defendant brought his habeas corpus, directed to the ſheriff of the county, &c. or to the goaler, who returned the warrant of the ſheriff on the excommunicatione capiendo, &c. The council for the crown took exception to the return, that as it appeared on the recital of the ſignificavit in the warrant, the defendant was excommunicated in a ſuit for tythes or eccleſiaſtical dues in the diſjunctive, and therefore ill, becauſe the cauſe of excommunication ſhould appear to be ſufficient, and the ſpecialty of it ought to be ſhewn. For perhaps the eccleſiaſtical dues may be ſuch as he was not obliged to pay. Excommunication ſo generally pleaded, without ſome other ſpecial cauſe, will not be ſufficient to ſtay another's ſuit. 8 Co. 68. 6 Trollop's caſe; and the King v. Sanchee was cited, where on a writ of habeas corpus the defendants were returned, committed by a warrant of two juſtices of peace, in purſuance of ſtat. 27 Hen. 8. cap. 20. for contumacy in a ſuit before an eccleſiaſtical judge for tythes or other eccleſiaſtical dues, and on the ſame exception as in this caſe, the defendants were diſcharged. The court gave no opinion in this matter: but Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that Sanchee's caſe differed, becauſe the commitment there was by virtue of a ſpecial authority given to the juſtices of peace by the ſaid act, which ought to be purſued ſtrictly. But the court quaſhed the habeas corpus for two reaſons, 1ſt. Becauſe it was directed to the ſheriff or gaoler in the disjunctive, which the clerks agreed was contrary to the practice of the court.

2dly. Becauſe the writ of excommunicatione capiendo was not returned, but only the warrant of the ſheriff; for the writ ought regularly to be returned; for may be it is right; for if the ſheriff has a good writ againſt a man, and he makes an ill warrant to his bailiffs on it to arreſt the man, and they arreſt him accordingly, though the bailiffs cannot, yet the ſheriff may juſtify, by virtue of the writ; for if the ſheriff be in any manner privy to the taking, as if he commands his bailiffs to arreſt a man by parol, when he is taken accordingly, he is in the cuſtody of the ſheriff: and if he has a writ againſt him at the time he is arreſted, he is in cuſtody by virtue of the writ. Indeed the ſheriff muſt be privy to the taking, or otherwiſe he cannot be in his cuſtody.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the carrying of this writ to the gaoler was an irregularity; for where a man is committed immediately to the gaoler, there the habeas corpus ought to be carried to him; but where he is arreſted by virtue of a warrant on a writ directed to the ſheriff, there the habeas corpus ought to be carried to the ſheriff; for he having the writ in his cuſtody is the only proper perſon to make the return. Since the habeas corpus act, the gaolers have taken on them to cheat the ſheriffs of the money for the returns, but that is not regular. The writ was therefore quaſhed, and a new habeas corpus granted, returnable immediately: on which the court gave order, that they ſhould procure the writ to be returned. In Michaelmas term following, the court was moved that Fowler might be diſcharged, as the caſe was uncertainly ſhewn in the writ.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Sufficient cauſe ought to appear, becauſe the King's Courts are judges of their juriſdiction, and not themſelves; and therefore they ought to ſhew, that the matter was within their conuſance. And for this reaſon, doubtleſs, the ſignificavit is ill, and therefore the defendant may in Chancery procure the writ to be ſuperſeded. But the King's Bench cannot deliver a man arreſted on the King's writ, becauſe the Chancery have granted it, where they ought not to have granted it. If the certificate be ill, the Chancery ought to ſuperſede it; but the King's Bench cannot proceed on it, becauſe it is not before the King's Bench; for the King's Bench cannot give judgment on a recital, where another court is poſſeſſed of the original. In error brought on a judgment of C. B. in debt, an exception was taken, becauſe the writ, as it was recited in the declaration, was attached, where it ought to have been ſummoned, and therefore ill; but the court refuſed to allow the exception to be taken, becauſe the writ was not before this court, but only by recital; but it was held, the dimunition ought to be alledged, and a certiorari ſued out; and if on that an original was returned, which ran attached, the judgment ſhould be reverſed.

The great doubt was, whether this uncertainty in expreſſing the cauſe would vitiate the writ, and then, whether the court would quaſh it; and in proof of the affirmative, Moor, pl. 667. Cro. Jac. 556. Cro. Car. 196. 199. W. Jones, 226. Hil. 29. and 30 Car. 2. B. R. Rex v. Price. 1 Roll. Rep. 136. and T. Jones, 89. were cited.

After ſeveral arguments on different days, and on great conſideration, and ſearch of precedents, it was reſolved that the writ ſhould be quaſhed, and a ſuperſedeas iſſue. Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that at common law, the cauſe had no need to be ſhewn in the writ of excommunicatione capiendo; but it was ſufficient to ſay, that the party was excommuicated for a manifeſt contempt. Regiſt. 65. 7. But in the ſignificavit, it ought to be ſhewn. Fitz. Nat. Bre. 63. 4. And now, ſince ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 23. the cauſe ought to be ſhewn in the writ. The ſtatute makes the writ returnable here, on purpoſe that this court ſhould judge of the cauſe, otherwiſe it had been idle to make the writ returnable here, and eſpecially when the proceſs ought to differ, according to the difference of the cauſe for which the excommunication was. As to the nine cauſes mentioned in the act, an alias ought to iſſue, with a penalty, &c. Then this court being poſſeſſed of the writ, and it not expreſſing the cauſe ſpecially, but in the disjunctive the writ ought to be quaſhed. Before this ſtatute, they ought to have reſorted to the Chancery, and procured a ſuperſedeas there. 2 Inſt. 623. But that cannot be done now, becauſe the writ is returnable here. But becauſe the cauſe is ſhewn inſufficiently out of the writ, it ought to be quaſhed, and a ſuperſedeas awarded. But a habeas corpus is a very improper method to diſcharge the party, for he is well arreſted by virtue of the King's writ, and cannot be diſcharged whilſt that is in force. And it is a good return to the habeas corpus to ſay, that he is in cuſtody by a writ of excommunicatione capiendo.

Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, that before ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 23. this court could not diſcharge a man taken on an excommunicatione capiendo, unleſs he was excommunicated pending a prohibition. And he agreed, that this court had power to quaſh the writ, and award a ſuperſedeas, where the cauſe is not ſufficiently expreſſed; but he made a doubt, whether there was here any ſuch uncertainty, for the ſive, i. e. or, ſeemed to him to be accumulative.

On the opinion of Holt and Turton, juſtices, the writ was quaſhed, and a ſuperſedeas granted; and Holt ordered the clerk to enter on the habeas corpus, that the party was diſcharged, becauſe the writ was quaſhed; and ſaid, in this caſe, that if the writ had been for withholding certain eccleſiaſtical dues, it had been well. But he ſaid alſo, that this ſtatute was not well underſtood until the time of Charles 1. in Hughe's caſe, Cro. Car. 196. and that the form of the proceedings in the ſpiritual court ought to be regarded as in a libel for words; their form is to ſay, that he ſpoke ſuch words, or others to that effect, and yet a prohibition was denied to be granted for the ſaid cauſe. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 586. 618.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Lidford v. Thomas.

The defendant's council moved to have him diſcharged out of cuſtody, for that he had been arreſted on a Sunday by proceſs out of this court, but in truth it appeared that he was taken without any warrant on a Sunday, and kept locked up till Monday morning, and then a writ was procured.

Per curiam. If you are impriſoned without a warrant, you have your remedy by action for falſe impriſonment, but then let them ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not go againſt them.

Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, that attachments have gone frequently in ſuch a caſe, and it was ſo ruled here.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that after the arreſt bailiff ought to carry the party to the next gaol, if he does not deſire to be carried to a particular place, to ſend for his friends. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 96.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Garibaldo v. Cagnoni.

The plaintiff came into court to confeſs an indictment for an aſſault on C. and as he was going home, C. got him arreſted for the ſame aſſault; and on motion, and on an affidavit of this matter, an attachment niſi was granted againſt him, and before the day he diſcharges G. and on ſhewing cauſe, the rule was diſcharged, charged, becauſe the affidavit in ſupport thereof did not charge him to have notice that G. came to court to confeſs the judgment, for otherwiſe he could not be in contempt for the arreſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 90.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Powell v. Ball.

If a bailiff has a warrant to arreſt a perſon, and another hinders him from doing it, there being no actual arreſt, it is not a reſcous, but a contempt of court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 210.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Genner v. Sparks.

G. a bailiff, having a warrant againſt S. came to his houſe, and finding him in the yard, told him he had a warrant for him, and pronounced the words of arreſt, but did not lay his hands on him, whereon S. ſnatched up a pitch-fork, and kept off the bailiff, threatening to kill him if he came near him; and thus retreated into his houſe, and ſhut the door againſt the bailiff. Theſe circumſtances appearing by an affidavit, the court was moved for an attachment on the matter againſt S. ſuppoſing this to be a reſcut, or at leaſt a great contempt of the Queen's writ.

Per curiam. Here was no arreſt, the bailiff having not laid hands on the defendant, for his ſhewing the warrant, and pronouncing the words of arreſt, without touching him, was no more an arreſt, than it would be one, if a bailiff ſees a man look out of a window one or two pair of ſtairs high, and tells him he has a writ for him, and ſays that he arreſts him; and therefore in ſuch caſe the bailiff cannot break the houſe to come at the perſon, as he could lawfully do if he had been his priſoner, and had eſcaped into a houſe from him. But it was agreed, if here he had but touched the defendant, even with the end of his finger, it had been an arreſt, and he might have broke the houſe after to ſeize him, and an attachment might go for the reſcue: as if a bailiff has a warrant againſt a perſon who is in a houſe, and lays his hand on him through the window, he may afterwards break the houſe to come to him. It was likewiſe agreed, that the bailiff had the protection of the law, and therefore if he had ventured on here, and had been killed by the defendant, it had been murder in him; or if the defendant had beat or hurt him, he might have had his action: or in this caſe, if the defendant were within reach of the bailiff when he pointed the pitch-fork at him, he might have had his action of aſſault againſt him; ſo if he had preſented a gun at him, at ſuch a diſtance as the ſhot would reach him. Therefore the court denied the motion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 173.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Luttin v. Benin.

On an action for an eſcape, brought againſt a Serjeant at Mace of Wood Street Compter, to which he pleaded not guilty;

It appeared on evidence at the trial, that the action on which he arreſted the perſon who eſcaped, aroſe out of the juriſdiction; and the proceſs was executed out of the juriſdiction.

The defendant's council ſaid, where an inferior court holds plea of matters out of their juriſdiction, it is not before the court. There is a difference between proceeding erroneouſly where they have juriſdiction, and where they have no juriſdiction. Cro. Car. 394. Hardreſs 480. That actions will lie againſt officers, appears from the averment neceſſary for the officer; viz. that the cauſe was within the juriſdiction, in order to juſtify: and if an inferior court holds plea of a matter out of their juriſdiction, all their proceedings are void, and the matter is not before the court, and may be avoided by plea. March 117. 3 Lev. 243. But where they have no juriſdiction, no action will lie. 3 Lev. 234, 28. 1 Roll. Abr. 809. That actions may be brought againſt the officer, as well as againſt the plaintiff. 2 Mod. 195. 2 Cro. 3. Sir T. Jones 214. 4 Rep. 14 b. 2 Lutw. 935, 1516. 2 Mod. 30. Cro. El. 836. Hob. 267. 1 Vent. 86. If a man brings an action in an inferior court, as in the Star Chamber, an action will lie; and ſo where a man ſues a matter not before the court. Lev. 95. 1 Sid. 125. it not being in the ordinary way of juſtice, that no action of eſcape will lie in this caſe. Vide 1 Roll. Abr. 547. March 8. 2 Bulſt. 64. 2 Mod. 29.

The plaintiff's council, in ſupport of his caſe, cited 2 Inſt. 230. 3 Keb. 852. 2 Vent. 236. Raym. 189. 26 Ed. 3. 16. This being a matter tranſitory, and the court having in the firſt inſtance a juriſdiction, no one ſhall take advantage of it. Yelv. 42. 2 Cro. 3. but the defendant, 2 Bulſtrode 62. And it ſhall be at his election, to avoid it by plea, or not; and the defendant in this caſe is a wrong doer, and ſo ſhall not take advantage of his own wrong. He ſaid, that in the city of London, they never ſay the cauſe of action aroſe within the juriſdiction, as they muſt within all other inferior juriſdictions. A ſheriff cannot take advantage of any erroneous proceedings, if he ſuffers an eſcape.

As to the limitations of inferior juriſdiction, Holt obſerved, that there were three things to be conſidered; viz. perſons, time, and place. As to perſons and place, as in the caſe of the Marſhalſea, and thoſe of the houſehold; for in that court they have juriſdiction only in debt, treſpaſs, and covenant, and therefore ſhould they hold plea of an action on the caſe, 'tis plain they have no juriſdiction. And as to things, he ſaid, the city have juriſdiction in all cauſes, and are only reſtrained to place; and therefore the defendant ought to have pleaded to the juriſdiction. For if he admits of the juriſdiction, he is for ever after eſtopped. And an iſſue may be taken on it; and if it be found to ariſe within the juriſdiction, final judgment ought to be given. If a man is wrongfully brought into a juriſdiction, and there lawfully arreſted, yet he ought to be diſcharged; for no lawful thing, founded on a wrongful act, can be ſupported. If a juſtice of peace makes an order for a man to keep a baſtard child, which in reality was born two days after marriage; in this caſe all the officers acting under it are wrong, and they are liable; becauſe a juſtice can have no juriſdiction of the thing. But in this caſe the court had juriſdiction of the thing; and therefore it ought to have been avoided by plea.

Powell, Juſtice, was of the ſame opinion; and ſaid, where an inferior court had juriſdiction in a tranſitory action, the defendant ought to plead it, otherwiſe it does not appear but it did ariſe within the juriſdiction; and to make it not before the court, it muſt appear that the court have no juriſdiction.

Powys and Gould, Juſtices, concurred.

A lattitat iſſued out of the court of King's Bench to the ſheriff, to arreſt a man; and the ſheriff returned, that the man had enliſted, according to the ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 10. and therefore I cannot take him.

The court was moved againſt the ſheriff, for not having arreſted the man; becauſe, by the act, the plaintiff had liberty to go on to judgment and execution, againſt any thing but the defendant's body, and then the court would diſcharge him on common bail, if he appeared to them to be enliſted regularly; but the ſheriff ſhould not take on him to determine whether he was regularly enliſted. But the court, on conſideration, held it to be a good return, and that this act worked by way of a ſuperſedeas to any proceſs to be iſſued againſt perſons enliſted; and that if the ſheriff ſhould arreſt ſuch a perſon, he would be liable to an action of falſe impriſonment. And they ſaid it appeared, that the act did not intend that the man ſhould be arreſted, and then diſcharged on common bail, by the proviſo, “that the plaintiff, on leaving notice in writing at the defendant's laſt place of abode, or giving to the defendant ſuch notice in writing of the plaintiff's cauſe of action, might file common bail for the defendant, and proceed to judgment, &c.”

" &c." That in caſe the man was not fairly and regularly enliſted, this was a falſe return; and the plaintiff had his remedy againſt the ſheriff, by an action for the falſe return. Vide Raymond, vol. 2. page 1246.

The queſtion was, Whether an ambaſſador could by law be arreſted for debt?

The Attorney General argued as follows:

He cannot. If the privileges of an ambaſſador may be broken in on, and invaded for the preſervation of the property of a private ſubject, and this is declared to be law, princes will be cautious of ſending ambaſſadors to us; ours muſt expect the like treatment, and few will be prevailed on to aſſume that character.

Should an ambaſſador be liable to the reſtraints of the law of the land to which he goes, how eaſy would it be, on any emergency, to take off his attendance on his maſter's buſineſs. The law of England privileges the body of a member of parliament, and of a ſoldier, and ſhall it not that of an ambaſſador?

The perſon of an ambaſſador has ever been held ſacred and inviolable by the law of nations.

The goods of an ambaſſador are not liable to diſtreſs, a fortiori, nor his perſon. An ambaſſador muſt be intreated, and on refuſal ſent back to his maſter. If an ambaſſador commits an enormous crime, the King from whom he is ſent, not the King to whoſe court he is ſent, muſt puniſh him.

Lord Coke ſays, to violate the perſon of an ambaſſador, is a violation of the law of nations; nor does he add, (as certainly he would, had he thought ſo) that though this be ſo in the civil law, it is not ſo in ours. An ambaſſador, by fiction of law, repreſents the perſon of his maſter. Thus Coke, on ſtatute 25 Edw. 3. affirms it high treaſon at the common law, to kill an ambaſſador. Now certainly no body will ſay, the Czar himſelf might have been arreſted. The ſame fiction of law that makes him repreſent the perſon of his maſter makes him extra parochial, and, as it were, in the dominions of his maſter. The ill treatment of ambaſſadors is a thing of dangerous conſequence, for it may involve the nation in a war, and it would be very inconvenient that this ſhould be in the power of any private perſon whatſoever. It was replied by the council on the other ſide: If this be ſo, a ſubject may be left without remedy for the recovery of his debt, which would be a defect in law.

Juſtice ought always to be reciprocal; but an ambaſſador may arreſt; Ergo, &c.

It is a maxim in law, that the royal prerogative does no wrong; and ſhall the prerogative of an ambaſſador ſurmount that of the crown?

Such a law as this would be a nullity, becauſe contrary to Magna Charta, cap. 29. we will not ſell, deny, or delay juſtice to any one.

An ambaſſador by his contract renounces his privilege ſo far as to ſubject himſelf to the laws in force in that country where the contract was made.

This ſuit occaſioned an act of parliament, 7 Ann. cap. 12. whereby all proceedings againſt the ambaſſador in this cauſe were rendered null and void, and the privileges of ambaſſadors fully ſettled as to this matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 5.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Parker v. Langley.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. Johnſon v. Louth.

The queſtion was, whether a gunner was within the late act of parliament, that orders thoſe liſted as ſoldiers to be diſcharged from arreſts for debt.

The plaintiff's council objected, that they were not within the act, becauſe they were warrant officers, and took a particular oath, and becauſe the makers of this act of parliament, ſeemed apprehenſive that they would not have been liable to the ſame puniſhment, in caſe of mutiny and deſertion, as other ſoldiers, unleſs they had by an expreſs clauſe made them ſo.

He likewiſe inſiſted, that the deſign of the act, being to encourage men to enter into the King's ſervice, muſt not be extended to ſuch in the army, whoſe pay is ſo conſiderable as this alone to be a ſufficient inducement. The pay here was 1 s. 4 d. per day.

Per curiam. As to the clauſe in the act relating to mutiny and deſertion, the act only ſuppoſes it poſſible that there might be a doubt, and therefore wiſely reſolves to make every thing clear, where the puniſhment to be inflicted is nothing leſs than death.

But the act of parliament reſolves the doubt, as we do now, that he is a ſoldier.

The matter does not turn on the quantum of the pay, if it did, a trooper moſt certainly would be out of the act, whoſe pay is much more conſiderable than that of a gunner, and who generally gives a good ſum of money for his place.

The reaſon why a gunner's pay is more conſiderable than that of a ſoldier, are 1ſt. In reſpect of their ſkill, and 2dly. The hazard they run, both which conſiderations render their ſervice more neceſſary, and make it more reaſonable, that they ſhould not be taken away from the ſervice. The court therefore diſcharged the defendant from his arreſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 346.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Croſſe v. Talbot.

A motion was made on behalf of the defendant to ſet aſide the bail bond given on the arreſt, and that common bail might be accepted, and he obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe. His affidavit ſhewed that he was Valet de Chambre to Monſr. Hoffman, the Duke of Holſtein's reſident here, at 12 l. 12 s. per annum wages, and 10 s. a week board wages, and a certificate thereof was produced, under the reſident's own hand; but it did not appear, that he either lodged in the houſe, or actually executed the office. The court held, that he ought to be a domeſtic ſervant, and really to execute the duty of his office, and that being a meer nominal ſervant was not ſufficient, and diſcharged the rule.

A great many caſes have been ſince determined on the ſame principle, but it has in thoſe caſes been held, that the idea of a domeſtic ſervant is not confined to his lying in the foreign miniſter's houſe, provided he is a real ſervant, and actually performs the ſervice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 288.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Henley v. Roſſe.

The defendant was arreſted, and no declaration being filed againſt him within two terms after the arreſt, he procured a ſuperſedeas, and was diſcharged, and immediately after he was arreſted again by a capias out of the C. P. at the ſuit of the ſame plaintiff, and for the ſame cauſe of action. On a motion to diſcharge the proceedings becauſe irregular,

Per curiam. The defendant had a right to ſuperſede the action, becauſe no declaration was filed againſt him in time; and as he had a right to ſuperſede the action, certainly the plaintiff muſt have liberty to proceed in another; for his debt is not loſt for want of declaring in time, but only that action is gone, and therefore a new action may be brought. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 306.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. 2. Holmes v. Gordon.

The defendant's council moved on the ſtat. of 7 Ann c. 12. to diſcharge the execution againſt the defendant, as being a ſervant to Baron Hopman, reſident from the Duke of Mecklenburgh, the defendant being a menial and domeſtick ſervant to the Baron, and having continued in his ſervice to the time of his arreſt, and a certificate of his being a ſervant to the Baron being regiſtered in the ſecretary's office, and alſo in the ſheriff's office, according to the ſtatute.

Probyn. No mention is made of what capacity he ſerved in. G. ſwears he was an officiating ſervant; but it is uſual to ſet out what office he ſerves in, the affidavit is very looſe: but the court granted a rule to ſhew cauſe. Vide caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 3.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Shergold v. Holloway.

A juſtice of peace granted his warrant, directed to the defendant in theſe words, "Whereas com-"plaint is made to me, on the oath of J. W. that "W. S. refuſes to pay him wages; theſe are to re-"quire you, to cauſe the ſaid S. to appear before me, "or ſome other juſtice, to anſwer the complaint afore-"ſaid, and give notice to the ſaid J. W. before what "juſtice you appear."

On this the defendant arreſted the plaintiff, and carried him before the juſtice, who bound him over to the ſeſſions; on which the plaintiff brought his action, and a caſe being made at the aſſizes, the ſame was argued above, and theſe points reſolved.

1ſt. That though the ſtatute 5 Eliz. c. 4. does not expreſsly impower juſtices to order the payment of wages; yet they have been ſo long indulged with this power by the courts, under the general power of ſetting the rate, that it is not now to be diſputed.

2dly. That a juſtice has no power to grant a warrant to apprehend the party. He can only iſſue a ſummons, and that a warrant expreſsly to arreſt the party, will not juſtify the officer, there being no pretence for ſuch a juriſdiction.

3dly. That this though ſtrangely worded, was not a warrant to arreſt the plaintiff, for the defendant might cauſe him to appear by diſtreſs, and it was not equivalent to the words bring before me. Wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2, page 1002.

In treſpaſs for entering the plaintiff's yard, and breaking and entering his ſtable, and carrying away divers goods and chattels; viz. ſeven horſes; and for an aſſault, battery, and impriſonment of the plaintiff. The defendants, as to breaking and entering the plaintiff's ſtable, juſtify; for that the plaintiff detained in his ſtable ſeven horſes or geldings of the defendant Jones, who, at a court of our lord the King, in his Compter, holden before Sir J. S. then ſheriff of London, according to the cuſtom of the city, levied a plaint for detaining the ſaid goods; and afterwards the ſaid ſheriff commanded C. another defendant, who was a ſerjeant at mace, and a miniſter of the ſaid court, to appraiſe the ſaid goods, and to return them to Jones; and the ſaid ſerjeant at mace, and the defendant as his aſſiſtant, entered into the ſaid yard, which was the only way to the ſaid ſtable, and took the horſes, and delivered them to the defendant Jones. And as to the aſſault, battery, and impriſonment, they juſtify alſo; for that the defendant Jones ſued out a capias ad reſpondend. againſt the plaintiff, out of the court of C. P. directed to and delivered to the ſheriffs of London; whereupon the ſheriff iſſued a warrant to the defendant C. one of the ſerjeants at mace, who by virtue thereof arreſted the plaintiff, and detained him in cuſtody ſix hours, at the requeſt of the defendant Jones who was plaintiff in the ſaid writ, which is the ſame treſpaſs and aſſault, &c. To which plea the plaintiff has demurred generally.

1ſt, For that the court holden before the ſheriff is not ſaid to be according to the cuſtom.

2dly, That to return ſeven horſes or geldings is too uncertain. Allen 32, Moore v. Clipſam.

3dly, That it does not appear that theſe horſes, when taken, were within the juriſdiction of the ſheriff's court, and precepts of inferior courts muſt be executed within the juriſdiction.

4thly, That the plaintiff levied before J. S. ſheriff of London, is bad; becauſe the court will take notice there are two perſons that are ſheriffs. Lambe v. Wiſeman, Hob. 70.

But all theſe exceptions were over-ruled.

Lord Hardwicke. The plea in theſe points is well enough; the levying the plaint according to the cuſtom, goes to the whole: for it is not ſaid to be done at any particular court, but before J. S. in the Compter: as to the uncertainty of the goods taken, that might have been a good exception, according to the caſe in Allen, in an action of replevin, but it cannot be ſaid to be ſo void a plaint, as that the officer cannot juſtify under it. As to the place where the goods are taken; the ſtable is laid to be in London, and the goods ſaid to be taken in the ſaid ſtable. As to J. S.'s being but one of the ſheriffs, that is well enough, becauſe he is ſaid to be then ſheriff, which is the ſame as then a ſheriff, or one of the ſheriffs, and it is alledged to be according to the cuſtom; and the court is not neceſſary to be holden before both the ſheriffs.

An exception was likewiſe taken to the juſtification of the aſſault and battery; viz. that a man may not juſtify a battery, by virtue of an arreſt by proceſs, unleſs it had been by reſiſtance, or in his defence, &c. which ſhould have been ſet out; and the court doubted on this exception, and ordered it to ſtand over until this term, when it was again argued.

The plaintiff's council, in ſupport of the exception, cited Co. Ent. 304. b. Thompſon's Ent. 316. 2 Lutw. 929. Patrick v. Johnſon. That an arreſt by gently laying hands on, is not a juſtification of a battery. 2 Sid. 46. b.

The council for the defendant, in ſupport of the plea, cited Salk. 79. Genner v. Sparks, 1 Saund. 13. Skinner 387. King & Ux'. v. Theobals, and 21 H. 7. fol. 29. The court took a further day to give their opinion; and then,

Lord Hardwicke. The queſtion is, whether a battery of the plaintiff can be juſtified by ſhewing an arreſt by lawful proceſs? and on conſideration of the caſes, we are of opinion that a battery cannot be juſtified by ſhewing an arreſt barely, but that in order to make it good, ſomething further ſhould be ſhewn, as that the defendant gently laid his hands on the perſon, in order to arreſt, and did arreſt him, as in the caſe of Patrick v. Johnſon, 3 Lev. 403. though that way of pleading has been doubted of; or elſe that the plaintiff made reſiſtance, and was going to reſcue himſelf, and by reaſon of that he beat him, to take him. There is no caſe in all the books, that ſays, that a battery may be juſtified barely by ſhewing an arreſt, or that it is repugnant to plead not guilty of the battery, and to juſtify the reſidue of the treſpaſs, by an arreſt; the caſe in 2 Lutw. 934. is not ſo, for the repugnancy there is, pleading not guilty to the aſſault, and juſtifying by an arreſt; and that is right, becauſe an arreſt muſt neceſſarily be an aſſault, but is not neceſſarily a battery. The diſpute in the caſe of Patrick v. Johnſon, between the two reporters, Lutw. and Lev. has occaſioned the doubt that has ariſen as to this ſort of pleading; the queſtion then was, whether an arreſt by a gently laying hands on might be a juſtification of the battery: Levintz held it to be good pleading, Lutw. thought it not ſo, (and the court inclined that way) but he allows there are precedents of pleading it by a gently laying hands on. But neither Levintz nor Lutw. gave opinion that the battery can be juſtified merely by ſhewing an arreſt, without ſhewing a gently laying hands on, or a reſiſtance, &c. As to what has been ſaid, that every arreſt admits a battery, becauſe it cannot be without laying on of hands, and every laying on of hands is ſo, that is a miſtake in the caſe of Genner v. Sparks, which was cited to warrant the diſtinction, which it does not do; for the queſtion there was, whether there had been a reſcue; and the court held that there had not, becauſe there had been no arreſt, for the officer had not touched the defendant; and to be ſure in that caſe there was no arreſt, for the party was neither touched nor confined: but it does not follow that an arreſt cannot be made without touching the perſon; for if a bailiff comes into a room, and tells the defendant he arreſts him, and locks the door, that is an arreſt, for he is in cuſtody of the officer. But ſuppoſing there was a laying on of hands in the preſent caſe, every laying on of hands is not a battery, for the party's intention muſt be conſidered; for people will ſometimes, by way of joke, clap a man on the back, and it would be ridiculous to ſay that in every ſuch caſe a man muſt juſtify, and may not plead not guilty. The caſe of Wilſon v. Dodd, 2 Roll. Abr. 546. is directly in point, that a gently laying hands on is not a battery. That caſe indeed favours Lutwiche's opinion, that a gently laying hands on is not a juſtification, becauſe it does not admit a battery; therefore as an arreſt is not a battery, this is not a ſufficient juſtification.

Arreſt of Judgment.

Eaſter, 3 W. & M. Temple v. Killingworth.

Per Holt. If a declaration be part well and part ill, it ſhall be good for that which is well declared of; but if a writ of enquiry be executed for the whole, or if entire damages be given, it is good cauſe to ſtay judgment. 1 Vent. 27. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 5.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Anonymus.

An indictment for a miſdemeanor, was tried three days before the end of the term, and judgment was entered the ſame term; ſo that the defendant had not four days to move in arreſt of judgment. The point in queſtion was, Whether this entry of the judgment was regular, and whether it ought not to have been ſtayed till the term following?

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If there be four days and more between the trial and the end of the term, judgment ought not to be entered within the four days: but if the diſtringas be returnable within the term, and the party is tried within two or three days before the end of the term, the judgment ſhall be entered that term, though there be not four days to move in arreſt of judgment: it was thus ſettled in the caſe of Knox v. Levarr, on a conference between Scroggs C. J. and Sir William Jones, Attorney General, contrary to the report of Sir Samuel Aſtry.

Arreſt of judgment is either for matter intrinſic, i. e. ſuch as appears by the record itſelf, which will render the judgment erroneous and reverſible; or extrinſic, i. e. ſome foreign matter ſuggeſted to the court which proves the writ is abated, for it is not enough that it proves the writ is only abateable: the old courſe of taking advantage in arreſt of judgment was thus: the party after a general verdict having a day in court, (for ſo he has as to matters of law, though not of fact) did aſſign his exceptions in arreſt of judgment by way of plea; and it was called pleading in arreſt of judgment. Vide 21 H. 7. 37. *b. Hilary, 1 Ann. Brook v. Biſhop.

In treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, &c. after a verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, that the damages given by the verdict were entire, and part of the treſpaſs did not lie in a continuando i. e. a continuance, and yet damages were given for that too. It was objected, that if the ſame could be continued, no damages could be given in reſpect thereof, according to Butler & Hodges's caſe, yet under this continuance, ſeveral new acts of treſpaſs might be given in evidence, and ſo damages recovered for them.

Per curiam. The right way in treſpaſs, for repeated acts of treſpaſs, would be that on ſuch a day, and at divers other days and times, between ſuch a day and ſuch a day, the defendant did ſo and ſo. Vide 20 Hen. 6. In this caſe the continuance is impoſſible, and therefore no damages could be given for it, and the only miſchief poſſible would be that of giving other acts of treſpaſs in evidence under this pretence.

Another exception taken to the verdict was, that the declaration was generally of Eaſter term, and yet it appeared that the treſpaſs was committed after the 21*ſt April*, which was quinden paſch. i. e. in five weeks of Eaſter.

Per curiam. That term was adjourned by proclamation to the ſecond return, which was the 29th. All declarations ſhall refer to that time, and therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 152.

Eaſter, 1 Ann.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Before you can move in arreſt of judgment, the poſtea ought to be in court, and delivered to the clerk in court; and after it is ſo brought in, the defendant's council have four days to move in arreſt of judgment, nor will the court grant a rule to alter or amend a poſtea after it is returned and filed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 3.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Darby.

The defendant being convicted on an information for ſubornation of perjury, and judgment quod capiatur entered, and a capias iſſued, he was taken thereon, and brought into court, where his council moved in arreſt of judgment; but the court was of opinion it was out of time, for the judgment quod capiatur, i. e. that he be taken into cuſtody for the fine, was a final judgment, and the ſubſequent entry only for the certainty of the fine. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 78.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Wood v. Shepherd.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. One ſhould not move in arreſt of judgment till the poſtea be brought in; and the defendant ſhould give a rule on the poſtea, which is in itſelf a notice to bring it in; and it is againſt the antient courſe of the court to make a rule for ſtaying of judgment till the poſtea be brought in. By the courſe of the Common Pleas, the clerk of the aſſize keeps it till the days for moving in arreſt of judgment be paſt, and the notice is given him, and he has his fee, viz. 6 s. 8 d. for attending with it; and the clerk of the aſſize ought to deliver the poſtea to none but to the clerk in court; and notice to the clerk in court is good notice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 24. Salk. vol. 1. p. 78.

Hilary, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Deman.

The defendant was indicted of perjury, and the indictment ſet forth a trial had before the Lord Chief Baron, and his aſſociate J. S. by niſi prius in Middleſex; and that the defendant being ſworn before the Lord Chief Baron on the Holy Evangeliſts, depoſed ſo and ſo, which was falſe, and ſo the defendant committed wilful perjury before the Lord Chief Baron, and his aſſociate J. S. and judgment was given againſt the defendant by nil dicit, i. e. he ſays nothing; and now the defendant appearing in court, a motion was made by his council to arreſt the judgment; and it being doubted whether he was not too late,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that after judgment by nil dicit, judgment has been arreſted, but never after judgment on demurrer, on which his council then took exception, that this oath could not be at the trial ſet forth in the indictment, for the trial was before the Lord Chief Baron, and the aſſociate, but the oath before the Chief Baron, without the aſſociate, and the aſſignment of the perjury differs from the oath, for that is before the Chief Baron and aſſociate; whereas the oath was before the Chief Baron only, and that is a material part of the indictment: and for this variance he prayed, that judgment might be ſtayed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The trial is not ſaid to have been before the Chief Baron and his aſſociate, &c. and the aſſociate need not be mentioned in every part of the indictment, where the Chief Baron is mentioned; but this is according to the conſtant form; in the niſi prius proceſs, the diſtringas, and the jurata, and in the continuances, the aſſociate is never mentioned, but only in the entry of the poſtea; and by ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 12. which erects the niſi prius in Middleſex, there is no direction that the judge ſhould have any aſſociate.

Powell, Juſtice. It ſhall be intended, that the aſſociate did continue with the Chief Baron all the trial, having been mentioned to have been there at the beginning.

The council for the proſecutor inſiſted that the oath was ſaid to be then and there in the ſaid court.

Accordingly, judgment was given, that the defendant ſhould be ſet in the pillory. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1221.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Anonymous.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, in an action for words, the words were, you have forgot ſince you lived in the Black Bull Yard; you are a raſcal and a villain, there you could procure broad money, and could clip it when you had done, and there the ſheers could go. He inſiſted there was nothing in theſe words alledged, only a power of doing, but no poſitive charge.

Powell, Juſtice, taking the words altogether, they would bear a ſtrong intendment that the fact was done. Holt put this caſe: ſuppoſe a man is dead, and A. ſays, John of Styles could have murdered him. Quæ. If this would be actionable. The court took two or three days to conſider of it, but afterwards the plaintiff had his judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 60.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Young v. Slaughterford.

This being a trial at bar, on an appeal of murder, the Solicitor General moved in arreſt of judgment that the appeal was not good. See page 80 of this work.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. Rumball v. Ball.

An action of debt was brought on a note to this effect; I acknowledge myſelf indebted to R. ſo much, which I promiſe to pay on demand. A motion was made in arreſt of judgment, that though on a note acknowledging a debt, it was not neceſſary to alledge a demand, yet where it is part of the agreement, there a demand is neceſſary.

Per curiam. The words promiſe to pay, import no more, than that I am ready to pay the money at any time, and ſhall not reſtrain or qualify the other words; this being no debt ariſing on the performance of a certain condition, but a debt plainly precedent to the demand. Beſides, ſuppoſing the demand neceſſary, the action itſelf perhaps is a demand. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 38.

On an action brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for words, viz. Harriſon got a witneſs to forſwear himſelf in ſuch a cauſe. You or he, (innuendo, the plaintiff) hired one Bell to forſwear himſelf. And for theſe following words ſpoken at another time, two Dyers are gone off (innuendo, become bankrupt) and for ought I know, Harriſon will be ſo to within this time twelve month; on iſſue joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and joint damages.

To this judgment the defendant's council moved in arreſt thereof, that the words were not actionable, and took the following exceptions:

1ſt Exception That though the firſt branch of the words, if they were alone, are certain enough; yet when he goes on and ſays, you or the plaintiff hired one Bell to forſwear himſelf, it becomes altogether uncertain to whom the words relate; and to this purpoſe were cited 1 Roll. Abr. 81. and 1 Cro. 497. where the words were, one of you three, &c.

2d Exception. That the words were not actionable, becauſe they did not ſet forth that what the witneſs was forſworn in was a material point in the cauſe; and that ſuppoſing theſe words were actionable, yet if the following words that were ſpoken at a different time were not actionable, that then the damages being joint, the judgment muſt be arreſted.

The defendant's council further urged, that thoſe words were not actionable, becauſe the word, gone off, was a word capable of various conſtructions, and was therefore to be taken in the moſt favourable ſenſe. 3 Mod. 155. An action brought for theſe words, broken, run away, and will never return again: If the words themſelves were not actionable, the innuendo will not help it; for an innuendo is not to ſet forth a new matter, but to refer to ſomething already mentioned in the declaration. King v. Greepe, Newnham, innuendo, Newnham in Devonſhire, 4 Co. Rep. 20. a. burnt my barn, innuendo, full of corn; in both theſe caſes, the innuendo void, becauſe it ſets forth no new matter: he likewiſe ſaid, that the action would not lie unleſs Bell had actually forſworn himſelf, which perhaps the words got, &c. do not neceſſarily imply.

Per curiam. We are of opinion that the plaintiff ſhould have judgment. Precedents are not of equal authority in actions for words as in other actions, becauſe manner of ſpeaking is the rule for the interpretation of words; and this rule is different in one age from what it is in another. The words that 100 years ago did not import a ſlanderous ſenſe, now may; and ſo vice verſa.

In this kind of action for words, which is not of very great antiquity, the courts did at firſt, as much as they could, diſcountenance; and that for a wiſe reaſon, becauſe generally brought for contention and vexation, and therefore when the words were capable of two conſtructions, the court always took them in the moſt favourable ſenſe.

Latterly theſe actions have been more countenanced; for men's tongues growing more virulent, and irreparable damage ariſing from words, it has been by experience found, that unleſs men can get ſatisfaction by law they will be apt to take it themſelves. The rule therefore that has now prevailed is, that words are to be taken in the ſenſe that is moſt natural and obvious, and in which thoſe to whom they are ſpoken will be ſure to underſtand them.

The words, you or he, &c. do not render the former uncertain; for they relate not to the getting, &c. but to new matter, viz. who paid the money.

Beſides, if the words were, A. or D. did, &c. either A. or D. might bring an action; but then there muſt be an averment, that neither of them did it. It is not neceſſary to the maintaining of this action, that Bell did in forſwearing himſelf, &c. The ſignification of the words, gone off, is very well known among merchants.

The doctrine laid down concerning innuendos is undoubtedly true, when underſtood of matters of fact, but here the innuendos were not introductory of new matters of fact, but only explanatory of the foregoing words. The court therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 197.

Hilary, 1 Geo. Walter v. Warren.

This was an action brought by the huſband, for taking his wife away, and raviſhing her, whereby, &c. for the ſpace of an whole year, &c. A verdict and general damages were given for the plaintiff.

The court was moved, in arreſt of judgment, for that a year had not expired, from the 1ſt October, the time of the offence, to the time of the verdict, and much leſs at the time the action commenced, and therefore general damages being given, it was erroneous.

Hobart, 186. 1 Mod. 271. Horn v. Chandler. Moore 887. 2. Saunders 169. Hamilton and Veere, a caſe full in point.

On the other ſide it was ſaid, that coming under a whereby, it was only conſequential, and laid by way of aggravation of damages, and was not the cauſe of action; that the words for a conſiderable time was enough, and the viz. for the ſpace of an whole year, &c. ſhould be rejected as ſurpluſage, becauſe impoſſible.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. This caſe is widely different from the common caſes of a time that is altogether impoſſible; as the 30th of February, &c. for here the whole time is not impoſſible; and it cannot be known for how much of it the jury gave the damages; moſt probably to the time of the verdict. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 273.

In an action on the caſe, on ſeveral promiſes, as to the 2*d promiſe*, the plaintiff declared as follows; that W. M. the inteſtate, gave a note to him, the plaintiff, bearing date the 1*ſt December* 1704, and reciting, that whereas S. had, at the ſpecial inſtance of the inteſtate, lent to A. M. brother of the inteſtate, the ſum of 100 l. and whereas the ſaid A. M. had given his bond for the repayment of the ſame on the 2*d of June* following, with intereſt; and, for further ſecurity, had given a warrant of attorney, to confeſs judgment on the ſaid bond; the ſaid inteſtate promiſed, if the ſaid A. M. did not repay the ſame, with intereſt, on the 2*d of June* following, purſuant to the condition of the bond, that then he would pay the ſame, with intereſt. Avers, &c.

To this the defendant pleads, that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years.

To this plea the defendant replied; on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict given for the plaintiff.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, that notwithſtanding the jury had found for the plaintiff, ſuch judgment was ill, becauſe it appears on the face of the declaration, that the cauſe of action did accrue above ſix years before the death of the inteſtate; for the cauſe of action accrued from the 2*d of June* following the 1*ſt of September* 1704.

The other objection he made was, that in this caſe bringing of the action for the intereſt, as well as the principal, vitiates the whole. 2 Rolles Rep. 47. a.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. As to the intereſt, we are on an expreſs promiſe, and an expreſs promiſe to pay intereſt, or money won at play, will ſupport an action.

In anſwer to the grand objection, it was urged, that the court ſhould take notice of the common practice of not putting bonds in ſuit, while the intereſt was duly paid; that this was the caſe here; that the obligor did for ſome time duly pay the intereſt, and this moved the jury to find as they did; for it was contended, that the cauſe of action did not ariſe until the obligor made default in payment of intereſt.

It was alſo urged, that the note was only the form of the promiſe, and evidence of it; and therefore if a promiſe made without a note be capable of continuance, a promiſe by note muſt be ſo too.

In 1 Ventris 191. it was held, although it appeared by the declaration, that the cauſe of action did ariſe above ſix years, &c. that yet the defendant ſhould not take advantage of it, without pleading it.

Raym. 86. The plaintiff declares, as executor, on a promiſe thirteen years ago, and non aſſumpſit within ſix years pleaded. On iſſue joined, a verdict and judgment was given for the defendant; for though the replication was a departure from the declaration. The defendant ſhould have demurred to the replication, inſtead of joining iſſue. Here the declaration is aided by a verdict.

Per curiam. There is a difference between declarations on a parol promiſe, and a promiſe by note; in the former the day is not material, in the latter it is.

The iſſue here is on a promiſe by this very note; and therefore impoſſible, in the nature of the thing, that an evidence of a ſubſequent promiſe, or a ſubſequent note, can prove a promiſe by this note.

As to the common practice of not putting a bond in ſuit until the intereſt, &c. the anſwer is, that default of paying the intereſt would never give a cauſe of action, unleſs there were one before. According to this note, on the non-payment on the 2*d of June*, a cauſe of action accrued. A verdict will cure any thing that a verdict can cure, but not where on the declaration it manifeſtly appears that no evidence whatever can maintain the iſſue.

Formerly it was held, that the parties ſhould not take advantage of the ſtatute of limitations, without pleading it; but now the law is otherwiſe. The caſe of Dean v. Crane was to this purpoſe; there was a promiſe to the executor, within a year before the action brought; but the iſſue joined was, whether the promiſe was made to the teſtator within ſix years before the action brought; and a verdict for the plaintiff.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, that it appeared on the face of the declaration, that the teſtator was dead above ſix years before the bringing the action, and therefore, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion at firſt, that the verdict had cured it; but afterwards it was reſolved by the opinion of all the judges, that this was a defect impoſſible for a verdict to cure. In the caſe of Heylin v. Huſkins, 10 Ann. there was a queſtion, whether a bare acknowledgement of a debt amounted to a new promiſe; and reſolved, that it did not. But in that caſe there was an expreſs promiſe, on which the plaintiff declared; viz. I deny that I owe you any thing; prove it, and I will pay you. The court arreſted the judgment in the principal caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 312.

Hilary, 2 Geo. Anonymous.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, in an action of debt on a bail bond, wherein the obligor was bound in 40 l. conditioned that J. S. ſhould appear on the return of the writ; the objection was, that the word quadrant. i. e. forty, was inſenſible; it is true, if the condition had been for payment of money, ſo that it might explain what was meant in the bond, it might be good; but where the bond is ſingle, or the condition is for doing ſome collateral act (as in this caſe it was) which doth not explain what ſum is intended in the bond, there it is void.

To which it was anſwered, that it may be well on the roll; and thereupon the court ſtayed all proceedings till the roll was brought in; and ſaid, though the condition of this bond was collateral, yet the bond being made according to the ſtatute, by which it is enacted, that none be arreſted by proceſs, &c. in which the true cauſe of action is not expreſſed, and for which the defendant is bailable by virtue of the ſtat. 23. H. 6. ſhall be forced to enter into a bond, with ſureties for appearing, in any ſum exceeding 40 l.

Now the condition of this bond being for appearing, &c. that may explain what is intended by the word quadrant. in the bond, viz. 40 l. according to the ſtatute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 343.

Hilary, 3 Geo. Cole v. Hawkins.

In Trinity term, 13 Ann. on an aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declared on a promiſe made the 16*th of January*, 1706, the defendant pleaded in bar the ſtatute of limitations; and that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years before the exhibiting of the bill. The plaintiff replied, the bill was exhibited the 23*d of January*, 1713; and that the cauſe of action did ariſe within ſix years before exhibiting the ſaid bill.

To this the defendant demurred; and, after having been argued by council, the matter was adjourned for further conſideration. And now Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court.

Judgment muſt be given for the plaintiff. For this being the caſe of a parol promiſe, the day in the declaration is not material; and therefore the plaintiff, in his replication, has only departed from an immaterial part of his declaration; which would be cured by a verdict, and is now aided on a general demurrer, by the ſtatute for amendment of the law.

Was it more than matter of form, a verdict finding the promiſe at another day, could never cure it, as moſt certainly it would.

And for this purpoſe, the caſe of Lee v. Raynes, 1 Lev. 110. 1 Keble 556, 578. was cited, where this doctrine is laid down; that for the plaintiff, in his replication, to vary from the time or place in his declaration, in order to follow the defendant's plea, is not a departure.

In the old books, indeed, this would have been a departure. 22 Aſſiſe 86.

And unleſs what ſtrictly ſpeaking is a departure, be ſometimes allowed; unleſs the plaintiff, where the defendant by his juſtification makes the time or place material, may follow the defendant's plea, though it lead him to another time or place; all that doctrine, that in tranſitory actions, where time and place are not material, the plaintiff may declare at any time or place, muſt fall to the ground. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 349.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. Rudge v. Onon.

In an action of aſſault and battery, in the declaration there were two counts; the firſt count was good, the ſecond was with a cumque etiam, i. e. whereas alſo, and entire damages given. In this caſe the judgment was arreſted. Vide Forteſcue, page 376.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. Edwards v. Blunt.

Per curiam. After judgment on demurrer, the defendant ſhall not come to arreſt the judgment on the return of the inquiry, for an exception that might have been taken, on arguing the demurrer. The party cannot be ſaid to come as a friend to the court, nor ſhall any one tell us, that the judgment we gave on mature deliberation is wrong; it is otherwiſe, indeed, in the caſe of judgment by default, for that is not given in ſo ſolemn a manner; or if the fault ariſes on the writ of inquiry, or verdict, for there the party could not alledge it before. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 425.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. King v. Selfe.

The defendant was indicted at the aſſizes for forging ſtamps, and appeared there, on his recognizance, to anſwer the ſaid indictment, and pleaded not guilty, and on his trial, he was convicted; but on a motion in arreſt of judgment it was ſet aſide: afterwards he exhibited a bill in Chancery, againſt the proſecutor of the indictment, who pleaded this conviction of forgery, in bar to the ſaid bill; and now the plaintiff in Chancery moved this court, that the record might be made up with the arreſt of judgment, for that by a miſtake of the clerk of the aſſize, that was not recorded, nor did there any notes thereof appear in his books, but only that he was bound over by recognizance to appear at the aſſizes, and that he did accordingly appear, and ſaved his recognizance; all which matter being evident to the court by the records of the aſſizes, yet they would make no rule for the record to be made up with the arreſt of judgment, becauſe a precedent of this nature might be of dangerous conſequence, and therefore deſired that the cauſe might be put into the paper, and ſpoke to again, that it might be judicially determined. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8 page 45.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Anonymous.

A motion was made to ſtay the proceedings on a judgment, ſuggeſting that a part of the money was paid, and that the defendant was willing to pay the reſt into court.

To which it was replied, that what money the plaintiff had already received, was in diſcharge of ſome other debts between him and the defendant; but on producing his receipt, it appeared to be paid indefinitely, viz. as ſo much due on account.

Per curiam. Where a debtor owes money to his creditor on ſeveral accounts, he may pay part, and apply it to any debt; but if the creditor denies that he received it in ſatisfaction of that debt, but on ſome other account, then he hath his election to apply the payment to what debt he will; ſo where it appears that money is paid indefinitely, the creditor has his election to declare on what account he received it.

Therefore if the debtor in the principal caſe would have this payment applied to the judgment on equitable terms, he ſhould likewiſe pay or tender all the money due to the plaintiff on ſimple contract, or otherwiſe, as far as the penalty of the judgment covers ſuch debts; for this court will not compel a creditor by judgment to accept a leſs ſum than is due on the judgment, on the account of any former indefinite payments, when there were other accounts depending between the parties, unleſs the defendant will conſent to bring in all that is due to the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 236.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Herbert v. Morgan.

The plaintiff was arreſted at the ſuit of the now defendant, in a fictitious action, without any colour of reaſon; and afterwards he brought an action of falſe impriſonment againſt the defendant, and the jury gave him 80 l. damages; and on a motion in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the damages were exceſſive, it was oppoſed by the plaintiff's council, and inſiſted, that he might have the benefit of the verdict, which was granted; and accordingly the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 296.

In treſpaſs againſt two defendants, one ſuffers judgment to go by default, and the other pleads a diſtreſs for rent, and a licence from the plaintiff to ſell the goods; on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict for the defendant.

The court was moved to ſtay the judgment againſt the other defendant; ſince on the whole record it appeared, the plaintiff had no cauſe of action. 1 Inſt. 125. b. Salk. 23. Cro. Jac. 134. 1 Lev. 63.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Wyat v. ———

In an action of treſpaſs, for taking away divers goods and chattels, the judgment was arreſted for uncertainty. Vide Forteſcue, page 377.

The defendant was indicted for forging a bond, and on the trial, there appeared a variance in the addition of the obligor, on which a ſpecial verdict was found. The Chief Juſtice doubting whether it was a variance or not; becauſe being put into the paper to be argued on the ſpecial verdict, the council for the defendant attempting to ſpeak, it was inſiſted that the defendant ought to be in court, as on motions in arreſt of judgment. To which it was anſwered, that a motion in arreſt of judgment, is after a verdict, whereas till this ſpecial verdict is argued and determined, the defendant is not to be conſidered as guilty. The court thought this a reaſonable diſtinction, and allowed the defendant's council to proceed.

It was then argued, that the verdict was imperfect, the indictment being for three diſtinct facts. 1ſt. For forging a bond; 2dly. For publiſhing ſuch bond, ſo by him forged; and 3dly. For publiſhing a bond, knowing it to be forged. To theſe three offences the defendant pleads not guilty, and the jury were charged to enquire of the whole, and in their verdict they find, that he forged a bond in the words and figures following, and that he publiſhed the ſame, but they ſay nothing as to the third offence, but conclude, that if on this evidence the court is of opinion he is guilty of the facts charged in the indictment, then they find him guilty; and if the court think him not guilty, they find accordingly.

On this ſtate of the caſe it was inſiſted on, that the jury ought to find all the iſſues with which they are charged, and ſince the evidence extended to two facts only, they ſhould have found him not guilty as to the third. 3 Lev. 55. In treſpaſs for taking a gown and mantua, it was found ſpecially, that the defendant took the gown for a tax, and nothing ſaid as to the mantua, and held a diſcontinuance. Cro. Eliz. 133. 2 Roll. Abr. 722. pl. 19. & 2 Sid. 86. it is ſaid, that in all ſpecial verdicts, the judges will not adjudge of any matters of fact but that which the jury declare to be true of their own finding. Trials per pais, 236. Here the court are ſpecially tied down to ſay, whether on the evidence laid before them the defendant is guilty of all the facts; and that they cannot ſay, becauſe there is no evidence as to one. Co. Lit. 227. a. A verdict that finds part of the iſſue, and nothing as to the reſt, is inſufficient for the whole: as in an information of intruſion into a meſſuage, and one hundred acres of land, the jury find as to the land, and nothing as to the houſe, it is void for the whole. Godb. 57. 2 Leon. 194. Hard. 166.

The court held, that as the verdict ſtood they could not give judgment that the defendant was guilty of all the offences, the evidence only warranting them to adjudge him guilty of the firſt two, the laſt not being confined to the ſame bond; or if it was, yet every publication is a diſtinct offence: but then they ought themſelves not to have been tied up by the ſpecial concluſion, but that the whole evidence being laid before them, they were to do what the jury ought to have done; and therefore they adjudged, that on the matter referred to them by the jury, it appeared to the court that the defendant was guilty of the forgery and firſt publication, and not guilty of the reſt.

Judgment not having been ſigned, the court was of opinion the defendant might move any thing in arreſt of judgment. And it having been taken notice of by the council for the King, that the forgery was laid to be againſt the form of the ſtatute; it was then objected by the council for the defendant, that all the proceedings againſt him were void; for that the certiorari, venire, and diſtringas, were as if it had been an indictment at common law; and many precedents were cited, where the proceſs always ran of certain treſpaſſes and contempts againſt the form of the ſtatute: and indeed that diſtinction had been kept up in all the forms of the Crown Office. But the court thought it not neceſſary, for a certiorari to remove all indictments, will remove one for forgery on the ſtatute, and the jury are ſummoned to try whether he is guilty of the offence whereof he is indicted, which is a ſufficient warning to appear in the cauſe; and therefore the court pronounced judgment on the ſtatute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 843.

The court held, that a motion in arreſt of judgment may be made (on the crown ſide) at any time before ſentence pronounced; that the judgment ſigned in the Crown Office is only an interlocutory judgment, and the award quod capiatur, i. e. that he be taken, is only to bring the defendant in to receive the final judgment or ſentence of the court, but is not the final judgment itſelf. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 801.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 3. Weſton v. Maſon, & Weſton v. Chapman.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, after verdict for the plaintiff, on an action of debt on bond brought againſt the ſureties of a ſheriff's bailiff, the defendant craved oyer of the condition, which ſtates that the ſheriff had appointed the defendant a bailiff for the hundred of Eaſt Gotſon; if therefore he ſhall duly execute his office, &c. within that hundred, and ſhall duly execute all warrants directed to him, and make due and ſufficient returns thereof, &c. then the bond to be void. To this action the defendant pleaded the performance of the condition; to which the plaintiff replied, and aſſigned a particular breach; viz, that this bailiff had not made a due return to a particular warrant directed to him; the defendant rejoined, that he had; on which iſſue was joined, and a verdict obtained as aforeſaid.

The defendant's council, on this motion, made an objection to the verdict, that the bailiff was only appointed bailiff of a particular hundred, and the warrants to which he was obliged to make returns were confined to the particular hundred of which he was bailiff; and that it did not appear that the warrant which he is charged not to have returned was directed to him as bailiff of the hundred, and if not, he was not obliged to return it; and cited a caſe in point, in ſupport of his objection, from Aleyn 10. Stoughton v. Day.

The plaintiff's council oppoſed the motion, and argued that it did not appear otherwiſe than by the recital of the condition of the bond, that the defendant was appointed bailiff for the hundred of Eaſt Gotſon only; and further obſerved, that the warrant was directed to the defendant, and delivered to him, and therefore he ought to have returned it: that theſe bailiffs are appointed bailiffs of a particular hundred only to prevent confuſion in ſummoning juries, &c. as to executing meſne proceſs, they are not confined to the particular hundred, but are conſidered as bailiffs for the whole county, or there muſt be as many warrants as there are hundreds in a county; that the practice was for ſheriffs to direct theſe warrants generally, and not to the bailiff of a particular hundred: that if the objection taken by the defendant's council to the verdict was to hold, there would be an end of all ſheriffs bonds; and therefore prayed judgment on their verdict.

Lord Manſfield. The condition of the bond appeared on oyer; the defendant's plea alledges a performance of it by the bailiff's having duly executed, and made due and ſufficient returns to all warrants directed to him: the plaintiff replies to this plea, and ſpecifies a particular warrant which the defendant did not duly return: to this replication the defendant does not demur, but takes iſſue on the fact. It does not appear from any thing offered, that this warrant was directed to the defendant, as bailiff of the hundred, and therefore it is obſerved by the council for the defendant, that he was not obliged to execute it.

If this matter had ſtood on the conſtruction of the bond, it might have been an object of conſideration, but this being in arreſt of judgment after a verdict, and not on demurrer, it does not appear that it was not directed to him as bailiff of the hundred.

Wilmot, Juſtice. If it had ſtood on a demurrer, I ſhould have thought the caſe in Aleyn in point.

From the record, we cannot take the warrant to be directed to the defendant, otherwiſe than as bailiff of the hundred. The defendant, by joining iſſue on the fact of returning the warrant, admits that it was not directed to him generally, and after ſuch admiſſion, we cannot intend that it was not directed to him, as bailiff of the hundred, for the purpoſe of arreſting judgment.

Yates, Juſtice. The caſe cited in Aleyn was on a demurrer, and that a general one, and before ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. ſo that the caſe does not affect this: a verdict will aid a title defectively ſet forth, though not a total defect of title.

It was ſufficient for the plaintiff to purſue the words of the condition of the bond, and it lay on the defendant to ſhew that this was not ſuch a warrant as was within the condition, inſtead of which he admits that the bailiff returned this warrant, which is allowing it to be a proper one, and the court will not now intend it to be otherwiſe in order to overturn a verdict.

I am clear that the plaintiff is intitled to his verdict, as the defendant has not choſen to take the opportunity of ſhewing what he might have done if true, and therefore there is no ground for arreſting the judgment.

Aſton, Juſtice, concurred; and obſerved that the defendant might have taken the proper method of ſtating the particular fact, by a rejoinder.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff, in both cauſes. Vide Bur. vol. 3. page 1725.

Aſſault and Battery.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Leward and Wife v. Baſely.

In an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery, the battery was committed on the wife, the defendant pleaded de ſon aſſault demeſne of the wife. The plaintiffs reply, that the defendant went out to fight the huſband, and that ſhe being deſirous to aſſiſt her huſband, and to keep him from being wounded, made the aſſault on the defendant; the defendant demurs, and the plaintiffs council argued, that this made the aſſault was ill, and in ſupport of his argument, cited a caſe, Jones v. Treſilian intr. Trin. 21 Car. 2. rot. 1841. In Treſpaſs, aſſault, and battery, the defendant pleaded de ſon aſſault demeſne; the plaintiff replied, that he was poſſeſſed of a cloſe, called Cupner's Cloſe, and that the defendant broke the gate, and chaced his horſes in the cloſe, and the plaintiff for defending his poſſeſſion made a gentle aſſault on the defendant, and on demurrer adjudged a bad replication, for he ſhould have ſaid, he laid his hands gently on him, for he could not juſtify an aſſault in defence of his poſſeſſion. And this caſe, the court agreed to be good law, but different from the preſent caſe; for this is a juſtifiable aſſault, for the wife may lawfully make an aſſault, to keep her huſband from harm, and ſhe has pleaded it ſo. In the ſame manner a ſervant may juſtify an aſſault in defence of his maſter, but not otherwiſe, becauſe the maſter might have an action, whereby he loſt his ſervice. So in this caſe, if the defendant lifted his hand to ſtrike the huſband, the wife might well juſtify an aſſault to prevent the blow; and if the fact had been otherwiſe, the defendant ought to have rejoined de ſon tort demeſne, and then it had been againſt the plaintiff; but a man cannot juſtify an aſſault in defence of his horſe, or his poſſeſſion, for there he ought to ſay, he laid his hands gently on him. Therefore judgment, niſi, i. e. unleſs cauſe ſhewn, was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 62.

In an action of aſſault, &c. the defendant may juſtify the aſſault to ſave his perſon, but not to defend his houſe or poſſeſſion, for in that caſe he muſt plead molliter manus impoſuit, i. e. that he gently laid his hands on him, but the law ſeems to be that he may juſtify an aſſault in defence of his houſe, though in ſuch caſe he cannot juſtify a wounding. 2 Roll. 548. Latch. 20. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 46.

Keit's Caſe.

Adjudged, per Holt, Chief Juſtice. That a maſter may juſtify the beating his apprentice, ſervant, ſcholar, &c. if the beating is in nature of correction only, and with a proper inſtrument, otherwiſe, immoderate correction is a good reply to ſuch action. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 47.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. Truſcott v. Carpenter and Man.

The plaintiff brought an action of treſpaſs, for an aſſault, battery, wounding, and impriſonment, againſt the defendants, and declares that the defendants, on ſuch a day, at St. Ree in Cornwall, beat, wounded, and impriſoned him, and detained him in priſon until he paid a fine of 3 l. 16 s. 8 d. &c. the defendants, to the wounding plead not guilty, and as to the reſt of the treſpaſs, aſſault, and impriſonment, they plead, that the defendant, Carpenter, entered a plaint in debt againſt the plaintiff, in the court of Launceſton in Cornwall, for a debt due to him, within the juriſdiction of the court; that a ſummons iſſued thereon againſt the plaintiff, and a nihil was returned thereon; that then a capias iſſued, directed to the defendant Man, to ſeize the plaintiff, which was awarded the 27th of January, 7 W. 3. returnable the 10th of April following; that this capias was delivered to the defendant, Man, and he, by virtue thereof, before the return of the writ, viz. the 9th of March, at Launceſton aforeſaid, at the requeſt and inſtance of the defendant Carpenter, took and arreſted the plaintiff, and detained him in cuſtody, for want of ſureties, until the 10th of March, at which day the plaintiff paid the debt, which was the 3 l. 16 s. 8 d. &c. and the defendant Man, then and there, by the conſent of the defendant Carpenter, let the plaintiff go at large, which is the reſidue of the ſaid treſpaſs, aſſault, and impriſonment, whereof the plaintiff complains; and they traverſe without this, that they are guilty of any other treſpaſs, aſſault, or impriſonment, before the teſte of the writ, or after the return, or at St. Ree, or any other place out of the juriſdiction of the court of Launceſton. The plaintiff replies, that the cauſe of action aroſe at St. Neots, without this, that it aroſe within the juriſdiction of the court of Launceſton. The defendants demur. The plaintiff's council argued, that the replication has avoided the defendant's plea; that the defendant, by his demurrer, has confeſſed, that the cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court of Launceſton; and then the officers who execute any proceſs are puniſhable, otherwiſe, if the court has juriſdiction, but the proceſs is erroneous, and for this they cited 10 Co. 76. the caſe of the Marſhalſea, 1 Roll. Abr. 547, 809. March 8. 2 Roll. Rep. 109. and Mich. 28. Car. 2. C. B. Rol. 516. Higgen v. Martin, where an action was brought, as in this caſe, againſt the plaintiff, who recovered in the inferior court, and the officer for falſe impriſonment: the defendants juſtified as here; and the plaintiff replied, that the cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court; and on demurrer, it was adjudged for the plaintiff, on the reaſon and authority of the caſe of the Marſhalſea. So Hill. 33 & 34 Car. 2. C. B. Rot. 458, or 1629. Gelder v. Pratt. the ſame caſe, and the ſame reſolution. But not allowed. For, per curiam, neither the officer nor the party are bound to take notice, whether the cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court; and therefore the reſolution of the caſe of the Marſhalſea was a hard reſolution, and warranted by none of the books there cited. But if the cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court, the defendant in the inferior court ought to plead it; and if he does not, the affair of the juriſdiction is over, and he ſhall not take advantage of it in any collateral action brought againſt the plaintiff, or the officer who executes the proceſs. And ſo it was reſolved in the Exchequer, ſince the revolution, in the caſe of Poole and Gwinn, on ſolemn debate and examination of all the precedents, where the action of falſe impriſonment was brought againſt the judge, officer, and plaintiff, in the inferior court, and the caſe was adjudged when Powell, Juſtice, was a baron of the Exchequer, who ſaid, that Holt, Chief Juſtice, approved of the judgment, in the caſe of Poole v. Gwinn, on the ſame being reported to him.

2dly. It was urged for the plaintiff, that notwithſtanding his replication was not good, yet the defendant's plea was ill; for the defendant juſtifies under a capias teſted the 27th of January, and returnable the 10th of April following, and ſays that by virtue thereof he took the plaintiff the 9th of March, and diſcharged him the 10th; and traverſes without this, that they were guilty at any time before the teſte, and after the return of the writ; ſo that there is a time not traverſed, in which the defendants may be guilty, notwithſtanding any thing that appears to the contrary, viz. between the 10th of March, which was the day of the diſcharge of the plaintiff and the 10th of April, which was the return day of the writ; and they cited Carter 84. Atkins v. Cleaver. And of this opinion was the whole court.

A ſecond exception was taken to the plea, that the plaintiff has declared for an expreſs battery, therefore, though the juſtification of the impriſonment by implication juſtifies a battery, yet, when an expreſs battery is laid, it ought to be juſtified alſo. 1 Roll. Rep. 176. Wilſon v. Dod, and there it was adjudged a diſcontinuance, becauſe there was no anſwer to the battery. But there is here an anſwer, ſuch as it is; for the defendants ſay, that as to the reſt of the treſpaſs, &c. which the defendants intended to be a juſtification for the whole, and ſo to comprehend the battery, and therefore no diſcontinuance. But it is an inſufficient juſtification, becauſe they juſtify by implication only a battery, which is included in the impriſonment, where an expreſs battery ought to be juſtified. Beſides, if an officer has a legal proceſs to arreſt a man, yet he cannot beat him, unleſs he reſiſts; but no ſuch thing appears here, and therefore, for this reaſon alſo, the plea is ill. And ſo it was adjudged, Eaſter, 1691. C. B. intr. Hilary, 2 W. & M. Roll. 759. Stony v. Calvert; and 2 Vent. 193. Carre v. Donne. And of this opinion was the whole court; for where an expreſs battery is laid, it is not enough to juſtify the impriſonment on legal proceſs, which includes a battery; but the defendant ought to go on and ſhew that he arreſted the plaintiff, and the plaintiff offered to reſcue himſelf, and ſo the defendant was compelled to beat him; for otherwiſe, if it be not on ſome occaſion, a man cannot juſtify a battery in an arreſt. And therefore, for theſe two defects in the plea, judgment was given the whole court for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 229.

In an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery; on demurrer tendered by the plaintiff, without any imparlance, the judgment was thus, and the aforeſaid G. came not, &c. the defendant's council moved, that this was a judgment by default, when it ſhould be by nihil dicit, i. e. he ſays nothing, for a default cannot be without an imparlance; for without imparlance he was not demandable; and the entry ſhould be, and it was adjudged by the court that he ſhould join in the demurrer, and he ſaid nothing, &c. and this is manifeſt from the conſtant practice in caſe of common recoveries, where the judgment is ever by default: and therefore they are forced to grant a general imparlance; by which a ſuit is put in ſuſpence, and the defendant is demandable.

The plaintiff's council in anſwer ſaid, it was a judgment on nihil dicit, i. e. he ſays nothing; and non venit, i. e. he came not, muſt not be underſtood that he came not to join in the demurrer; and Holt inclined that way; but ſaid they would not be poſitive: and he ſaid, that on a nihil dicit a perſon ſhall never take advantage of ill pleading, becauſe there is no iſſue in law, but on a joinder in demurrer it is otherwiſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 253.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Rigaut v. Galliſard.

In the declaration on a prohibition, it was ſet forth, that at the ſeſſions of the peace held at Weſtminſter ſuch a day and year of King William 3. the plaintiff was indicted for making an aſſault on one Louiſe Rigaut, the defendant's wife, with an intent to have a carnal knowledge of her; and it was laid to be againſt the peace of the late King, &c. and that likewiſe the now defendant brought an action of aſſault and battery againſt him in Trinity 12. of the late King, which was likewiſe laid to be againſt the peace, which ſuit is ſtill depending; and yet the ſaid defendant has ordered him to be ſued in the Biſhop of London's court, for ſolicitation of the ſaid Louiſe Rigaut's chaſtity to commit adultery with him. The defendant pleads for a conſultation, that he is not charged below for any of the crimes charged in the indictment or action. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and the matter having been argued by the council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Holt, C. J. The prohibition ought to ſtand; for it was but one intire act, and they below cannot divide it; for the plaintiff in the prohibition has averred the fact for which they are indicted, and that for which the ſuit is below, to be the ſame, and to give them juriſdiction below, you ſhould have come and rejoined, and traverſed, it being the ſame fact; but that it was for other cauſe than is in the indictment, and that perhaps would have divided it: he put this caſe, which he ſaid had been adjudged in Lord Hyde's time. The libel below was for ſaying the proſecutor had a baſtard: the defendant comes and ſuggeſts for a prohibition, that he did accuſe the plaintiff below, before a juſtice of peace, of getting a baſtard child; and that the juſtice did adjudge him to be the reputed father of it, and that he ſpoke the words before the juſtice: and it was replied, that they were ſpoke at large, and no otherwiſe than before the juſtice of peace; and to this it was pleaded by way of eſtoppel, that ſince he had been adjudged before the juſtices to have been the father, he could not ſue below for defamation; and of that opinion was the court.

Here you ſhould ſay, that it was for another offence than the ſolicitation in the indictment, or that it was at another time and place than is laid in the indictment; and their laying in the libel another time and place than is in the indictment, is not enough, for below they lay at what time and place they pleaſe. If a man ſollicits a woman, and goes gently to work with her at firſt, and when he finds that will not do, proceeds to force, it is all one continued act, beginning with inſinuation, and ending with force.

In the caſe of the Duke of Norfolk v. Germaine, it was not pretended to be force, and an indictment will not lie for a plain adultery, but a libel below will, tho' the law indulges the huſband with an action of aſſault and battery, for the injury done to him, though it be with conſent of his wife, becauſe the law will not allow her a conſent in ſuch caſe to the prejudice of her huſband, becauſe of the intereſt he has in her; and he compared it to the caſe of calling a woman a whore and thief, there ſhe ſhall not ſplit the words, and puniſh him below for calling her a whore, and at law for calling her a thief. He agreed, if adultery be committed with another man's wife, without any force, but by her own conſent, though the huſband may have aſſault and battery, and lay it vi et armis, i. e. with force and arms, yet they ſhall in that caſe puniſh below for that very offence; for an indictment will not lie for ſuch an aſſault and battery, neither ſhall the huſband and wife join in the action at common law; and therefore they proceed below either civilly, that is, to divorce them; or criminally, becauſe they were not criminally proſecuted above; and the true action for the huſband in ſuch caſe, is a ſpecial action, becauſe the defendant raviſhed his wife, and not to lay it, whereby he loſt the comfort of his ſaid wife. Vide Raſtall, title, Treſpaſs. The court agreed that the offence was not merely ſpiritual. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 78.

On an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery: Holt, Chief Juſtice declared, 1ſt. That the leaſt touching of another in anger is a battery.

2dly. If two or more meet in a narrow paſſage, and without any violence or deſign of harm, the one touches the other gently, it will be no battery.

3dly. If either of them uſe violence againſt the other, to force his way in a rude inordinate manner, it will be a battery, or any ſtruggle about the paſſage to that degree, as may do hurt, will be a battery. Vide Cro. Treſp. 236. 336. 7 E. 4. 26. 22 Aſſ. 60. 3 H. 4. 9.

Note. This caſe was an action of battery brought by huſband and wife, to the damage of them; and though the plaintiff had a verdict, yet the Chief Juſtice ſaid, he ſhould never have judgment, and judgment was after arreſted above on that execution. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 149.

On an indictment for a battery on Dr. R. the evidence was that the defendant did ſpit in his face.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is a battery; though one cannot juſtify a battery by ſon aſſault demeſne, by pleading it to an indictment, yet he may give it in evidence on not guilty, and he may be thereon acquitted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 172.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Anonymous.

In an action of aſſault, it appeared that the defendant came with violence to reſcue a diſtreſs from the plaintiff, and the plaintiff had not time to requeſt him to forbear.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Young v. Slaughterford.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. There is no need of an aſſault to be laid in the declaration, if it is ſtated therein percuſſit, i. e. he ſtruck., theſe words imply an aſſault. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 229.

In an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery, the defendant juſtified an arreſt under proceſs; and on demurrer it was objected, that tho' proceſs will juſtify the aſſault in arreſting, yet to juſtify a battery, reſiſtance, or an attempt to reſcue himſelf, ſhould be ſhewn, and Lutw. 929. was cited, and precedents where the plea is not guilty to the battery, and a juſtification as to the aſſault. *Co. Hilary, 10 Geo. 2. Tottage v. Petty.

In an action of aſſault, for ſeveral batteries and woundings, the defendant, as to the wounding, pleads not guilty; and as to the battery, he juſtifies, that the plaintiff entered his houſe without his leave, and there diſturbed him; and becauſe he would not go out, the defendant gently laid his hand on him, which he avers is the ſame battery.

On demurrer, the plaintiff's council made two exceptions to the defendant's plea:

1ſt. That the ſame was bad, becauſe the plea not only juſtifies the aſſault, but alſo the battery, which cannot be done on the authority of Williams v. Jones and others, Trin. 10 Geo. 2.

2dly, That the plea was bad, becauſe it does not ſhew that the plaintiff refuſed to go out of the defendant's houſe.

Lord Hardwicke. It is laid here, that becauſe the plaintiff would not go out, therefore, &c. which is a good averment. As to the caſe of Williams v. Jones and others, there the defendant juſtified a battery by a bare arreſt, and the queſtion was, whether he ſhould not have ſhewn either a molliter manus, or that he having arreſted the plaintiff, did the battery in his own defence? but it was not determined by us, that a battery could not be juſtified by a molliter manus, but that it could not be juſtified by an arreſt.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 3. Poſtlethwaite v. Parkes.

In an action of treſpaſs, with force and arms, for an aſſault on the plaintiff's daughter, and getting her with child the plaintiff in his declaration concluded with a per quod ſervitium amiſit, i. e. whereby he loſt her ſervice.

The queſtion which aroſe at the trial, and which was reſerved for the opinion of the court, was, whether the plaintiff can maintain this action.

After hearing the council on both ſides, the parties being poor, the court propoſed a compromiſe, which was accepted, and by rule of court, all proceedings were ordered to be ſtayed without coſts on either ſide.

The court ſeemed clearly of opinion, that the action could not be maintained, becauſe this action depends on the loſs of ſervice, which was not the preſent caſe, though they gave no opinion. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1878.

Aſſets.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Oldham v. Pickering.

On an attachment brought on a prohibition, the caſe ſtated to the court was, that T. O. was ſeized of a meſſuage to him and his aſſigns for three lives, and died inteſtate, without children, leaving only A. P. his ſiſter; adminiſtration was committed to S. O. the plaintiff, on which the defendant ſued her in the ſpiritual court for diſtribution, and the ſingle queſtion was, whether an eſtate pur auter vie, be now diſtributable in the ſame manner as inteſtates goods and chattels, according to ſtat. 22 Car. 2. and by force of 29. Car. 2. c. 3. whereby it is enacted, that an eſtate pur auter vie, ſhall be deviſeable; and if no ſuch deviſe be thereof made, the eſtate ſhall be anſwerable in the hands of the heir, if it ſhall come to him by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy, and in caſe there be no ſpecial occupant, it ſhall go to the executor or adminiſtrator of the parties, that had the eſtate thereof by virtue of the grant, and ſhall be aſſets in their hands.

Per curiam. The prohibition ſhall remain an eſtate, pur auter vie of an inteſtate, is not diſtributable, for notwithſtanding the alteration made by the ſtatute, it remains a freehold, and the amendment of the law in this particular, was only deſigned for relief of creditors, that if it came to the heir, by reaſon of ſpecial occupancy, it ſhall be in his hands as aſſets by deſcent, viz. liable to thoſe debts, where the heir is chargeable, and thoſe only, but if there was no ſpecial occupant, then it ſhall go to the executor and adminiſtrator, that they ſhall be in the room of the occupant, and it ſhall be aſſets in their hands for the payment of the debts; but it is not aſſets to pay legacies, except ſuch as are particularly deviſed out of it: the ſtatute has only made it aſſets for a particular intent, viz. to pay creditors: and as no debts appear in this caſe, the adminiſtrator is as it were the occupant, and ſhall not be compelled to make diſtribution. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 103.

In an action of debt brought by huſband and wife, againſt an executor, who pleaded, that he had fully adminiſtered, on iſſue joined, it was given in evidence at the trial, that the executor had diſcharged a debtor of the inteſtate's out of Ludgate, taking a bond from him for the debt, and it likewiſe appeared that he was ſo extremely poor, that he was downright ſtarving, yet the debt was deemed aſſets in the executor's hands.

Beſides the executor had not an inventory, wherefore it was ſaid, they ought to intend aſſets.

Per Holt. If a huſband and wife jointly ſue for a debt due to the wife before her marriage, and the huſband dies, and the wife continues the ſuit, the money when recovered ſhall not be aſſets to the executor of the huſband, and the huſband alone might bring debt for the portion, promiſed to him with his wife; and though land had been ſettled by the huſband on his wife, in conſideration of her fortune, of which this debt was part, yet he having not recovered it, during coverture, the wife ſhall recover it to her own uſe; and though it was pretended there was a recovery in the huſband's time, which they would prove by the ſheriff, who had a writ of execution, yet they not having the judgment on which the execution was founded in their poſſeſſion, it was ruled, they could not give that matter in evidence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 346.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Ingram v. Foot.

In an action of debt on a bond brought againſt an adminiſtrator, to which he pleads in bar, a recognizance in ſuch a ſum entered into by his inteſtate, at ſuch a day, for the appearance of J. S. on ſuch a day in ſuch a court, and that the ſaid J. S. did not appear, whereby the recognizance was forfeited, and that his inteſtate was indebted by bond to Mary M. in ſuch a ſum, who in Hilary term, &c. ſued the defendant, and obtained a judgment againſt him in this court, and that he had not aſſets beyond what would ſatisfy the ſaid two ſums at the time of exhibiting the bill of the aforeſaid Mary, or ever afterwards, to which the plaintiff demurs, and ſhews for cauſe of demurrer two exceptions, 1ſt. That it appeared the plaintiff's ſuit was commenced in Michaelmas term, before the exhibiting of the bill of the ſaid Mary, and the defendant does not deny his having of other aſſets, beſides thoſe which he might have waſted by Hilary term.

The defendant's council urged, that there was no expreſs mention made of any bill exhibited by Mary, but only that ſhe had impleaded him, and though that being in debt in the King's Bench, it muſt neceſſarily be by bill; and tho' the words Mariæ præd. i. e. of the aforeſaid Mary, would tie it up to Mary's ſuit in Hilary term, yet ſince there was no bill of Mary's mentioned before expreſsly, the words ſhould be rejected, and then it would be at the time of exhibiting the bill, and that muſt be the plaintiff's bill; and further obſerved, that in truth it could not refer to Mary's bill, for no ſuch bill was mentioned before; and then it was worſe, for it referred to nothing, and then no time is fixed, when the defendant had no other aſſets, and this diſtinction was made by the defendant's council, when a thing ſhall be rejected for repugnancy, and when not; when ſubſequent words make a thing, well explained, and perfect, before nonſenſe, there ſuch words ſhall rather be rejected, than that what was well before ſhould be made nonſenſe; but where by the ſubſequent words, the thing is made good ſenſe, but altered in its nature from what it was before, they ſhall not be rejected.

The ſecond exception was, that by the ſtatute 4 & 5 W. & M. all recognizances are pardoned, except ſuch as were before aſſigned to the Lord Almoner, and this being a general act of pardon, and concerning the King's revenues, therefore the court will take judicial notice of it, and here being a general pardon of all recognizances, this recognizance is thereby to be judged, pardoned prima facie, i. e. at firſt ſight, if it be not ſhewn to be within the exception; and that is to be done by them that would take advantage of it. And if it ſhould be ſaid that the recognizance aſſigned to the Lord Almoner being excepted, were not pardoned even pro inſtanti, i. e. for the inſtant, as in caſe of proviſo, and then the plaintiff being the party to take advantage of the ſtatute, ought to ſhew it. This diſtinction was taken by the defendant's council, on that rule, that he that will take advantage of an act of parliament with an exception, muſt ſhew himſelf out of the exceptions, viz. If the exceptions be of perſons, the rule holds, becauſe the court on reading of the ſtatute, cannot know, whether he be the perſon excepted or not, and therefore the party who knows himſelf beſt in that caſe, muſt ſhew himſelf out of the excepeion; and it is an advantage given by the ſtatute, to ſuch as are not diſabled to take it by the exception; but if the exception be of offences, of which the court may be informed by reading the ſtatute; he that pleads the ſtatute, need not ſay, that it is an offence not excepted, and for this he quoted Noy 99. More 619. and urged the opinion of Poph. 95. where on conſideration of the ſtatute of 31 Eliz. c. — all Jeſuits are ordered to leave the kingdom, on pain of high treaſon, by ſuch a day, except they are retarded by ſtreſs of weather; it was held the better way of framing an indictment thereon, would be to do it generally, and let the defendant bring himſelf within the proviſo, it being for his advantage. Vide a caſe of More 303. Outlawry pleaded to debt; replication of the 31*ſt of the Queen*, of a general pardon, and the ſci. fac. returned that the plaintiff at whoſe ſuit the outlawry was, was dead, and that judgment was, that he go hence without a day, and yet there were exceptions in that ſtatute, and the plaintiff did not ſhew himſelf out of them, ſo there is not that ſtrictneſs required in pleading an act of parliament on a collateral matter, as when it is directly pleaded againſt the King.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. That plea depended on the validity of the judgment in the ſci fac. which though it were erroneous, yet was well while it ſtood.

To this it was anſwered, that acts of pardon are in the nature of the King's grant to the ſubject, and therefore not to be taken notice of, except they be pleaded; and there are abundance of authorities, that he that is to take an advantage of an act, muſt ſhew himſelf out of the exception of it; and here it is the plaintiff that is to take advantage of the ſtatute. 3 Inſt. 234. ſettles the law in this caſe, for if the act be a general act of pardon abſolute, and without exception, the judges officially muſt take notice of it: but if it has any exception or qualification, either of perſons or offences, he that would take advantage of it muſt plead it, or elſe the judges can take no notice of it.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man be indicted for murder or felony, he may plead not guilty, and give the pardon in evidence, but if he has occaſion to plead the pardon in bar of any collateral matter, as if a ſci fac. was brought on a recognizance, there he muſt plead the pardon. He obſerved, that the court could not take notice of a general act of pardon, with an exception judicially, without the ſame being pleaded ſpecially, if the act itſelf did not expreſsly ordain it. He ſaid, the true way is to plead the pardon generally, and if there be an exception, the Attorney General ſhould ſhew that the party is within it, when an executor pleads a recognizance, he muſt ſtate the ſame to the court, that the court may ſee whether it be to be performed or not, if it be a debt, they need only ſay that a judgment was obtained againſt him in ſuch a court, if it be in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, but if in an inferior court, they muſt give it's juriſdiction, &c. in the preſent caſe the court gave judgment for the plaintiff on the firſt exception. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 611.

In debt on bond, brought againſt the defendant, as heir to his father, to which he pleaded riens per deſcent, the plaintiff replied aſſets, and on iſſue joined thereon, the evidence given was, that the obligor, the defendant's father, deviſed to the defendant, his ſon and heir, certain meſſuages, in Exchequer Alley in fee, but chargeable with an annuity, or rent charge, payable to the defendant's mother.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Theſe meſſuages deſcended to the defendant, and were aſſets, for the difference is, where the deviſe makes an alteration of the limitation of the eſtate, from that which the law would make by deſcent, and where the deviſe conveys the ſame eſtate, as the law would make by deſcent, but charges it with incumbrances. In the former caſe the heir takes by purchaſe, in the latter by deſcent. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 728.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

Per Holt. If a tenant in tail, contracts debts by bond, and dies, and it can be made to appear, that ſome of his anceſtors, who bought the eſtate, found an old mortgage on it for a long term of years, which was kept on foot to wait on the freehold and inheritance. Quere, If ſuch a leaſe in equity would not be deemed aſſets in the hands of the heir in tail; for it is equity only makes ſuch leaſes deſcend, and it is the higheſt equity a man's debts ſhould be paid. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 5.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Smith v. Angel.

In an action of debt brought by the plaintiff and his wife, as executors of M. F. againſt the defendant, as ſon and heir of J. A. on ſeveral obligations, by which the father bound himſelf and his heirs on ſeveral conditions, &c. The defendant confeſſes the action, and that the bonds are the deeds of his anceſtors, but ſays that his father was ſeized in fee of four parts in ſix of ſuch a cloſe, and of three parts in four of another cloſe, and of three parts in four of a meſſuage, and the iſſues and profits thereof:

That the ſaid obligor in his life-time, by his indenture, bearing date, &c. a counter part whereof the defendant produced in court, did demiſe the ſaid parts and ſhares to H. G. for five hundred years; by virtue whereof he entered, and was poſſeſſed for the term aforeſaid; that the father died ſeized of the reverſion, which deſcended to the defendant; that he was thereof ſeized, and that at the time of exhibiting the bill, or at any time ſince, he had not any land or tenements by hereditary deſcent; beſides the reverſion of the tenements aforeſaid, that after the death of his father and the ſaid deſcent, 9 W. 3. there was a ſuit in Chancery between Edward ——— A. C. J. B. and Elizabeth, the wife of the defendant's father, and the defendant; in which ſuit it was decreed, that Elizabeth ſhould have one third part of the premiſes for her life for her dower; by virtue whereof the ſaid Elizabeth was ſeized of a third part of the premiſes for her life, and ſo prays judgment whether he as ſon and heir to his father ought to be charged beſide the reverſion of the term aforeſaid; and of the third part whereof the wife was endowed when it ſhould fall. The plaintiff craves oyer of the leaſe, by which it appeared, that in conſideration of 300 l. he had demiſed the premiſes for five hundred years, provided that if the father, his executors or adminiſtrators, paid 50 l. per annum to H. G. during his life, then the eſtate ſhould ceaſe: And replies, that the defendant, after the death of his father, entered, and was thereof ſeized, and took the profits, beſides the third part to his wife, which would be ſufficient to pay the 50 l. a year; and ſo prays judgment. The defendant rejoins, and ſays, he did not enter in manner and form, &c. and concludes to the country. On demurrer,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court. We have no doubt but that the plaintiff ought to have judgment; but the queſtion is, what judgment we ought to give him? whether a ſpecial one, to have execution of the lands and tenements mentioned in the plea, or generally againſt the defendant, as heir to his anceſtors. We have conſidered both, and we are of opinion there ought to be a general judgment againſt the defendant, by which his body, his goods, and his lands, which are not aſſets, may be taken in execution.

Two things are to be conſidered herein:

1ſt. The pleading of a reverſion of a term for years made by his anceſtors: whether pleading a leaſe for years be good and allowable in a defendant, ſued as heir to his anceſtors; and whether that be ſufficient to hinder the plaintiff from immediate execution.

2dly. If pleading of an aſſignment of dower to the wife, and that he had a reverſion expectant thereon by the court of Chancery, be good.

As to the firſt, the caſe is this; a man by bond obliges himſelf and his heirs to pay ſo much money, then makes a leaſe for years, and dies, whereby the reverſion in fee deſcends to his heir; the queſtion is, Whether the heir may plead this leaſe for years in bar of execution, or confeſs aſſets, without taking notice of the term for years? There are indeed ſome few precedents, and I have known it practiſed, where it was pleaded; but I am not willing to deliver my opinion as to that point now, becauſe the caſe does not require it; but it ſeems to me, that it ſhould not be a matter lying in the breaſt of the defendant to plead any ſuch matter; for he might without danger confeſs, that he had aſſets, without taking any notice of the leaſe: Now, what makes compleat aſſets? Why, to have the freehold and inheritance of the eſtate deſcend to him, and that the defendant has from his anceſtors, therefore he has compleat aſſets. If it were a leaſe for life, made by the anceſtor, and only a reverſion in fee expectant thereon had deſcended from the anceſtor, that would not be aſſets in poſſeſſion; but a reverſion in fee expectant on an eſtate for life: beſides, it appears by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, and ſtatute 21 Henry 8. That the common law did not much regard eſtates for years, for ſuch eſtate was ſubject altogether to the will of him in reverſion; for if he in reverſion had ſuffered a recovery by colluſion or default, the termor was bound by it, and his term was loſt without remedy, as appears by the Comment of Lord Coke on that ſtatute, 2 Inſt. 321. 1 Inſt. 46. and after the ſtatute of Glouceſter, which gave a termor for years liberty to come and falſify a recovery had againſt a tenant in reverſion. Leaſes for years becoming more conſiderable, and yet more precarious, becauſe of the frequency of common recoveries, which now became a common conveyance; the ſtatute of H. 8. became a further remedy for termors; yet notwithſtandihg theſe ſtatutes, it never lay in the mouth of a tenant to the precipe to plead a leaſe for years, or to ſtop execution on any ſuch plea. If an aſſize be brought againſt a tenant for life, he cannot ſay there is a leaſe for years precedent to his right, though a tenant for years himſelf may falſify a recovery againſt him in reverſion: ſo the ſame reaſon holds in this caſe, for the obligation of the father attaches on the land, being aſſets in the heir's hands, as Brown on 9 aſſets, ſci. fa. grounded on a fine to execute a fine, whereby lands were conveyed by grant, and rendered to one and his heirs in tail: the tenant pleaded a warranty of the anceſtors of the plaintiff, and that aſſets deſcended to him. The plaintiff replied, that the aſſets that did deſcend were extended for the King's debt, and it was not held a good plea, becauſe the freehold and inheritance did deſcend, and they were preſent aſſets, if it be ſo in caſe of a real lien, ſo as to bind the land in caſe of warranty. Sure the ſame reaſon, where the heir is charged on account of aſſets in an action of debt on the lien of the anceſtor: the books ſay, he may plead a leaſe for years, as to the value of the aſſets; for aſſets in a real action is no more than aſſets are worth; ſo that if the plaintiff is not to have it diſcharged of the term for years, the reverſion is leſs worth; then if it be a good plea, the conſequence is, that an immediate extend fac. goes to appraiſe the reverſion, on inquiſition taken, and then to deliver it to the plaintiff to enter into it; when it fails in poſſeſſion, as in Dyer, 246. in debt againſt an heir, who pleaded he had nothing but a reverſion expectant on an eſtate for life; the plaintiff joins with him, and takes judgment on the confeſſion: ſo if this be a good plea, the ſame muſt be done here. Hern's pl. 307. is a precedent of this matter. There is no miſchief to him in remainder, nor to the leſſee, for he will defend his poſſeſſion in ejectment by virtue of his leaſe; but we don't give any concluſive opinion in this matter.

2d Point. The dower to the wife is ill pleaded, for it is not ſaid the wife was endowed by metes and bounds; nor that the Lord Chancellor did endow her; but that there was a decree in Chancery, by virtue whereof ſhe was endowed, and that is not to be underſtood, for the Chancellor has nothing to do in aſſigning of dower. But in a caſe of lands holden of the King in chivalry, and the heirs being in wardſhip to the King; and in ſuch caſe, when ſhe came in as his wife, and prayed to be endowed, for the King's title appearing on record, a record was neceſſary to find her title; and ſo an inquiſition was taken, and on her being found thereby to be his wife, the chancellor uſed to aſſign her dower, or to award a commiſſion for it. F. N. B. 363. And this was the legal way for the wife to recover her dower of lands in the King's hands, by the reaſon of the wardſhip of the heir; for as every guardian might aſſign dower in pais, ſo the dower in Chancery is by the King himſelf, in a judicial and proper manner; but for Chancery to decree that the wife ſhould have ſuch a third part, would not veſt a legal intereſt in her; the heir may do it in purſuance to a decree; and when he does, the wife is in by virtue of the aſſignment of the heir, and not by virtue of any decree; then if the decree be not a title veſted, he has confeſſed aſſets, for he ſet forth only a reverſion depending on a freehold, and does not ſhew there was a freehold; and if the aſſignment of dower were good pro tanto, i. e. for ſo much; yet here is two-thirds whereof ſhe was not endowed, and that is only charged with an eſtate for years, and that is enough to charge him with a general judgment. Plowd. 420. comes home very near to the caſe in every reſpect. It is debt againſt an heir, if he plead any plea that is not a ſufficient bar; or if he ſuffer judgment to go againſt him by nihil dicit or confeſſion, it ſhall be a general judgment, becauſe there is no way for the heir to defend himſelf but by ſetting forth the truth, what aſſets he has, and where they lie, and ſo open the truth of the caſe to the plaintiff, and let him take what benefit he can of it; and if he does not do this, there ought to be a general judgment againſt him as well as on demurrer. This authority was murmurred at; but there is not a word of it but what is good law. Vide Mod. Rep. 520. 3 Cro. 639. the ſame caſe. If the heir will confeſs that he has aſſets by deſcent in ſuch and ſuch places, beſides which he has no more, and the iſſue is, that he has more, tho' he confeſſed enough; yet if more aſſets be found, there ſhall be a general judgment. 2 Leon. Vent. 11.

In this caſe, it is not in the power of the court to give ſpecial judgment, if the plaintiff does not deſire it, for it would be erroneous. 2 Roll. Abr. 71. If it be by conſent of the plaintiff they may give a ſpecial judgment: but how can we do ſo here? If it be on the confeſſion, he muſt allow the plea good, that it is a reverſion expectant on an eſtate for life, when it does appear that it is not ſo; if he had pleaded that he had only a reverſion expectant on an eſtate for life, and the plaintiff had replied, that the tenant was dead, or had ſurrendered, and it is ſo found by verdict, ſure there muſt be a general judgment, becauſe he has pleaded a falſe plea in bar of the plaintiff's execution; and it appearing to us, that there never was ſuch an eſtate for life in being; it is the ſame as if a verdict had ſo found it: therefore let the plaintiff have a general judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 40. Raym. vol. 2. p. 783.

If H. takes a bond in truſt for another perſon, and dies, this bond is not aſſets in the hands of his executor. It is the ſame, if an obligee aſſigns and covenants not to revoke the ſame, and dies. The bond is not aſſets in the hands of his executor. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 79.

Michaelmas, 9 Ann. Buckley v. Pirk.

If an executor takes poſſeſſion of the term of the teſtator, and an action is brought againſt him in the debet and detinet for rent or non-repairs, it is abſurd for him to plead no aſſets beyond what will ſatisfy ſuch and ſuch judgments; becauſe in ſuch a caſe the ſurplus of the profits, rents and repairs deducted, is all that is aſſets, and liable to the judgments; and therefore the reſt of the profits are ſo appropriated to the payment of rent and repairs, as not to be exhauſted by debts. Vide Salk. vol 1. p. 316. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 12.

Trinity, 13 Ann. Johnſon v. Gardiner. Error.

On a writ of error from the C. B. the council for the plaintiff in error inſiſted that the declaration was naught, becauſe the action was brought againſt the defendant, as executor, on a promiſe made by him after the death of the teſtator, that whereas the teſtator was indebted to the plaintiff in March, for goods ſold and delivered, he promiſed to pay on the 23d of November.

Now it was ſaid, that this promiſe of the executor plainly founded, on the conſideration of forbearance, made it the contract of the executor, and therefore the action ſhould have been brought againſt him in his own name.

Suppoſing the action well brought againſt him as executor, then the judgment was wrong, being de bonis propriis, i. e. of his proper goods, inſtead of de bonis teſtatoris, i. e. of the goods of the teſtator.

The council for the defendant in error argued, that though the defendant is named executor, yet it appears by the declaration, that the executor is chargeable on his own contract, and the bare naming him executor does not hurt. It is always ſuppoſed, where there are promiſes of payment on ſuch conſiderations, that the executor has aſſets, and therefore not neceſſary to aver his having aſſets, for unleſs he had, there was no occaſion for ſuch a promiſe. Cro. Jac. 602, 613.

On an aſſumpſit by an executor, judgment is always de bonis propriis, for it is all one as if the executor had given a bond for the money. 9 Co. 93. Cro. Eliz. 91, 406.

The plaintiff in error's council in reply obſerved, that the conſideration was not the forbearance, but the old debt, the debt of the teſtator, and that the promiſing to pay it barely on a future day, will not make a new conſideration. Hob. 188. Judgment de bonis teſtatoris, though non repair, was in the time of the executor.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The naming him executor is ſurpluſage; becauſe it appears on the face of the record, that the demand was a demand againſt him, on his own contract.

In effect, the forbearance is the conſideration of this promiſe, becauſe without forbearance no advantage can be taken of this promiſe. Yard v. Ellard, 10 W. 3. Salk. 117. And to this opinion the reſt of the court ſeemed inclined. But the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 254.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. John Burland v. John Tyler and Mary his Wife.

The plaintiff, as adminiſtrator of J. B. brought an action of debt in the debet and detinet, on two ſeveral bonds, entered into by John Hobbs, deceaſed, by which he bound himſelf, and his heirs, to whom the defendant Mary was daughter and heir. The defendant prayed oyer of the bonds, and the conditions; the firſt bond was dated 21ſt December 1704, in the penalty of 400*l.* with condition that John Hobbs ſhould pay 103*l.* to one Nathaniel Brewer, for payment whereof the inteſtate and John Hobbs were bound in a bond of 200*l.* penalty, to the ſaid Nathaniel Brewer, but for the debt of the ſaid John Hobbs, the other bond was dated the 17th of September 1712, in the penalty of 300*l.* with condition that John Hobbs ſhould pay David Yea 103*l.* the debt of the ſaid John Hobbs, for payment whereof the ſaid John Hobbs, and the inteſtate, were bound in a bond of 200*l.* penalty, to the ſaid David Yea: after which the defendants proteſtando, that the ſeveral ſums were paid to the ſaid Nathaniel Brewer, and David Yea, according to the ſeveral conditions of the ſaid bonds, pleaded, that the defendant Mary neither poſſeſſes, any lands or tenements by hereditary deſcent from the aforeſaid J. H. her father, in fee ſimple, nor did poſſeſs, at the time of ſuing out the bill aforeſaid, nor ever afterwards; except one meſſuage with its appurtenances, in Storguſey aforeſaid, all and ſingular which premiſes are not worth in the whole 140*l*.

Then they further plead, that the ſaid John Hobbs, the father, in his life, by his obligatory writing being lawfully indebted, became bound to one William Clark, in 140*l.* and ſo being indebted died, that debt to the ſaid William Clark not being paid; whereon one Margaret Hobbs, widow of the ſaid John Hobbs, mother and guardian of the ſaid Mary, paid the ſaid debt of the ſaid John Hobbs's to the ſaid William Clark, and that payment was made by the ſaid Margaret, as guardian of the ſaid Mary, and while the ſaid Mary was under the age of twenty-one years; and that neither the ſaid John Tyler, nor Mary his wife, nor the ſaid Margaret, nor any of them, had any notice, nor ever knew of the bonds mentioned in the declaration, nor either of them, from the ſaid Burland the inteſtate, nor from the plaintiff, nor from any other perſon whatſoever, before the payment of the ſaid bond of the ſaid John Hobbs as aforeſaid, made by the ſaid Margaret to the ſaid William Clark; and therefore pray judgment, if they ought not to be diſcharged from the debt aforeſaid, by virtue of the aforeſaid writing obligatory.

To this plea the plaintiff demurred generally, and the defendants joined in demurrer.

The council for the defendants offered nothing to maintain the plea, but admitted that to be ill; but inſiſted the declaration was naught, becauſe the action was brought by the plaintiff, as adminiſtrator, in the debet and detinet, whereas it is laid down as a rule, in 5 Co. 31. b. Hargrave's caſe, that in all caſes where executors are forced to name themſelves as executors, in actions brought by them, the writ ſhall be in the detinet only, becauſe the thing or damages recovered ſhall be aſſets. So debt for an eſcape brought by an adminiſtrator, for an eſcape in the life of the inteſtate, muſt be in the detinet only. Styles 232. Martyn v. Hendley, becauſe the plaintiff does not recover to his own uſe. In Cro. Jac. 545. Sir George Reynell v. Lanycaſtle, held, that bringing an action by an executor in the debet and detinet, where it ought to be in the detinet only, is not matter of form only, but a fault in ſubſtance, after verdict, and not aided by ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 14.

The council for the plaintiff ſaid, in reſpect of the debt of the heir, the action was rightly brought; for as to her, it ought to be in the debet and detinet, becauſe it is brought on the lien by which the heir is bound, and is not brought againſt her en auter droit, as if the defendant had been an executor. And yet if ſuch an action is brought againſt an heir in the detinet only, yet after verdict for the plaintiff that would be cured by ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. Then in reſpect of the plaintiff's being an adminiſtrator; if an adminiſtrator brings an action in the debet and detinet, where it ought to be in the detinet only, after a verdict, that is helped by the ſame ſtatute. 1 Lev. 250. Frowin, and his Wife, v. Paynton, 1 Sid. 379. And by the ſame reaſon, he ſaid, it would be good by the ſtatute for the amendment of the law. 4 Ann. cap. 16.

The court were of opinion, that this would have been ill on a general demurrer, before the ſtatute made for the amendment of the law; but ſince that ſtatute, they all agreed, that an action brought as this is, would be good on a general demurrer; and that in this caſe, the defendant having pleaded in bar, and not having taken advantage by demurring ſpecially, and ſhewing it for cauſe, it was well enough. That it would be good after a verdict, by ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. the caſe cited, 1 Lev. 250. is expreſs, and yet this is none of the defects particularly mentioned in that ſtatute, but came under the words (all other matters of the like nature, not being againſt the right of the matter of the ſuit). Then that reſolution has determined, that this defect is not againſt the right of the matter of the ſuit, but is of the like nature with the omiſſion of a profert in curia of a bond or indenture, and the other things mentioned, particularly in the ſtatute 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. Then comes the act 4 Ann. cap. 16. for amendment of the law, and enacts, that notwithſtanding many of the ſame defects (ſpecifying them) mentioned in ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8. the court ſhould proceed to give judgment, according to the very right of the cauſe, without regarding any ſuch defects, or any other of like nature, except the ſame ſhall be ſpecially ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer. This defect then, not being againſt the right of the ſuit, as was adjudged in that caſe of 1 Lev. 250. ought to be ſhewn ſpecially for cauſe of demurrer, if the party would take advantage of it. Beſides, the act for the amendment of the law takes notice, that a defect in matter of ſubſtance ſhould not be took advantage of, without a ſpecial demurrer; for it enacts, that the court ſhall proceed to give judgment, according as the very right of the cauſe and matter in law ſhall appear to them, without regarding any defect, &c. except, &c. notwithſtanding ſuch defect, &c. might have been heretofore taken to be matter of ſubſtance, and not aided by ſtat. 27 Eliz. cap. 5. ſo as ſufficient matter appear by the pleadings, on which the court may give judgment according to the very right of the cauſe. Now here it appears, that the plaintiff has a right to recover, and to recover as adminiſtrator; and what is recovered will be aſſets. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1392.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Seviniack v. Marſhall.

This was an action brought againſt an adminiſtratrix, who pleaded, that ſhe had not aſſets on the day of ſuing out the original writ, where the action was brought by bill, and not by original; and for this cauſe the plaintiff demurred, and had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 289.

Hilary, 9 Geo. 2. The Bank of England v. Morice.

The plaintiffs declare againſt the defendant as executrix of Humphry Morice, her late huſband, in caſe, for money had, and received by him to the uſe of the plaintiffs.

The defendant pleaded a judgment and ſeveral bonds and articles entered into by Mr. Morice, particularly a bond to Sir William Morice, in the penalty of 53,000 l. conditioned for the payment of 26,500 l. by inſtalments, all of which were paſt, and paid at Mr. Morice's death, except one of 5000 l. and another of 1,500 l. the days of payment whereof were not come at the time of the plea, ſhe alſo pleaded a bond to Thomas Wilſon in the penalty of 5000 l. for the payment of 2,500 l. at a certain day before the death of Mr. Morice; and a like bond to Duncan Campbell, in 3000 l. conditioned for the payment of 1,500 l. at a day likewiſe paſt, and then concludes, that ſhe had not more than 1000 l. aſſets, to anſwer the ſaid ſeveral ſums, by the ſaid ſeveral bonds, articles, and judgment due and payable. To which the plaintiffs replied, that on the day of exhibiting their bill, ſhe had aſſets of her late huſband, beyond what would pay, and ſatisfy the ſaid ſeveral ſums by the ſaid bonds, articles, and judgment due, and payable, whereby ſhe could make ſatisfaction to the plaintiffs.

And iſſue being joined hereon, the jury find a ſpecial verdict. That Humphrey Morice at his deceaſe, was indebted to the plaintiffs in 28,993 l. 8 s. 1 d. that the aſſets come to the hands of the defendant on the day of exhibiting the plaintiff's bill, were 41,152 l. 2 s. 5 d. that the money payable by the conditions of the ſaid three bonds, together with the penalties on all the other articles, and the judgment pleaded by her amounted to 22,182 l. 10 s. which being deducted from the ſaid 41,152 l. 2 s. 5 d. there remained the ſum of 18,969 l. 12 s. 5 d. that ſhe had not aſſets to diſcharge the penalties of thoſe three bonds, nor were they diſcharged; and that if the penalties on thoſe three bonds were not charges on the aſſets, then they find for the plaintiffs, that ſhe had aſſets to ſatisfy them to the amount of 18,969 l. 12 s. 5 d. but if the penalties were charges on the aſſets then they find for the defendant.

The cauſe was argued ſeveral times, and this term Lord Hardwicke delivered the reſolution of the court.

There are three points to be conſidered in this caſe. 1ſt. Whether on theſe pleadings the penalties or the leſſer ſums ought to be conſidered, as the debt due to Wilſon and Campbell? 2d. Whether there is any legal difference between thoſe bonds, and that to Sir William Morice? and 3d. What judgment the court can give on this verdict, conſidering the opinion they are of?

As to the firſt, there is nothing more certain, than that when the day is paſt, the penalty is the debt, and the remedy is in equity. It is admitted the defendant might have pleaded the obligation only; but it is contended, that here ſhe has claimed only the leſſer ſums. And my brothers Page and Probyn, and myſelf, my brother Lee (declining for particular reaſons to give any opinion) think, that the penalties on theſe two bonds ought to be conſidered as the debt at law.

The ancient way of pleading was only to ſet out the bond, and ſo are the old entries, I cannot find when this was departed from, but believe it was when the judges found what inconvenience it was to plaintiffs in not ſetting out the whole; as appears by the caſes of Page v. Denton, and Parker v. Atfield, from which it was argued for the plaintiffs, that when the condition ſhews what is due, why ſhould more aſſets be covered, or how are ſuits in equity avoided. This weighed greatly with me a long time, but on great deliberation, I am of opinion, that thoſe obiter ſayings are not ſufficient, and that this way of pleading may ſtill have great uſe.

The plaintiffs cannot have oyer, becauſe the defendant is not ſuppoſed to have the bond, and therefore makes no profert of it; he cannot tell whether it be a bond for payment of money, or performance of covenants, and muſt therefore be forced to bring a bill in equity, for a diſcovery to reply by. All this is avoided by the ſpecial way of pleading, and therefore ſatisfies the expreſſion, that it will ſave many a ſuit in equity. The penalty is a ſecurity for coſts, and on the act for amendment of the law, ſome coſts muſt be incurred, before a motion to pay can be received, and this is a loſs he may ſuſtain by taking it ſhort on his plea, without putting the plaintiff to ſhew ſome fraud, and it may be dangerous for us to blend the rules of law and equity together.

The caſe of Page v. Denton, at firſt ſight ſeemed ſtrong for the plaintiffs, but conſidering it as a bond to the executor who would retain, and not a bond to a ſtranger, it could not be replied to as a fraud, for it was payment in his hands, and the ſame as if a ſtranger had been paid the leſſer ſum and intereſt.

The caſe of Thompſon v. Hunt in 3 Lev. 368. (and which is mentioned as law in Lutw. 450) is ſtrong for the defendant, for though there the penalties were only pleaded, and the conditions appear in the replication, whereas here it is all in the plea; yet that makes no real difference, for when in the rejoinder the defendant took iſſue on the penalties, he admitted the replication, and ſo made it part of his plea.

It was inſiſted here, that the defendant by the manner of her pleading ſeems only to claim a protection for the leſſer ſums, and the concluſion of her plea relates to that. This at firſt ſeemed to have weight, but on a nice inſpection, there appears a variation in the expreſſion, one being due and unpaid, and the other due and payable. But there is a more ſubſtantial anſwer, for as to the articles, the penal ſums of them are averred due, and therefore the general words cannot ſometimes refer to the penalties, and at other times to the leſſer ſums. And though it was objected, that there is no precedent of a replication for fraud, where the condition is ſet out, it may be anſwered, that there never was a precedent of a plea worded as this is.

As to the practice at niſi prius on plene adminiſtravit, it may be the executor deſires no more allowance, to avoid a ſuit in equity. And on the trial in C. B. on the ſcire facias there, it appeared the leſſer ſums had been received, and the bonds delivered up.

Whatever therefore my firſt thoughts were, and how much ſoever the law of executors wants alteration, we think that as to the two bonds which were forfeited, the defendant muſt have allowance for the penalties.

2dly. The next thing to be conſidered is, whether the bond to Sir William Morice differs from the others, and we are all of opinion it does, inaſmuch as there the former inſtalments were paid, and as to the other two the time was not come for payment; and it is no more than a bond for payment of money at a time to come, which is certainly pleadable, 1 Roll. Abr. 925. Cro. Car. 363. But then it ſhall cover no more than is due, for the force of the bond is ſuſpended till the condition is broken, which appears by the manner of pleading it, Cro. Eliz. 315. where the claim is only for the 20 l. in the condition, 3 Lev. 57. Here it is in her power to ſave the penalty, and aſſets ſo to do, are admitted by pleading: it will be a devaſtavit in her to ſuffer the aſſets to be further charged. 1 Vent. 198. 2 Lev. 139. Another reaſon to diſtinguiſh this is, that by fraud could not be replied, for it is no fraud not to pay before due.

3dly. The laſt thing is, what judgment can be given on this opinion, and this is a matter of great difficulty, for the aſſets are found in one entire ſum; and the queſtion is, Whether we can ſever them, or muſt not award a venire de novo? The caſe of Hays, Hilary, 1 G. 2. Strange, vol. 2. p. 843, is in point, where the court made the jury give two verdicts; one for the King, and the other for the defendant; and we can adjuſt the allowance to be made without introducing or ſuppoſing any new fact. The caſes of ſevering damages, which are intire, are ſtronger than the diviſion of aſſets. In Townſ. 2 Jud. 117, 151. 189. the entries are that in Thompſon, and they warrant our giving judgment in the manner that is prayed on the behalf of the plaintiffs. And judgment was entered accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1028.

Trinity, 21 Geo. 2. Allam v. Heber.

On riens per deſcent, i. e. nothing by deſcent, pleaded, it appeared that the anceſtor deviſed the lands to the heir, for payment of debts; and the court held, that notwithſtanding they were a charge on the land, yet the heir was in by deſcent; for the tenure is not altered. The caſes cited were, Salk. 242. Hob. 30. Dy. 124, Sti. 148. 3 Lev. 127. Mo. 614. Cro. Eliz. 833, 919. 1 Roll. Abr. 626. J. Lutw. 797. *Cro. Aſſignments.

A determination on aſſignments under Stat. 32 Hen. 2. cap. 34.

The leſſor made a leaſe for years, and afterwards aſſigned his reverſion to W. R. Adjudged, that all conditions and covenants between the leſſor and leſſee, which concern the thing demiſed, or rent reſerved; as for inſtance, conditions or covenants for repairing, &c. paying the rent, &c. are annexed to the reverſion, by this ſtatute, and paſs with it to the aſſignee, ſo that he may take the ſame advantage of them, as the leſſor himſelf might have done before he made any aſſignment, but no collateral covenants, as to pay a ſum in groſs, &c. are transferred to the reverſion by this ſtatute. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 48.

Hilary, 2 W. & M. Barker v. Damer.

B. made a leaſe for years of land in Ireland, in which leaſe the leſſee covenanted to pay the rent in London; B. ſold his reverſion, and the aſſignee brought an action of covenant in London for the rent; the defendant pleaded to the juriſdiction, that the lands lay in Ireland; on demurrer, the defendant's plea was adjudged good, this being a local covenant and adheres to the land. The leſſor himſelf could not have maintained an action on this covenant in England, and the ſtatute transfers it to the aſſignee in the ſame plight that the leſſor had it; and the payment being to be made in London alters not the caſe. Shower 191. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 81.

Michaelmas, 3 W. & M. Hannam v. Woodford.

After the death of a cognizee in a ſtatute, his adminiſtrator ſued forth an extent, and the liberate being returned, he made an aſſignment of the lands without an actual entry, or without executing the deed on the land.

And the queſtion was, whether this aſſignment was good or not?

It was compared to an intereſſe termini; and that this aſſignment was good, becauſe a man may grant or diſpoſe of what he has not actually in poſſeſſion.

And to prove this aſſertion, the caſe of Powſley v. Blackman was cited, which is reported in many books, and is ſhortly thus:

A mortgage was made of lands for payment of money within the ſpace of five years, for ſeveral payments; and in the ſame deed it was agreed, that the mortgagee ſhould not intermeddle with the actual poſſeſſion of the profits, until default of payment, &c. afterwards the mortgagor made a leaſe of the lands for ſix years; the leſſee entered, the money was not paid, and at the end of the term the leſſor had his eſtate again, the mortgagee, without any lawful entry, deviſed the lands to his ſon, and died; and it was adjudged, that the leaſe was good, which could not be, if the leaſe made by the mortgagor had been a diſſeiſin.

But on the other ſide it was ſaid, that by the return of the liberate, the adminiſtrator had no right, only a poſſeſſion in law.

The proper way had been to bring an ejectment on the liberate to recover the poſſeſſion, and then the aſſignment had been good; and of this opinion was the court. Plow. 423. 1 Inſt. 270. a. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 48.

Hilary, 3 & 4 W. & M. Glover v. Cope.

In an action of covenant; the caſe on the pleadings was,

A copyholder in fee made a leaſe of a meſſuage for twenty-one years; warranted by the cuſtom, and the leſſee covenanted to repair during the term.

Afterwards the leſſor granted the reverſion to his ſon, who ſurrendered to the plaintiff, who brought an action of covenant againſt the leſſee for not repairing, and whether the action would lie or not, was the principal queſtion.

The doubt aroſe on the tenure of the meſſuage, which was copyhold; for if it had been a freehold, the action might have been well brought by the aſſignee of a reverſion againſt a leſſee for years, after he had aſſigned the term, notwithſtanding the leſſor or his aſſigns had accepted the rent from the aſſignee of the leſſee, and this on the general words of the ſtatute of H. 8. which gives the grantees and aſſignees of reverſions of lands, tenements, and other hereditaments, the like advantage againſt leſſees by entry for non-payment of rent, as the leſſors or grantors themſelves might have.

Now, whether copyhold lands may be comprehended in theſe general words, was the chief queſtion.

Firſt, it was premiſed, that without the aid of the ſtatute, a grantee of a reverſion might bring an action of debt; for ſo was the law before this ſtatute was made; and it was grounded on this reaſon, that wherever a man was intitled to a reverſion, ſo that he had the rent, which was incident to it, and which is given by the law, there the law did likewiſe create the privity on purpoſe to maintain an action of debt for the rent.

Two queſtions were made:

1ſt. Whether this covenant runs with the reverſion; for if ſo, then the plaintiff being a grantee of a reverſion, may bring this action at common law.

2d. If not, then whether the aſſignee of a reverſion of a copyhold is aided by the ſtatute of H. 8.

Per curiam. A copyholder hath an inheritance, tho' he hath it in the poſt, and his eſtate is now fixed and eſtabliſhed by the cuſtom; and therefore it is reaſonable to conſtrue him to be within the equity of this ſtatute; and the rather, becauſe of late he has been held to be within the ſtatute de donis, &c. And ſo, without further argument, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 80.

Eaſter, 4 W. & M. Pitcher v. Tovey. Error.

On a writ of error, on a judgment in the Common Pleas, in covenant, wherein the plaintiff declared, that by an indenture, bearing date the 9th of July, 1680, he demiſed a houſe in the pariſh of St. Martin's, &c. rendering rent, with a covenant for payment thereof, to R. Gill, who aſſigned to the defendant; and for rent in arrear for three years after aſſignment, he brings covenant: the defendant, as to part, pleads he owes nothing; and as to the reſidue, an aſſignment over before it incurred. The plaintiff demurred, and judgment, by three judges in the Common Pleas, for the plaintiff; and it was urged for the defendant here, who was plaintiff below, that there was a privity of eſtate, though no privity of contract, between the aſſignee of a term, and the leſſor, after acceptance of him for a tenant, which continues, notwithſtanding the aſſignment, till notice of it; as if a tenant makes a feoffment, the lord ſhall avow on him for rent in arrear, till notice of it. 3 Co. 23. a. and ſo it was adjudged in the caſe of an aſſignee of a term. 1 Sid. 339. by two juſtices; and Twiſden's reaſon to the contrary is not good, that the leſſor had a remedy by diſtreſs; for there is no reaſon that the leſſor, who had two remedies, ſhould be deprived of one of them; for he cannot have debt, where the party to whom the term is aſſigned is not known to him; and perhaps his remedy by diſtreſs may fail, where the aſſignment is to a poor man, who is not able to manure the land, or by indigence, or otherwiſe, ſuffers it to lie freſh, and then the leſſor ſhall be without remedy by diſtreſs, or by action of debt, and ſuch notice ought to be pleaded, as in the caſe of Marrow v. Turpin, 3 Co. 24 a.

Per curiam. The debt lies by the leſſor againſt the aſſignee, only on privity of eſtate, and when this fails by the aſſignment over, the action is at an end; and is not like an avowry, which ſhall be made on a perſon certain. That of Sid. 339. was haſtily reſolved by two againſt Twiſden, and the bar thought it new law. The leſſor is not at ſuch great prejudice as is pretended, for he may diſtrain, or have covenant againſt the leſſee, or his executors; and if there be no covenant for payment, he may have debt againſt the ſecond aſſignee, when known; and if that were not ſo, it was his own folly that he accepted the firſt aſſignee for a tenant, by which he gave him a liberty of aſſignment to the other, and diſcharged the leſſee. Accordingly the judgment was reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 23. 2 Salk. vol. 1. page 81.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Woodward v. Marſhall.

In this action the plaintiff declared as aſſignee of a reverſion by fine, for rent in arrear. On the defendant's putting in an ill plea, to which the plaintiff demurred, the Chief Juſtice obſerved, that the plaintiff had not ſet forth an attornment, without which the reverſion could not paſs.

The plaintiff's council, in anſwer to this objection, argued, that this being an action of covenant, it was not grounded on the privity of contract, and differed from an action of debt, which is grounded on the privity of eſtate.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, unleſs the reverſion paſſed by the aſſignment, the covenant cannot paſs, for there is nothing wherewith it can be transferred.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Cook v. Harris.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt againſt the defendant as aſſignee of a term, being executor of the firſt leſſee, in which the plaintiff declared, that he demiſed a meſſuage to John Harris for the term of twenty-one years, rendering 60 l. per annum rent; and that afterwards, viz. the firſt of July, the whole reſidue of the aforeſaid term of years came by aſſignment to the defendant; and this action was brought for rent due at the Michaelmas following. The defendant pleads, that before the aforeſaid day for payment of the rent, or before any part thereof became due, ſhe aſſigned her whole intereſt and term for twenty-one years to J. S. viz. 29 June, and that the aſſignee accepted it, &c. The plaintiff replies, that the defendant aſſigned all the right, title, and intereſt of her the ſaid Mary (viz. the defendant) in the declaration aforeſaid mentioned, and expreſſed, to defraud the plaintiff. The defendant rejoins, and traverſes the fraud, on which the plaintiff demurs. The plaintiff's council took exception to the plea, becauſe it appears that the defendant aſſigned before the term was aſſigned to her by the aſſignment of which the plaintiff declares, but ſhe does not ſay that ſhe aſſigned after: now it may be that it was re-aſſigned to her again on the firſt of July, which is very conſiſtent with her plea, and then ſhe ſhall pay the plaintiff his rent. But if the plea had been, that after the defendant was aſſignee, ſhe aſſigned, viz. ſuch a day, which in fact was before the day of the aſſignment to her mentioned in the plaintiff's declaration. There the viz. had been void, and the plea good: but otherwiſe, ſince the words, after the aſſignment, are not in the plea.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This plea ought to have ſaid, after the aſſignment, for the defendant muſt either traverſe the aſſignment mentioned in the plaintiff's declaration, or confeſs and avoid: and therefore here, if the plaintiff had not replied, this plea had been ill; but here the plaintiff has aided it by his replication, where he ſays, that the defendant aſſigned all the right, title, and intereſt of her the ſaid Mary in the declaration aforeſaid mentioned and expreſſed; and he obſerved, that the ancient method of pleading aſſignment was by virtue whereof, the aſſignee entered, and was poſſeſſed; but that is diſuſed now; for the aſſignee has the eſtate in him before entry, though not to bring treſpaſs: and if there be an agreement between the leſſor and leſſee, that the leſſee ſhall pay the rent at the beginning of every year before hand, when the leſſee at the end of the firſt year pays his rent, (which he deſigns for the year following) yet in judgment of law it is rent for the year paſt, and ſo the leſſee in judgment of law pays no rent for the laſt year of the term.

Rokeby, Juſtice, took exception to the plea, that it is not ſaid that the plaintiff had notice of the aſſignment; and he ſaid, that it was adjudged in C. B, Tovey v. Pitcher, that in ſuch caſe there ought to be notice; and therefore judgment was given by Pollexfen, Powell, and Rokeby, that the leſſor ought to have notice. Judgment for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 367.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A bond, though it be not aſſignable in point of intereſt, yet is a covenant, that the aſſignee ſhall receive the money to his own uſe. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 683.

Michaelmas, 11 Ann. Parker v. Lilly. Error.

A man aſſigns a bond to B.; B. ſues this bond in the name of the aſſignor, and has judgment. A writ of error is brought, and judgment affirmed. After execution taken out, but before it was returned, the aſſignor gives a warrant of attorney to confeſs ſatisfaction on record, which is accordingly done, and on this a ſuperſedeas taken out to ſtop the execution, and now the court was moved to ſet aſide the ſuperſedeas, on the following objections:

1ſt. Becauſe after aſſignment the court will not ſuffer the aſſignor to give a warrant of attorney to acknowledge ſatisfaction; and for this 1 Keble, 803. was quoted.

But as to this, it was ſaid, that the Aſſignment was matter of equity, and was more proper for Chancery than for this court; and a late caſe was quoted in C. B. where a bond was taken in truſt for another, and the obligee dying while the ſuit on the bond was pending; it was held that ceſtuy que truſt could not go on in the action, becauſe this court could not take notice of the truſt, or of any other plaintiff than the perſon who appeared to be ſo on record. And of this opinion was the court.

In favour of the motion, it was further inſiſted on, that after execution had iſſued, it was not regular to grant a ſuperſedeas without a judge's authority, on which the court took time to enquire into the practice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 103.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. Turner v. Goodwin.

This caſe had been argued laſt term, and came now to be ſpoken to again. It was on an action of debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of ſo much money, the plaintiff aſſigning over to the defendant ſuch a judgment againſt D.

The council for the defendant inſiſted, that the aſſigning was a condition precedent to the payment.

It was ſaid, that in the obligation there were very proper and ſignificant words to make a condition, either precedent or ſubſequent; that therefore it ſhould be taken either one way or the other, as would beſt anſwer the intention of the parties.

Now the intention of the parties undoubtedly was, that the plaintiff ſhould have the money, and the defendant the judgment. But now this intention could never be ſupported, taking it to be a condition ſubſequent; for the money once paid, cannot be brought back again in caſe the judgment ſhould not be aſſigned over.

The law lays ſuch a ſtreſs on the intention of the parties, that it will interpret words, not at all proper to amount to a condition, rather than the intention of the parties ſhould be violated, as the caſe of Co. Lit. 24. a grant of an annuity pro concilio impendendo.

It cannot be objected, that the defendant ought to have concurred in doing this act, and requeſted the plaintiff to aſſign &c. becauſe this was an act that it was in the power of the plaintiff to perform alone; for the judgment would, immediately on the aſſignment, veſt in the defendant, before his acceptance of it; as in the caſe of Butler v. Baker.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that the defendant was bound to do the firſt act, viz. to offer to pay the money, though he aknowledged that the payment of the money, and aſſignment of the judgment, were to be concomitant acts in the execution.

He relied on the replication of the plaintiff, which the defendant having demurred to, muſt be admitted to be true. In this replication, the plaintiff ſays, that he was ready to aſſign, &c. and requeſted the defendant to pay the money, which the defendant refuſed. This refuſal the council inſiſted to be an abſolute refuſal, and not a conditional one, viz. unleſs the judgment was aſſigned. And this abſolute refuſal of the defendant to pay the money, he inſiſted on to be a ſufficient diſcharge to the plaintiff, from preparing the aſſignment.

In 1 Lutwyche 245. Thorpe v. Thorpe, moſt of this ſort of learning is ſtated. Adjourned.

In Eaſter term following it was agreed on both ſides, that the queſtion was no more than this, who was obliged to do the firſt act? for if the judgment was to be aſſigned before payment of the money, then judgment muſt be for the defendant; but if, &c.

For the defendant it was ſaid, that thoſe acts of paying the money, and aſſigning the judgment, were alternate acts, which cannot go on in an original path, but there muſt be a priority in law. That in law, proper and formal words of condition, are not required in wills, grants, or contracts. Not in wills, Cro. Eliz. 46, 454. 2 Roll. Rep. 68. Not in grants, 1 Inſt. 204. a grant of an annuity, pro conſilio impendendo. The reaſon aſſigned by Coke was not a good one; the true reaſon is, the law implies a condition, becauſe elſe there would be no remedy. 5 Rep. 78. Gray's caſe.

The caſe chiefly relied on for the defendant, was, 14 H. 4. pla. 19. which was a debt on bond, conditioned, that if the defendant reſigned his living by ſuch a time, for a certain penſion to be conveyed to him, then, &c.

For the plaintiff it was urged, that the words aſſigning the judgment, did not make a condition precedent, from the neceſſary import of the words; and to ſhew this, ſeveral authorities were quoted, where this way of expreſſion was uſed, and yet not held a condition precedent. 3 Cro. 204, 454, 146. 2 Roll. 68. T. Jones 235, 206.

1ſt Objection. The condition of a bond is always to be taken in the ſenſe that is moſt favourable to the obligor, which is, that this ſhould be a precedent condition.

Anſwer. This rule is generally true, but not always 5 Rep. 23. b. 1 Vent 255. 2 H. 7, 8, 9.

2d Objection. If the money muſt be firſt paid, the defendant is without remedy for the judgment,

Anſwer. No; for the plaintiff, in that caſe, becomes a truſtee to the defendant for the judgment, the aſſigning of the judgment being only a deed, to manifeſt the truſt. (But to this it was replied, that this was not a remedy in law, but equity). 1 Mod. 113. Aſſigning over a thing in an action, interpreted as a covenant againſt the aſſignor; and therefore if the money be paid, and no judgment aſſigned, it is a breach of covenant. In caſe of a mortgage, the money is always paid firſt.

This aſſignment muſt make mention of the money, as paid firſt; ſince otherwiſe it will want a good conſideration, and be void, for it will be maintenance 3 Leon. 234. Noy. 52. 3 Cro. 552, 170. 34 H. 6, 30. Bro. Main. 8. 1 Bulſt. 187. (To this it was anſwered, that the aſſignment need not recite the money as paid, but only the bond, and the ſpecial agreement).

Laſtly. This diſtinction was offered, by the plaintiff's council, in anſwer to ſeveral caſes; that if by the agreement of parties two acts are to be done, and the time is limited for the doing of one, and no time for the other, there, if the nature of the thing will bear it, that thing is to be done firſt, for which the time was limited. 1 Ventris 147. 1 Saunders 319. 1 Lutwyche 251. 1 Cro. 384, 5. 2 Saunders, 350, 352. 1 Lutwyche 490, 565.

Trinity, 13 Ann. Miles v. Williams.

In an action of debt on bond, brought againſt the defendant and his wife, in Trinity term laſt, to which they pleaded a diſcharge by the bankruptcy of the huſband, and conclude, and this they are ready to verify.

To this plea the plaintiff demurred ſpecially, and offered the following objections.

2dly. Becauſe they ought to have concluded their plea to the country.

As to the firſt point, ſuch a debt is within ſtat. 4 of the Queen, and conſequently diſcharged by the bankruptcy of the huſband.

The words of the ſtatute are, ſhall be diſcharged from all debts by him, her, or them, due and owing, at the time that he, ſhe, or they did become bankrupt.

The queſtion therefore will be, whether this be a debt due and owing at the time of the bankruptcy.

It has been argued by the bar, and very reaſonably, that if debts due to the bankrupt's wife, are aſſignable by the commiſſioners, then it is reaſonable that debts owing by the bankrupt's wife, ſhould be diſcharged by the bankruptcy.

Now in order to know, whether a debt due to the wife of the bankrupt be aſſignable, the intention of the ſtatutes 13 Eliz. cap. 7. and 1 Jac. cap. 15. muſt be conſidered.

By ſtat. 1 Jac. which is explanatory of that of Eliz. it is provided, that the commiſſioners ſhall have power to grant and aſſign, or otherwiſe to order or diſpoſe all debts due, or to be due, to and for the benefit of the bankrupt, by what perſon or perſons ſoever, or in what manner and form ſoever, to the uſe of the creditors, &c. and that the ſaid aſſignment or diſpoſition, &c. ſhall ſo veſt the property, &c. in the aſſignees, as fully, &c. as if the ſaid bill, bond, &c. whereon the ſaid debts ſhall ariſe and grow due, had been made to, with, or for the aſſignees.

Now the intention of this act of parliament is plainly this, that the bankrupt being not thought a proper perſon to be intruſted with the management of his own eſtate, for fear he ſhould defraud his creditors, therefore the act puts the commiſſioners in the place and ſtead of the bankrupt, and conſequently whatever eſtate the huſband can turn into money, in order to pay his debts, the ſame is aſſignable by the commiſſioners.

The beſt way of interpreting ſtatutes, is by the rules of common law, in like caſes.

Thus the ſtatute de donis, which ſays, that a fine levied of intailed lands ſhall be to make his right void, has been interpreted not to make a nullity, but a diſcontinuance; becauſe at the common law, if a biſhop ſeized in right of his church, or a huſband of his wife, had aliened by fine, &c. it was but a diſcontinuance. 3 Co. 85, &c.

21 H. 7: fol. 19. A bond entered into to two, if one grants the bond to the King, the King may ſue alone.

It is the conſtant practice in outlawry to ſeize all the debts due to the wife, and yet the words of the writ, goods and chattels, lands and tenements of the perſon outlawed, are rather weaker than the words of the ſtatute.

In Hobart 253. Breadman v. Coals, is a ſtrong caſe, for it proves, 1ſt. That the huſband may aſſign a debt due to his wife, by the common law; and 2dly. That he was not reſtrained by ſtat. 7. Jac. becauſe the book ſays it was the huſband's own debt, which brings it within the very words of ſtat. 4 of the Queen.

It is certainly a very equitable interpretation, that whatever may be applied by the bankrupt to the payment of debts, may be aſſignable by the commiſſioners.

To the objection, that the ſtatute does not extend to debts due to the bankrupt as adminiſtrator or executor, it may be anſwered that it is nothing to the purpoſe, for he has no intereſts in thoſe debts to his own uſe, and when he recovers them they are aſſets, &c.

But it is objected, that this ſtatute extends not to debts due to him and another, and for this purpoſe. 1 Levintz 17. is quoted.

To this I anſwer firſt, that there is no judgment in that caſe. 2dly. That I doubt whether it be certain that the whole debt is not veſted in the crown on the outla wry of one, where there are two obligees.

That a debt due from the bankrupt, and another, is within the act, appears from ſtatute 10 Ann. cap. 5. a declaratory law, but this is his debt, as he is one with his wife.

Another objection has been taken, that this debt ſhall ſurvive to the wife, if the huſband die before he recovers it, and this conſtruction will deprive her of this contingency.

The anſwer is, that the huſband might by his releaſe have diſcharged this debt, now this is a diſcharge of the legiſlature, applied in eaſe of his debts.

The aſſignee has the ſame remedy to recover it that the bankrupt himſelf had.

If a note be payable to a feme ſole, or order, and ſhe afterwards marries, her huſband is the proper perſon to indorſe this note.

Now that this debt due from the wife is diſcharged by the bankruptcy, ſeems to me to be clearer than that a debt to the wife ſhould be aſſignable, &c.

For this conſtruction makes for the benefit and intereſt of the bankrupt's creditors, and wife. As to the bankrupt nothing can be harder, than that he ſhould be ſtripped of every thing, forced on oath, and at the peril of felony, to make a full diſcovery, and yet after all, not be diſcharged. The intention of the capias is only that the love of liberty ſhould compel a full diſcovery.

The diſcharge of the bankrupt ſtands on this reaſon, that he is ſtripped of every thing that ſhould enable him to pay.

This reaſon holds equally to all the debts for which he may be ſued.

This expoſition is better likewiſe for the creditors, for if this debt be diſcharged, then a creditor of the wife is a creditor within the ſtatute, and entitled to come in for an equal proportion, which is far more eligible than an action, which is of no uſe, unleſs the wife ſurvives, and perhaps not then neither.

As to the wife, that this expoſition is beneficial to her is ſo plain, that it has been urged as an objection, that it will be too beneficial.

Whether this be a temporary diſcharge during the coverture, or a perpetual one is not now a queſtion; but I am inclined to think it a perpetual one; nor is this unreaſonable, for the law looks on the debt as paid ſince the creditor is let into the common fund.

As to the objection, that this may be a fortune to a woman. The anſwer is, it is very reaſonable, that ſhe ſhould ſhare in the advantages, as well as diſadvantages of the bankruptcy.

If a ſuppoſition be made, that a woman may, precedent to her marriage, put her eſtate into the hands of ruſtees for her ſeparate maintenance; and ſo her debts will be diſcharged by the bankruptcy, and her eſtate out of the reach of the creditors. The anſwer is, No, for I am of opinion, that ſuch a ſettlement or conveyance as to the creditors, ſhall be deemed void and fraudulent.

As to the objection, that this diſcharge is a perſonal privilege, and therefore not communicable to the wife: the anſwer is, that her diſcharge is neceſſarily conſequential on his.

As to the ſecond point, the court were unanimouſly of opinion, that the plea of the defendants in bar, was naught, for not concluding to the country; and therefore on this ſecond point (being ſpecially aſſigned for cauſe of demurrer). Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10, page 243.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. Lovelock v. Sorrel.

A leaſe was made to W. R. and afterwards the leſſor brought an action of covenant againſt the aſſignee of an aſſignee, for not repairing, but did not ſet forth the intermediate aſſignments.

The defendant pleaded that this leaſe did not come to him by any meſne aſſignment of the leſſee, to which plea the plaintiff demurred.

And it was inſiſted by his council, in order to maintain the demurrer, that the plea was too general, and altogether immaterial, for if the defendant had the land by an aſſignment from the original leſſee, he is ſubject to this covenant; therefore he ſhould have pleaded that the leaſe did not come to him, and not that it did not come to him by meſne aſſignment, and ſo is 1 Saund. 238, 285. & 2 Saund. 188.

The defendant's council argued, that in an action of covenant againſt an aſſignee of a leſſee, the plaintiff ſhould ſpecially ſet forth, all the intermediate aſſignments, and ſhew how the defendant came to the land, and not as aſſignee generally.

But the court were of opinion, that the declaration was good againſt the defendant, as aſſignee general, becauſe it may often happen that the leſſor may not know all the intermediate aſſignments.

There was no judgment given this term, but in Trinity term following an objection was made to the declaration, viz. That the plaintiff had declared on a leaſe for years as yet to come, when by the very record it appeared, that the leaſe was expired by the effluxion of time, therefore he had declared on another leaſe; but the court gave no judgment as to this point, but ſaid, that in all actions of trover, the uſual form of declaring was, that the goods came to the defendant by finding, but it would certainly be an immaterial plea, if the defendant ſhould deny the finding, as in Saund. 238, &c. 2 Mod. 217. *Show. Eaſter, 1 W. & M. Clerk v. Andrews.

A motion was made for a prohibition to the Sheriff's Court of London, to ſtay proceedings where they attached the debt of the garniſhee, becauſe it aroſe out of the juriſdiction; but it was denied, becauſe the debt was on ſimple contract, which follows the perſon of the debtor. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. page 347.

Trinity, 7 W. 3. Maſters v. Lewis.

The plaintiff was indebted to one Goſtwright, and had alſo a debt owing to him by the defendant. The plaintiff dies inteſtate, and Goſtwright entered a caveat in the Spiritual Court, and then enters a plaint in the court of the Sheriffs of London, againſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as ordinary, to attach this debt in the hands of the defendant, and on default, has judgment and execution. Then the archbiſhop granted adminiſtration to Alice Maſters, who brings this action of indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the defendant, who pleads this foreign attachment, in bar. The plaintiff demurs; and the defendant's council argued, that the foreign attachment in this caſe was good, and the defendant's debt well attached, and therefore he ought not to be liable over to the plaintiff.

1ſt, They ſaid, that this foreign attachment had the approbation of all courts, for more than 150 years, and there was no inconvenience, for if the defendant againſt whom the attachment is ſued comes within the year and day, he may ſue out a ſci. fa. againſt the plaintiff, to diſprove the debt.

2dly. They ſaid, that it had been allowed in a caſe of the very ſame nature. Calthrop. Rep. 66. And though it may be objected, that this may work a devaſtavit in the adminiſtratrix, for by this means a debt on a ſimple contract may be ſatisfied before a debt on ſpecialty; they anſwered, that the adminiſtratrix might well plead, in an action brought againſt her, plene adminiſtravit, i. e. that ſhe has fully adminiſtered; for ſhe is not chargeable for more than what comes to her hands. And by 5 Co. Snelling's caſe, the adminiſtrator is bound by the cuſtom of London, to pay a debt by ſimple contract, as well as a debt on ſpecialty. And although in this caſe it may be objected, that the ordinary was not liable to any action of debt, they anſwered, that by 10 Ed. 2. cap. 19. the ordinary is liable, ſo long as he hath aſſets. 2 Inſt. 397. But they ſaid, that admitting that this judgment in the attachment was erroneous, nevertheleſs, ſo long as it continues in force, it ſhall bind the parties; for which reaſons, they prayed judgment for the defendant.

The plaintiff's council ſaid, 1ſt. A foreign attachment cannot charge any perſon but a debtor, and the ordinary is no debtor before goods come to his hands. 5 Co. 82. 9 Co. Henſloe's caſe. F. N. B. 210. b. 2. Garniſhment cannot be, but where the garniſhee is liable to the action of the defendant; for the garniſhee may plead all things that the defendant might have pleaded. But in this caſe the ordinary, who was the pretended defendant, could not have had an action againſt Lewis for this money. Therefore, if this foreign attachment ſhall be allowed good, it will be in effect to adjudge a power in the attachment, to give an action to a perſon who cannot have one by law, which the attachment cannot do; but where there is no executor or adminiſtrator, a foreign attachment may well be allowed, becauſe they may be ſued, or may ſue. And the court ſaid, the adminiſtratrix, in this caſe, could not reverſe that judgment, becauſe ſhe is not a party to the record. And Holt, Chief Juſtice, affirmed, that Snelling's caſe, 5 Co. 82. where it is ſaid, that the adminiſtrator is bound by the cuſtom to pay a debt on ſimple contract, &c. is not ſound law. And afterwards, in Michaelmas term following the whole court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 56.

An attachment will not lie for not performing an award made on a rule of court, without a perſonal demand. Holt, C. J. ſaid, he remembered the firſt attachment of this kind was in Sir John Humble's caſe, in Kelynge's time; in which, and ever ſince, a perſonal demand has been thought neceſſary. In caſes of awards, though they be not legally good, an attachment lies for non-performance. Otherwiſe if the matter is impoſſible; but the party is excuſed as to that part which is impoſſible only. See Mich. 9 W. 3. Harriſon v. Bowman. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 83.

On a motion for an attachment, for not returning a mandamus, it was ſaid, per Holt, that an attachment in Chancery, on an alias and pluries, is returnable in court, and is not merely for the contempt, but is really an action whereon the plaintiff ſhall recover damages for the delay in not executing the writ; and we have without reaſon gone on in imitation of Chancery. It is a contempt not to return the firſt mandamus, therefore let a return be made within a week. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 164.

Trinity, 10 W. 3. Cook v. Licence.

A motion was made in behalf of the defendant, for a prohibition to be directed to the Sheriff's Court in Briſtol, on a ſuggeſtion, that cauſes of action ariſing out of the juriſdiction of the Sheriffs Court ought not to be ſued there. The fact was, the court at Briſtol, for default of appearance, proceeded to attach the goods of the defendant, in the hands of a garniſhee; to ſtay which procedings, the above application was made to the ſuperior court. In oppoſition to the motion, it was inſiſted, that the defendant cannot pray a prohibition on the ſuggeſtion of a matter which he could not plead. Now he cannot plead this before appearance, and therefore he ought not to make ſuch a motion until he has appeared.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, a perſon ſhall not plead to the juriſdiction, until he appears. But if the original cauſe of action aroſe out of the juriſdiction of the court, the garniſhee may plead it, and of that opinion was Chief Juſtice Hale. But if it is a debt on a ſimple contract, it is attachable where the perſon of the debtor is. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. page 346.

A rule was made to put off a trial, on payment of coſts, and the coſts not being paid, and the trial put off, the plaintiff moved for an attachment, which was refuſed; for the court ſaid he ſhould have gone on. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 83.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Hall v. Miſter.

If a rule is made at niſi prius to refer a matter to the three firſt named perſons in the pannel, and the plaintiff has a verdict for his ſecurity; after the award made, the plaintiff may either enter up judgment on the verdict, or have an attachment for not obeying the rule of court, it being in his election which way he will execute the award; and this was affirmed by Mr. Northey, and at the bar to be the conſtant practice. Tourton and Gould, (in the abſence of the Chief Juſtice) doubted of it, becauſe the verdict ſtood ſtill on record. To which Northey anſwered, there could not be a judgment entered on ſuch a verdict, without leave of the court: and the attachment was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 84.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Bignoll v. Rogers.

In debt againſt the ſheriff of Bucks, for the reward given by ſtat. 6 & 7 W. & M. to thoſe that diſcover and convict clippers and coiners: note, here the plaintiff had a certificate from Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, who tried the malefactor, of his having been convicted on the plaintiff's evidence, which being produced, though under his lordſhip's hand, yet was proved by my lord's clerk, to the jury. And here Holt held, the demand of this debt of the ſheriff, after the certificate, did attach the debt on him; and that the money was to be paid out of the profits of the county, or on failure thereof, out of the Exchequer; and that in ſuch caſe the action would lie againſt the ſheriff's executor, becauſe given by act of parliament, and attached in the teſtator; but for the penalty given in the act againſt the ſheriff, for default of payment, that ſhould not affect the executor; and that if the ſheriff paid the debt, and died, it ſhould be allowed to his executor.

One Holland, an attorney of the court, having informed his client, that he had entered up judgment two years before, but could not ſue execution, by reaſon of a writ of error pending, when in truth there was no judgment entered, for this notorious practice was ordered to anſwer interrogatories; and here it was agreed, that if interrogatories be not exhibited in a week, the recognizance entered into for anſwering them, is diſcharged of courſe. It was likewiſe agreed by the court, and the maſter of the Crown Office, that in all caſes the party has four juridical days to anſwer the interrogatories, though they be exhibited in vacation; but if he does not anſwer in that time, he is to be committed on motion. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Chandler v. Driver.

A ſubmiſſion to an award being by rule of court, a motion was made for an attachment for non-performance.

Per curiam. There ought to be an affidavit of award demanded, &c. and we never grant an attachment, for non-payment of money on an award the firſt day, though the defendant be to do the firſt act. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 317.

The defendant had been a mayor of a corporation, and declined ſwearing in the mayor elect, and after a peremptory mandamus an attachment was moved for againſt him, on affidavit, that he kept out of the way, ſo that he could not be perſonally ſerved; and that a writ had been left at his houſe, and ordered he ſhould ſhew cauſe, &c. and this difference taken between this caſe, and where money is to be paid on award; that in the latter there ought to be a perſonal notice before attachment. But this point may be queſtioned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 312.

In debt on a bond conditioned to perform an award, where the award was, that the defendant ſhould pay money on ſuch a day, and he pleaded a foreign attachment in London iſſued the ſame day that the money was payable by the award, and that by virtue thereof they attached the money in his hands the day after, which was the day after that on which the money was payable by the award. An exception was taken to this plea, that at the time when the money was pleaded to be attached, the day of payment by the award (which is now parcel of the condition of the bond) was paſt, and the bond forfeited; and ſo the penalty of the bond was due, and not the money awarded, and therefore that ought to have been attached, and not the other. The defendant's council argued, that the attachment was awarded on the very day, though it was not executed till the day after; and that it was their cuſtom to attach monies in hand, and not the penalty.

The court were of opinion, that the plea was ill. And Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, that it would have been a good plea to an action of debt on the award, but not to debt on the bond, the penalty of the bond being due by the failure of payment of the money awarded on the day; and therefore that ought to have been attached, for after that the bond is forfeited, the money contained in the condition cannot be attached. If the attachment had been executed before the bond had been forfeited, it had been well; but though it was attached, yet until it was executed, the defendant might pay the money to whom he would; and therefore not paying it according to the award, he forfeited the bond. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 636.

The queſtion was, whether ſerving an attachment for contempt on a Sunday, was within the ſtatute againſt Sabath breaking. The words that all arreſts on Sunday, except for breach of the peace, are void.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Suppoſe it was a warrant to take for forgery, perjury, &c. ſhall they not be ſerved on Sunday, and ſhall not any proceſs at the King's ſuit be ſerved on Sunday; ſure the Lord's day ought not to be a ſanctuary for malefactors; and this here partakes of the nature of proceſs on an indictment, but the court will conſider the matter further.

On an attachment, a perſon is only to anſwer interrogatories; and if he can ſwear off the contempt, he is diſcharged; and ignorance of the law cannot be pleaded in ſatisfaction of an act againſt law, but may be offered in mitigation.

The Solicitor General moving for an attachment on the alias mandamus, Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, it had been ſometimes granted in the like caſe, but not frequently: and there were two ſorts of attachments on a mandatory writ; the one intitles the party to his action for damages, and that muſt be on the pluries; Vide 1 Cro. 559. And the other puniſhes the contempt, which may be on the alias; ſo is the attachment on a prohibition, which is the caſe in Cro. and here they took a pluries, and no attachment. *Vide Mod. Norwich Summer Aſſizes, 12 W. 3. Palmer v. Hooke or Gouche.

On a trial at niſi prius it was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if in an indebitatus aſſumpſit for goods ſold and delivered, on non-aſſumpſit pleaded, the defendant gives in evidence, that the debt was attached by foreign attachment in London, on a plaint levied by J. S. (to whom the plaintiff was indebted) againſt the plaintiff, &c. the defendant will be obliged to prove that the plaintiff was indebted to J. S. becauſe the plaintiff has no notice of the foreign attachment; and therefore it may be only a contrivance by the defendant and J. S. to bar the plaintiff of his preſent action. 2dly. In ſuch caſe, the plaintiff may ſhew in evidence, that the ſuit in London was after an original filed by the plaintiff in one of the ſuperior courts; and that will avoid the operation of the foreign attachment. 3dly. If the original did not iſſue before the plaint was entered in London, but only was antedated, and bore teſte before; and no arreſt was made on it before; that will not avoid the foreign attachment. This laſt point Holt reſerved for his farther conſideration, but at laſt continued in his former opinion. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 727.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Ingram v. Bernard.

Arbitrators having made an award, that W. R. ſhould pay a ſum of money on the ſecond day of January, he having given a bond to perform the award, it was attached on the firſt day of January, and the money awarded was taken on that attachment.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. This would have been a good plea in an action of debt brought upon the award, but not to an action of debt brought upon the bond of ſubmiſſion, becauſe the bond is forfeited, and when a bond is forfeited, it is not the money in the condition, but the money in the bond itſelf which is attached.

A debt due by judgment obtained in the courts of Weſtminſter, whether the action was for debt or damages, cannot be attached by the cuſtom of London.

A creditor of W. A. attaches his debt in the hands of W. S. who was indebted to the ſaid W. A. and this being removed here by certiorari, a procedendo was granted, becauſe the party cannot have the like remedy in this court as he may in London.

Per curiam. If A. ſhould ſue W. here, and the defendant ſhould plead the foreign attachment, we will allow the cuſtom, becauſe it comes in by way of plea, but when it comes by way of original ſuit we cannot do right to the parties, therefore a procedendo was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 50. Raym. vol. 1. page 636.

The court was moved for an attachment againſt an officer for executing by diſtreſs an order of juſtices, for levying of money for the repair of a bridge, after the order was removed by certiorari.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There never is any formal allowance of a certiorari below; but to bring one in contempt, the diſtreſs muſt be after the certiorari preſented below; and if a warrant was delivered before that time, the way had been, on producing the certiorari, to get a ſuperſedeas of it, and deliver it to the officer, or elſe he cannot be in contempt. *Vide Mod. Stat. 30 Car. 2. cap. 5. prohibits the burying in linen, under the penalty of 5 l. one moiety whereof to be given to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the pariſh. Mile-End is a hamlet of itſelf, and has diſtinct officers, and a chapel of eaſe, but lies within the pariſh of Stepney. The Jews have a burying-place at Mile-End. And the juſtices of the peace in 36 Car. 2. made an order at their ſeſſions, that the churchwardens of Mile-End ſhould give an account of their receipts of the buryings ariſing within their precinct, to &c. to the end that there might be an equal diſtribution through the whole pariſh; which order being removed during the ſame reign into this court, was afterwards confirmed, and the churchwardens of Mile End accounted accordingly for ſome time. But the preſent churchwardens of Mile-End not having accounted according to the ſaid order, the court was moved laſt term for an attachment to be granted againſt them for not accounting according to the ſaid order, it being confirmed in this court, and ſo a contempt of this court. And a rule accordingly was made to ſhew cauſe, but afterwards diſcharged, and an attachment refuſed, becauſe the proper remedy was, to have applied to the juſtices for a new order. And the court unanimouſly held the order juſt and good. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 676.

The defendants were judges of a court at Briſtol, in which the plaintiff had obtained a verdict, and damages for 28 l. and the ſame day he goes to the town-clerk, and gets his coſts taxed, he being the proper officer, and takes out a capias againſt the principal; and on return thereof, a ſci. fac. againſt the bail, who after the return of a ſecond ſci. fac. ſurrendered the principal; after which a year elapſed from the verdict and taxing of coſts, when the court granted a new trial, which being complained of to the court in Trinity term, a rule was made for an attachment, niſi.

And now the defendant's council came to ſhew cauſe, and urged, that the judges below were in no fault, for there never was any judgment entered below; and until judgment entered, the hands of the court are not tied from granting a new trial at any time before judgment, if they ſee cauſe; and if they miſtake that for a cauſe, which is none, that only is an error of their judgment, for which they are not puniſhable: and though in this caſe a new trial was granted after a writ of error allowed, that will not alter the caſe; for it is uſual to have a writ of error allowed before judgment, and the proceeding againſt the bail was groundleſs, there being no judgment entered, and ſuch proceedings did not hinder the courts being open to grant a new trial. He quoted the caſe of Tiny v. Roberts, where the plaintiff having omitted entering judgmenr as ſoon as he might have done it, the court granted a new trial; and he ſaid, here the court were not bound to enter judgment without prayer of the plaintiff, tho' an inferior court. 2 Vent. 189.

The plaintiff's council in reply ſaid, that the coſts were taxed here by the proper officer, and that he thereon had made out a proceſs againſt the defendant, and that is warrant enough for execution, though there be not a final entry of the judgment on the roll, which is never done in thoſe courts till the writ of error is brought; where they are forced to make up the records, indeed they ſometimes enter in the margin: judgment for the plaintiff.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The writ of error ought not to be allowed till judgment given; and it is a good return to it, that judgment is not yet given, which the plaintiff's council confeſſed as to the point of the return, but affirmed, that they frequently do allow them before judgment. The Chief Juſtice likewiſe agreed, that a judge is not puniſhable for an error in judgment; but he ſaid, that it was rare for the ſame judges to grant a new trial before themſelves, as here, after a trial at bar; though that, he ſaid, had been done, but never with his conſent; but it is uſual to grant a new trial after a trial at niſi prius, but that is ever after freſh purſuit, that is, the very next term; but here it was granted after a year, coſts taxed, and as much an entry of a judgment, as is in any caſe there, and execution taken out; and it is no excuſe for them to ſay, they are not lawyers, for they ought to take advice of lawyers; and if they are ſo preſumptuous to take on themſelves the knowledge of the law, it ought not to be ſuffered, though there be no corruption in them. He cited the caſe of the ſteward of Windſor-court, who was both council and judge, and after bail to the writ of error brought on his own judgment. But on complaint the judgment was ſet aſide, and reſtitution awarded. But he ſaid they would not grant an attachment for an error in judgment, where it is a matter within their judgment, as here it was not, they having already given their judgment why we ſhould not grant it.

Note. In this caſe it was argreed to be the courſe of the court, that where, on an affidavit made, a day is given to hear council on both ſides; the party may read as many affidavits as he pleaſes in corroboration of the firſt, and concerning the ſame matter, but muſt read none concerning new matter.

It was alſo agreed, that the principal cannot be rendered by bail after plea pleaded: and here the rule was, that the rule for a new trial be ſet aſide, and the rule for an attachment be diſcharged on payment of the expences of the complainant, and judgment entered below as in due time. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 84.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Chaffey.

Several orders made by the juſtices of peace in Wilts againſt the defendant, the reputed father of a baſtard child, were removed into this court by certiorari; and the court was moved to quaſh one of them, which was, that the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor ſhould ſeize of the defendant's goods what they ſhould judge proper, to ſecure the pariſh from the maintenance of the child; becauſe by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. they have only authority to make an order to impower the churchwardens and overſeers, &c. to ſeize what the juſtices ſhould think proper, and not what the churchwardens, &c. ſhould judge proper, &c. and for this reaſon it was quaſhed. Then an exception was taken to the original order, becauſe it ordered, that the defendant ſhould give ſecurity for the payment of the ſum by them impoſed for the maintenance of the child; when it did not appear that the defendant had diſobeyed the order in point of payment; and by ſtat. 18 Eliz. cap. 3. an order for ſecurity cannot be made till after contempt. And for this reaſon the order was quaſhed as to that part, and was confirmed as to the reſidue.

Per curiam. When an order is confirmed in this court, an attachment lies for non-performance of it; wherefore this court will not take ſecurity of the party for performance of it; but if the original order had been one of the ſeſſions, not removed hither, the court would have taken ſecurity of him to appear there. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 858.

A perſon who had been a bankrupt, and gone abroad, had conſigned goods to three perſons here, for the equal benefit of his creditors, two whereof were his conſignees, who ſet up a truſtee for them to attach the goods in London. The third conſignee, to whom nothing was due, offered to appear; the other two would not appear: and the court would not receive the third man's appearance without he appeared for all, which he could not juſtify doing, having no warrant for it: and now a prohibition was moved for, becauſe they refuſed his plea.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If they refuſe your plea, your way is by bill of exceptions: if they proceed otherwiſe erroneouſly, you may have a writ of error; and we are not to prohibit inferior courts, becauſe they proceed againſt law, for in that caſe the law gives another remedy.

On an attachment of goods, there goes a ſci. fac. by way of garniſhment, and two of the garniſhees will not appear, and the third offers to appear, and plead, but is not admitted, without appearing for all. Sure this courſe is of very ill conſequence, and here we can have no bill of exceptions, becauſe they are not in court till appearance; and they will not ſuffer us to appear, tho' a bill of exceptions be always of matter not appearing of record: and the court were ſtrongly againſt the cuſtom to compel one garniſhee to appear for the reſt; and here they ſaid, there could be no certiorari, becauſe they could not proceed in this court according to the cuſtom of London.

And Dee, the common ſerjeant, ſaid, that in ſuch caſe, if he put in bail, and waged his law alone, that would have diſſolved the attachment; this caſe was put: if a præcipe be brought againſt two, and one of them appears, and takes the whole tenancy on himſelf, and traverſes the other's having any thing, and pleads in chief, he may do it. Adjourned for further conſideration. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 78.

An affidavit was made of a reſcous of one taken by meſne proceſs, on which an attachment was moved for.

But Holt, Chief Juſtice, would diſtinguiſh between this, and the caſe of reſcous on a writ of execution; for there the ſheriff cannot return a reſcous, and therefore the court can have no other ground for an attachment, but affidavits, and ought to be contented therewith; but here a reſcous might be returned, which being a matter of record, and conſequently a better motive, ought to be given to the court. Yet the court ſeemed againſt him; and a rule to ſhew why an attachment ſhould not go, was obtained.

Hilary, 9 Ann. Anonymous.

A motion was made for an attachment againſt the defendant on affidavit, that being ſerved with the rule of court to ſhew cauſe why an information ſhould not be filed againſt him, he ſaid, he did not care a fart for the rule of court. And the Attorney General inſiſted he ought to be firſt heard to ſhew cauſe againſt it.

Per curiam. He ſhall anſwer in cuſtody; for it is to no purpoſe to ſerve a perſon with a ſecond rule, who has ſlighted and deſpiſed the firſt: it is to expoſe the court to a further contempt. And accordingly the defendant was brought in, and entered into a recognizance to anſwer interrogatories. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 84.

The defendant having treated the proceſs of the court contemptuouſly, an attachment went againſt him, without a rule to ſhew cauſe, as is cuſtomary.

The defendant preſented a petition to the common council of London, reflecting on one of the aldermen, and uſed contemptuous words of this court, at the ſame time.

For the petition, the court granted an information againſt him, and thoſe who ſigned the ſame; and, for the contempt, an attachment.

The proſecutor, in his interrogatories, to which the defendant was examined, aſked him if he did not preſent the petition, and uſe ſuch and ſuch words.

The defendant's council moved, that the interrogatory which charges the defendant with preſenting the petition might be ſtruck out, becauſe otherwiſe it would be making the defendant accuſe himſelf of that which will convict him of a libel.

Per curiam. He is not obliged to anſwer it. You may aſk him, whether, when the petition was preſented, he did not ſay ſo and ſo. Therefore, let that part of the interrogatory be ſtruck out. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 444.

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendant, for publiſhing a libel againſt a doctor of divinity in the Univerſity of Cambridge, and a rule being made on him to ſhew cauſe, on ſuch a day, why it ſhould not be granted, he now moved, by his council, to diſcharge that rule, on an affidavit that his fault was not wilful, but merely through ignorance; that he had the libel from one Crownfield, a printer in Cambridge; that it was in Latin, which the defendant did not underſtand; and that he did not know who was the author, otherwiſe than by a letter which he received from the printer, and which was now annexed to his affidavit, by which letter it appeared, that one Dr. Middleton was the author; ſo that having ſhewed how he came by this libel, and having told all that he knew of the author, for that reaſon it was inſiſted in his behalf, that the rule ſhould be diſcharged, and that the printer ſhould be proſecuted.

But the rule was continued on the defendant, until he made out his allegation againſt the printer, who was therefore joined in the rule, that both of them might be before the court.

In the next term Dr. Middleton appeared, and confeſſed in court that he was the author of the book: and thereon the rule was diſcharged againſt the defendant and the printer, and Dr. Middleton was committed till farther conſideration of the matter.

And within a few days afterwards he was brought into court, and fined 50 l. and was bound to his good behaviour for a year; and ſo was Dr. Colbatch, the ſame term, for the like offence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 123.

Trinity, 9 Geo.. The King v. Ackworth and others.

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendants, on an affidavit of their withdrawing a witneſs from giving evidence at the aſſizes, in a trial had there on an information againſt certain ſmugglers, it was ſhewed for cauſe, that the defendants had affidavits to diſprove the charge made againſt them by the affidavits of the plaintiff; whereon thoſe affidavits were now read in court; and it was affirmed to be the conſtant practice, that though the affidavits produced by the plaintiff were very full as to the charge, yet if the perſon denied ſuch charge, by as plain and poſitive affidavits, in ſuch caſe he ſhould be diſcharged, and an attachment ſhould not go; and if ſuch affidavits were not true, then the plaintiff had a proper remedy, which was, by indicting them for perjury.

And becauſe a man ſhall not be kept in cuſtody, and deprived of his liberty by an attachment, therefore this is the only caſe where a negative oath ſhall be preferred to an affirmative; all which was agreed to by the court, but that the preſent caſe differed; for the defendants did not, by their affidavits, plainly deny the fact with which they were charged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 81.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Cæſar v. Holt and others.

A rule was made for the defendants to ſhew cauſe, on ſuch a day, why an attachment ſhould not go againſt them, for committing a reſcue, &c. and now they ſhewed for cauſe, that ſuch attachments ought not to be allowed, on affidavits of a reſcue, becauſe in ſuch caſe the parties might be taken into cuſtody, before the writ is returned: therefore the ſheriff ought to return a reſcue before the defendants ſhould be proſecuted for it; and the court was of that opinion, viz. that the ſheriff ought to return the writ, which, if falſe, then the plaintiff hath an action againſt him; but if the return is true, then the action lies againſt the reſcuers; therefore if an attachment ſhould be granted on an affidavit of a reſcue before the return of the writ, the defendant can have no action againſt the ſheriff, for a falſe return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 110.

An attachment was granted laſt term, againſt the defendant, unleſs cauſe, &c. for that he being town clerk of Wallingford, had attached ſo much meal in the market there, in ſacks, and had ſold the ſame, under colour of the ſaid attachment, when the owner would have given an appearance to the ſuit, for which his goods were thus attached; and on complaint made by the ſaid owner to the mayor and burgeſſes there, he the ſaid defendant was ordered to deliver the meal to the owner, on giving an appearance as aforeſaid: but the defendant refuſed to deliver the meal, and ſaid, that the owner ſhould never have his meal again.

And now his council came to ſhew cauſe, why an attachment ſhould not go againſt him, viz. he made an affidavit that he was town clerk of that borough, and that when he made out the order to attach the meal, he thought it a good order; and that if the mayor and burgeſſes made an order for the defendant to deliver the meal to the owner, ſuch order was only verbal, and not in writing; and that if he had offered any contempt to ſuch verbal order, he ought to be puniſhed there, where the ſuppoſed offence was done.

To which it was anſwered, by the council for the proſecution, that where an officer of an inferior court abuſes the proceſs of that court, to the oppreſſion of any perſon, he may be puniſhed by this court; and that the defendant having iſſued out an attachment as the very firſt proceſs, it is altogether irregular, and then afterwards to make uſe of it as an execution, is ſtill worſe, and an apparent oppreſſion; and having ſold the meal, by virtue of that attachment, contrary to the expreſs order of the mayor, and declaring that the owner ſhould never have it again, ſhews he had a deſign to oppreſs him.

It is true, he ſwears that he had only a verbal order to deliver the meal, but yet that can be no excuſe to him, becauſe he is the very perſon (being the town clerk) who ſhould have entered that order in writing. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 96.

Hilary, 10 Geo. The King v. Colvin.

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendant, a gaoler, for denying to return an habeas corpus directed to him, and for extorting a note from the proſecutor, then in his cuſtody, ſo as by menaces and dureſs, he was forced to comply, and give the note for payment of the money to the gaoler.

The court made a rule, that he ſhould ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not go againſt him.

Note. An attachment was iſſued out againſt an aſſociate for amending a record after a motion in arreſt of judgment for the ſame fault which he amended; but on his making the record as it was before it was amended, and paying coſts, the court, ex gratia, ſuperſeded the attachment.

A motion was made to ſet aſide two verdicts, becauſe the diſtringas's were not ſtamped, ſo that the trials were void by the ſtamp act; but the Solicitor having got thoſe writs ſtamped before the poſtea was brought into court, this motion was rejected, for it did not appear to them, but that they were ſtamped; and they could not take any notice, whether they were ſtamped or not at the aſſizes; if they were not, the defendant ſhould have taken notice, and inſiſted on it at that time.

Note. It was held by the court, that it is not ſufficient to deliver a copy of a declaration to the turnkey or gaoler, where the defendant is in cuſtody, unleſs the declaration is firſt filed in the office; and therefore where a judgment was had on a declaration ſo delivered, it was ſet aſide by the court.

And if judgment is regularly obtained againſt ſuch defendant, the plaintiff muſt charge him in execution, within two terms afterwards, and not after thoſe two terms are expired, or if he is charged afterwards, the court will diſcharge him with coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 227.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. The King v. Dunbar.

On the defendant being ordered to be examined on interrogatories, the maſters report to the court was as follows:

The defendant, Dunbar, was a priſoner in the King's Bench, and charged in execution there at the ſuit of one Pilkington, and afterwards was turned over to the Fleet, and there likewiſe charged in execution at the ſuit of the ſame party, and on the 30*th day of January laſt*, was taken in Leiceſter Fields on an eſcape warrant, ſigned by one of the judges of this court, and then he inſiſted on his having a day rule, but on ſearch there was none for that day; whereon as he was carried through the Old Bailey towards Newgate, the officers of the Fleet reſcued him.

And now on a motion for an attachment againſt them, and that Dunbar might be taken out of the Fleet, and ſent to Newgate; it was inſiſted for him, that he being charged in execution in the Fleet, could not be taken by an eſcape warrant iſſuing out of this court.

Beſides the defendant ſuppoſed he had a good day rule, for his name was entered in the petition for day rules, on the 30*th day of January*, but the clerk did not come in time to have it read in court that day.

As to the objection, that this man being charged in execution in the Fleet (which is the priſon of the Court of Common Pleas) cannot be taken by an eſcape warrant ſigned by any of the judges of the Court of King's Bench. This appears to be otherwiſe on reading the ſtatute.

So that any judge of the court where the action was brought, may grant an eſcape warrant; and a judge of the Common Pleas may grant it, though the priſoner is turned over, and charged in execution in this court, and ſo vice verſa.

As to the entry of his name in the petition for a day rule, it ſignifies little, unleſs it is read in court; therefore an attachment was granted againſt thoſe who reſcued Dunbar, and a rule was made, that he ſhould be taken out of the Fleet, and ſent to Newgate. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 241.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. The King v. Burridge.

A rule of this court was made by conſent, that the ſheriff of the county of Devon ſhould bring the freeholders book before the maſter of the office, and that he ſhould return forty eight men, and that each of the parties ſhould be at liberty to ſtrike out twelve; and that the maſter ſhould appoint the twenty-four remaining to be returned by the ſheriff to try the iſſue joined between the parties.

Afterwards, when the parties attended the maſter, the defendant ſtruck out ſome hundredors; and at the trial he challenged the array for want of hundredors; and the judge of aſſize allowed the challenge, and directed that the plaintiff in the action might take what remedy he could by law.

Thereon it was now moved for an attachment againſt the defendant; for that this challenge to the array was a breach of the rule of court, and a contempt thereof.

And it was argued for him, that his entering into this rule did not take from him the liberty of challenging the jury; if it did, it muſt be by implication, which could never be a good foundation for an attachment; for the cauſe to iſſue out an attachment ſhould be as certain as the cauſe to warrant a judgment, and there was never yet an attachment granted in ſuch a caſe.

There are rules where there was an expreſs injunction not to challenge, as in Dunſter's caſe, 10 El. in which rule it was ordered, that neither party ſhould challenge the pannel; and there are other rules where it was inſiſted on but denied, as in the caſe of the King v. Kiffin Eaſter, 29 Car. 2. a rule was made (as in this caſe) for ſtriking a ſpecial jury: and Jones, Attorney General, moved that it might be inſerted in the rule, that neither of the parties ſhould be at liberty to challenge the array, but it was denied by the whole court, for it could not be granted but by conſent; and it was not at that time pretended, that this was implied in the rule; for if it had, he need not have moved the court, that it might be expreſſed.

In the caſe of the King v. Sherrard, 1 Geo. theſe words were added to the like rule, by conſent of both parties, that no advantage ſhould be taken for want of hundredors, 2 Roll. Rep. 365. But admitting this was implied by the rule, yet the defendant cannot be ſaid to be guilty of a contempt for challenging the array, for it is no more than an inadvertency, or a miſtake of the ſenſe and meaning of the rule.

Now the different way of drawing up theſe rules ſhews, that there muſt be an expreſs conſent of the parties not to challenge, otherwiſe no attachment will lie for challenging; neither will ſuch conſent take away any legal objection the party hath to challenge; and if ſuch a rule (as in the principal caſe) would ſerve, what reaſon can be given why an expreſs conſent ſhould be put in ſo many rules for ſtriking ſpecial juries.

Beſides, this matter has received judgment already, for the rule was produced at the aſſizes, and pleaded in bar to this challenge, and the defendant demurred to it, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer; and when the judge came to town, he gave judgment for the defendant, at which the Chief Juſtice ſeemed to be ſurpriſed, that a judge ſhould give judgment after he came to town, but the council for the defendant ſaid he might, when it was by the conſent of the parties; as where a verdict is found, and the judge takes time to conſider what judgment to pronounce, or what fine to ſet; and for theſe reaſons it was inſiſted that no attachment ſhould go.

It was inſiſted for the attachment, that this challenge was a contempt of the court, and a breach of their rule, for that was, that the maſter ſhould appoint twenty-four perſons to be returned by the ſheriff to try the iſſue; now this challenge to the array deſtroyed this rule, for it was a ſuperſedeas of the whole return, like a rule of court on a bond to ſtand to an award; yet if the party retracts the ſubmiſſion, it is a breach of ſuch rule, and a forfeiture of the bond, both which are implied in the ſubmiſſion.

The defendant might have taken a challenge to the polls, but he knew that would be ſupplied by taleſmen; therefore, to make all ſure, and to prevent the trial, he took the challenge to the array for want of hundredors, and this with an air of inſolence, after he had been ſummoned to appear before the Chief Juſtice of this court, and had his opinion, that the defendant could not ſtrike out the hundredors; for which reaſon it was inſiſted, that the attachment might iſſue.

The court was of opinion, that the defendant was guilty of a premeditated contempt, becauſe his challenge, drawn up in form, and arraigned at the aſſizes, ſhews his deſign was to put off the trial.

As to the rule made in this caſe, it may be without the conſent of the parties, as well where the trial is by niſi prius, as at bar, and that likewiſe in criminal caſes as well as civil, and without any infringement of the liberty of the ſubject, but rather for the ſake of juſtice, and to preſerve their liberties; and if ſuch challenges are good, theſe rules would be avoided, and made uſeleſs, which is a contempt of this court: and the caſe cited, of Thomas v. Kiffin, to ſhew that the party may challenge, if it is not expreſsly prohibited in the rule, is wrong; for though it is not expreſſed, yet if it be neceſſarily implied, the power of challenging is taken away; for otherwiſe theſe rules would be to little purpoſe.

Now this rule is, that the iſſue ſhall be tried by the remainder of the jury challenging the array, is as much as to ſay it ſhall not be tried by that jury, and that the ſheriff ought not to return them, when he was bound by the rule to return thoſe, and no other.

Now, as the court have a power to inforce obedience to their own rules, it is but reaſonable they ſhould puniſh thoſe who break them; ſo the rule was made abſolute for an attachment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 246.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Smith v. Graham.

On a motion for an attachment, againſt one Chaſe, a bailiff, for taking inſufficient bail on the arreſt of a perſon, (at the plaintiff's ſuit;) a rule was made to ſhew cauſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 283.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Williams v. Lyons.

An action on the caſe was brought againſt the defendant for criminal converſation with the plaintiff's wife; and on not guilty pleaded, the cauſe was tried at the ſittings after term, and the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff, and 200 l. damages; and afterwards the defendant uſed ſome indirect means with the plaintiff to take a ſmall ſum, and releaſe the damages; and becauſe he would not take 30 l. and give ſuch a releaſe, the defendant got a warrant of a juſtice of peace to take up the plaintiff for a pretended murder; which warrant was executed on him on a Sunday, and he was kept in cuſtody till Monday; and then was arreſted in an action of 500 l. at the ſuit of the defendant, all which was done to extort a releaſe from him; which appearing plainly to the court, a rule was made for him, the conſtable, bailiff, juſtice of peace and his clerk, to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not go againſt them. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 189.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. The King v. Burchet and his Attorney, and againſt the Town Clerk of Guildford.

One Burchet was convicted by a juſtice of peace, for keeping dogs, nets, and ferrets, to catch conies, not being qualified, &c. and by a warrant from the ſaid juſtice, his goods were diſtrained for the forfeiture; and whilſt they were in poſſeſſion of the conſtable, and before they were ſold, the town clerk granted a replevin to take them from the conſtable.

And now the court was moved to ſet the ſaid replevin aſide, (becauſe goods thus taken by diſtreſs, on ſuch convictions, are irrepleviable) and for an attachment againſt the town clerk.

The court would not ſet aſide the replevin, but made a rule to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not go; which was afterwards diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 209.

John Richards, and his wife, and five children, were removed by an order of two juſtices, from the pariſh of Capell, to the pariſh of Wrotham in Surrey, that being adjudged to be the laſt place of their legal ſettlement; and afterwards, on an appeal brought to the next quarter ſeſſions, that order was quaſhed; and thereon the poor man, and his family, came back to the pariſh of Capell, and by another order were again removed to Wrotham; which order being removed into this court by certiorari, it was, by the conſent of both parties, referred to the judge of aſſize, who, on hearing the evidence on both ſides, directed that the matter ſhould be tried on a feigned iſſue, which was done accordingly at the next aſſizes, and the pariſh of Wrotham had a verdict; and ſo both the former orders were quaſhed.

But the pariſh of Capell being diſſatisfied with this verdict, procured the pariſh officers of St. Olave in Southwark to permit this man, and his family, to dwell in a tenement there, on purpoſe that they might remove him to Wrotham; and accordingly they came into the pariſh of St. Olave, and lived there ſome time, and were afterwards removed from thence, by an order of two juſtices, to Wrotham, which order was confirmed, on an appeal to the next ſeſſions; ſo that by this means the pariſh of Capell was diſcharged of them, becauſe an order, confirmed on an appeal, makes a good ſettlement in that pariſh, by whom the appeal is brought, againſt all other pariſhes whatſoever.

The court was now moved, that this laſt order might be quaſhed, and for an attachment againſt the churchwardens, &c. of Capell, for this contrivance.

But the court would not quaſh the order, but made a rule for them to ſhew cauſe, on ſuch a day, why an attachment ſhould not go; becauſe probably, when they come to ſhew cauſe, they may conſent to have the orders quaſhed; but they ſhewed no cauſe, and ſo the rule was made abſolute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 201.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Robinſon.

On a mandamus directed to the mayor and aldermen, &c. of &c. to proceed to the election of a new mayor, who was to be choſen out of the aldermen, the return was, that there was no aldermen, &c. and now the court was moved for an attachment againſt the defendant, for that this was rather a banter than a return.

Per curiam. If there are no aldermen, yet an attachment muſt not go. But the plaintiff may have his action for a falſe return, or he may traverſe the return, if falſe, ſo there is no colour for an attachment; but afterwards, on further conſideration, a rule was made, to ſhew cauſe, &c. for if it appears this was a frivolous return, and purpoſely made to avoid the juſtice of the court, an attachment ſhall go. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 336.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. Wyat v. Winkford.

In Eaſter term laſt, a motion was made for an attachment againſt Rolf Baily, for not attending at the aſſizes at Wincheſter, to give his evidence, to prove the hand of a ſteward of a manor, to a copy of a court roll, having been ſubpœnaed, and received a guinea for his charges, and promiſed a guinea per day while there, and his expences paid. A rule to ſhew cauſe was accordingly made, and this term the court was moved to diſcharge the rule, for that an attachment ought not to go, but the party injured had his action on the ſtat. of Eliz. and it was ſaid, that ſuch a rule had been granted by this court, in the caſe of Hammond v. Stewart; but, on ſhewing cauſe, it was diſcharged. And that ſuch a rule was granted againſt one Joſeph Roſſington, Mich. 10 Geo. in the cauſe of Daliſon v. Aland, for not appearing at Guildhall, before Lord Chief Baron Mountague, being ſubpœnaed as a witneſs, but was afterwards diſcharged. But the court, in this caſe, thought it was a good foundation for an attachment, the diſobedience to the ſubpœna being a contempt of the court; and though an action might be brought on the ſtatute, yet that was a more dilatory method, and more difficult to proceed in, which encouraged witneſſes not attending frequently on the trials at which they were ſubpœnaed to appear, and give evidence. And therefore the rule was made abſolute. Vide Raymond, vol. 2. p. 1528.

The defendants council, on ſhewing cauſe againſt the rule for an attachment obtained againſt the defendants for diſobeying an award, which was made a rule of this court, he obſerved that the defendants have liberty by ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 15. which inſtitutes this ſummary way of enforcing awards to complain of any undue practice in making the award any time within the next term after it is made, and in the preſent caſe, one of the arbitrators, was not ſummoned, nor the defendant, Smith, one of the parties.

It was further urged on behalf of the defendants, that where an award appears to be unreaſonable, though an action of debt may lie on ſuch award; yet the court will not grant an attachment, as was determined in the caſe of Williams v. Allen, Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. In this caſe the arbitrators have charged the defendants with the value of the goods, when they acted only as factors; and an affidavit was produced on behalf of the defendants, that the plaintiff had made his election in ſuing out an action of debt, and therefore is not entitled to an attachment.

The plaintiff's council argued, that as to the action of debt which was brought, it is as reaſonable to grant an attachment notwithſtanding, as the ſeveral remedies which are allowed on mortgages, &c. and cited. 1 Salk. 73. Richardſon v. Chancey, Michaelmas 1730, in ſupport of his caſe.

Lord Hardwicke. I am ſatisfied you ought not to have an attachment, while an action is pending, I deny the two caſes cited by the plaintiff's council are ſimilar to this. Therefore the rule to ſhew cauſe was diſcharged. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 106.

On a mandamus iſſuing out of this court, directed to the defendant, as late Mayor of Boſſiney in Cornwal, and to Lyne, the town clerk, and to, &c.

The defendant ſent a return of this writ to the Crown-office, which was, that the office is full of one Robins, who is the Mayor, in the name of himſelf and the town clerk, &c.

The town clerk exculpated himſelf by affidavit.

On a rule being granted by this court for the defendant to anſwer the matters of the affidavits.

The defendant's council argued, that an action would not lie, for that the return was a falſe one, becauſe of the multiplicity, none of the corporation being hurt particularly, but that an information might be granted, and ſo have the return tried, but that it was no way proper for an attachment.

Lord Hardwicke. The court made this rule only, that the defendant might anſwer the matter of the affidavits, in order that the court might either grant an information for a falſe return or an attachment, as the matter ſhould come out. I am now of opinion, that this conduct of the defendant is a contempt, and therefore an attachment ſhould iſſue: whether the return be good or not in law, or true in fact or not, can be no reaſon for this attachment, becauſe that ſhould be tried on demurrer, or on an iſſue on the fact, but the behaviour of the defendant, who is the only perſon that can tranſmit the return to us, is an impoſition on the court and a contempt.

Hilary, 9 Geo. 2. Dodd v. Adcock.

On a motion for an attachment againſt one Slater, for taking an affidavit of the cauſe of action, being a deputy town clerk, and then acting as attorney for the plaintiff.

Lord Hardwicke. Whether this be right or wrong done, I do not ſee there can be any ground for an attachment, for our doctrine is, that if there appeared only a miſtake in judgment, to refuſe the reading ſuch affidavit, and if it were done wilfully, then to grant an information: therefore I think, this is no reaſon for an attachment; though if he acted as judge in the cauſe, being attorney at the ſame time, that would have been a ground for an information. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 211.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 2. Baſket v. Rayner.

The plaintiff obtained an injunction in Chancery againſt the defendant for printing bibles, who was then in contempt on the ſaid injunction, and a priſoner in the K. B. for a libel.

The plaintiff's council moved the court for liberty to charge him with an attachment, and having given notice to the Attorney General, he conſented to the ſame.

Lord Hardwicke. To charge a perſon who is in cuſtody here, on a criminal proſecution with civil proceſs, is a motion of courſe, and a judge may grant it at his chambers. Therefore be it ſo. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 170.

The proſecutor's council moved laſt term for an attachment againſt the defendant for a contempt in not obeying an order of the quarter ſeſſions removed into this court by certiorari, and confirmed. The order as ſtated to the court was:

That the defendant who was convicted of being the father of a baſtard child, ſhould pay ſo much a week for its maintenance, and an arrear of twenty weeks being demanded, he refuſed to pay the ſame, and the court would only grant a rule to ſhew cauſe, becauſe they ſaid it was not like a refuſal to pay coſts taxed.

This term the defendant ſhewed cauſe, which was deemed inſufficient, and thereupon the rule was made abſolute, but the attachment was ordered to lie in the Sheriffs hands for a week, that the defendant might have an opportunity of paying the money if he choſe it. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 160.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 2. Woodin v. Colledge.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe, why a bond and warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment, ſhould not be ſet aſide, it having been made during the defendant's confinement under an arreſt, and no attorney preſent, except the plaintiff's attorney; and alſo why the judgment and execution thereon ſhould not be ſet aſide.

The plaintiff's council, on ſhewing cauſe, ſaid, that the warrant of attorney was made to confeſs a judgment in the C. B. and that accordingly the judgment is a judgment of that court, and therefore this court has nothing to do with the matter.

The defendant's council, in anſwer, urged, that the bond and warrant of attorney was made to confeſs a judgment in the C. B. but he was then under an arreſt by latitat out of this court.

Lord Hardwicke. Then we have had to do with this matter, or elſe this would be a trick to avoid both courts.

The plaintiff's council obſerved, that the plaintiff's attorney was preſent, and the defendant was ſatisfied with him.

Lord Hardwicke. The judgment is irregular, for want of the preſence of an attorney named by the defendant, which is contrary to an expreſs rule of the court, not becauſe ſuch warrant of attorney may not be fairly obtained in ſuch caſe, but be in order abſolutely to prevent any abuſe, and againſt this rule I do not know any excuſe can be allowed; ſo that the judgment is irregular, and though we cannot here ſet aſide a judgment of the C. B. yet as the latitat was ſued out in this court, we can lay our hands on the plaintiff and his attorney.

Per curiam. Let an attachment go againſt the plaintiff and his attorney, and lie in the ſheriff's hands a week, to be executed, if he do not conſent either to enter up ſatisfaction on the record in the C. B. or conſent there, that the judgment and execution be ſet aſide, and pay the coſts. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, page 177.

Hilary,

Hilary, 10 Geo. 2. North v. Wiggins.

On a motion for an attachment, in the firſt inſtance, againſt the defendant, who, on ſervice of proceſs, abuſed the officer, and ſpoke contemptuous words of the court:

It was doubted by the court, whether, when ſuch words are ſworn by one perſon only, the rule ſhould be abſolute, or only to ſhew cauſe; the rule in Chancery requiring two affidavits, to deprive the party of the benefit of ſhewing cauſe. In the preſent caſe, there being a ſupplemental affidavit, the point was not determined. The Chief Juſtice obſerved, that he ſhould be unwilling to eſtabliſh a practice, that would put it in the power of one hardy man to hinder another of an opportunity of defending himſelf, before he was reſtrained of his liberty. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1068.

Michaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. Habin's Caſe.

The court, on motion, granted an attachment againſt the ſaid Habin, who had ſet the name of an attorney of this court to proceedings in a cauſe in this court, in which he was concerned, without leave of ſuch attorney. Vide Bur. vol. 1. page 20.

Trinity, 31 Geo. 2.

An attachment may be moved for in the two following caſes, on the laſt day of term; viz.

For the non-payment of coſts; and

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendant, then under-ſheriff, for a contempt of the court, in taking on himſelf, without any pretence of authority, to remit part of the ſentence pronounced on John Shebbeare, in Michaelmas term laſt, viz. That the defendant, John Shebbeare, be ſet in and on the pillory:

The attorney general on behalf of the proſecution produced ſeveral affidavits in ſupport of the charge, on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

On ſhewing cauſe, the defendant's council read the defendant's affidavit, and ſeveral others, in extenuation of the crime, but they were over-ruled, and the rule for an attachment againſt him was made abſolute.

The defendant ſoon after appeared in court, and gave bail to anſwer interrogatories.

The maſter of the Crown office examined the defendant, and reported the ſame to the court, and that the defendant was in contempt; on which a rule was made for the defendant to appear in court the ſecond day of the next term, to receive judgment.

To pay a fine of 50*l.* and to be committed to the cuſtody of the marſhal for two months, and till the fine ſhall be paid. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 792.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 3. The King v. Plunket.

An attachment being granted againſt the defendant for not appearing to give evidence to a ſubpœna regularly ſerved on him:

On interrogatories filed againſt him, to which he was examined, he ſwore that the proſecutor had undertaken to give him further notice, if it ſhould be neceſſary for him to attend, but that he neglected ſo to do. He further ſwore, that he had been ſubpœnaed on a former intended trial of the ſame cauſe, which he attended, but the ſame did not come on; and further, that he would have attended if he had received ſuch further notice from the proſecutor ſo to do.

On the maſter of the Crown Office reporting to the court that he had cleared himſelf of the contempt; and it appearing to the court that the complaint brought againſt the defendant was groundleſs and unreaſonable, and not unknown to the proſecutor,

The court therefore ordered the proſecutor to pay the defendant his coſts, contrary to the general practice of the court on contempts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1329.

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendant for bringing a bill in equity contrary to a rule of this court, made between the parties by conſent, to refer all matters in difference between them to one Corderoy, who awarded the defendant to pay the proſecutor a ſum of money, which he paid, and afterwards filed this bill on which the attachment was founded.

After the rule to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not be granted was obtained, the defendant filed a ſupplemental bill, ſtating the motion for an attachment, and praying an injunction and relief: to this bill the defendant in equity pleaded in bar the rule of this court, which was allowed.

The defendant was taken up on the attachment, and interrogatories were filed againſt him, to which he was examined by the maſter of the Crown Office, who reported him in contempt.

On the defendant's being brought up to receive judgment for his contempt, the court were unwilling to puniſh him further by fine or impriſonment; but as his contempt was ſo obſtinate, they did not chuſe that a ſlight ſentence ſhould ſtand on the records, and therefore waived giving judgment by conſent, but obſerved, that the attorney and council were equally guilty of the contempt, and more criminal, and if ever ſuch a matter ſhould happen again, they would proceed againſt them. The court therefore ordered a rule to be made, that his recognizance ſhould be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1256.

Attorney.

Hilary, 2 W. & M. Berkenhead v. Fanſhaw.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, brought by an attorney for fees and diſburſements, in defending ſuits in an inferior court, and in this court. To this action the defendant pleaded ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 7.

Per curiam. The ſtatute may as well be pleaded to an indebitatus aſſumpſit, as to the action of debt, unleſs a ſpecial promiſe be laid; but to a ſpecial promiſe, or an inſimul computaſſet, 'tis no plea.

2dly. The ſtatute does not extend to attornies of inferior courts, but only to attornies of the courts at Weſtminſter; ſo that it is no plea as to this ſuit. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salkeld, vol. 1. page 86.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Jones v. The Earl of Bath.

A trial at bar was appointed in this cauſe; and the day before the trial, the plaintiff moved to put off the ſame, becauſe he wanted a witneſs to prove a deed.

This motion was denied, and the next day the attorney refuſed to bring in the writ. This refuſal was a contrivance of the attorney, in order to prevent his client being nonſuited.

The court ordered the roll to be brought into court, that they might take notice there was ſuch a writ; and the defendant's council informed them, that Lord Chief Juſtice Hale had committed an attorney for the like practice, which was likewiſe done now. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. page 367.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Stephens v. Squire.

In an action brought againſt one Squire an attorney, and two others, for appearing for the plaintiff, without a warrant, the cauſe was carried down to be tried at the aſſizes; and the defendant promiſed, that in conſideration that the plaintiff would not proſecute the action, that he would pay 10*l.* and coſts of ſuit. And now an action was brought againſt the defendant, on this promiſe.

The queſtion was, whether this was a void promiſe, by the ſtatute of frauds being made on behalf of another, and not in writing, when the ſtatute enacts, That no action ſhall be brought to charge the defendant on any ſpecial promiſe, to anſwer for the debt, default, or miſcarriage, of another perſon, unleſs it be in writing.

But the court were of opinion, that this cannot be ſaid to be a promiſe for another perſon, but for his own debt, and therefore not within this ſtatute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 205.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Jones v. Bodiner.

An action of treſpaſs being brought in this court, for taking the plaintiff's ſheep, the defendant pleaded his privilege as an attorney of the court of C. P. And, on demurrer,

It was inſiſted for the defendant, that being in the cuſtody of the marſhal, ſhall not hinder him from pleading his privilege of an attorney of the C. P. and to prove it, a caſe was cited out of the year books, which was an action of treſpaſs brought in B. R. ſuppoſing it to be done in a franchiſe; and the bailiff of that franchiſe demanding cognizance, (which is the ſame thing as privilege) it was oppoſed; becauſe it was not claimed whilſt the proceſs was continued: but the court was of opinion, that it might be demanded at any time.

Per curiam. The defendant was in the cuſtody of the marſhal, by compulſion of the law, and therefore he ſhall have his privilege of an attorney of the C. P. but if he had admitted the juriſdiction of B. R. it had been otherwiſe.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Latuch v. Paſherante.

On an aſſumpſit, the defendant pleaded, non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos, i. e. he did not aſſume within ſix years. The plaintiff replied; and for want of the defendant's joining iſſue in due time, the plaintiff's attorney ſigned judgment, but afterwards conſented to accept the joinder in iſſue: but on motion to the court, to compel him to accept it, it was oppoſed, becauſe the plea was a hard plea; and the client had notice of the advantage, and ordered the attorney to inſiſt on it. The court ſaid, that ſince it was a hard plea, they would not have compelled him, if he had not conſented to waive the advantage, but now they would hold him to his conſent: and as for the client, he was bound by the conſent of his attorney, and they could take no notice of him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 86.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Goring v. Biſhop.

Where writings come to an attorney's hands in the way of his buſineſs as an attorney, the court, on motion, will make a rule on him to deliver them back to the party; but where they come to his hands in any other manner, or on any other account, the party muſt reſort to his action, for the recovery of the ſame. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 87.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Kilbey v. Weyberg.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Johnſon v. Nayler.

Per curiam. If an attorney of the court, on motion, gets his name ſtruck out of the roll, he ſhall never after be admitted to act as an attorney. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 247.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

One Beal, an attorney of this court, ſued in the Sheriff's Court for his fees; but, on motion, he was forced to refer it to the maſter, becauſe his perſon is under the power of the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 251.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The courſe of this court is, where an attorney takes on him to appear, the court looks no further, but proceeds as if the attorney had ſufficient authority, and leaves the party to his action againſt him, if it turns out otherwiſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 86.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Newton v. Rowland.

In an action of debt brought againſt an attorney as executor, who pleaded his privilege, &c. on demurrer it was argued for the defendant, that the reaſon of privilege in that caſe, was in reſpect of his perſonal attendance, which was equal, whether ſued in his own, or in auter droit. But,

Per Holt. The authorities are of the other ſide in this caſe, and the plaintiff had judgment, niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 316.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. Grant v. Baily.

Per curiam. A perſon cannot change his attorney on record, without leave of the court; and after judgment, the attorney on record may receive and acknowledge ſatisfaction by virtue of his former warrant, and when an attorney of record is changed, the record ought ſpecially to mention that it was by conſent of the court. Vide Mod, Rep. vol. 12. page 440.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Craddoc v. Glin.

In an action againſt an attorney, for money received to the plaintiff's uſe; the attorney ſhewed to the court, that he had been employed as an attorney for the plaintiff, and had applied ſome of his money towards paying for his labour, and ſome to a ſolicitor in the cauſe; and moved to have his bill taxed, and an allowance of what ſhould then appear due to him.

Per cur. If the plaintiff had applied by motion for us to compel an attorney, by virtue of our power over him, as our officer, to pay the money there, foraſmuch as that is diſcretionary in us, we would not help the plaintiff, unleſs he did the fair thing on his ſide: but here when he demands no favour of us, we cannot deny him the law, and let the defendant take his legal remedy againſt the plaintiff. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Chancey v. Win and Others.

Mr. Trevanion, an ancient decayed gentleman at the bar, having brought an action of falſe impriſonment againſt an attorney of the court, moved to have an attorney aſſigned him, for none would voluntarily appear for him, and the court appointed one of his own nomination. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 583.

The defendant gave a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment, and died within a year afterwards in vacation, before the Eſſoign-day of the ſubſequent term, which was Eaſter-term; the attorney, after his death, entered up the judgment as of the precedent term, but did not bring in the roll before the Eſſoign-day of Eaſter term; and it was now moved to have the judgment ſet aſide, the warrant of attorney being revoked by the death of the party.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. 1ſt. By the courſe of this court, a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment is not revokable; and the court will give leave to enter up the judgment, though the party does revoke it; but it is determined by the party's death: but if the party dies in the vacation, the attorney may enter up the judgment that vacation as of the precedent term; and it is a judgment at the common law as of the precedent term, though it be not ſo on the ſtatute of frauds in reſpect to purchaſers, but from the ſigning; ſo that this judgbeing a judgment at common law, as of Hilary term, it was a judgment entered when the party was alive, and therefore good without all queſtion, if the rule had been brought in before the Eſſoign day of Eaſter term; but that not being done, the queſtion will be, Whether we can now admit it to be filed? By the courſe of the court, all the rolls of Hilary term ought to be brought in before the Eſſoign-day of Eaſter term, and made part of the bundle of Hilary term; and it is for this reaſon that what is done in the vacation is looked on as an act of the term preceding; and there cannot be a poſt terminum roll received without leave on motion, which the court does not grant, but when it appears that nobody can be prejudiced, for it is dangerous; and by my conſent it ſhould never be allowed again; for by this means the ſtatute of frauds, and the act for docquetting of judgments will be fruſtrated; for if the court allows the filing of this roll in Eaſter term as a judgment of Hilary term, when it was not among the rolls of that term, how ſhall purchaſers avoid the conſequence of it, when it was neither docquetted nor brought in? On this account the court diſallowed the filing. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 88. Raym. vol. 2. p. 766.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Lett. v. Mills.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Lamb v. Williams.

In an action of treſpaſs a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and his attorney entered a remittit damna as to part, and judgment for the remainder.

Per curiam. The attorney has authority by his warrant to remit damages, and a remittitur need not be by the plaintiff in his proper perſon, as a retraxit muſt. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 89.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Sir John Parſons v. Gill.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

An attorney appears, and judgment is againſt his client, and he had no warrant of attorney from him to appear. The queſtion was, if the court would ſet aſide the judgment.

Per curiam. If the attorney is reſponſible, it ſhall not be ſet aſide, becauſe the judgment was regular, and there is no reaſon that the plaintiff ſhould ſuffer when he is not in fault; but if the attorney is not reſponſible, or ſuſpected to be unable, the judgment ſhall be ſet aſide, for otherwiſe the defendant has no remedy. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 50.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann.

If an attorney of property and character appears for another without a warrant, and judgment is given againſt his client, ſuch judgment ſhall ſtand good, and the party ſhall be put to his action againſt the attorney, but if the attorney be a beggar, or in a ſuſpicious condition, the court will ſet aſide the judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 16. Salk. vol. 1. page 88.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Shepherd and Baily v. Orchard. Error.

The defendants brought a writ of error, and made two attornies on the ſci. fac. the one attorney aſſigned error, to which the defendant took iſſue, and the other pleaded a plea in abatement of the writ.

Per curiam. If one of the plaintiffs had made default, he ſhould be ſevered; but if they go on, they muſt proceed jointly, and if one attorney will aſſign error, &c. without authority from both, we cannot help him, let him take his remedy againſt the attorney.

Note. If a record of this court be pleaded, nul tiel record without more, is a compleat iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 40.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Holderſtaffe v. Saunders.

The court was moved for an attachment againſt an attorney, and others, for having got a perſon who was in quiet poſſeſſion of certain lands, turned out of the ſame; the caſe was as follows: the attorney got one to come on the land, who aſſumed the name of the tenant in poſſeſſion, and owned himſelf to be the man, and got the common affidavit of ſervice to be made by him in a borrowed name, as tenant in poſſeſſion, having delivered a declaration to him before, and thereon got judgment againſt the caſual ejector, and turned the tenant, who was wholly ignorant of the tranſaction, out of the poſſeſſion. On affidavit of this matter, all the accomplices were ordered to attend; for though the court looked on it as a very great offence, they would not at firſt grant an attachment, but ſaid, that it being in a criminal matter, if endeavours were uſed to ſerve them with the rule, and they could not be found, on affidavit of that matter, they would grant an attachment without requiring perſonal ſervice. Afterwards the council inſiſted to have it made part of the rule, that they ſhould not move for an injunction in Chancery in the mean time, for that would hinder the further inquiry into this practice; but the court ſaid they could not do that, for that were to ſend an injunction into Chancery; but ſaid, when the court had a hank over a man, and he came for a favour to the court, they often refuſed to grant him that, without he conſented not to go into Chancery; and that if after ſuch conſent he did go into equity, they would iſſue an attachment againſt him for the contempt.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that he was ſure Chancery would not grant an injunction in a criminal matter under the examination of this court; and if they did, this court would break it, and protect any that would proceed in contempt of it; and he ſaid, he thought that a copy of theſe affidavits on which the rule was made here, and an oath of their being a true copy, ought to be ground ſufficient to ſtay the Chancery from granting an injunction.

On an attachment of privilege brought by the Marſhal, he ſhall have no attorney, becauſe preſent in court.

A clerk in court may confeſs an indictment for his client. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 16.

The caſe, on the report of Mr. Clarke, the ſecondary, was, a writ brought againſt huſband and wife, and an attorney, in right of the writ, undertook to appear for them, but after would not do it; they delivered a declaration, which he received de bene eſſe; and judgment was entered for want of plea, which the court ſet aſide for irregularity, and ordered the attorney to be laid by the heels; and it was ſaid, that if an attorney undertakes to appear, and afterwards will not do it, on ſummons before a judge, he ſhall be compelled thereto. In an action brought againſt huſband and wife, if the huſband will order an appearance for himſelf, it will not be received without an appearance for the wife too; and for an attorney to undertake to appear and not to do it afterwards, is a contempt of the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 86.

Trinity, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Criſp.

Per curiam. Any perſon may file a bill againſt an attorney any day within the term; and if there be four days of the term to come, he may be ſerved with rules as of that term; but if the delaration be in Eaſter vacation, which is indeed a declaration of Eaſter term, the defendant ſhall have four days in Trinity term to plead; and one is not confined to four days to plead in abatement, but he has the whole term of which the declaration is delivered; but if he has four days in the term of which the declaration is, he ſhall not plead in abatement the next term. 2 Salk. 515, 517, 519. 1 *Salk. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Trevannion's Caſe.

On motion for leave to file an information againſt one Trevannion, an attorney, for aſſuming to himſelf an authority of granting replevins, whereby he in his own caſe granted a replevin for his own goods; this the council for the motion urged to be a great miſdemeanor, and that to uſurp an authority, as to hold a leet, and ſummons people in, and the like, is puniſhable by information, &c. but the court denied the motion at firſt, becauſe there was another remedy, viz. by a parco fracto, this being a pound breach; but afterwards they ordered him to ſhew cauſe, &c.

Note. As no under ſheriff ought to practiſe as a common attorney, ſo no attorney ought to practiſe as under ſheriff in granting replevins. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 32.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. The Earl of Yarmouth v. Ruſſel. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the Common Pleas by default, in an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and a writ of inquiry awarded, and ſeveral damages given, and a remiſit damna, i. e. remits the damages entered on all the counts but one.

The plaintiff in error's council took two exceptions: 1ſt. That the inquiſition was taken on a writ of inquiry, which was awarded without returning the firſt, but on a vicecomes non miſit breve, i. e. the ſheriff did not ſend the writ, only to the firſt; and that he ſaid was held ill in the caſe of Atwood v. Burr, on a writ of error of an award of execution on a ſcire facias on a recognizance againſt bail in the court of Maidſtone, and the proceedings were, on the alias ſcire facias, and that was awarded without any return of the firſt, and for that the judgment was held to be erroneous. 1 Ann; B. R. Secondly, that the remiſit damna was not entered in his proper perſon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, admitted the caſe of Atwood v. Burr, but ſaid that this was only a ſicut prius, i. e. as before. And as to the ſecond, he ſaid, that it was neceſſary, that it ſhould be ſo; and therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1142.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Burr v. Atwood. Error.

On a writ of error brought on an award of execution againſt bail, on the record of the original judgment being returned, the defendant's council took an objection, that the plaintiff at the return of the ſci. fac. appeared by J. S. his old attorney, and prayed an alias, and that J. S. continued to act throughout the whole, though he had no other warrant than the old one, which was given him on the commencement of the original action.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Any perſon may ſue out or pray the ſci. fac. and therefore the old attorney might; but when the ſci. fac. is returned, then the plea commences, and a new warrant of attorney ought to have been entered, which is done by entering, that the plaintiff put in his place, &c. for the warrant to appear in the principal action is no warrant to appear on the ſci. fac. againſt the bail, becauſe this is a new cauſe, and a different record.

The Chief Juſtice obſerved, that on this writ of error, the record of the judgment againſt the principal, ought not to have been certified, therefore the judgment againſt the bail was reverſed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 89.

Eaſter. 5 Ann. Gregg's Caſe.

An executor of an attorney brought an action for fees and law buſineſs done by his teſtator. The defendant moved to refer the plaintiff's demand to the maſter, but denied, becauſe all the buſineſs was done in another court, otherwiſe, had the buſineſs been done in this court, or partly in this, but in this caſe the plaintiff was an executor. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 89.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. Turton v. Prior.

In an action brought againſt an attorney of C. B. who was in the cuſtody of the Marſhal of the King's Bench, at the ſuit of another; in this action they declare againſt him in the cuſtody of the Marſhal.

The defendant pleads his privilege as an attorney of C. B. and therefore cannot be arreſted in B. R.

The council for the plaintiff argued, that they might declare againſt the defendant ſo, becauſe he was actually in the cuſtody of the Marſhal. But the court directed, that the defendant ſhould be removed by habeas corpus to the Common Pleas, and that an action ſhould be brought againſt him there. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 168.

Hilary, 8 Ann. Anonymous.

On a motion to ſet aſide an execution executed after a writ of error allowed; the court held that though there was no notice given to the plaintiff's attorney of the allowance of the writ of error, yet it was a ſuperſedeas to the execution; but to bring the attorney into contempt, he muſt have had notice thereof. Therefore the motion was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 272.

Michaelmas 10 Ann. Lord Say and Seale's Caſe.

On a trial at bar in an ejectment brought by the heirs at law againſt his lordſhip, who claimed as heir in tail, the ſingle queſtion was, Whether or no a com- mon recovery that was ſuffered to dock the intail was good or not?

The objection to the recovery was, that there was no tenant to the precipe.

To prove the recovery good, a deed, bearing date 23d of October, 1701, directing the uſes of the recovery, and the fine, viz. the chirograph of the fine, and common recovery were produced.

The council for his Lordſhip deſired to call one Knight, an attorney at law, to prove, that though the deed was dated October the 23d, it was not executed until five months after. N. B. The attorney was the perſon intruſted in ſuffering the common recovery.

The council for the heirs at law oppoſed the ſwearing an attorney, becauſe, as the attorney has a privilege not to be examined as to the ſecrets of his client's cauſe, ſo the attorney's privilege was likewiſe the client's privilege; for the client intruſts an attorney with the ſecrets of his cauſe, in confidence not only that he will not, but alſo that though he would, yet he ſhould not be admitted by the law to betray his client; and for this, Holbech's caſe was relied on. Beſides, it was ſaid, that his evidence would tend to accuſe himſelf either of ignorance, negligence, or ſomething worſe; and in Moor's Reports, antedating deeds, is adjudged felony.

The court were of opinion, that Holbech's caſe was good law; and that an attorney's privilege was the privilege of his client; and that an attorney, though he would, yet ſhould not be allowed to diſcover the ſecrets of his client: but notwithſtanding this, they thought Knight's evidence was to be received; for that a thing of ſuch a nature as the time of executing a deed, could not be called the ſecret of his client; that it was a thing he might come to the knowledge of without his client's acquainting him, and was of that nature, that an attorney concerned, or any body elſe, might inform the court of. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 41.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. Clerk v. Lee.

Mary Clerk, being proſecuted in the ſpiritual court by a proctor for his fees in a ſuit brought by her againſt her then huſband, Young, to be divorced, prays a prohibition; ſuggeſting, 1ſt. That ſhe was a feme covert; and as ſuch not liable to be ſued ſingly to pay the fees. And, 2dly. That all actions on the caſe are ſuable at common law, and not elſewhere.

It appearing that the libel was brought againſt her not as a feme ſole, but againſt her and her huſband Clerk, that point was thrown out of the caſe.

And then the ſingle queſtion was, Whether a proctor may not ſue in the ſpiritual court for his fees.

The council for the defendant inſiſted that he might:

1. From authorities, 1 Mod. 167. 3 Keble, 203. and this reaſon given, that fees are due by provincial conſtitutions, 1 Vent. 160. 165. if the cuſtom be denied, then a prohibition muſt go, and not otherwiſe. 2 Keble, 810. 845. And ſaid, that the juriſdiction extended as much to fees as coſts. 3 Keble, 516.

2dly. From the reaſon of the thing.

A proctor is as much an officer of the ſpiritual court as an attorney of a court at common law.

The ſpiritual court is an ancient court, and has ancient officers belonging to it for theſe ends; 1ſt. To carry on the buſineſs; and, 2dly. To preſerve the honour of the court; but it is impoſſible that theſe ends can be attained, if the court is bereaved of the attendance of its officers.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. a proctor is compellable by law to ſerve in his employment.

Co. Lit. 195. held, that an attorney is ſo too; conſequently the attendance of neither of them ought to be hindered, by obliging them to ſue for their fees in foreign courts.

By the ſtat. of Eliz. juſtices of the peace have power to compel men to ſerve in huſbandry; in which ſtatute there is no expreſs clauſe whereby the juſtices are enabled to redreſs ſuch ſervants in caſe their wages are denied; yet held by the equity of the ſtatute, that ſince the juſtices had a power to compel their ſervice, they ſhould likewiſe have a power to give them redreſs as to their wages.

All courts have proper fees belonging to their reſpective officers, of which fees each court is moſt certainly the propereſt judge.

2 Keble, 615. The ſpiritual court has a juriſdiction to try extortion in taking fees.

The council for the prohibition urged, that notwithſtanding the caſes quoted, it cannot be denied, but there have been reſolutions that way: but the point is now ſettled in the caſe of Johnſon v. Oxendon, 4 Mod. 254. where moſt of the caſes quoted are taken notice of; and this reaſon given by Holt, C. J. that if proctors might ſue in the ſpiritual court for their fees, they would avoid the ſtatute of limitations.

In the caſe of Brioker v. Goodall, a prohibition was granted, where a woman was ſued for fees in a cauſe carried on by her againſt her huſband, in order to bring the matter judicially before the court.

As to the caſe of extortion, no weight is to be laid on it, becauſe no favour is ſhewn to ſo heinous a crime.

As to the arguments from the reaſon of the thing, if they prove any thing they prove too much, viz. that a proctor cannot ſue at common law.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. If the ſpiritual court has juriſdiction, perhaps it is not neceſſary by the forms of their law for the huſband to be named in the ſuit; as in the caſe of an executrix: And the reaſon of the difference between the common law and the civil law is this, that in the ſpiritual court, the huſband, though not named, may come for his own intereſt, and make defence himſelf, ſhould the wife deſert the cauſe.

Whether therefore the huſband muſt be joined, muſt be determined by the ſpiritual law, and may be a good cauſe for an appeal, but can be none for a prohibition.

Whether the fees may be ſued for in the ſpiritual court, is a matter much doubted, and there are reſolutions both ways.

Eyre, Juſtice. There is no ſuing in the court of admiralty, or court of honour for fees. In the caſe of Donvill v. Oldiſh, a prohibition was granted by all the judges of England.

Pratt, Juſtice. I ſee no reaſon why fees in the ſpiritual court may not be recovered at common law as well as fees in Chancery. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 261.

Hilary, 2 Geo. Strong v. Howe.

The defendant, who was an attorney, had deeds delivered to him by the plaintiff, and gave a note under his hand to deliver them ſafe, whole, and uncancelled, to the plaintiff, on demand; which not being done, the plaintiff moved for an attachment againſt him, and obtained a rule for the defendant to ſhew cauſe, why the ſame ſhould not iſſue.

Afterwards it was ſhewed for cauſe, that theſe deeds were delivered to the defendant, by the order of his (the plaintiff's) brother, to be laid before council, for his opinion, and did not come to his poſſeſſion, as he was an attorney, in the way of his buſineſs; and that he delivered the deeds to the council, who delivered them to a perſon who lent his brother 200 l. on a mortgage of his eſtate, ſo that he (the defendant) could not have them back again; and therefore the court will not grant an attachment for not returning them, when it is impoſſible it ſhould be done, eſpecially ſince if the plaintiff has any right to the deeds he may recover them on an action of trover, or by a bill in equity.

It is an eſtabliſhed rule of this court, that wherever deeds or writings come to an attorney, in the way of his buſineſs, to compel him to re-deliver them to the perſon of whom he received them; for as he is intruſted with them, the court will compel him to execute the truſt, he being ſubject to the juſtice of this court; and it is not material whether he is an attorney of this court, or not, if he practiſes therein; and the other courts have the ſame power over the attornies of this court; and they have gone ſo far, as to compel a council to deliver up the writings intruſted with him.

As to ſuing for them, it would be very inconvenient to put the deliverer to a ſuit, either at law, or in equity; for he may not be able to defend his poſſeſſion, for want of them. Therefore the rule was made abſolute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 340.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. Lawſon v. Dickenſon.

The plaintiff had an eſtate mortgaged to him, and the defendant, who was an attorney, and who drew the mortgage, had by that means got all the deeds relating to the title into his poſſeſſion, and now refuſed to deliver them to the plaintiff, unleſs the mortgagor would pay a debt due from him, as the defendant pretended.

And now, on a motion for a rule to deliver the deeds to the plaintiff, for that he, the defendant, made the mortgage, and therefore ſhall not be allowed any money due to him from the mortgagor, before or after the mortgage, but that he ſhould deliver up the deeds, on payment of what is due for drawing and engroſſing them:

The court was of opinion, that an attorney may detain papers till the money is paid for drawing them; but that he cannot detain any writings which are delivered to him on a ſpecial truſt, for the money due to him in that very buſineſs; therefore a rule was made for the defendant to deliver thoſe deeds to the plaintiff.

The like rule was made in a caſe, Hooper v. Howard, this term, that an attorney ſhould deliver ſeveral deeds of lands, which he received for a certain purpoſe, and would have kept them, becauſe he pretended his client had a mortgage on thoſe lands, and the rule was, that he ſhould deliver them by ſuch a day, or an attachment ſhould go againſt him, and accordingly he delivered them upon the day, but was ordered to pay coſts, and ſuch damages to the party, as the maſter ſhould think reaſonable, for what the plaintiff had ſuſtained for want of the deeds, becauſe it appeared that the defendant had received the profits, and kept the plaintiff out of poſſeſſion by this means.

And in the caſe of Geary v. Faſhion, a rule was granted for an attachment againſt the defendant, for not delivering deeds to the plaintiff; and the like rule in the caſe of Strong v. Howe, for not delivering deeds given to him, in order to borrow money on them. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 307.

Hilary, 4 Geo. Forſter v. Cale.

In aſſumpſit, the defendant pleads in abatement, that he is an attorney of this court, and that he ought to be ſued as a privileged perſon. The plaintiff replies, that he is not an attorney, and concludes to the country; to which the defendant demurs. The plaintiff's council urged, that he ought to have concluded to the record. Raſt. Ent. 610 b. Aſton 347. Thompſon 4. 2 Mod. Caſ. 106.

The defendant's council argued, that thoſe entries were where the privilege of C. B. was pleaded, which differs from this court, for there is a regular record kept of the attornies, and they muſt be forejudged before they can be arreſted; whereas here, the remedy againſt the attornies is ſpeedier than againſt other perſons, for the firſt proceeding is a bill left in the office, and after a rule to plead, the plaintiff may ſign his judgment.

The court inquired of the ſecondary, who informed them, that anciently there were rolls kept of the attornies; but ſince the ſtamp-act, that method has been diſuſed, and a book ſtamped, and the names entered in that. And the plaintiff's council ſaid, that on the trial of the aſſize for the office of chief clerk, the rolls from Edward 3. were produced.

Per curiam. The book which is now kept muſt be taken as minutes, in order to make up the record, and it is a warrant to the proper officer for that purpoſe, and whenever they are wanted, they may be made up. Let that be done regularly for the future. In this caſe, the plaintiff ſhould have concluded to the record, for no man can be an attorney, but by the act of the court, and that act muſt appear by the record, for we will not go to a jury, to inquire into our own act. When an attorney is ſtruck out, the rule is, let him be ſtruck out of the roll of attornies and clerks of this court. Judgment that the bill be quaſhed. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 76.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Stratton v. Burgis.

Per curiam. He is obliged to do it in a proper manner, and having entered ſuch appearanc by attorney, when it ſhould have been by guardian, it may be amended. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 114.

Hilary, 7 Geo. Wiar v. Smith.

The plaintiff's attorney ſent the iſſue book to the defendant's attorney, who accepted it, and paid for it; but the plaintiff not going on to trial, the other ſide gave him a rule to enter his iſſue, in order to carry down the cauſe by proviſo. And on an affidavit that the plaintiff's attorney had miſlaid the papers, the court ordered the defendant's attorney to give him a copy of the iſſue, the better to enable him to comply with the rule. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 414.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. Gynn v. Kirby.

The plaintiff's attorney was ſummoned before Forteſcue, Juſtice, to produce his client, and the judge thereon made an order, that unleſs he was produced in a month, the defendant ſhould by conſent be at liberty to ſign a non proſ. He did not produce him, and the non proſ. was ſigned, and on an affidavit that no ſuch man as the plaintiff could be found, the court, on motion, made a rule on the attorney to pay the coſts; and afterwards on an affidavit that they were demanded and unpaid, an attachment was granted againſt him. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 402.

Hilary, 9 Geo. Mr. Dottin's Caſe.

Hacket agreed to aſſign a leaſe to Sutton, who ſent for Dottin an attorney to take the deeds, and peruſe them. Dottin drew an aſſignment, and then Sutton paid him for it, and took back the deeds. And now Hacket moved for a rule on Dottin to deliver him the deeds: but on laying the caſe before the court, they would make no rule on the attorney, it appearing to be a fair tranſaction in delivering back the deeds to his own client. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 547.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Coke v. Allen. Error.

On a writ of error brought in this court on a judgment in the Common Pleas, the error aſſigned was, the not filing a warrant of attorney, as required by the late ſtatute for the amendment of the law, by which it is enacted that the attorney for the plaintiff ſhall file his warrant the ſame term in which he declares, and the attorney for the defendant in the ſame term in which he appears; but this was over-ruled, for if the plaintiff's attorney files the warrant at any time before the defendant has pleaded, it is ſufficient to maintain the judgment, though by the ſaid ſtatute he may be fined, if he does not file it in the term when he declares; but the not filing it in manner as aforeſaid, doth not impeach the judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 77.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Wright v. Maſon.

On a motion for an attachment againſt the defendant, and one Purcell an attorney, for mal-practice, and for oppreſſing the defendant, by threatening to take him up by a warrant of the Chief Juſtice, and by colour thereof getting ſome money from him, and a note under his hand to pay more, for not ſending him to Newgate for a treſpaſs, which they pretended to be done by his wife; a rule was made for them to ſhew cauſe on ſuch a day, why an attachment ſhould not go againſt them; and on that day they appeared, and produced ſeveral affidavits, which were read in court, and by which they denied the charge, but not poſitively and directly; and it appearing by the affidavits, that the fact was done by the wife, there was no colour to procure the warrant of the Chief Juſtice againſt the huſband; and it farther appearing, that the attorney had indorſed the note to another, on purpoſe to load the defendant with an action, he was ordered to ſtand committed, until he ſhould anſwer interrogatories, which were to be filed in four days; and afterwards in anſwer to the interrogatories, he ſwore off all that was charged againſt him, for which he was indicted and convicted of perjury. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 110.

Hilary, 10 Geo. The King v. Pepper.

A rule of this court was made, anno 15 Car. 2. that the plaintiff ſhould ſet forth, in his writ or bill, an ac etiam of the ſum for which he expected the defendant ſhould give bail, and that if he brought a frivolous action to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail, he ſhould be puniſhed.

And now the court was moved for an attachment againſt Pepper, who brought an action with an ac etiam bill, in a great ſum, to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail, where nothing was due, as it appeared before a judge, the plaintiff being ſummoned before him to ſhew his cauſe of action; and this was ſaid to be an abuſe of the proceſs of this court, and conſequently a contempt.

The court held, this was not ſuch a contempt as to iſſue out, or grant, an attachment againſt the plaintiff, but directed, that if the defendant was injured, he might bring his action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 227.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Hawker v. Hinton. Error.

On a writ of error on a judgment in the Common Pleas, the error aſſigned was, a variance between the original and the declaration.

On the other ſide it was ſaid, that the record was right; and on producing it, ſo it was, but it was of another Number Roll.

Then it was objected, that the original was anno 7 Georgii, and the declaration was anno 9, and no continuance entered between the one and the other.

To which it was anſwered, that the continuances might be entered at any time, and that when entered the plaintiff is intitled to his judgment.

The court were of opinion, that the attorney ought to be puniſhed, for making up a ſecond record, but that the plaintiff muſt have his judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 243.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Lord Conningſby v. Steed.

A rule was made, that the coroners of the county of Hereford, and the high bailiff of the franchiſe of Leominſter in the ſaid county, ſhould ſhew cauſe on ſuch a day why an attachment ſhould not iſſue againſt them. The caſe ſtated to the court was as follows:

The defendant Steed, an attorney of this court, and formerly high bailiff of the liberty or franchiſe of Leominſter aforeſaid, at that time entered into a bond of 500 l. for the faithful execution of the ſaid office; but falling under the diſpleaſure of the plaintiff, he brought an action of debt againſt Steed on the ſaid bond, and ſued out a latitat, directed to the ſheriff of that county; to which writ one of the coroners was attorney, and ſolicited the ſheriff for a precept to the high bailiff of the ſaid franchiſe to make a warrant to apprehend the defendant Steed, who having brought his writ of privilege as an attorney of this court, the ſheriff having returned it on the latitat, would make no precept to the high bailiff, &c. whereon the plaintiff brought an alias latitat, directed likewiſe to the ſaid ſheriff, who ſtill refuſed to grant ſuch precept as aforeſaid, becauſe of the privilege of the defendant, which he (the ſheriff) had returned on the firſt latitat; then an original was ſued forth, directed to the coroners, who accordingly made a precept to the high bailiff, (who was privy to all theſe proceedings) and then he iſſued forth his warrant to the under bailiffs, who arreſted the defendant, and ſtill keep him in cuſtody.

And now the court was moved for an attachment againſt the coroners and the high bailiff, and under-bailiffs, for a great oppreſſion, and for an abuſe of the proceſs of this court, under a pretence and colour of juſtice; and a rule being made for them to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not go.

Their council inſiſted, that though it was wrong to ſue out this latitat directed to the coroners, yet they being officers who are to execute the proceſs of this court, are not to diſpute or queſtion whether the writ is iſſued lawfully or not; neither are the high bailiff nor under bailiffs to do any ſuch thing, but all of them are to obey the writ; and if ſo, then the affidavit of the defendant charges them with no crime, but only in obeying the proceſs; which is ſo far from being an offence, that it is probable, if the defendant had brought an action of falſe impriſonment againſt the coroners, and the reſt, &c. they might have juſtified under this writ and warrant.

Per curiam. A writ is never directed to the coroners where the ſheriff (who is the proper officer) ſtands indifferent; and it was admitted on all ſides in this caſe, that the ſheriff was indifferent, ſo that the matter ſeems to be very ſuſpicious againſt the coroners and the high ſheriff, viz. that they were privy to this oppreſſion, therefore the rule was made abſolute as to them, but diſcharged as to the under-bailiffs.

Afterwards, on the laſt day of Hilary term following, one of the coroners was brought up in cuſtody into court, and bailed, the other being bailed before to anſwer on interrogatories the next term.

And accordingly Edwards, one of the ſaid coroners, and Carpenter, the high bailiff, were brought into court; the other coroner, Landen, being in the King's Bench; and Edwards depoſed that he knew nothing of this oppreſſion, or acted therein, otherwiſe than by a general power he gave to the other coroner, Landen, to put his (the ſaid Edwards's) name to all writs that came to him, directed to the coroners, &c. and that he never ſaw this writ.

His council moved that he might be diſcharged; for if one coroner gives the other authority to put his name to a particular writ, that might probably be a contempt to this court, becauſe he might know the nature of ſuch a ſingle writ; but where ſuch a general truſt or power is repoſed in one coroner by another, as to ſet his name to all writs which ſhall come to his hands, there cannot be ſo much as the leaſt ſuſpicion of any contempt.

Per curiam. This general authority muſt be intended to do all legal acts, ſo that if the other coroner to whom it was given abuſes it, ſuch abuſe cannot be a contempt by that coroner who gave the power; therefore this appearing to be the caſe of Edwards, one of the coroners; he was diſcharged.

But Carpenter, the high bailiff, having owned that what he had done, was by order of the plaintiff, and that he did it knowingly, though he did not adviſe the doing of it, being in contempt, was committed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 192.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Brown v. Coombs.

An objection was taken by the plaintiff's council, againſt the bail put in in this cauſe, for that it is againſt the rules of this court, to take an attorney as bail.

Per curiam. It is very true, there is ſuch a rule, but the intention of making it was, that an attorney ſhall not be taken as good bail, merely by his being an attorney; but when he is reſponſible, and juſtifies, and is an houſekeeper, then, though he is an attorney, he ſhall be deemed good bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 339.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Hunſton v. Howard. Error.

The plaintiff had obtained judgment in the court of C. P. which was now of above ten years ſtanding, when the defendant brought a writ of error in this court, and aſſigned the want of an original for error; and now the defendant in error pleaded there is no error; and the want of an original being not yet certified, he moved to put it off till next term, that he might, in the mean time, procure an original to be filed; this being a contrivance of his own attorney to defraud him.

Per curiam. This motion ſhould have been made before the cauſe was put in the paper, but it having the countenance of fraud, it was ruled to go over, on payment of the coſts of the day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 327.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. Lorymer v. Holliſter.

A bailiff who had a writ againſt the defendant, came to one Stapleton, an attorney, and told him, the defendant deſired he would back the writ, and appear for him; and afterwards, on the plaintiff's attorney applying to him, he told him, he had ſent orders to his agent to appear, and he believed he had done it. Whereon the plaintiff's attorney delivered a declaration, and ſigned judgment, for want of a plea.

On a motion to ſet ſuch judgment aſide, it appeared, that the bailiff went of his own accord to Stapleton, without the direction of the defendant, and that Stapleton, diſcovering this, had countermanded the orders for appearing, and that, in fact, there was no appearance entered. But the court refuſed to ſet it aſide, and ſaid, they would oblige Stapleton to file common bail, according to his undertaking, in order to make the proceedings regular, there being no fault in the plaintiff's attorney. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 693.

Trinity, 12 Geo. Frontin v. Small.

In an action of covenant, the plaintiff declares, that by a deed made between her as attorney for James Frontin on the one part, and the defendant on the other part, ſhe demiſed a houſe to the defendant, and that he covenanted to pay the yearly rent of 60 l. to James Frontin, and then aſſigns a breach in non-payment of rent, to the damage of the plaintiff, who was the attorney.

On demurrer the defendant's council objected, that this is a void leaſe, and that no action can be maintained on it, eſpecially by the plaintiff, who was but the attorney, and to whom the rent is not reſerved; neither is it ſo much as a covenant with the plaintiff, but only generally that he covenanted to pay the rent to James Frontin. The power is not purſued by a leaſe in the name of the attorney, for it ought to have been in the name of the principal. 9 Co, 76, 77. Combes caſe is expreſs, "If attornies have power to make leaſes by "indentures for years, they cannot make the indentures in their own names, but in the name of him "who gave the warrant of attorney," and 1 Roll. Abr. 330. 501. Godb. 389. Mo. 71. It is ſaid ſuch leaſes are void. A warrant of attorney in the nature of it, is only giving another power to ſet my name in my abſence, but not to enable him to act as owner of the eſtate.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that the agreement that one ſhall procure an entry and enjoyment, and the other ſhall pay the rent, may be good, though the deed be void, ſo as to paſs an intereſt in the land; and the word demiſit, i. e. he demiſes, is a covenant, on which an action will lie. 4 Co. Noak's caſe. And a leaſe may be good, reſerving rent to a ſtranger, who is no party to the deed, and ſo is 1 Mod. 113.

Per curiam. No doubt but in a good leaſe, the rent may be ſo reſerved, and that demiſit will amount to a covenant; but then that muſt be where the deed is valid, and this is not; and if on the one hand it be void, ſo as to paſs an intereſt in the land, it is but juſt on the other hand that it ſhould be void, as to the reſervation of the rent; eſpecially in this caſe, where the covenant is not with the plaintiff, nor the rent reſerved to her. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 705.

The court was moved, that the defendant being an attorney of C. B. might be diſcharged on common bail, ſuggeſting it to be the practice of C. B. to pay that reſpect to the attornies of B. R. if they are ſued there, and 2 Mod 181. 1 Mod. 10. Salk. 544. were cited.

The council on the other ſide aſſerted, that there was no ſuch practice in C. B. and as to the caſe in 2 Mod. it is ſo far from being an authority for the defendant, that it appears the Common Pleas did not diſcharge him, though arreſted in the Palace Yard, but ſent him up to the King's Bench. And the other two caſes are of attornies of the ſame court, who no doubt are to be diſcharged on common bail.

Per curiam. The defendant muſt find ſpecial bail here, and may plead his privilege in abatement after.

Accordingly he put in bail, and pleaded his privilege; to which the plaintiff demurred, and objected that he had not averred himſelf to be an attorney at the time of filing the bill, but only at the time of pleading, it is before the time of exhibiting the bill fecit anglice, he made, (inſtead of fuit, anglice, he was) and ſtill is one of the attornies of the C. B. and for this fault the court held it ill, and ordered him to anſwer over. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 864.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Weſton v. Pool.

An attorney delivered his bill, and after his death, application was made to tax it, and above a ſixth part was ſtruck off: it was moved that the executrix might pay the coſts: but the court held ſhe ſhould not; for the words of the act 1 Geo. 2. c. 23. affect the attorney or ſolicitor only; and the executrix is not to blame if ſhe ſtands on his bill, or makes out one from his books. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1056.

Ingram, an attorney, employed Waldron in ſeveral quo warranto cauſes in the borough of Eveſham, which were proſecuted and defended by Sir John Ruſhout, and Mr. Rudge, who were Ingram's clients, and bills were delivered by Ingram to them, in which were included the clerk in court's demand, amounting to 292 l. 6 s. ſince which Ingram is dead inſolvent, and his executors inſiſt to receive the whole of Sir John Ruſhout, and Mr. Rudge, and leave the clerk in court to come in as a creditor. On this the court was moved, that Sir John Ruſhout and Mr. Rudge (who admitted to have above 600 l. in their hands of Ingram's bill) might pay the clerk in court his ſhare, as is done every day in Chancery; and the gentlemen ſubmitted to do as the court ſhould direct.

Per curiam. There is no reaſon why we ſhould not take the ſame care of our clerks: the money paid to Waldron will not be aſſets that have come to the hands of the executors, ſo they cannot be prejudiced. A rule was made for their paying to Mr. Waldron 292 l. 6 s. which was his proportion of the bill Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1126.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Frazier's Caſe.

One Frazier an attorney of this court having by colluſion taken a turnkey of the King's Bench priſon for his articled clerk, the articles were cancelled by order of the court, and ordered to remain there. 1 Bur. p. 192.

Michaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. Oppenhein qui tam v. Harriſon.

The proceedings in this cauſe were ſet aſide by the court for irregularity, not having an attorney's name duly ſet thereto. It appearing that though there was an attorney's name put to the proceedings, the ſame was ſet without his conſent or concurrence. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 20.

Michaelmas, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. Fielding, Eſq;.

On ſhewing cauſe why an information ſhould not be granted againſt John Fielding, Eſq; for a miſdemeanor in his office of juſtice, the complaint appeared frivolous and vexatious, ſo that the juſtice ought to have coſts, the queſtion with the court was, who would pay ſuch coſts.

The complaint being grounded on a joint affidavit made by the proſecutor and his attorney, and it appearing to the court by affidavit, that the attorney had declared, that if it ſhould coſt him 100 l. he would lay the juſtice by the heels.

Per curiam. We are clear and unanimous that the attorney ought to pay the coſts of this motion jointly with his client, becauſe he not only appeared as proſecutor by joining in the original affidavit of complaint, but had expreſsly declared, that if it coſt him 100 l. he would lay the juſtice by the heels. Therefore let the rule be diſcharged, with coſts to be paid by the proſecutor and his attorney. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 654.

On a ſubpœna out of the Crown Office being ſerved on the ſaid Dixon with a duces tecum, i. e. bring with you, certain papers, in order to his giving evidence before the grand jury of the county of Northampton, and to produce vouchers which had been produced, and inſiſted on by one Pearch, his client, before a maſter in Chancery.

Dixon did not appear before the grand jury in obedience to this ſubpœna, on which the proſecutor moved for an attachment againſt the ſaid Dixon.

Per curiam. We are clearly of opinion, that Dixon, inſtead of producing the papers againſt his client. ought to have immediately delivered up the papers to his client on receiving ſuch ſubpœna. Therefore let the rule be diſcharged with coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1688.

The queſtion was, whether the Court of Conſcience in London, the old city court, not under the new acts, can proceed againſt an attorney, after being ſerved with a writ of privilege.

The court held the writ of privilege would not lie.

Attornment.

Hilary, 5 W. 3. Quarn v. Rowe.

A tenant in tail made a leaſe to W. R. to commence five years after, but in the mean time levied a fine to L. R. to the uſe of the conuſee and his heirs; afterwards the leſſee entered by virtue of this fine, and the conuſee brought an action of debt againſt him for arrears of rent, reſerved on the ſaid leaſe; and on a demurrer to the declaration it was objected, that it was ill, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth any attornment, and he being in by the common law, and not by the ſtatute of uſes, an attornment is neceſſary to create a privity, and to ſupport this action: but this objection was not allowed, becauſe the leſſee having only an intereſt of the term, at the time the fine was levied, could not attorn; and the reverſion on his term paſſed at that time as included in the poſſeſſion.

W. R. made a leaſe to B. for fifty years, and afterwards granted his reverſion to R. B. aſſigned the term to R. before any attornment, and before he had notice of the grant of the reverſion.

Adjudged, that the whole eſtate is veſted in R. immediately, and that term is extinguiſhed; for in this caſe there is no body to attorn, and therefore the law veſts all in R. without any attornment.

The leſſor granted the reverſion to another, and afterwards brought an action of debt for the rent; the leſſee pleaded that he had granted away the reverſion, but did not ſet forth that he attorned; adjudged, that this plea of itſelf amounted to an attornment. 1 Vent. 248.

2 Cro. 87. Adjudged, that an attornment to part is good for the whole, for it ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt him; and he having only a power to aſſent, he cannot divide or apportion the thing granted. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 52.

A. makes a leaſe for years to B. reſerving rent, and afterwards leaſes the ſame premiſes to C. rendering rent: A. levies a fine to the conuſee and his heirs, to the uſe of the conuſee and his heirs; the firſt leaſe expires, the ſecond leſſee enters, and the conuſee brings debt againſt the ſecond leſſee for rent in arrear; on demurrer, it was objected on the part of the defendant, that here was no attornment of the ſecond leſſee alledged, and that it ought to be in this caſe, becauſe the plaintiff came in by the common law, and not by the ſtatute of uſes, which was allowed: it was obſerved, that the plaintiff could not without attornment have maintained an action againſt the firſt leſſee, which the court allowed; but held there was a plain difference between the firſt leſſee and the ſecond: at the time of the fine, the reverſion was expectant on the firſt leaſe, notwithſtanding the grant of the ſecond leaſe; for that continued only an intereſſe termini, and did not alter the reverſion, which remained entirely expectant on the firſt leaſe, as it was before; therefore the fine paſſed but one reverſion, and that expectant on one particular eſtate, and conſequently there could be but one attornment, viz. from the firſt leſſee, and not from the ſecond. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 90.

This is the ſame caſe as the former, differently reported.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Hudſon v. Jones.

In an action of replevin the avowant made out his title by a grant of a reverſion expectant on an eſtate for life to the plaintiff, unto which reverſion there was a rent incident, to which conceſſion the plaintiff (being particular tenant) did attorn: the plaintiff pleaded, that he did not agree in manner and form; and the queſtion on the trial was, Whether the want of attornment might be given in evidence upon this iſſue? and being made a point for the reſolution of the whole court, it was urged for the plaintiff, that on non conceſſit the operation and effect of the grant is put in iſſue, and a deed, if it be ineffectual, is void: if the grantee dies before attornment, it can never be made good; if a ſecond grant be made, and attornment obtained to that, the firſt grant is avoided. That he did not enfeoff, livery muſt be proved; by which, &c.

On the other ſide it was argued, that in pleading a grant of a reverſion, an attornment is always alledged, but not of a feoffment: and if a feoffment be of a manor, it is neither neceſſary to alledge a livery nor an attornment, becauſe it is an entire thing, and the tenants are ſuppoſed to be numerous; yet if the feoffee avow on any particular tenant for rent, &c. he muſt ſhew attornment. Yelv. 135. Alſo in pleading a grant of a reverſion, the plaintiff muſt alledge a venue for the attornment, which ſhews it was traverſable, and that which is traverſable, and not traverſed, is admitted. To this opinion the court inclined; but held, that on nothing paſſed by the deed, want of attornment might be given in evidence, becauſe the operation of the deed is put in iſſue; and livery differs, for that is the act of the feoffor to complete his feoffment, but this is the act of another, and nothing farther remains on the part of the grantor.

The court afterwards held, that an attornment need not be given in evidence on he has not granted, though it muſt be pleaded, and though it muſt be pleaded, yet it need not be pleaded with a venue, but ſhall be tried where the land lies, on which it is ſuppoſed to be made, as a ſurrender is, and the reaſon given was, becauſe it is traverſable, and whatever is traverſable and not traverſed, is admitted, and the grant is perfect as far as the grantor can perfect it. Hilary, 4 Geo. Vandeput v. Lord.

In covenant brought by the plaintiff, as aſſignee of an executor of an aſſignee, who by meſne aſſignments came to the poſſeſſion of a reverſion of a term of years, granted in 1624, by the mercer's company, reſerving rent; and ſets forth the leaſe by them made; that the leſſee made an under leaſe for a leſſer term, wherein the leſſee covenanted to leave the premiſes in repair, and that then the firſt leſſee granted the reverſion to A. who granted it over till it came to the plaintiff, who, as aſſignee of that reverſion, brings covenant againſt the defendant, as aſſignee of the ſecond leſſee, the under-leaſe being expired, and aſſigns for breach the not leaving the premiſes in repair. Judgment by default, &c.

The defendant council moved in arreſt of judgment, for that the plaintiff had not ſhewn a good title to the reverſion, there being no attornment ſet forth on the firſt grant to A. nor on any of the meſne aſſignments. And he put the queſtion, and argued on it, whether when a tenant for years makes an under-leaſe for a leſſer term, and afterwards grants the reverſion, it paſſes without attornment, for this caſe muſt be conſidered as at common law, the grant being made long before the late ſtatute, in Bro. Abr. tit. attornment, pl. 45. it is ſaid, that ſuch a reverſion will not paſs without attornment, becauſe of the attendancy of the rent, which is the preſent caſe. If the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 34. be objected, the anſwer is, that the ſtatute only gives a compleat aſſignee the action, and has no operation ſo as to make good his title. 1 Inſt. 215. a. A grantee by fine cannot bring covenant without attornment, a fortiori a grantee cannot by deed.

The plaintiff's council urged that the caſe in Bro. was before 32 H. 8. ſo that what was neceſſary at common law is not ſo ſince that ſtatute. I agree attornment is neceſſary on a fine, but why? Becauſe the conuzee could compel it, by a what right does he claim, which the grantee of this reverſion cannot. In the caſe of Sands v. Brookes, Mich. 5 W. & M. it was held, that the grantee of a reverſion of a copyhold, without attornment, might maintain covenant againſt the leſſee. Stat. 32 H. 8. was made to aſſiſt ſtrangers to deeds, and therefore ſupplies all circumſtances.

But further, this is a judgment by default, and aided by the ſtatute for the amendment of the law, which extends all the ſtatutes of jeofailes to judgments by default, in the ſame manner as if there had been a verdict; and nobody can ſay, but that in this caſe a verdict would have cured the want of ſetting out an attornment.

It was replied, the caſe of a grantee of a copyhold doth not come up to this, for copyholders do not claim by deed, but by cuſtom, and therefore no attornment is neceſſary, as it was before the late ſtatute on common law conveyances, which is the preſent caſe. I agree, a verdict would have cured this defect, becauſe the plaintiff could not have had a verdict, unleſs he had proved an attornment; but as this is a judgment by default, and was not a jeofaile before ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. that ſtatute can have no relation to this.

Chief Juſtice. The reaſon why the plaintiff is required to ſet out an attornment is, becauſe his title is not compleat without it, as a copyholder's is. Stat. 23 H. 8. gives none but an aſſignee this action; it does not enable him to be aſſignee, but only as ſuch to bring an action. To which Powys, Juſtice, agreed.

Eyre, Juſtice. Statute 32 Henry 8. is out of the caſe; for as the plaintiff is not a compleat aſſignee, we muſt take it as it ſtood at common law, and ſuch a grantee of the reverſion as the plaintiff is, at common law could not maintain an action of covenant. Jones, Sir W. 243. Jones, Sir Tho. 217. 232. Moor 527. This was not a jeofaile, ſo not helped by 4 & 5 Ann.

Pratt, Juſtice, ſaid, that the queſtion was no more, than whether the ſtat. 32 H. 8. gives the action to him who has not the reverſion, for without attornment it paſſed not. For theſe reaſons the judgment was arreſted. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 78.

Trinity, 4 Geo. Long v. Buckeridge:

In an action of replevin, for taking the plaintiff's goods aud chattels, in the pariſh of St. Botolph Aldgate, in his ſhop there, the defendant avowed the taking by diſtreſs, for a fee-farm rent; and ſays, that K. James 1. by letters patent, dated 24th May, in the 7th year of his reign, gave and granted the premiſes, (among others) to the grantees therein named; to hold to them and their heirs for ever, held of him and his ſucceſſors, as of his manor of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty, only in free and common ſocage, and not in capite, or by Knight's ſervice; yielding to the King, and his ſucceſſors, the yearly rent of 22 l. in lieu of all rents, ſervices, and demands, iſſuing out of the premiſes. The King being ſo ſeiſed of this rent, in right of his crown, by letters patent, dated 19th January, in the 9th year of his reign, gave the ſaid rent and ſervices to L. W. and H. P. and their heirs; that H. P. died, and W. ſurvived, and was ſolely ſeiſed, and made his will; from whence, and from a great many meſne conveyances, the avowant brings down a title to himſelf; and then goes on, and ſays, that he was ſeiſed in fee of this rent; and avows the taking for arrears; and prays judgment, and a return. To this the plaintiff demurred, and the avowant joined in demurrer.

Whether the avowry is ill, for want of alledging an attornment of the terre-tenant, on the fine levied of the rent in queſtion, by J. B. and his wife, to W. B. under a deviſe, from whom the avowant claims.

On hearing council for the plaintiff and defendant, the court gave judgment.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. This caſe is now reduced to a ſingle point; whether it is neceſſary for the avowant to ſet out an attornment on the fine to W. B. under a deviſe, from whom he claims, we are all of opinion, that for this fault the avowry is ill, and that the conuſee was in at common law. The fine is a common law conveyance, by which both the legal eſtate, and the uſe, would have paſſed to the conuſee, without any declaration of uſes, according to the doctrine in the caſe of Lord Angleſea v. Altham; and therefore the uſes need not have been averred. If it had been to the uſe of a third perſon, they muſt have been averred, in order to controul the general operation which the fine would otherwiſe have had. The conuſee did not want the help of the ſtatute, and therefore it meddles not with him, but leaves him in at common law. 2 Roll. Abr. 780. pl. 3. 2 And. 15. Salk. 90. Co. Lit. 309 b.

Since the conuſee is in at common law, it is not diſputed but that an attornment was neceſſary, to enable him to diſtrain; but the avowant ſays, he is in the caſe of a deviſee, and that on a deviſe no attornment is neceſſary. This is true, that generally a deviſee ſhall diſtrain without attornment, but then his deviſor muſt have been enabled. If he had not that power, he could not transfer it, according to the maxim laid down in Sir Moyle Finche's caſe; no one can transfer a greater right to another than he has in himſelf. This maxim holds in all ſciences; for example, a bargainee has no more privilege than his bargainor; and, of the two, he is to be favoured before the deviſee. 5 Co. 113.

We think it neceſſary that an attornment ſhould be ſet out, and we are of opinion that no attornment appears on the record. The conuſee was ſeiſed, and the tenant charged by the fine only, but that paſſed no power to diſtrain. If this had been by deed, an argument might have been drawn from theſe words, becauſe there nothing could have paſſed before attornment. We are likewiſe of opinion that this is a matter of ſubſtance, and ſo the avowry is ill on a general demurrer.

The defendant's council prayed to diſcontinue the ſuit, becauſe the avowant is an actor in the ſuit

Per curiam. This is the plaintiff's ſuit, and how can one man diſcontinue another's ſuit? Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 106.

Averment.

Michaelmas, 1 W. 3. Matthews v. Carey.

In treſpaſs for taking a diſtreſs, the defendant juſtified, under a preſentment in the leet, for an offence, &c. and did not aver in his plea, that the offence was com- mitted; and on a demurrer it was adjudged, that he need not make ſuch an averment, becauſe as to him it is not material whether the offence was actually committed, or not, it is ſufficient that the jury had preſented it; and as to this matter, the court diſtinguiſhed between a replevin and a treſpaſs, for in the firſt caſe the bailiff is an actor, and muſt recover on the merits of the cauſe, but in treſpaſs he is only to excuſe the wrong alledged againſt him; but the plea was adjudged ill on another point.

Adjudged, that negative pleas ought not to be averred, becauſe a negative cannot be proved; but affirmative pleas muſt be averred, with, and this he is ready to verify.

But now the want of paratus eſt verificare i. e. he is ready to verify, or prout patet per recordum is aided by the ſtatute 16 Car. 2. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 53.

In an ejectment brought by the heir at law againſt the deviſee, it appeared from the evidence given, that the defendants were Roman Catholics, and that one of them recommended a prieſt to be confeſſor to the teſtatrix, who perſuaded her ſhe could not be ſaved, unleſs ſhe deviſed her eſtate to God and his Saints; and that one of the defendants was an abbeſs in France, and joining with the confeſſor in the ſame deluſive perſuaſions, prevailed on the teſtatrix to deviſe her eſtate to her; and this was urged to be evidence of a ſuperſtitious uſe.

Per curiam. This being an abſolute deviſe, and no truſt declared, or appearing on the face of the will itſelf, no ſuch averment could be made or admitted, for if the law will not allow an averment to ſupply a will, a fortiori, there can be none to defeat it.

And Chief Juſtice Holt ſaid, ſtat. 23. H. 8. makes uſes void, but does not give them to the King, and ſtat. 1. Ed. 6. gives them to the King, but does not extend to future uſes made after that ſtatute; and that it might not be improper for the heir at law to apply to parliament for a remedy, agreeable to the caſe in Moor 784. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 335.

Holt, C. J. In treſpaſs, aſſault, and battery, if the defendant in his plea varies from the time alledged, he muſt aver that it is the ſame treſpaſs; but where he agrees in the time, he need not. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 48.

Trinity, 6 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Knollys.

The defendant was indicted at Hicks's Hall by the name of Charles Knollys, Eſq; for the murder of Captain Lawſon, which indictment he removed by certiorari into this court, and there pleaded a miſnomer in abatement, viz. that William Knollys, Viſcount Wallingford, by letters patent, bearing date the 18th of Auguſt, 2 Car. 1. was created Earl of Banbury, to hold the dignity to him and the heirs male of his body, lawfully begotten, &c. that William had iſſue Nicholas, who ſucceeded William in the dignity, from whom the ſame deſcended on the defendant, as ſon and heir to Nicholas, and this he is ready to verify.

The Attorney General, replied to this plea, that the defendant on the 13th of December, 4 W. & Mary, preferred a petition to the houſe of peers, that he might be tried by his peers, and after long conſideration the houſe diſmiſſed the ſame according to the law of parliaments, and diſallowed his peerage; and made an order that the defendant ſhould be tried by the courſe of the common law, &c. To this replication the defendant demurred, and the Attorney General joined in demurrer; and after many ſolemn arguments, the court gave their opinion unanimouſly for the defendant.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There are two queſtions ariſe in this caſe.

1ſt. If the plea be good.

2d. Suppoſing it to be ſo, if the replication confeſſes and avoids the plea.

To the plea, the council for the King have taken three exceptions.

1ſt. It does not appear that Banbury is in England.

2dly. That Mr. Knollys ought to have averred that he is one of the peers of England, for it may be that he is Earl of Ireland or Scotland, and then he has not any title to be tried by the Lords in this realm.

3dly. That he ought to have concluded his plea with prout patet per recordum, or ought to have produced a writ to certify that he was Earl of Banbury, F. N. B. 247. b. Reg. Orig. 287. 1 Cro. 205. Lord Savil's caſe, baron or not baron being triable by record, 22*d. Aſſize*, 24 Br. Aſſize 240.

As to the ſecond objection, that the defendant ought to have averred, that he is one of the peers of England, he anſwered, that what is apparent has no need to be averred, but that he is an Earl appears by the letters patent, which he has produced, and then that he muſt be of England, is ſufficiently demonſtrated by what goes before, beſides, that he does not plead this plea here to make a right or title to the Earldom of Banbury, but only by way of miſnomer in abatement of the indictment, and that miſnomer is a good plea. See 2 Inſt. 595. If a Knight be indicted by the name of Eſquire, the indictment ſhall abate. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 10.

In an action of debt brought againſt the Marſhal for the eſcape of J. S. the plaintiff, in his declaration, ſhewed his recovery, and that J. S. was brought up by habeas corpus before Mr. J. Gregory, and was by him committed in execution to the Marſhalſea; but does not ſay, as appears by the record of the commitment. To this declaration, the defendant demurred generally; and the plaintiff's council argued, that this omiſſion was only matter of form, and therefore aided by the general demurrer. See 1 Sid. 216. Middleton v. The bail of Silveſter; for it is only inducement to the action, and not the foundation of it.

Per curiam. When the record is the ground of the plaintiff's action, he ought to conclude as appears by the record; but in this caſe the eſcape is the foundation of the action, and although the commitment is not diſtinctly put in iſſue, yet it may be found on the general iſſue, and the defendant is not eſtopped by this record; but he may aver that J. S. was not in priſon notwithſtanding that, and the plaintiff ought to prove him an actual priſoner. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 35.

Holt, C. J. Debt, with an averment in the declaration, differs from the conditionof a bond; for the plaintiff here muſt fully intitle himſelf to an action, but the condition of a bond goes only in defeaſance, and muſt come on the part of the defendant. And here the plaintiff does not intitle himſelf to any action, for he has no cauſe of action, unleſs the 105 l. as well as the value, were unpaid.

Where foreign coin itſelf is demanded, the action is in the detinet; but if the value be demanded, it is in the debet and detinet; and the averment always is, that the defendant hath neither rendered the foreign coin, nor the value. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 80.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Lockey v. Darbey.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt on a bond againſt the defendant. On the defendant's craving oyer of ſuch bond, the condition appeared to be, that if the defendant ſhould ſave the plaintiff harmleſs from all damages that might accrue to him by the executing a writ of execution, that then, &c. the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff did not execute the writ, &c. The plaintiff replied, and offered iſſue thereon: the defendant demurred to his replication.

The defendant's council argued, that the plaintiff's replication was ill, becauſe it has not aſſigned any breach, and therefore he cannot have judgment, and that the plaintiff ſhould have ſhewn in his replication, that ſome action was ſued againſt him for the execution of this writ, or how he was injured by it. But not allowed.

Per curiam. The point in this caſe in iſſue, is a collateral matter, to which the defendant by his plea has inveigled the plaintiff, and therefore he is not obliged to ſhew a breach; for the defendant has admitted that the plaintiff was injured, by offering this plea of a collateral matter; beſides, if the plaintiff had aſſigned a breach on the replication, the defendant could not have traverſed it, becauſe it would be a departure from his bar. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 108.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Odes v. Clerk.

On an action brought for an eſcape, the plaintiff declared, that he ſued out of the court of our Lord the King, and late Lady the Queen, then being at Weſtminſter, a writ of latitat againſt William Hakes, returnable in five weeks of Eaſter before the aforeſaid Lord the King, and Lady the Queen, whereſoever, &c. which writ was directed to the defendant as ſheriff of and that the defendant, by virtue of this writ arreſted the ſaid William Hakes, and permitted him to eſcape, &c. On a judgment by default, and a writ of enquiry executed, the council for the defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff has not ſhewn out of what court the writ of latitat iſſued; for though it is returnable in B. R. yet it might iſſue out of the Common Pleas, and then it would be a void writ. The ſheriff may take advantage of void proceſs, though he cannot take advantage of voidable proceſs: though there is the word latitat, yet that is uſed in the Common Pleas in the teſtatum capias, and capias utlegatum.

Per curiam. There is no writ properly called a writ of latitat but that which iſſues out of the King's Bench: and therefore the court ſeemed clear for the plaintiff; but the matter was adjourned. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 397.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Bringar v. Allanſon.

On a ſci. fac. againſt the defendant as bail, &c. the defendant demurs, and his council took exceptions to the ſci. fac. 1ſt. That it was in this behalf, whereas it ought to be in that behalf.

2d. Exception, That it does not appear in the ſci. fac. where the court was at the time of the judgment, which ought to be ſhewn, becauſe it is an ambulatory court, and if the ſame be not ſhewn, one cannot know to what place one ought to ſend a certiorari. Stat. 7 Hen. 6. 106. 3 Cro. 504. Yelv. 227.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, that he always thought that exception very ſlight, viz. to ſay, that one does not know where the court is, but it has been held a cauſe of demurrer in both the old and new books, but yet it is but form, and therefore ſhould have been ſhewn as cauſe of demurrer. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 532.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Shales v. Seignoret.

In an action of covenant on articles of agreement, the plaintiff declared, that it was covenanted and agreed between him and the defendant, that he, in conſideration of twenty guineas by the defendant to him then paid, ſhould transfer to the defendant, before, or on the 19th of November, 1695, 1000 l. bank ſtock; and that the defendant covenanted with the plaintiff to accept it on three days notice, and to pay to the plaintiff for it 940 l. and then the plaintiff avers, that no bank ſtock is transferable by law, but in the office of the Bank of England, in the preſence of both parties; and that he gave three days notice to the defendant, that he would transfer to him the bank ſtock in the office of the bank the 19th of November, and that he attended there the whole day to have transferred it; but that the defendant did not come to accept it, for which he brings this action for the 940 l. The defendant after oyer of the articles, pleads that the plaintiff nor none of his aſſigns had any intereſt in any bank ſtock on the 18th of November, &c. the plaintiff demurs; and the whole court were of opinion, that the plea was ill, becauſe though the plaintiff had not any bank ſtock on the 18th of November, yet if he had it the 19th, he might have performed the contract within the time, for the covenant was not that he ſhould transfer any particular 1000 l. of bank ſtock which he had at the time of the covenant, but any 1000*l.* of bank ſtock.

Per curiam. This action will not lie for the plaintiff in this caſe, becauſe it appears, that the plaintiff has not transferred, and without transfer to the defendant, the defendant is not bound to pay the money, for the money was to be paid on the transfer, and therefore no transfer no money. Co. Lit. 404. Dyer 371. 2 Mod. 266. Otway v. Holdips.

The matter in the declaration might have been a good excuſe for the plaintiff, if the defendant had ſued him for not transferring the bank ſtock, or the plaintiff might have aſſigned his breach in the non-acceptance of the ſtock by the defendant.

The court obſerved, that it did not appear but that the bank ſtock was transferrable at another place than at the office of the bank, for though the act ſays that no transfer ſhall be, but as the King ſhall appoint, and the King has appointed it to be at the office of the bank, and not in any other place; yet that ought to have been pleaded, or otherwiſe the court cannot take notice of it; and therefore, notwithſtanding any thing that appears to the contrary, the transfer might have been in any other place, and then a tender ought to have been made to the perſon. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 440.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Maſon v. White, Marks, & al.

The plaintiff brought his action againſt the defendant White, an attorney, and the other defendants, for entering up judgment againſt him without his aſſent, or without his being arreſted, or any proceſs ſued out againſt him, and without having made any warrant of attorney to White, on which a fieri fac. iſſued, and his goods were taken, &c. On judgment by default, and a writ of inquiry being executed and returned:

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment.

1ſt. That the declaration is againſt White, one of the attornies of the court of our Lord the King of the Bench here, whereas it ought to be at Weſtminſter; for one cannot underſtand what place here means, and therefore one cannot know what court the plaintiff means. But not allowed.

Per curiam. Of the court of our Lord the King of the Bench, is the Common Pleas, and the judges will take notice that the Common Pleas is at Weſtminſter, and therefore here is at Weſtminſter.

2dly. A ſecond exception was, that the plaintiff has not ſaid who were juſtices of the court, whereas he ought to have mentioned the chief juſtice by name, and his brethren, &c. but not allowed. For though in pleading of a fine they plead that the fine was levied before the Chief Juſtice by name, and his brethren, yet there is no neceſſity here to name the juſtices of the court.

3dly. A third exception was, that it is ſaid in the declaration that the defendants, the 21ſt December, 5 W. & M. procured judgment to be entered, &c. Now the 21ſt December always happens out of term, and the court will take notice of that; but every judgment muſt be entered of ſome day in the term; and alſo that they proſecuted a fieri fac. the 23d December, &c. is out of term.

The plaintiff's council in reply ſaid, that the declaration ſets forth, that they procured the judgment then to be entered as of Michaelmas term before, which is good, and of that opinion was the court; and as to the writ, the plaintiff's council obſerved, that it was, they had cauſed it to iſſue ſuch a day, &c.

The defendant's council ſaid, that that would be taken to be the teſte, and he is included by the teſte, and cannot aver againſt it.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A man cannot aver that a writ is of another teſte than it bears, but he may aver that it did not iſſue at the time alledged. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 485.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Maſon v. March.

In an action of falſe impriſonment, laid to be in the vacation, the defendant pleaded a writ iſſued, teſted in term time, whereby he took the plaintiff.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. He may reply, that though it was teſted in term time, yet he took him in vacation; for where the teſte of a writ is in ſupport of juſtice, no averment ſhall be admitted againſt it; otherwiſe, where it is to juſtify a wrong done. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 53.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Harman v. Owden.

In an action of aſſumpſit, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant, in conſideration of 20 l. paid to him by the plaintiff, aſſumed to deliver to the plaintiff, on or before the 8th of January, forty-five quarters of oatmeal, and ſix hair ſieves, and a fan, out of a ſhip into a barge, to be brought there by the plaintiff for the ſaid purpoſe; and he avers, that on the 8th January he brought there his barge, and the defendant did not deliver on the 8th January, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, 1ſt. That the ſieves being of divers ſorts, the plaintiff ſhould have ſhewn how many of each ſort were to have been delivered.

The plaintiff's council in anſwer urged, that in treſpaſs or trover this might have been a good exception, but not in aſſumpſit, where we ought to declare as the agreement was.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that if the agreement was ſuch, this uncertainty would not vitiate it, but the defendant has his election, how many of each of them he will deliver, ſuppoſe the agreement was to deliver ſix cows and calves, the plaintiff ought to have ſix of each of them; beſides, it does not appear here but that they might be the ſame.

The ſecond exception was to the breach, that it was not well aſſigned, the promiſe being to deliver at or before the 8th January; and the breach aſſigned is, that he did not deliver on the 8th January, ſo that he might have delivered them before, which would have been a good performance of the agreement. But after conſideration had of this exception,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, that the plaintiff ought to have judgment after verdict, but ſaid it would have been good without verdict; for when the promiſe was to deliver the things out of a ſhip into a barge, to be brought by the plaintiff on or before, &c. and the plaintiff ſays only that he did not deliver on the day, and not that he did not deliver before, yet in a caſe ſimilar to this, it will be well enough; for though the defendant has election to deliver before, &c. yet there ought to be a concurrence of the plaintiff, and he ought to be ready to accept them; for the defendant cannot make a tender before the laſt day to oblige the plaintiff to accept them, and if he comes before the laſt day to make a tender, that will not excuſe him from making a tender or delivery of the goods on the laſt day, according to 3 Cro. 14. 73. where a place is appointed for payment of money; for if the plaintiff be not ready there with his barge, the tender will not be ſufficient; and therefore, ſince the laſt day is the time appointed by the law, when the one is obliged to deliver, and the other to receive, it will not be preſumed that the plaintiff was there before with his barge ready to receive them; but however, it is aided by the verdict, for if there had been an actual delivery, the jury could not have found for the plaintiff, for at this time performance is given in evidence on non aſſumpſit, and if the defendant had delivered the goods, it had been non aſſumpſit; and therefore no delivery being proved, the court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 620.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Mitchell v. Broughton.

In aſſumpſit on a ſpecial promiſe to transfer ſtock in —— the plaintiff declared on an agreement in writing, by which the defendant agreed, in 1692, in conſideration of   to transfer a certain quantity of ſtock to the plaintiff or order on requeſt; and he ſhewed a requeſt, &c. and averred that the plaintiff had not transferred. The defendant pleaded the ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 32. againſt ſtock-jobbing. The plaintiff demurred; and it was inſiſted that this contract was within the ſaid act, becauſe it may be, the transfer was not to be made before the   day of Holt, Chief Juſtice. The ſaid act ſhall be taken ſtrictly, becauſe it deſtroys bargains; and therefore, if the requeſt was before the ſaid day it is well enough. A ſecond exception was taken to the declaration, becauſe the plaintiff had not averred that the defendant had not paid   to the plaintiff's order.

Per curiam. That ought to come of the other ſide, if payment was made to the order of the plaintiff. Judgment niſi, &c. for the plaintiff. See the caſe of Smith v. Weſtall. Raym. vol. 1. 316. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 673.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Berty v. Dormer.

On an iſſue directed out of Chancery, whether land aſſigned for payment of a legacy, were deficient in value; iſſue was joined on the deficiency, the one alledging it was deficient, and the other that it was not,

Per curiam. Though averring that it was deficient is ſuch an affirmative as implies a negative, yet it is ſuch an affirmative as turns the proof on thoſe that plead it; if he had joined the iſſue, that the lands were not of the value, and the other had averred that they were; the proof then had lain on the other ſide. If a perſon pleads under age, which is no more than that he is not of age, and iſſue is taken thereon, he that pleads muſt prove it.

Per Holt. The common way of apraiſing tithe herbage, is two ſhillings in twenty: and if a perſon deviſes land to the value of 100 l. a year to another, it is, at firſt ſight, the beſt rule of valuation, to eſtimate them at the value they were of at the death of the deviſor. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 526.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Spenceley v. Hutton.

In eſcape againſt the defendant Marſhal, of this court, for the eſcape of W. &c. on not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff obtained a verdict. On the trial it was proved, that W. was a priſoner in the Marſhalſea of this court, and that a committitur was entered on the roll. The defendant's council objected, that though ſuch committitur entered on the roll is all the record made of ſuch commitment by the court, yet, by the practice of the court, the plaintiff who recovers, &c. ought to make ſuch entry in the Marſhal's book, kept for that purpoſe; and that the Marſhal keeps a clerk to make ſuch entries; and the intent of it is, that the Marſhal ſhall have notice of ſuch commitments, and that without that he ſhall not be chargeable in eſcapes. For though a committitur be entered on the roll, yet, perhaps the Marſhal has no notice of it, and it is unreaſonable that he ſhould be liable for an eſcape, without notice that the error was committed in execution. The like practice in a caſe of redditit ſe in diſcharge of bail; for though the redditit ſe is entered on parchment, and filed with the proper officer, yet ſuch entry is made alſo in the Marſhal's book, to the end that he may have notice of it. Now, in this caſe, no ſuch entry was made in the Marſhal's book, and therefore he is not chargeable in eſcape. But Holt, Chief Juſtice, before whom this cauſe was tried at Guildhall, held the entry of the committitur upon the roll, &c. as aforeſaid, to be good evidence. And a verdict was given for the plaintiff; but he gave leave to the defendant to move it in the court of King's Bench; and he afterwards moved to ſet aſide the verdict for the above reaſon, when the motion was denied.

Per curiam. Trials ſhall not be ſet aſide becauſe the defendant might have prevented it before the trial, as in this caſe he might have moved the court; and it ſeems to be a trick to keep it in ſecret to ſet aſide a verdict, if it were not according to the defendant's wiſh. But if the defendant had intended to act rightly, he ſhould have given notice to the plaintiff of this irregularity, but it will not ſet aſide the verdict when the plaintiff has proved all his declaration. Accordingly, the plaintiff had his judgment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 704.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Ingledew v. Cripps, or Grips v. Ingledew.

In an action of debt, the plaintiff declared on a bill penal, ſealed and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, reciting, that whereas the plaintiff had agreed with the defendant to ſell him ſo many ſtacks of wood, the defendant, for that, covenanted to pay to the plaintiff 35 l. for every hundred of the ſaid ſtacks, and bound himſelf, in the penalty of 100 l. to do it: then the plaintiff ſhews, that there were ſo many ſtacks, &c. and brings his action for 310 l. &c. as the total amount of all the ſaid ſtacks. The defendant demurred to the plaintiff's declaration, and his council made the following exceptions.

1ſt. That ſince there is a penalty of 100 l. in the bill, the plaintiff cannot have an action for more than the 100 l. But not allowed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff has his election to ſue for the penalty, or for the rate agreed, although it be more than the penalty; and he may ſue for the 310 l. &c. for the wood, and for the 100 l. penalty alſo; for this penalty was only inſerted to enforce the payment for the wood; and it cannot be intended, that if the plaintiff ſold wood to the value of 1000 l. he ſhould be contented with the penalty only.

2d Exception. Admitting that the plaintiff might ſue for the wood ſold, yet he ought to have covenant, and not an action of debt, becauſe the duty was not certain; for the agreement is, to pay ſo much money for every hundred ſtacks that ſhould be in ſuch a place, and it is altogether uncertain how many hundred ſtacks were there. But not allowed.

Per curiam. The plaintiff may have debt or covenant, at his election; for the rate being certain, viz. 35 l. for every hundred ſtacks of wood, when the defendant has the wood the agreement becomes certain, for which an action of debt lies.

3d Exception. That the plaintiff has demanded more than appears by his own ſhewing could be demanded; becauſe he demands ſo much for fifty ſtacks, and the agreement is only that the plaintiff ſhould be paid for every hundred ſtacks. It would have been otherwiſe, if the agreement had been that the defendant ſhould pay according to the rate of 35 l. for every hundred, &c. Allen 9. Stile 12. Needler v. Gueſt. 2 Lev. 124. Rea. v. Burnis, which is in point.

The plaintiff's council argued, that this covenant or agreement ought to be conſtrued according to the intent of the makers of it, and it could not be imagined that the plaintiff intended to give fifty ſtacks of wood for nothing; and he cited 1 Lev. 140. Keyme v. Goulſton. But not allowed.

Per curiam. The agreement is only for every hundred, and ſince it is not ſaid, according to the rate, the plaintiff cannot recover any thing for it by this agreement.

4th Exception. That the agreement is, that the defendant ſhall have liberty to take the wood in ſuch a place, and he ſhall pay 35 l. for every hundred ſtacks, on tale; and the plaintiff has not averred that the defendant had all the hundred ſtacks for which this action is brought, but the plaintiff has only averred, that they were all at the place, &c. at the time of the articles made. Now, 1ſt, It was neceſſary to aver, that the defendant had the ſtacks, &c. becauſe, otherwiſe, the defendant is not obliged to pay for them; for the agreement is, to pay for, &c. which is a condition precedent, which muſt be performed before the plaintiff can be entitled to his action. Stat. 15 H. 7. cap. 10. 1 Lev. 70.

2dly, The plaintiff ought to do the firſt act, viz. to tell them; for the payment is to be made for every hundred ſtacks on tale. But not allowed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There is no condition precedent, nor firſt act, to be done or performed by the plaintiff, for he has ſold all his intereſt in this wood, and the defendant may and ought to tell it.

The plaintiff's council moved the court, for leave to enter a remittit for the 17 l. 10 s. demanded more than ought to be, for the fifty ſtacks, and that he might have his judgment for the reſidue.

A day being given by the court to argue this matter, the defendant's council urged, that the plaintiff, in this caſe, could not enter a remittit, for the difference is, where the demand is intire, and where ſeveral; where the demand is ſeveral, and a part is well demanded, and part ill, the plaintiff might have judgment for that which is well demanded, and may be barred for the reſidue; as in Hob. 178. Andrews v. De la Hay, in an action of debt, on ſeveral bonds, one of which was not payable at the time of the action brought, yet the plaintiff ſhall have judgment on the reſt; but where the demand is entire, an abridgment of it cannot be, neither can the plaintiff have judgment for part.

The plaintiff's council argued, that a remittit may be entered for the 17 l. 10 s. &c. and that the plaintiff ſhall have judgment for the reſt; for where the money is certain and entire on the face of the contract, the demand of more than is due is ill, and cannot be aided by the entry of a remittit; but where the money recoverable is compoſed of ſeveral parcels, there, if the plaintiff demands more than is due, he may enter a remittit for the overplus; for there he ought to recover that which he can prove to be due, and not according to his demand; and therefore the plaintiff may as well waive that which is not due, by the entry of a remitit, as the jury may, it not being proved at the trial; and cited Cro. Jac. 498, 529. 1 Saund. 206. and the caſe of Thwaites v. Lady Aſhfield. In debt, for rent, the plaintiff declared as aſſignee, by virtue of a decree made by the commiſſioners, at Clifford's Inn, for the determination of differences about the fire of London; and the plaintiff demanded 8 l. more than was due, as appeared by his declaration. The defendant pleaded, nul tiel record; which being for the plaintiff, the defendant brought a writ of error, and moved the court, that the plaintiff ſhould not enter his judgment, without leave of the court, and a rule was made accordingly: and afterwards a motion was made, to ſet aſide that rule, and that the plaintiff might have leave to enter a remittit for the 8 l. and have judgment for the reſt; and the caſe of Barber v. Pomeroy, 1 Roll. Abr. 785. Stile 175. was cited, as a caſe in point; and though it is ſaid, in 1 Saund. 286. by Hale, Chief Juſtice, that no judgment was entered in the ſaid caſe, yet that was a miſtake, as appeared on ſight of the record, then brought into court. On this authority, the the plaintiff had liberty given him to enter a remittit for the 8 l. which put an end to the writ of error.

Holt, Powell, and Powys, Juſtices, agreed to the diſtinction taken by the plaintiff's council, that the demand here is no more entire, than every action of debt, for rent or other thing. The demand is entire, as to action, but not as to lien; and the difference is, where, on covenant to pay a ſum certain, debt is brought, the variance of the ſum contained in the deed, will vitiate the ſame; but where the deed relates to matter of fact, there, though the plaintiff demand more than is due, he may enter a remittit; and the caſe of Barber v. Pomeroy, is in point.

Gould, Juſtice, held, that this was an entire contract, and therefore, that a remittit could not be entered for part, no more than there can be an abridgement of an entire thing at common law; and cited Dyer 65. ſtat. 10 Hen. 6. cap. 5. Yelv. 66. This caſe differs from the caſe of Barber v. Pomeroy, becauſe that was after verdict, but here it would be hard to take away the defendant's good cauſe of demurrrer, which he had at the time he demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The verdict makes ſuch a caſe worſe; for there the jury find the intanglement, and yet the court, ſeeing the verdict to be impoſſible, will give leave to enter a remittit: the court therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff, for what was due; with leave to enter a remittit for the reſidue. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 814. Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 87.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Staple v. Heydon.

The court were of opinion, that the pleadings in this cauſe were ſuch, as a repleader ſhould be awarded on, at the common law; for the defendant having inſiſted on a title to a way, by grant, his averment, that he had no other way, was immaterial, and, by conſequence, the iſſue thereon impertinent; beſides, there was no iſſue at all joined, the plaintiff's affirmative not concurring with the defendant's negative. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 3.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Stanyon v. Davis. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the Marſhalſea Court, the plaintiff declared, that at ſuch a day, &c. in the county of Middleſex, he did deliver into the ſtable of the defendant, then a common inn-keeper, a certain gelding, to be by him ſafely kept, at a reaſonable rate; and to be ſafely re-delivered by him to the plaintiff; that the defendant then and there ſo negligently the ſaid gelding did keep, that through his neglect he was taken out of the inn, and ſo immoderately ridden, and whipped, that he was quite ſpoiled; on which a verdict and damages were given for the plaintiff, and judgment for him below: on the writ of error, the following exceptions were taken.

1ſt. That the horſe, for aught that appears, was put into the defendant's ſtable without his privity, and if ſo, he was not bound to take any care of it; for, as the declaration is worded, it is to be underſtood, that it was delivered into his ſtable, he being a common inn-keeper; for prædict. com. hoſpitat. exiſtent, muſt be taken in the ablative caſe; but the words being indifferent to an ablative or dative, taking them in a dative makes the declaration good, and the other bad;

Per Powys, Powell, and Gould, Holt being abſent. It ſhall be taken in that ſenſe which makes it good.

2d Exception was, that no place was laid where the immoderate riding was, nor that it was within the juriſdiction of the inferior court: and it was laid down for a rule, and agreed to by the court, that whatever is eſſentially neceſſary to maintain an action, if the action be brought in an inferior court, that matter muſt be averred to have been within their juriſdiction, otherwiſe they have no juriſdiction; for whatever is not averred to be within their juriſdiction, ſhall be intended to be out of it. Vide 1 Saund. 73. It was alſo agreed clearly, that if that, which is the giſt of the action, and the compleat cauſe of it, be laid within the juriſdiction, and the declaration ſhews further matter, which is only aggravation, or conſequential damage, without which the action would have lain, ſuch matter need not be averred to be within the juriſdiction: as in caſe for calling a woman a whore, whereby ſhe loſt a marriage; there not only the words, but alſo the loſs of marriage, muſt be alledged to be within the juriſdiction, becauſe the one, without the other, would not maintain the action; and there one may confeſs the words, and traverſe the damage. So in treſpaſs, by the maſter, for the battery of his ſervant, whereby he loſt his ſervice, the loſs of ſervice, as well as the battery, muſt be laid within the juriſdiction. But in an action by a tradeſman, for calling him a cheat in his trade, whereby he loſt his cuſtomers, there the loſs of cuſtomers need not be alledged within the juriſdiction, becauſe the words are actionable without it, and it is only aggravation. 1 Cro. 570. 1 Ro. Ab. 548. 1 Jo. 448. In an action for arreſting one in another man's name, without the conſent of the other, by which his other creditors arreſted him, it is not needful to alledge that the creditors came on him within the juriſdiction, becauſe the arreſting in another's name, without the other's conſent, is in itſelf actionable. Then the doubt was, whether the defendant's neglect, in ſuffering the gelding to go out of his cuſtody, was a compleat cauſe of action, without any regard to the riding, &c.

And the council urged, that the ſole cauſe of action was the not keeping the gelding ſafely, according to the contract; and for this he quoted, the Regiſter 106. Raſt. Ent. 3. And then it being a non-feſance, no venue need be, where the non-feſance was. Vide 1 And. 139. and Walker v. Aſhwood, Mich. 10 W. 3. in B. R.

In Eaſter term laſt, on arguing of this caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, aſked the council for the plaintiff in error, if the original declaration had been in this court, whether they would venture to demur to it, for not ſhewing the place where the horſe was immoderately ridden; and he ſaid, ſure they would not: and then if this were a good declaration in a ſuperior court without that, then it will not be neceſſary to aver it within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, in an action brought there. To which it was anſwered, that the inference did not follow; for if indebit. aſſumpſit be in a ſuperior court, for goods ſold and delivered, though no place be laid where the ſale or delivery was, yet it is no cauſe of demurrer; but the not alledging it to be within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, would be fatal.

Per curiam. The judgment muſt be affirmed, for the neglect of not keeping according to the contract, is the ſole giſt of the action; for if the declaration had been, that the defendant did ſo negligently keep the horſe, that he was taken out of his ſtable, and ridden into Somerſetſhire, to his damage, &c. the action would lie; or that he ſo negligently kept him, that through his neglect he was beat or abuſed, or wanted reaſonable provender in his inn. And the ſole cauſe of action is, his neglect of due care of him.

Note, The Chief Juſtice ſaid, he recollected the caſe of Mayo v. Combe, in Lord Hale's time, where the counterpart of an ancient deed was admitted in evidence, and a ſpecial verdict being found in the caſe, finding the original deed, it concluded, as by the counterpart it did appear: and this was ſo done, to preſerve the precedent. 1 Mod. 4, 94, 114. 2 Keb. 31, 546. 3 Keb. 1, 2. 5 Mod. 211, 386.

And the court held, that the counterpart of an ancient deed, which might be loſt, was good evidence with other circumſtances, but not of itſelf, without other circumſtances; but that a counterpart of a deed, leading the uſes of a fine, was of itſelf good evidence. See alſo, Carthew 79, 80, 142, 181, 220, 225, 265, 346. and Skinner 15, 24, 82, 174, 205, 431, 579, 584, 623, 624, 639, 640, 672, 673. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 223.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Phips v. Jackſon.

The defendant pleaded in abatement, that tempore quod memoria non extat, i. e. from time immemorial, all the clerks of the Queen's court of Exchequer were privileged from being ſued elſewhere than in that court; and that the defendant was clerk to R. P. one of the barons of the Exchequer aforeſaid.

On demurrer; per curiam, there are two ways of pleading privilege;

One is, to go to iſſue, and at the trial, if the party is an officer of record, to ſhew it by producing the record; if he is not an officer of record, but an attendant to one of the barons, that muſt of neceſſity be tried by a jury, becauſe the court of Exchequer, as a court, cannot take notice of it any more than we can.

The other way is, if he is an officer on record, to produce a writ of privilege at the time of the plea pleaded, and then no iſſue can be joined on it: and here the cuſtom is ill pleaded, the Latin not being grammar.

But he having ſhewed that he is one of the clerks of a baron, and inſiſting on privilege, ought not we to take notice, that he ought to have privilege?

To which it was anſwered, that he did not aver that he was clerk to one of the barons of the Queen's Exchequer, but of our Exchequer; and for that a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 305.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Davenport v. Rafter. Error.

On a writ of error of a judgment in the C. B. in an action of debt on bond, the plaintiff's council took ſeveral exceptions to the defendant's plea; and among others the following:

That it was not averred any where in the plea, that this judgment, on which the writ on error was brought, was the ſame judgment, the errors in which were releaſed, except only in the body of the pleading of the releaſe, as if there was ſuch an averment in the releaſe itſelf, which was naught: for no iſſue could be taken on that, but there ought to have been a diſtinct averment of that, either in the end of the plea, as is uſual in pleas of recoveries in other actions, &c. or elſe, after the words of and concerning the judgment aforeſaid, the defendant ſhould have added, the ſame judgment ſtill remaining, of which the plaintiff has now brought his writ of error; and ſo, on that averment, iſſue might have been taken.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There never was ſuch a form of pleading.

Powell, Juſtice. It was better this way.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plea is good now after the releaſe is ſet out on oyer, for now it appears to be a releaſe of this judgment, and it ſhall not be intended that there was another judgment between the ſame parties of the ſame term; and the replication is not good, for if there was another judgment to which this releaſe might be applied, you ſhould have pleaded it ſpecially and certainly, and have averred that this releaſe was a releaſe of the errors in that judgment, and ſo have given the plaintiff an opportunity of anſwering that judgment, as by pleading nul tiel record; for if there be no ſuch record, the very foundation of your replication is gone, for if there be no other judgment, this releaſe releaſes this judgment, and the traverſe is of a thing not exiſting. The court therefore would not alter the rule, niſi. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1052.

Trinity, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Beſt.

On an indictment for conſpiring to charge a man as father of a baſtard child, the defendant demurred to the indictment, and his council took the following exceptions thereto:

1ſt. That it did not appear that any thing came of this conſpiracy, and the bare conſpiring to do an ill thing by another is not criminal unleſs the thing be done, for it is the damage the party receives by the conſpiracy, that makes it criminal.

2dly. That it did not appear that the facts the defendants conſpired to charge the proſecutor with were falſe; and a conſpiracy to charge a man with a fact that is true is not puniſhable, and therefore the indictment ought to have ſaid the proſecutor was not the father of the child; and as for the adverbs falſely, unjuſtly, wickedly, and deviliſhly, which were inſerted in the indictment, thoſe went to the conſpiracy, and the defendants might falſely conſpire to charge the proſecutor with a fact that was true, as if they had promiſed him not to do it; and he compares this to the caſe of perjury, where it is not enough to ſay a man did falſely, &c. ſwear, but the indictment muſt lay, that the fact was falſe.

3dly. The woman on whoſe body the child was ſuppoſed to be begotten was laid in the indictment by ſeveral ſurnames, and he ſaid that ſhe might be the wife of the proſecutor, and ſhe might go by his name among the reſt of her alias's; and this he ſaid was rather to be intended, becauſe they charge the proſecutor with being father, which he could not be to a baſtard child.

4thly. The indictment ought to have laid, that the child was like to become chargeable to the pariſh; for unleſs the proſecutor by this accuſation was like to be ſubjected to ſome penalty, the indictment will not lie. The indictment here is nothing but that the defendants conſpired to tell the proſecutor that he was the father of the child E. E. was big with.

The court ſeemed to reſt much on the ſecond exception, and they ordered precedents to be ſearched; and for the queen were cited the caſes of the Queen v. Kimberly, 1 Lev. 62. 1 Sid. 68. An indictment for conſpiring to charge J. S. for having begot a baſtard on the body of J. G. to the intent to extort money of him, and held good, and yet no averment that the proſecutor was not the father. The King v. Armſtrong, 1 Vent. 304. An indictment in like manner for conſpiring to charge one for the keeping of a baſtard child, and thereby alſo to bring him to diſgrace, and in both theſe caſes, a conſpiracy without any further act done, was held to be indictable.

The court gave judgment for the Queen; for they obſerved, that the defendants were charged at leaſt with a conſpiracy to charge the proſecutor with fornication; and though that was a ſpiritual defamation, yet the conſpiring to do it was a temporal offence, and indictable, and the conſpiracy was the giſt of the indictment.

The Chief Juſtice ſaid, that conſpiracies were one of the articles in the commiſſion of oyer; and the court obſerved, that E. E. would not be intended to be the proſecutor's wife. And Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, becauſe in the indictment ſhe was named ſpinſter. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1167.

Trinity, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Wyatt.

On an indictment for deer-ſtealing, it was held that convictions are but inducement, and therefore they may be pleaded without as appears by the record; the giſt of the offence is, the not returning the warrant, and there are many caſes, that where a matter of record which is alledged in pleading is only introductory, it is not neceſſary to aver it by the record. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1189.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Thornicraft v. Barns. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the court of C. P. where the action was debt on a bond of 1000 l. penalty, conditioned, that if ſuch a one, being an apprentice, ſhould purloin or imbezzle any thing to his maſter's damage, that then he ſhould make it good. The breach aſſigned was, that he did imbezzle and purloin 200 l. On this iſſue being joined, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and judgment accordingly.

On error brought, it was inſiſted, that the breach was not well aſſigned; for the condition of the bond tying it up to ſuch purloining as ſhould be to the damage of the maſter, the plaintiff in the original action, ſhould have averred that this was a purloining to the damage of the maſter.

But the whole court thought the judgment of the court of C. P. was well given; for the words purloining and imbezzling are always taken in a bad ſenſe, and neceſſarily import damage to the maſter; and what appears plainly needs not to be averred, according to the maxim of law, what clearly appears need not be verified. Judgment affirmed, niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 149.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. Seſtern v. Cibber.

In an action of debt on bond, brought by the plaintiff, as aſſignee of the ſheriff; on demurrer, the defendant's council took the following exceptions to the declaration.

1ſt. That the breach of the condition was ſet forth to be, his not appearing according to the exigence of the writ, and according to the form of the writ; whereas it ought to have been, his not appearing at the return of the writ. 1 Levinz. 145. 3 Lev. 243.

2dly. It was objected, that the very foundation of the action, viz. the breach, was ſet forth by way of recital, when alſo he did not appear, which ought to have been expreſsly averred, that ſo the defendant might have the liberty of traverſing it. Cro. Eliz. 441. 2 Jones 197. 2 Lev. 206.

3dly. The declaration does not ſet forth on what day the writ was returnable; and then it does not appear, whether the defendant did, or did not appear according to the exigence of the writ, nor whether the bond was or was not forfeited.

Eyre, Juſtice. This caſe differs very much from the caſe of a ſheriff ſuing this bond himſelf, for there he has nothing to do but declare on the bond; but where the action is brought by the aſſignee, there it is the forfeiture that gives the action, which in this caſe is the non-appearance, and is a matter traverſable, and muſt not be ſet forth by way of recital, but muſt be poſitively averred.

In declaring on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the cumque etiam is uſed; ſo in a bond, quod cum by his certain obligatory writing. But then in the firſt caſe it is the promiſe, and in the ſecond the breach of the condition, which gives the action; both of which are always poſitively averred, and not ſet forth by way of recital.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It is not true, that there is no traverſing what is only ſet forth by way of recital; for the pleas of non aſſumpſit, and non eſt factum, are both of them pleas that traverſe matters, in thoſe reſpective actions that are pleaded by way of recital.

The return of the writ not being ſet forth, is a fatal objection. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 191.

Trinity, 13 Ann. Johnſon v. Gardiner.

On a promiſe of payment made by an executor after the death of his teſtator, it is not neceſſary for the plaintiff in his declaration to aver that the defendant has aſſets; for unleſs he had, there was no occaſion for his making ſuch a promiſe. Cro. Jac. 602, 613. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 254.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. Child v. Peirce. Error.

On a writ of error brought to reverſe the judgment obtained in this cauſe, it was inſiſted by the council for the plaintiff in error, that the declaration of the plaintiffs was naught, becauſe they declared, that the defendant was indebted to them as aſſignees of a commiſſion of bankruptcy againſt J. S. in the ſum of 320 l. for ſo much money had and received by the defendant from the bankrupt, and the declaration did not ſtate that the money was the money of the bankrupt.

The council on the other ſide argued, that the declaration was good, becauſe it firſt of all ſets forth, that the defendant was indebted, and then goes on and ſhews how he was indebted, viz. by money received by the defendant, that is by a neceſſary intendment, ſuch money as will create a debt, the money of the bankrupt, and cited the caſe of Atherpe v. Jones, where judgment by default in the C. B. was given, and a writ of error brought; there the declaration ſet forth, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in ſo much money, for the uſe of a coach-horſe of the plaintiff's, delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant.

The council for the defendant in error, in that cauſe objected, that the delivery of the coach-horſe did not neceſſarily import a debt, for poſſibly the defendant might be to pay nothing for the uſe of him: but the court were of opinion, that ſuch a delivery muſt be preſumed as did create a debt. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 331.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. Nicholſon v. Simpſon.

In debt on bond, with a condition, reciting that H. Simpſon was convicted on the proſecution of the plaintiff, for unlawfully killing a deer on a place called Whinny Rig Ground, in the pariſh of Clifton, in a chace of the Earl of Thanet, about the 6th of Auguſt laſt, and that it was removed into this court by certiorari, that if H. Simpſon pay the proſecutor coſts and damages within a month after the confirmation of the conviction, a procedendo granted, &c. after oyer of the condition, the defendant pleads, that the conviction in the condition mentioned of the ſaid H. S. at the proſecution of the ſaid N. for unlawfully killing unum cervum i. e. a red deer, about the 3d of Auguſt, &c. was never affirmed by this court.

The plaintiff in reply, ſets out the information, and that the conviction was removed, and affirmed, as appears by the record; and then avers, that the defendant was never convicted of killing any one red deer in the chace aforeſaid, except that in this conviction; and that the deer in the condition, and that in the conviction is the ſame, and the killing the ſame, and that the place called Whinny Rig in the condition mentioned, lies within the ſaid chace, called Eglebird, alias Whinfield, in the condition mentioned, and not elſewhere, and ſo alledges the identity of perſons and things in the conviction and condition. The defendant rejoins, and prays oyer of the records, and pleads as before, that the conviction was never affirmed, to which the plaintiff demurs; and objected, that the conviction and condition varied both in time and place; as to the time, the condition is about the 3d of Auguſt, and the conviction is between the laſt day of July and the 6th of Auguſt; and as to the place, the condition is for killing in a place, called Whinny Rig Ground, in the chace of Lord Thanet, the conviction for killing in the ſame chace, called Eglebird alias Whinfield.

Per curiam. The variances are helped by the averments, which might have been traverſed, and not having been traverſed, muſt be admitted to be true; and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Eyre and Forteſcue, Juſtices, doubted whether the plea was good, becauſe it is ſaid, the conviction in the condition mentioned, and yet deſcribes it wrong, and ſays for killing of a red deer, and in the condition it is ſaid for killing of a deer. Vide Forteſcue, p. 357.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Hayman v. Rogers.

In an action of covenant, the plaintiff declared on articles, dated the 30th of September 1718, not to ſet up the trade of a baker, from the day of the date of the articles, for ſuch a number of years, and then ſays, that afterwards on the 1*ſt of May*, 1718, (which is four months before the ſaid articles were made) the defendant exerciſed the trade in that place; and after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the time of the breach was no part of that to which the reſtraint goes, and therefore the plaintiff has no cauſe of action.

The council for the plaintiff inſiſted, that the verdict cured this objection, for ſaid he, we could not have recovered without proof of an exerciſing after the date of the articles.

Per curiam. Where what comes under a ſcilicet is conſiſtent with that which preceded it, it is always conſidered as an averment; but if inconſiſtent we reject it, as in the common caſe in ejectment, where the leaſe is from the day of the date, and the entry and expulſion laid the ſame day; we will reject the 1*ſt of May*, 1718, and then the caſe is, that he covenanted the 30*th of September*, 1718, and afterwards committed the breach. Wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 232.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Holoway v. Thurſton.

In an action on the caſe, &c. the plaintiff declared, and laid his damages to 400 l. The defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations, viz. he did not promiſe within ſix years: the plaintiff replied, that he ſued out a latitat to take the defendant two years before the action brought for 150 l. and on a demurrer to this replication, it was inſiſted for the defendant, that theſe were different actions, for no man would take out a latitat for 150 l. and declare ad damnum 400 l. it is true, if the plaintiff had averred it had been one and the ſame cauſe of action, it might have been otherwiſe; and ſo it was ruled by the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 109.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Elliot v. Cowper.

An action was brought againſt the indorſer of a promiſory note, wherein the plaintiff declared, that one Coates made a note in writing, omitting the words ſubſcribed with his own hand, by which he promiſed to pay to the defendant or order, ſo much money, &c. that the defendant indorſed this note to the plaintiff, and that, although he demanded the money of the ſame Coates, he did not pay it.

The defendant demurred ſpecially, for that the plaintiff did not ſet forth that Coates, of whom the money was demanded, was the ſame Coates who drew the bill; to which it was anſwered, that the declaration ſets forth, that the note was made by one Coates, and that the plaintiff demanded the money of the ſame Coates, which is a good and certain averment that he was the ſame perſon, and the court was of that opinion.

Then it was objected, that the ſtatute, which gives credit to ſuch notes, and a remedy to recover on them, where there was none at law, enacts, that all notes ſigned by any perſon, &c. and it doth not appear by this declaration, that Coates ſigned this note.

To which it was anſwered, that the plaintiff ſet forth, that Coates made a note, which implies ſigning it; for he could not make it without ſigning it. The plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8, page 307.

The defendant having been convicted on an information for publiſhing a libel againſt the government, it was now moved in arreſt of judgment, that the diſtringas was not returned by the proper officer; and the caſe was, the defendant having been tried in London, the ſheriffs of London returned the venire fac. and put their names thereto, according to the ſtatute of York, Tho. Lone, Mil. and J. S. viz. the other ſheriff; and the diſtringas was returned by Tho. Lone, Mic. and by his companion J. S. and therefore it was now inſiſted, that the diſtringas was not returned by the proper officer, and ſo the defendant was not duly tried, for the two ſheriffs of London are to be taken as one returning officer, ſo that this is not to be compared to a return made by coroners. Hob. 70. Now this exception comes before the court in this caſe, in a different manner from what it would on a writ of error; for there it would be an averment againſt the record; but here this being a proceſs which iſſued out of this court, any irregularity in the execution of the ſame, muſt be taken notice of: and here the defendant's council proved Tho. Lone, Mil. to have been one of the ſheriffs of London, at the time of this return made: to this exception, the Attorney General anſwered, that here it muſt be intended, Tho. Lone, Mil. was ſheriff of London at the time the venire was returned, and that he died, or was turned out, before the return of the diſtringas, and was ſucceded by Tho. Lone, Mic. who, as ſheriff, returned the diſtringas; for the matter appearing thus on the record, no averment or proof can be received to the contrary.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. The name in the venire is different from that in the diſtringas; and had the return been made by a ſtranger, it had not been good, and the party muſt have had a remedy, which he cannot have in any other manner, than by proving that he who made the return was not ſheriff: the preſumption is, that he who makes the return is the proper officer; but when the contrary is offered to be proved, I do not ſee how we can refuſe admitting it.

Then the Attorney General moved, that the ſtatute of York requires only the ſheriff's name to be indorſed, and therefore that the addition of Mil. and Mic. in this caſe is ſurpluſage, and conſequently, that one man who was the ſheriff, returned both writs: and further, ſince it can be proved the ſheriff made this return, that he may be bound by rule to attend, in order to amend it; which the court ſaid, they would conſider of. Adjourned. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 5.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 2. Holiday v. Fletcher.

The declaration ran thus; A. H. complains of P. F. adminiſtratrix of all and ſingular the goods and chattels, rights and credits, of her late deceaſed huſband, B. F. who died inteſtate, &c. to which the defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that there was no averment that adminiſtration was committed to the defendant; it being common, towards the concluſion of the declaration, to ſay, to which ſaid P. F. letters of adminiſtration &c. have been granted. And the defendant's council cited, Cro. Jac. 10. 1 Sid. 228. 2 Vent 84. Litt. Rep. 30. Jones 1. Bro. Adm. 11. Raſt 820.

Per curiam. There is a material difference between declarations in this court, and in the Common Pleas, where the beginning of the declaration is only a recital of the writ, whereas in this court it runs, A. B. complains of C. D. &c. Here it is ſufficiently alledged, ſo as to be traverſed; and the word exiſtente muſt be underſtood. Accordingly the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 781. Raymond, vol. 2. page 1510.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. 2. Philips v. Knightly.

In debt on a bond for non-performance of an award, the defendant pleads that no award was made: the plaintiff replies, that according, &c. the arbitrators had appointed an umpire, who awarded, that whereas a ſuit by qui tam was carried on by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, the defendant ſhould pay the plaintiff 5 l. on ſuch a day at L. and thereon the plaintiff ſhould covenant with the defendant to ſave him harmleſs from the coſts and damages of that ſuit; and the plaintiff avers, that he, the plaintiff, did come to L. on the day appointed, between the hours of ten and twelve of the clock in the forenoon, and continued there; and that the defendant, nor none for him, was there to pay the money, &c. The defendant demurred ſpecially.

And it was argued by his council, that the umpirage is void, for that the coſts and damages being not thereby aſcertained, the law muſt reduce them to a certainty; and for that, notwithſtanding this covenant ſhould be entered into, ſtill the defendant might be ſued for thoſe coſts and damages, though the plaintiff ſhould thereby be liable to an action of covenant; ſo that this umpirage does not put an end to the matters that were in controverſy between the parties: then the plaintiff has not entitled himſelf to this action, for it is not averred that he continued at L. the whole day appointed for the payment of the money, ſo that it does not appear that the defendant had an opportunity to tender the ſum awarded, for that ſhould be a convenient time before the ſetting of the ſun; and it is not averred the plaintiff was then at L. ſo that no breach is aſſigned.

The plaintiff's council in reply ſaid, an umpire may appoint a particular ſecurity againſt a matter in controverſy between the parties, as the covenant is in the preſent caſe. 1 Cro. 541. 1 Mod. 9. And the reaſon why the award was held void in Salmon's caſe, 5 Co. 77. was, becauſe the bond awarded to be given was not appointed to be for any certain ſum, which ſhews that otherwiſe it would have been a good award, and ſo by the ſame reaſon is the awarding a covenant to be entered into in the preſent caſe.

As to the other objection; the plaintiff's replication, though it be in aſſigning a breach, is to be taken to a common intendment; and it is averred the plaintiff came to the place appointed, and continued there; and though it is not ſpecially averred that he continued there till the laſt inſtant of the day, it ſhall be ſo intended till the contrary is ſhewn by the other ſide.

Raymond, C. J. The plaintiff muſt intitle himſelf to his action, by ſhewing a ſpecial breach of the condition of the bond, which he has not done in this caſe: the replication therefore is not to be taken to a common intent, and if the defendant ſhould ſhew in this caſe that he had it not in his power to perform the award, it would be a departure, for he pleaded that no award was made.

Reynolds, J. I think a particular ſecurity pointed out by the arbitrators may be good; and here it ſeems to amount to a covenant perpetual, according to the caſe of Clayton v. Kynaſton, Salk. 573, 574. but here is no breach aſſigned.

And the court being determined to give judgment for the defendant on the pleadings, the plaintiff diſcontinued, on paying coſts. Vide Fitzgibbons, p. 53.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. 2. Bowles v. Markwith.

In an action of covenant, the plaintiff declared, that he covenanted with the defendant to transfer, at a certain day, ſuch a ſhare of ſtock, with the dividends and profits that in the mean time ſhould ariſe on the ſame, to the defendant at the South Sea houſe, at the uſual hours when the books of the company are open; and that the defendant did covenant to accept the ſame, and pay ſo much to the plaintiff for it, provided the plaintiff tendered it at the time and place above mentioned; and he avers that he was at the South Sea houſe on the day, at the uſual hours when the books are open, to tender the ſaid ſhare of ſtock, with the dividends and profits of the ſame to the defendant; but that the defendant did not accept the ſame, but abſolutely refuſed, and ſtill doth refuſe to accept, &c. The defendant demurred ſpecially; and it was argued for the defendant, that the plaintiff ſhould not only have ſaid generally that he did tender the dividend and profits, but alſo have ſpecified what they were; and this is the ſame with a tender of rent and arrears, which muſt be alledged ſpecially; and the defendant having demurred ſpecially to it, makes it fatal.

And the declaration is naught, for another reaſon, for the plaintiff only avers that he was at the South Sea houſe at the uſual hours, whereas he ought to have ſpecially ſet forth theſe uſual hours, and then have averred that he continued at the South Sea houſe, till ſuch a time of the extremity of thoſe hours, within which he might have conveniently made a tender, according to the covenant, and the caſe of Lancaſhire v. Killingworth. 2 Salk. 623. and 5 Mod. is in point.

The plaintiff's council replied, it is ſufficient to aſſign a breach in the words of the covenant. 2 Cro. 171. and here the plaintiff has averred a tender of the dividend and profits, according to the letter of the covenant: and the only diſadvantage that could be ſuppoſed to the defendant from the plaintiff's not having ſpecified how much the dividends and profits were, is, that if iſſue were joined, it would be too general for the defendant to make a defence thereto, which cannot be in the preſent caſe, thoſe being things certain in their own nature: as to the other objection, it is generally true, the party muſt be at the place appointed at the extreme time of the day or hours, to make a tender; but if he is there at any time of the day or hour, and makes a tender, and the other party refuſes to accept, he has performed his part, 1 Inſt. 206. b. 5 Co. 114. Now, the plaintiff has ſet forth, that the defendant refuſed to accept, which neceſſarily implies a tender; and this makes a clear difference between the preſent caſe, and that of Lancaſhire v. Killingworth, for there no refuſal was laid: and though it is not expreſsly laid, that the refuſal was at the place appointed, yet it muſt be ſo taken; and if iſſue had been joined, the plaintiff muſt have proved it.

Per curiam. The plaintiff has not entitled himſelf to his action, becauſe he has not ſhewn what are the uſual hours of keeping the books open, and that he was at the place a convenient time before the ſhutting the books, ready to make a tender; and the refuſal being not expreſsly laid to be at the time and place, ſhall not be ſo intended; if it had been ſo laid it would have been good: wherefore the plaintiff praying to diſcontinue, and it being oppoſed, the court anſwered, that as this caſe is, judgment for the defendant would not be a bar to the bringing another action. Vide Fitz-Gib. p. 61.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2 The King v. Lady Lawley.

The defendant moved in arreſt of judgment after conviction, on an information for attempting to perſuade a witneſs not to appear an evidence againſt Japhet Crooke for forgery: and the exception taken was, that it was not poſitively averred that Crooke was indicted; it was only laid, that ſhe, knowing that Crooke had been indicted, and was to be tried, acted in ſuch and ſuch a manner; whereas in all criminal caſes the fact muſt be poſitively alledged, and not by inference. 5 Co. 120. 6 Mod. 30. 4 Co. 44. b. 2 Cro. 19. 4 Co. 18. Hard. 2. Bulſ. 292. 1 Roll. Rep. 70.

Per curiam. It is well enough; there is no real difference between indictments and actions, when the giſt of the action muſt be poſitively averred. 1 Sid. 183. 337. 2 Sid. 137. Salk. 686. 2 Lev. 208. 5 Co. 120. 2 *Roll. Judgment was accordingly given for the King, and the defendant fined 300 marks, and ſentenced to a month's impriſonment. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 904.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. 2. Goodtitle v. Petto.

In ejectment on the demiſe of William Thornton, a caſe was made for the opinion of the court, that Angelo Burt being ſeized in fee of the premiſes in queſtion June 20, 1702, covenanted to ſtand ſeized to the uſe of him and his wife, for their lives, and the life of the ſurvivor, remainder to the iſſue of their two bodies, remainder to the uſe of ſuch perſon or perſons, as his wife ſhall think fit to diſpoſe to, and for want of ſuch diſpoſition to the uſe of the leſſor of the plaintiff: that by indentures of leaſe and releaſe, 13th and 14th of April, 1724, after the death of the covenantor, without iſſue, Ann, the wife, conveyed the premiſes to her ſiſter Joan, and her heirs, reciting the power, and her intention to diſpoſe. That Joan, by her will, gave the premiſes to the defendant, that the leſſor of the plaintiff was the nephew of the covenantor, and whether he or the defendant had the right, was the matter diſputed.

Two points being made in the caſe, 1ſt. Whether any uſe can ariſe to the defendant, who is a ſtranger to the conſideration; and 2dly, Whether if the defendant has no title, the leſſor can be ſaid to have any, as within the conſideration:

The court were unanimouſly of opinion as to the firſt point, that the defendant had no title. Had the limitation been to the wife in fee, beyond all doubt thoſe claiming under her would have enjoyed. But the expreſs condition being only for the ſupport of the wife, and the appointment not for her benefit, and ſhe having a naked power for the benefit of ſtrangers only; thoſe ſtrangers can never claim under ſuch a conſideration, according to the caſe of Thomlinſon v. Dighton. Salk. 239. 4 Co. 176.

And as to the ſecond point, that the leſſor of the plaintiff had a title; 1ſt. Becauſe he is named in the deed; 2dly. Becauſe it is ſtated that he was nephew to the covenantor. And though the deed does not mention him as ſuch, yet being expreſsly named, he may aver himſelf within the conſideration, according to Mildmay's caſe. 1 Co. 176. 7 Co. 40. 11 Co. 23. Wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 934.

Trinity, 32 & 33 Geo. 2. The King v. Boyall.

On a motion to ſhew cauſe againſt quaſhing an indictment brought againſt the defendant, a pariſhioner of Market Deeping, in Lincolnſhire, for not ſending out his carts, &c. to the ſix days highway labour, purſuant to an order from the overſeers, &c.

The defendant's council took the following exception, among others, to the indictment.

Objection. That J. M. and J. T. are not ſufficiently alledged to be ſurveyors of the ſaid highways; it is only, that they being ſurveyors, &c. and it is not ſaid by whom they were appointed.

Lord Mansfield. As to this objection, being is a ſufficient averment. Vide Bur. vol. 2. page 833.

Eaſter, 33 Geo. 2. Johnſon and another, aſſignee, &c. v. Smith Wid. Extrix, &c.

On arguing the demurrer in this cauſe, the queſtion was, whether the truth of the fact could in this caſe be averred contrary to the fiction of law.

1ſt. That the fact averred is not relevant.

2dly. Suppoſing it relevant, that proof cannot be received to ſhew the truth.

The firſt depends on the conſtruction of the ſtatute of limitations, 21*ſt Jac. cap*. 16. ſect. 3.

Second point, whether the party may be permitted to ſhew that the latitat was taken out after the ſix years expired.

Where the arreſt is before the actual ſuing out of the writ, it has been often determined, that it cannot be juſtified, and that the day when it iſſued may be averred, notwithſtanding the teſte is before the arreſt.

An averment that a latitat teſted the laſt day of the preceeding term iſſued in the vacation, does not tend to diſcredit the officer, for by law it may ſo iſſue, and ought to be ſo antedated. It cannot be ſet aſide on motion for irregularity, becauſe it is right. The averment does not contradict the record, becauſe taking the courſe of this court, together with the teſte of the writ, it ſtands indifferent whether the writ was ſued out the laſt day of the term, or in the vacation.

In caſe of purchaſers, the time of ſigning judgment may be averred.

If to invalidate the writ, there was an averment that it iſſued on a day in the vacation, there the inference would hold from the caſe of a judgment or fieri facias, and ſuch an averment could not be allowed, becauſe to that purpoſe the fact is not relevant, for by law a latitat may iſſue in the vacation teſted the laſt day of the preceding term.

Per curiam. We are all clearly of opinion, that the averment in the defendant's rejoinder ought by law to be admitted, and conſequently the demurrer muſt be over-ruled. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 950.

Michaelmas, 33 Geo. 2. Collins v. Gibbs.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, the defendant's council took this objection, viz. the want of an averment of the performance of what he inſiſted to be a condition precedent.

Lord Mansfield. This is a motion made by the defendant in arreſt of judgment, by default; ſo that it comes before the court, exactly as if it had been on demurrer, and is not like the caſes of objections to judgments after verdict.

The plaintiff had not averred performance of what was to be done on his part, nor ſhewn that he was ready to perform it.

Therefore we are all of opinion, that it cannot be made good, as laid in the declaration; and the true diſtinction, as to ſupplying ſuch defects, is, whether the objection be made after a verdict, or not.

Per curiam. Let the judgment be arreſted. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 899.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a rule for quaſhing an indictment on ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 31. for exerciſing the occupation of a tanner, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip thereto, for ſeven years.

The defendant's council took three exceptions to the indictment, the laſt of which was,

That an indictment will not now lie on ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 31. alone and generally, but it ought to ſpecify all the other qualifications allowed by the ſubſequent ſtatute, and to ſhew that the party is not within any of them, as is uſual in convictions on the game acts, and for ſwearing; and on ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 27. for the better preventing the counterfeiting the current coin of this kingdom.

. Per curiam. Whatever licence might be given by any ſtatute ſubſequent to the 5 Eliz. cap. 4. to perſons who had not ſerved a ſeven years apprenticeſhip, to exerciſe the trade of a tanner, under certain other qualifications therein deſcribed; yet as the trade of a tanner was clearly a trade uſed at the time of making ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 4. and ſeems acknowledged by 1 Jac. cap. 22. to be included in 5 Eliz. cap. 4. It is not neceſſary, in an indictment on 5 Eliz. cap. 4. for having uſed this trade without having ſerved ſuch an apprenticeſhip, to aver the want of other qualifications, which by the ſubſequent ſtatute entitled a perſon ſo qualified to uſe the trade but ſuch other qualifications, or exceptions, muſt be ſhewn by the defendant, by way of excuſe, either by plea, or in evidence. It is ſufficient for the proſecutors to bring the caſe within the general purview of the ſtatute on which the indictment is founded, if that ſtatute has general prohibitory words in it; for where an indictment is brought on a ſtatute which has general prohibitory words in it, it is ſufficient to charge the offence generally, in the words of the ſtatute. Therefore the rule to ſhew cauſe was diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1036.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Combe, Eſq. v. Pitt.

This was an action of debt for 1500 l. brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for corrupting three voters at an election; and another action was brought againſt him, by another perſon, for the very ſame penalty.

Per curiam. Where there are two actions brought for the ſame penalty, it behoves the defendant to aver the right of action was attached in ſome other perſon, before the preſent plaintiff's action commenced. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1423.

Bail.

Common and Special.

Hilary, 5 W. 3. Wyatt v. Evans.

In debt for 99 s. on a plaint levied in an inferior court, and bail put in afterwards, the cauſe was removed by habeas corpus into this court, and there the plaintiff declared as in debt on bond for 6 l. The queſtion was, whether the bail put in here to the habeas corpus ſhould be liable. Adjudged, that they ſhould not, for that it was another cauſe of action, than that to which they were bail. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 55.

Hilary, 7 W. 3. King v. Sharpe.

On a ſci. fac. againſt the bail, who pleaded that the principal died before the return of the capias, &c. on a ſpecial demurrer, the plea was adjudged ill, for it ſhould be that he died before the return of any capias, that it may appear he was not alive at the return of the firſt capias, for if he was, the recognizance is forfeited.

The reaſon why, the death of the principal before any capias ſued out, is a good plea, is, becauſe the principal had an election either to pay the money, or to render his body to priſon, and the laſt is become impoſſible by the act of God. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 57.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Conyers v. The Bail of Rawlins.

On a ſci. fac. brought againſt the bail, they come in and plead, that before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. the defendant in the original action paid the money; to which the plaintiff replied; and inſtead of the defendant concluding to the country, and iſſue being tendered, concluded with, and this he is ready to verify, whereon the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. Bail may plead payment by the principal; but it muſt be in a right manner, which is not done in this caſe, becauſe the recognizance was broke before the ſuing out of the firſt ſci. fac. and there fore pleading payment before the return of the ſecond has not the colour of a good plea. Whereon it was urged, that the plaintiff could not have judgment, becauſe he prays execution for the debt and damages, whereas it ſhould have been for damages only; for the recognizance in this court not being in a ſum certain, there can be no debt created in the bail thereby.

Per curiam. We will reject for the debt as ſurpluſage; wherefore let the plaintiff have judgment. After which the defendant brought a writ of error, returnable in the Exchequer Chamber, but on a motion, the plaintiff had leave to take out execution; for no writ of error lies on a ſci' fac' againſt bail in that court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 112. Raym. vol. 1. p. 157.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Williams v. Williams.

A. ſued B. in three actions, and he put in three bails; the plaintiff recovered in all, the defendant rendered himſelf, and one of the bails entered an exoneratur on the bail-piece, the others did not.

Per curiam. The rendering is a diſcharge as to all, but is not compleat as to all, till all have entered an exoneratur thereon. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 98.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Williams v. Batter & al.

The queſtion was, Whether a reddidit ſe on one action, where there were two actions againſt the ſame party, in which the ſame parties were bail, ſhould be a diſcharge to the bail in the other action? and the court were of opinion that it ſhould diſcharge the bail in the other action too; and the plaintiff's attorney having notice of it, and afterwards taking out execution againſt the bail, the execution was diſcharged, and the attorney ordered to pay ſuch coſts as the maſter ſhould tax. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 99.

By an act for granting to their Majeſties ſeveral duties on parchment, paper, &c. it is enacted, that 6 d. ſhall be paid for every piece of parchment on which any common bail ſhall be filed, and on which any appearance ſhall be made on ſuch bail; which appearance or common bail, the defendant ſhall cauſe to be entered or filed in eight days after the return of the proceſs, on pain of 5 l. to be paid to the plaintiff, for which the court ſhall immediately give judgment, and the plaintiff take out execution. The writ and return was brought into court, and a certificate from the proper officer, that common bail was not filed within eight days, &c. on which a motion was made, and the court gave judgment niſi, &c. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Ward v. Bendall.

On a ſci. fac. againſt bail, the defendant's council urged, that no capias had been iſſued againſt the principal; the plaintiff replies, that a writ of error was iſſued out, and therefore he could not ſue a capias, &c. The defendant demurred.

Per Powell, Juſtice. Error on the principal judgment is no bar to hinder the ſuing of a capias in order to charge the bail; and it was ſo adjudged in this court very lately. Judgment for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 342.

On an action brought againſt the maſter of a ſhip for imbezzling goods laden on board his ſhip, he was held to ſpecial bail; but if the action had been for negligent keeping, common bail would have done. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 251.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

A. had made a compoſition with his creditors according to the late act; and being ſued by a non-ſubſcribing creditor, he moved for leave to file common bail, on ſuggeſtion that the debt on which the plaintiff brought this action, according to the proportion of his compoſition, would be leſs than 10*l.* and ſince the plaintiff, though a non-ſubſcribing creditor, was bound by that agreement, it is reaſonable that common bail ſhould be accepted. But the motion was oppoſed, becauſe it would amount to a determination of the merits of the cauſe. And it was compared to the caſe of an uſurious contract, where, though the contract be void, the defendant is compelled to give ſpecial bail, which the court allowed: for the plaintiff may here traverſe, that the defendant abſconded the 19th of November, &c. but if the plaintiff had been ſummoned before a judge, then the matter would have received a determination as the ſtatute directs; or if the plaintiff had been a ſubſcribing creditor, and that had appeared to the court, it would have been reaſonable to allow common bail, becauſe his ſubſcribing had been a confirmation of the compoſition againſt himſelf. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 383.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Holland v. Serjeant.

A perſon in the cuſtody of the ſheriffs of London, on an execution, was charged according to Stat. 4 & 5 W. 3. cap. 21. in their cuſtody, and for want of proceeding in two terms after, was diſcharged on common-bail, as uſual, where perſons are charged in cuſtody of the Marſhal; for by this Stat. the plaintiff has the ſame benefit as if the defendant was in cuſtody of the Marſhal, and therefore it is but reaſonable there ſhould be the ſame rule for the defendant. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 99.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Adams v. Cox.

Per curiam. In the courts of the city of London the plaintiff never excepts againſt bail, but there is an officer who receives bail; and if he takes inſufficient bail, on complaint made to the aldermen, he muſt either pay the debt, or the profits of his office are ſequeſtered till the debt is ſatisfied; and when the cauſe is removed up hither, the bail and clerk below are diſcharged; and if the bail given below be offered here, they may be excepted againſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 249.

In debt on a bond to perform covenants, no bail ſhall be given, but with reſpect to the breaches and the damage done thereby; the meaſure of which ſhall be taken from the plaintiff's oath. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 100.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

A queſtion was made, if bail be put in in one term, and new bail is added the next term after, whether this ſhould be a bail as of the firſt term, or only of the term when added? The clerks differed, but the court were of opinion it was only bail of that term when the additional bail was put in; for they ſaid, it was not bail till completed and accepted, and making the additional bail to be bail of the firſt term, might do a wrong to a third perſon, who might be a purchaſer after the firſt, and before the additional bail was put in. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 100.

On a non eſt inventus returned on the capias againſt the principal, the bail's recognizance is forfeited in ſtrictneſs of law; but by the courſe of the court, if the principal be rendered before the return of the alias ſci. fac. againſt the bail, the court will ſtay proceedings. But inſtead of a ſci. fac. againſt bail, the plaintiff brought debt on the recognizance, and the bail pleaded a render before the return of the latitat i. e. a latitat actually ſued out and entered.

Per curiam. Though this cannot be pleaded, yet the plaintiff ſhall not by this new courſe prevent the grace of the court; we will allow a render in this caſe of an action of debt, as well as a ſci fac. and that at any time before the return of the latitat, and perhaps we may enlarge the time; the court denied the caſe in 3 Keble, Miles v. Bateman. Vide Ray. 14. But in regard there had been pleadings in this caſe, the defendant was ordered to pay coſts. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 101.

Per Holt, C. J. The merits of a cauſe ſhall not be tried in a motion for bail. In an action of debt on a bond, though the defendant ſays it was thro' dureſs, that will not excuſe him from ſpecial bail, for the court will not determine the merits on ſuch a motion, nor put a ſlur on the plaintiff's cauſe, which ought to come down fairly to trial without prejudice: the ſame where the defendant ſays a contract is uſurious. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 100.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Carril v. Cockran.

On a motion, the queſtion was, whether the court would hold the defendant to ſpecial bail on a ſpecial aſſumpſit for money won at play. And,

Turton and Gold, Juſtices, ſeemed to incline to think that they ſhould not give the plaintiff better ſecurity than he was willing to take at firſt.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, they never ought to enter into the merits of a cauſe on a queſtion about bail; for to order common bail on the merits would ſlur a man's cauſe of action; and no man ought to have his cauſe tried under that predicament; and though this may be for money won at play, yet it was a lawful contract, which the act of parliament allowed of; and no man ought to be wiſer than the laws; and this was giving money againſt money, for which indebitatus aſſumpſit would not lie, but an action on the ſpecial contract; and to ſay that becauſe he depended on the defendant's word at firſt, he therefore ſhould have no ſpecial bail, would be a reaſon why there ſhould be no ſpecial bail in any ſimple contract; and here ſpecial bail was ordered, and it was ſaid it was alſo the practice of C. B. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 295.

The defendant, Beckman, being arreſted at the ſuit of the plaintiff, put in bail to the action; and afterwards the plaintiff obtained judgment againſt the ſaid Beckman. And after a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, ſued againſt him, and non eſt inventus returned thereon, the plaintiff ſued two ſci. fac.'s againſt Carman, as bail of Beckman, in the aforeſaid ſuit; and after two nihils returned, and judgment againſt the bail, he took the goods of Carman in execution.

The court was moved, on behalf of Carman, that he might have his goods out of the ſheriff's hands, and that a vacat ſhould be made of the judgment, on affidavit that Carman was not at London all the day in which the bail was ſuppoſed to enter into the recognizance, and therefore that he was perſonated, and for this reaſon that all proceedings ought to be ſet aſide: and cited 2 Cro. 256. Cotton's caſe, as in point. On which the court referred it to the maſter to examine the ſame, who reported the fact to be thus; viz. the defendant, Beckman, being arreſted at the ſuit of the plaintiff, gave a bail-bond to the ſheriff, to appear at the return of the writ. And at the return of the writ, he put in bail before Mr. Juſtice Rokeby, which not being ſufficient, the plaintiff's attorney excepted; and, for want of a juſtification of this bail, or of putting in of better bail, obtained an aſſignment of the bail-bond; on which the defendant, Beckman, came to the plaintiff's attorney, and told him that he would put in Carman as an additional bail. Afterwards the plaintiff's attorney went to ſearch in the judges book, and there he found Carman added to the bail-piece. And he proceeded regularly in obtaining judgment againſt the defendant Beckman, and afterwards judgment againſt Carman, and in taking the goods of Carman in execution. The maſter reported alſo, that at the day when Carman is ſuppoſed to have been before the judge, and become bail for the defendant Beckman, he was at Canterbury, as appears by an affidavit made to that purpoſe by Carman's ſervant. But farther, that Carman had been bail for the defendant Beckman, in two actions in the Common Pleas, before Mr. Juſtice Blencowe, within five or ſix days after the time that he is ſuppoſed to have been entered as bail in Mr. Juſtice Rokeby's bail-book, in this caſe; and that the defendant Beckman was bound in a bond with Carman, for Carman's debt, about the ſame time, or a very little time after; and that the defendant Beckman was inſolvent, and gone beyond ſea. On which the court refuſed to diſcharge the proceedings againſt the bail, but diſcharged the rule of reference. See 3 Keb. 694. 1 Ventr. 301. Beaſly's caſe. 1 Ventr. 49. Parris's caſe. Palm. 197. Chapleyn v. Alleyn. 19 Hen. 6. 44. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 26. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 4. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 445.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. In all caſes where a cauſe comes in by habeas corpus, the defendant ſhall find ſpecial bail, except in the caſe of an executor, &c. and the court acts in this manner through favour and indulgence to inferior juriſdictions. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 98.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where a plaintiff in an action ſues on the bail-bond, he cannot refuſe the ſame perſons as were bail to the original action; but if the plaintiff proceeds againſt the ſheriff, by amercements, he is not compellable to accept thoſe perſons who are ſureties to the ſheriff, to be bail to the action; ſo if a cauſe be removed by hab. corp. out of any inferior court, and the bail there become bail in this court, the plaintiff is compellable to take them; becauſe he might, but did not except againſt them below. Otherwiſe, where a cauſe comes hither out of London; for the ſufficiency of the bail there is at the peril of the clerk, and he is reſponſible to the plaintiff; ſo that the plaintiff had not the liberty of excepting againſt them; and the clerk is not reſponſible if they are deficient in this court, though he was in London. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 98.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Corps v. Kitchen Hall.

Bail was put in in Michaelmas term, and excepted againſt, and additional bail was put in in Hilary term; and the doubt was, whether the additional bail were of Michaelmas term. In this caſe, if the bail referred to Michaelmas term, and the bail ſhould alien bona fide, in the interim, the land would have been charged with the recognizance by that relation.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It has been an old queſtion, whether bail in this court be liable from the time of the recognizance, or from the time of the judgment; and the court here ordered all proceedings to ſtay till they had conſidered of it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 318.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. ——— v. Watts.

In debt againſt bail, the queſtion was, whether they ſhould be admitted to ſurrender the principal, as they might on a ſci. fa. on two nihils being returned; and it ſeemed reaſonable they ſhould. Therefore a rule of court was made for doing the ſame. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 351.

H. has a judgment obtained againſt him, and he renders himſelf before the return of the capias, but never gives the plaintiff notice of his render, or gets the bail-piece diſcharged; the plaintiff proceeds to judgment againſt the bail on a ſci. fac. and the court would not relieve them on motion, becauſe no exoneratur was entered, and a ſci. fac. returned; but put them to their writ of audita querela. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 101.

On the return of an habeas corpus granted for a perſon committed on an excom. capiendo in a ſuit for teaching ſchool.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he was not ſatisfied that they have juriſdiction in the eccleſiaſtical court; and it was agreed by the court they might bail the priſoner while the matter was in debate.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he bailed one Clerk at his chambers, on a matter relating to the Vinters Company, the habeas being returnable there, while the matter of the return was in debate; and we bail a man in execution on an audita querela; but the court did not bail the defendant in this caſe, but ordered him to come again next day. Vide Forteſcue, p. 243.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Moor v. Watts.

On a habeas corpus brought, the ſheriff returned, that the defendant was in his cuſtody on a capias in withernam: and the caſe was, that a homine replegiando was brought; and the ſheriff returned an inquiſition, finding, that the party was eloined by the defendant, and on that a capias in withernam iſſued, and the defendant was taken on it, and a motion was made that the defendant might be bailed.

After this matter had been ſeveral times before the court, they, on mature conſideration, came to the following reſolutions:

1ſt. That the defendant cannot be bailed on the habeas corpus, being taken by the King's writ; and that therefore this matter was premature, the writ not being returnable until eight days of St. Martin, which was almoſt fifteen days after the firſt motion made in this cauſe; but the defendant ought to come in when the writ was returned, and demand a declaration, and plead non cepit, i. e. he did not take, and then the court will bail him. And as to the objection made, that men had been bailed on an appeal of murder brought againſt them, before the return of the writ.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, confeſſed, that he had known judges do ſo at their chambers, but that he always looked upon it as a miſtake, and that it could not be done.

2dly. That on a plea of non cepit, i. e. he did not take, the defendant ſhall be bailed, 3dly. That when the defendant pleads non cepit, he ſhall not wage deliverance, becauſe he cannot deliver whom he never took.

4thly. That the bail ought to be bound in a ſum certain, with condition that the defendant ſhall appear from day to day, and if judgment be given againſt him, that they ſhall render his body in withernam, there to remain until he renders the party, and ſuffers him to go at large.

But then the opinion of the court being, that the defendant could not be bailed until after he had pleaded non cepit; the queſtion was, Whether he was demandable on the withernam or not.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, and ſaid, the plaintiff is demandable at the return of the capias in withernam after a homine replegiando, if he does not appear he ſhall be nonſuited. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 613.

Per curiam. When exception is taken to bail, notice of it ought to be given to the defendant's attorney. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 434.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Clapham v. Wray.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. When a priſoner renders himſelf in diſcharge of bail, at a judge's chambers, the practice is, to have an entry of it on a piece of parchment, ſigned by the judge, which is ſent over with the priſoner to the marſhal, and ought to be brought back and filed in the office, and is in truth the record; and the entry in the judge's book is not ſo very material. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 423.

In this caſe it was moved to have leave to charge the defendant Murrey, being a priſoner in Newgate, on a ſcandalum magnatum, and alſo to anſwer to a bill of 100*l.* in order to hold him to ſpecial bail, for ſaying the D. of S. was a cheat, and had cheated the King and the army.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The defendant being a poor man, to charge him thus will be a perpetual impriſonment to him, and ſpecial bail has often been demanded in theſe actions, yet it has been frequently denied: but he was ordered to find two that would ſwear themſelves to be worth 25 l. each, and himſelf to be bound in 100*l. Vide Mod. Rep. vol.* 12. p. 420.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Croſſe v. Smith.

On error brought on a judgment in the court of Ely, which, after errors aſſigned, was removed into this court by certiorari.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he was ſurpriſed that the ſuitors did not bring a habeas corpus, and not a certiorari; for the defendant may well ſay, I will not be ſued in an inferior court, but will be ſued above, and there I will put in ſuch bail as the court above ſhall direct, and ſo he may well remove the cauſe by habeas corpus; and in ſuch caſe, if he does not put in ſuch bail above as the action would require below, a procedendo ſhould be granted; for if by the courſe below there ought to be ſpecial bail, though common bail would do if it had commenced above originally, yet ſpecial bail muſt be given above, or a procedendo ſhall go; and if one action requires ſpecial bail, and another not, and that does not appear to be done fraudulently to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail, there we will hold him to ſpecial bail, or grant a procedendo; but if fraud appear we will retain the ſuit; and though in this caſe the matter is between two perſons dwelling within the Iſle of Ely, yet that makes no difference. And he ſaid he had known inferior courts held to harder terms than theſe, for he had known in the court of Common Pleas that in eſcape out of execution on a judgment in an inferior court, the officer was let in to alledge that the original cauſe of action was not within their juriſdiction, though it were laid to have been within it, and admitted by the party ſo to be: but I think that hard, becauſe it is a court having juriſdiction; and ſince they have ſhewed the matter within that juriſdiction, and that has been admitted on record, I hold that the party himſelf would be afterwards concluded to ſay that it was not within, and conſequently the officer is ſo too. And it has been held, that falſe impriſonment would lie againſt the officer for the arreſt, if the cauſe had not ariſen within their juriſdiction, though it had been alledged by the plaintiff to have ariſen within it, and ſo confeſſed by the defendant; but that was hard. The beſt way is, to make a right uſe of the juriſdiction, and not to pretend to hinder the ſubject of his right of uſing the King's courts: and property is much larger now than formerly; for then there were many villains, but now we are all freemen.

Per curiam. It is apparent error: but then an exception was taken to the writ of certiorari. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 646.

In debt on a recognizance of bail.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is now much practiſed to ouſt the bail of the benefit of rendering the principal, as he may do on a ſci. fac. and ſince there is ſufficient reaſon the bail ſhould have equal indulgence in both caſes, let the rule be, that the bail have eight days in full term after the return of the proceſs againſt the principal, to render him. So, if for that purpoſe the proceſs be returned only within four days of the end of the term, the bail ſhall have four days in the next term to render; and on their bringing in the principal in the mean time, they ſhall be diſcharged; and till that time be paſt, the court will grant an imparlance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 650.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Milner v. Petit.

An action of debt was brought againſt the defendants, as bail on a recognizance. The judgment againſt the principal was given in Trinity term; and if the plaintiff had ſued out a ſci. fac. the bail would have had time to bring in the defendant until the return of the ſci. fac. whereof they were deprived by this means. And therefore the defendant's council prayed, that the defendant might have an imparlance; and he ſaid, that according to ſome books, in ſuch caſe, debt does not lie. And for that he cited Raym. 14.

Per curiam. The bail ſhall have the ſame time for the render of the principal as if they had been ſued by ſcire facias, and a rule ſhall be made accordingly. On the ſci. fac. they cannot plead the render after the return of the capias ad ſatisfaciendum, becauſe the condition of the recognizance is broken by the return of non eſt inventus on the capias ad ſatisfaciendum. And they ſaid, that the bail ſhould have fifteen days in the term; and in vacation they ſhould have as much time as they would have had, if they had been ſued on a ſci. fac., to render the principal.

But afterwards, at the end of the term, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the judges had made a rule, that if the plaintiff in the original action brings debt againſt the bail on their recognizance, the bail ſhall have eight days after the return of the writ to render the principal; and if there are but four days in the term after the return of the writ, he ſhall have four days in the following term. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 721.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Taylor v. Brudon.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. On common bail being filed, if the plaintiff does not deliver his declaration before the end of the 2*d term*, he ſhall be nonſuited. If, on examination before a judge, the plaintiff in the action does not make out a good cauſe of action, common bail ſhall be ordered; and if, on examination before a judge, common bail be ordered, and the plaintiff does not there declare that he will move the court, or give notice of ſuch his intent to the defendant, the judge's order ſhall be final againſt him. And if the plaintiff has ſeveral attornies, a demand of a declaration of any one of them is a good demand. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 526.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Taylor v. Brudon.

Per curiam. If a perſon has ſeveral cauſes of action, each whereof is too ſmall for ſpecial bail, he cannot join them to enforce ſpecial bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 527.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Almanſon v. Davila.

On a motion in this cauſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that he had known it held by the court, that where the plaintiff was nonſuited for want of a declaration, and afterwards brought another action for the ſame cauſe, that he ſhould have but common bail to the ſaid action. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 679.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Slanney v. Slanney.

Bail were excepted againſt in vacation, and no other put in, nor juſtified, till term; and then the principal would have ſurrendered himſelf in diſcharge of his bail.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Bail can never ſurrender, nor the party come in by way of ſurrender, but at the return of the proceſs or when he is in court by his bail. If a ſheriff return a cepi corpus on a diſtringas, the principal may ſurrender himſelf; but bail excepted againſt is as no bail, till changed or juſtified. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 525.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Dundee v. Petty.

On a capias being returned againſt the principal, he brings his writ of error, and the plaintiff brings debt on the recognizance againſt the bail, and delivered a declaration as of the preceding term. The defendant's council moved for an imparlance; and urged, that if the plaintiff had gone by way of ſci. fac. the bail might render the principal at any time before the ſecond ſci. fac. was returned. Vide Raym. 14. Godlington v. Lee. And there is no reaſon but the bail ſhould have the like time in this caſe; and this they cannot have without the favour and aſſiſtance of the court; for the recognizance being forfeited by the non eſt inventus being returned on the capias a ſubſequent render of the principal, cannot be pleaded in bar of the action. And the court afterwards made a rule, that there ſhould be in this caſe eight days in full term for the bail to render the principal.

Per curiam. After a capias returned againſt the principal, though a writ of error be brought, yet the plaintiff may proceed againſt the bail; for the writ of error does not ſuperſede the recognizance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 567.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Anonymous:

The principal died before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. againſt the bail, and after a capias returned againſt the principal. It was urged, that ſince the bail would have been diſcharged by rendering the principal at any time before the ſecond ſci. fac. was returned, and that they are now deprived of that advantage by the act of God, therefore it is but reaſonable to diſcharge them.

Per curiam. It cannot be, for it is an indulgence to allow a render after a capias returned in diſcharge of bail; and their recognizance is forfeited on the capias returned againſt the principal; and the court will only diſcharge the bail after, where they render, but not where they cannot; but the death of the party before a capias returned, had been held a good plea to a ſci. fac. and ſo it was held in this caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 601.

An action of trover being brought againſt the defendant, in the ſheriff's court of London, for goods to a large amount, the defendant moved the cauſe by habeas corpus into this court; and a motion was made here, that he might be diſcharged on common bail, becauſe he had ſeized theſe goods as Judge of the Admiralty in Penſylvania, they being condemned there, and the ſentence affirmed here, on an appeal.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The practice is, that if the plaintiff does not ſhew his cauſe of action on ſummons, the defendant ſhall be diſcharged on common bail, notwithſtanding the cauſe is removed from an inferior court. In the preſent caſe, the defendant having acted as judge, is not liable to an action. But bail was ordered to be put in for 500*l.* becauſe, if the defendant acted as a judge, he will be in no danger from any action; but if he did not act in that capacity, it is very reaſonable that ſpecial bail ſhould be put in. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 767.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a perſon who becomes bail has a warrant of attorney to indemnify him, he cannot enter it up, and take out execution thereon, till ſome proceſs has iſſued on the bail-bond, whereby he is injured. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 2.

Eaſter, 1 Ann.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Notice of bail on an arreſt, &c. ought to be not only by a note given of the names of the parties who intend to become bail, but alſo of their addition, trade, ſubſtance, and place of abode, that they may be the more eaſily enquired after by the plaintiff's attorney. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Noell v. Gray.

One who had been diſcharged on the inſolvent act gave bail to an action of debt on a bond, with which he was charged in priſon, and confeſſed the action, and that execution might go againſt his goods, &c. The plaintiff takes execution againſt the goods, and likewiſe ſues the bail, who ſurrender their principal in diſcharge; and this appearing on motion, the court ſaid, that the bail were actually diſcharged by the pleading and judgment; and ordered him to bring the record of the judgment into court, whereon he was taken in execution, and that they thereon would diſcharge him. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Wood v. Shepherd.

There are twenty days to except againſt bail, after notice; and bail cannot be juſtified before a judge at his chambers, except it be by conſent, or for neceſſity in vacation; but in the latter caſe they ought to be juſtified again in term; and on that the defendant is compelled to accept a declaration to go to trial at the aſſizes, if it be an iſſuable term. And, on putting in bail, it is not enough to give notice of their being put in, but it ought to be of their names, places of abode, and trade, or vocation, that the plaintiff may know how to enquire after them; and after exception to bail, there is no ſet time to juſtify, or exchange them for better, but it muſt be in convenient time. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 3 Ann. Parkins v. Woollaſton.

In debt on a recognizance againſt bail, and plea that there was no capias againſt the principal; replication averring a capias, as appears by the record in the Common Pleas. Rejoinder, that there was a writ of error taken out, and allowed before the capias was returned and filed; and on demurrer adjudged, that the rejoinder was a departure from the plea; for it was a new matter, which does not agree with or inforce the matter of the plea; for the plea is, that there was no capias, and the rejoinder ſays there was a capias, but it was ſuperſeded; and there is a great difference between no capias and a capias ſuperſeded; for the ſuperſeding does not make it null, or no capias, but only ſuſpends the effect of it. And this capias, though ſuperſeded, is nevertheleſs a writ, and therefore if after allowance of it, the ſheriff, before a ſuperſedeas ſerved on him, executes it, the writ ſhall excuſe him, which a void writ could not do: and if the writ of error had been quaſhed before the return of the capias, then this writ might be well executed. And the caſe 2 Lev. Vere v. Smith, was allowed to be law, for it was debt on a bond to account for money. The defendant pleads that he did account; the plaintiff replies, that the defendant had received 20 l. at ſuch a time, of which he gave him no account. The defendant rejoined, that he was robbed of the ſum, whereof he gave notice to the plaintiff; and ſure that maintains his firſt plea, for it was a legal account of the money. Judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 139.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Linch v. Hook.

If a writ is returnable in one term, the defendant ought to put in bail in that term; that is, at any time before the Eſſoign day of the next term, and till then it is irregular to proceed on the bail-bond; but in the mean time the plaintiff may take an aſſignment on it, and take out a warrant. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Cragger v. Glover.

The defendant, who had been in priſon the 8th of November before, for a debt under 100 l. and after, in purſuance of the late act of parliament, on ſummons to the creditor, at whoſe ſuit he was in, was diſcharged by the juſtices of peace, and afterward arreſted for a ſum above 800 l. and the doubt was on the conſtruction of the ſtatute, whether he ſhould be held to ſpecial bail, or diſcharged on common bail; and upon a conference of all the other judges, it was reſolved he ſhould be held to ſpecial bail.

The doubt aroſe on the words, any debt. But then the proviſo is, that no perſon ſhall be diſcharged out of priſon by virtue of this act, who ſhall ſtand charged and indebted to any perſon in above 100 l. Now, ſome would have this applied to the firſt diſcharge, that is, the diſcharge by the juſtices of peace; but why not rather to the ſecond diſcharge, or equally to both diſcharges; for he that is diſcharged on an appearance, is diſcharged; and by this act power is given to diſcharge them, if they be taken again; and then the proviſo is, that he ſhall not be diſcharged if the debt be above 100 l. ſo no man is to be diſcharged by virtue of this act that is charged with a debt of above 100 l. at the ſuit of one perſon.

And as to the diſcharge on common bail by virtue of the act, the judges may do it as well as the juſtices of peace. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 301.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Anonymous.

On an action removed by habeas corpus, the court held there muſt be bail here, for elſe the defendant, by his own act, puts the plaintiff in a worſe condition than he was below; but they would conſider the quantity of the ſum in which the bail ought to be taken, if the action appeared to them to be vexatious. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 102.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Bignall v. Deveniſh.

Per curiam. If the defendant, on a habeas corpus, removes a cauſe from an inferior court, in which there ought to have been ſpecial bail below, he ſhall not thereby put the plaintiff in a worſe condition, but be compelled to give in bail above; but as to the ſum which the bail are to juſtify themſelves to be worth, that may be moderated as the court ſees occaſion.

Per curiam. It is good cauſe for a new trial, where the judge who tried the cauſe has denied to admit that for evidence, which was legal evidence, or where he miſdirects the jury. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 242.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Jacob v. Dallo.

Per curiam. The bail have their principal always on a ſtring, and may pull the ſtring whenever they pleaſe, and render him in their own diſcharge; they may take him on a Sunday, and confine him till the next day, and then render him; for the entry in this court is he is delivered to bail, and the doing it on a Sunday is no ſervice of proceſs, but rather like the caſe where a ſheriff arreſts by virtue of a proceſs of court on Saturday, and the party eſcapes, he may take him on a Sunday, for it is only a continuance of the former impriſonment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 231.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Wells v. Oſmond.

Per cur. If bail ſurrender the principal at or before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. it is good, tho' there be not immediate notice of it to the plaintiff; for the end of notice in that caſe is two-fold: one is the plaintiff may, if he pleaſes, charge him in execution; the other is, that he be at no further trouble or charge in proceeding againſt the bail; but if through want of notice he is at further charge againſt the bail, that ſhall not vitiate the ſurrender; but yet the bail ſhall not be delivered till they pay ſuch charges. If at any time after the return of the capias the bail ſurrender the principal at a judge's chambers, and he thereupon is committed to the tipſtaff, from whom he eſcapes or is reſcued, that will not be a good ſurrender, becauſe it is indulgence to the bail to ſurrender after a capias returned; turned; otherwiſe, if it be before a capias returned, for to ſurrender at the return of the capias or before, is a matter of right: and now, by a rule of court, on the firſt ſort of ſurrender, the principal ought to be two days in the Marſhal's cuſtody, to make it a good ſurrender. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 238.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Cholmley v. Veal.

On a ſci. fa. againſt the bail, who plead no capias againſt the principal; in the replication, a capias is ſet forth, and a non eſt inventus returned on it, which appeared to be teſted a year after the judgment.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, the plaintiff is intitled to recover againſt the bail, on a breach of the recognizance; which is, that he ſhould anſwer the condemnation, or render the principal at the proper time.

And the breach is aſſigned, and a capias ſet forth to have been taken out and returned, and what need he take notice of a ſci. fac. for the bail are ſtrangers to the record, and cannot take advantage of error in it. So there not being a ſci. fac. previous to the capias taken out after the year, is but an error at beſt, of which bail cannot take advantage. So if it had actually appeared to us that there was no ſci. fac. I queſtion whether it be any thing more than an error, and ſo not available to the bail; but if it were actually void, ſtill it ought to come on the bail's ſide, and the plaintiff in intitling himſelf againſt the bail never mentions any thing of the capias; and you come and admit all that intitles him to his ſci. fac. againſt you, viz. the non-payment of the condemnation money, and non-rendering the principal, but ſay, there was no capias, which is to ſay, that his time to render was not yet come: and what has the plaintiff to do, but to ſhew that there was a capias, and the capias which is ſhewn may be irregular; and if it be ſo, we ſhall not intend it, till you ſhew it ſo; and there is full title made for the plaintiff, and your plea is only an excuſe that there was no capias; and the reaſon of it is, that I am not bound to render the principal, till I know what execution the plaintiff will chuſe; whether he will chuſe to have his body, which he makes appear by ſuing out a capias; for he might have ſued out an elegit or a fieri fac.

The court unanimouſly gave judgment for the plaintiff.

If the defendant dies after a capias, and before the return of it, bail is diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 304.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. French's Caſe.

French had been arreſted at the ſuit of ſeveral perſons, and had given bail; who having charged him with an action of 4000 l. had him taken in the city, and committed to the Poultry Compter, in order to remove him by habeas corpus, and rendered in diſcharge of themſelves to the priſon of the King's Bench, where the original actions were brought; and it being circuit time, and all the judges out of town, before the the bail could render him, he was charged with the Queen's debt; and the bail having now brought an habeas corpus to remove him up, and render him, the Attorney General oppoſed it; becauſe the Queen, as he alledged, might chooſe her priſon, and the Compter was ſafer than the Marſhal's priſon; and quoted the caſe of Village v. Clayton, as a precedent in point.

Per curiam. If he had been taken by the Queen firſt, there might be ſome reaſon that they ſhould not for their own advantage leſſen the Queen's ſecurity of her priſoner; and that the Queen's intereſt claſhing with that of the ſubject, ſhould be preferred; but on the other hand, the bail having taken him here, and the Queen taking advantage thereof in charging him with her debt, ought not to prejudice them; and he was turned over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 247.

Garibaldo being convicted on an indictment of battery, he, in conſideration that Cagnoni, the proſecutor, would not preſs for a great fine, undertook to put in ſpecial bail to an action of treſpaſs, to be brought by the plaintiff for the ſaid battery; and at this time a writ, which the plaintiff had taken out, returnable in Michaelmas term laſt paſt, was expired; and in Hilary term bail was put in, and after a trial, 100 l. damages were given to the plaintiff: and now a ſci. fa. being brought againſt the bail, they applied to the court for relief; for that the ac etiam, which was by leave put into the ſaid writ, in Michaelmas term, was only for 40 l. and the bail meant to undertake for no more; and ſince the plaintiff had declared for more damages, and recovered more, the bail were thereby altogether diſcharged: and a rule of court ſaid to have been made, 22 Car. and found in the then ſecondary's book; that in caſe of bail, if the recovery were for more than was mentioned in the ac etiam, the bail ſhould not be charged at all in that action, was very much inſiſted on.

The Chief Juſtice remembered a caſe of Thomſon v. Collins, in which he had been council in Lord Pemberton's time, where, in an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the declaration and recovery was for more than the ac etiam, and though it was offered to level it with the ac etiam, by entering a remittitur on the record for the reſt, it was denied them on debate.

In this caſe, on ſearch, the above rule could not be found in the clerk of the rule's books; but the Chief Juſtice ſaid there was reaſon for ſuch rule, to purſue ſtat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2. that bail ſhould know what they became bound for, and not be ſaddled with more; and that muſt be by recovering no more than was mentioned in the writ, to which the bail of neceſſity muſt relate: whereas, if the plaintiff recovers more, the bail, if at all liable, muſt be liable for what is recovered; for their condition is, to anſwer the condemnation, or render the principal; and it would be very hard to enſnare the bail to a greater ſum than is mentioned in the writ: and ſince the proceſs againſt them muſt be founded on the judgment, it ſeems, from thence, they muſt anſwer for all or none; but if leſs than is mentioned in the writ be recovered, then there is no inconveniency to the bail; and if there be no bail inſiſted on, but common bail, it is juſt the wrong-doer ſhould anſwer whatever is recovered. And he further ſaid, that in caſes of outrageous batteries, when people came to him for leave to charge defendants with ac etiams, he would give them leave to charge them with a good ſum; but when they came for bail, they muſt be content with bail of reaſonable value, and not inſiſt on their worth in proportion to the ſum charged.

Powell, Juſtiee, and the reſt of the judges, agreed, the bail by no means ought to anſwer for more than was mentioned in the ac etiam.

And he added, that if ſuch a rule as was mentioned had been, the reaſonable conſtruction of it would be, not to ſuffer the bail to be charged with more than was mentioned in the writ, but likewiſe not to diſcharge them for good and all; for though it be true the proceſs againſt them muſt be for the ſum recovered, yet he ſaid the court might withhold the plaintiff from levying more than was mentioned in his writ; and the bail, on bringing ſo much into court, might obtain a rule to ſtay any further proceedings againſt them, as is done every day in caſes of render of the principal before the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. though in ſtrictneſs of law they ought not to do it after a capias returned againſt the principal.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the caſes differed very much; for the rule was in imitation and purſuance of the law, and they ought not to make any conſtruction contrary to it; and the words of it were, that the bail ſhould be looked upon as none, in that action, and to render before the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. is the ancient courſe and practice of the court.

Then it was further moved, that this bail being of Hilary term, could not be looked on as bail to the writ returnable in Michaelmas term; and then the caſe would be no more than if one had by conſent, on a good conſideration, put in ſpecial bail, in a general action of aſſault and battery; in which caſe there would be no pretence of a ſurpriſe on the bail, and therefore they ought to anſwer the whole condemnation, which the court inclined to; but being informed there was never any other writ taken out, the ſecondary acquainted the court, that filing of bail, without a writ taken out before or after, was void: which Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Gould, Juſtice, affirmed to be true; but the other clerks all ſaid, that rule was underſtood thus, viz. that if bail were filed by conſent, and no writ already taken out, nor taken out within eight days after, the bail was void, and the defendant was not obliged to accept of a declaration; but if he did accept one, it would be well; and this ſeemed a reaſonable explication; but at laſt the whole was referred to the ſecondary to examine, and there the matter reſted.

Holt, C. J. ſaid, he wiſhed attornies would beware of charging extravagant ac etiams, for otherwiſe an action on the caſe would lie againſt them for holding to exceſſive bail.

Note. The ſame point came in queſtion afterwards, this term, in the caſe of Bovey v. Wheeler; and then Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the abovementioned rule was made to rectify an extraordinary practice in this court; which was, if a man became bound for another in an action of 10 l. he was thereby bail in all actions of the ſame term, by the ſame plaintiff againſt that defendant, let the ſum be ever ſo great, which was highly inconvenient.

. And this rule was made in purſuance of ſtatute 13 Car. 2. that bail might know what they undertook for. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 166. Salk. vol. 2. p. 102.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Colonel Layton's Caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ordered precedents to be ſearched, whether a perſon in execution for a fine can be bailed, having brought a writ of error, and aſſigned error; (N. B. the Colonel was brought up by an habeas corpus,) and after a ſearch made, ſaid, he found the caſes not put fair in caſe of execution; and that in caſe of execution, bail was always refuſed; and the whole court coincided with his opinion, and remanded the priſoner. 2 Keb. 173. There is a difference between bail to reverſe an outlawry, and to reverſe a judgment; becauſe in the firſt caſe he is liable, that being in order to bring the cauſe to a trial; and the latter is to defeat the whole record. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 59.

Adjudged, that though non eſt inventus is returned on a Ca. Sa. againſt the principal, yet the court will receive a render; ſo they will on the return of the firſt ſci. fa. againſt the bail, and alſo on the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. if made on the day of the return, either during the ſitting of the court, or afterwards at a judge's chambers; but thó' the court receives ſuch renders in favour of the bail, yet it is done out of favour, and not as a matter of right, and therefore the bail cannot plead ſuch render to a ſci. fa. brought againſt them. But on a ſci. fa, againſt the bail, they may plead the death of the principal before the return of the capias; for they had time till then to render him, but not afterwards, for by the return of non eſt inventus, the recognizance is forfeited. Vide Salk, vol. 3. p. 56.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Anonymous.

An action of debt was brought in C. B. and a recognizance taken; and an action of debt was brought here, on that recognizance. The court was moved that there might be no ſpecial bail given, for that this was only a device to better the ſecurity.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Powell, Juſtice. On a recognizance of bail in C. B. no capias lies, becauſe it is a ſum certain; but on the recognizance in B. R. a capias lies, becauſe it is body for body, and there may be reaſon to help them to a capias on the recognizance.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. In debt on a judgment pending a writ of error, the court will diſcharge the defendant on common bail.

On a ſci. fac. againſt bail, the recognizance was, that the defendant ſhould render himſelf to the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea of our Lady the Queen, before the Queen herſelf. The breach in the ſci. fac. was, that he did not render himſelf to the priſon of the Marſhal of our Marſhalſea. The defendants plead that no capias was ſued out and returned againſt the principal. The plaintiff replied, and ſet out a capias, to which the defendant demurred; and his council offered the following exceptions:

1ſt. That the plaintiff in his oyer ought to have ſet out what term the recognizance was of, that it might appear to be the ſame on which the ſci. fac. was grounded.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that this was an imperfect oyer, not being the whole record, but then the defendant ſhould have inſiſted on want of oyer, and not have gone on; that it was no variance, for what is ſet out agrees well enough with the recognizance on which the ſci. fac is grounded.

2dly. That it appears by the capias ſet out in the replication, that there was but five days between the teſte and return of it; whereas every capias ſued out againſt the principal, in order to charge the bail, ought to have eight days between the teſte and return, and ought to lie four days in the ſheriff's office; which the court allowed, but ſaid it was only an irregularity in proceeding, and therefore the defendant ſhould have moved the court to have them ſet aſide for the irregularity.

3dly. That the plaintiff had not aſſigned a ſufficient breach by reaſon of the variance in the ſtile of the priſon between the ſci. fac. and the recognizance, for the breach was too large, the word mareſcalciæ being uſed for more priſons than the priſon of the K. B. Mareſchallus, indeed, ſignifies no more than a keeper, and there being ſo many marſhals and marſhalſeas, priſona mareſchalli mareſcalliæ dominæ reginæ, may as well be taken for the marſhal of the marſhalſea of the houſehold's priſon, as the priſon of the Queen's Bench, for it is never ſtiled but as in the recognizance, or elſe mareſchal del bank le roy, as in F. N. B. 257, &c.

This exception ſtuck with the court ſome time, but the court at laſt gave judgment for the plaintiff; becauſe it being a bail taken in this court; priſona mareſcalli, mareſcalciæ noſtræ, muſt be intended the priſon of the Marſhal of this court, for the court cannot take any other bails. See caſe Snow v. the Bail of Firebraſs. 2 Raym. p. 804. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1177.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Parkin v. Wilſon.

In an action of debt brought on the recognizance of the bail, the defendant pleaded, that no capias iſſued; the plaintiff replied, a capias was ſued out and returned; the defendant rejoined, that the defendant in the original action brought error on the judgment, before the capias was ſued out, returned, and filed. To this rejoinder the plaintiff demurred generally, and the defendant joined in demurrer; and adjudged for the plaintiff.

This term, the council for the defendant in the original action moved to ſet aſide the capias as irregular, becauſe it was ſued out returnable on Monday next after eight days of St. Martin, which was the 22*d day of November*; and on that very day the writ of error ſued out by Woollaſton in the original action the 20th, was allowed; after which the capias was filed, but returned the ſame day. Adjudged by the court, that the capias was well ſued out to charge the bail; and therefore the motion was denied. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1256.

Eaſter, 10 Ann. Whetherborn v. Wright.

Where a debt is 10 l. or upwards, by the courſe of the court ſpecial bail is required, otherwiſe not. It is not uſual, where an action of debt is brought on a bond of 20 l. conditioned for the payment of 9 l. to hold to bail; for though the penalty, which is the legal debt, exceeds 10 l. yet the real and equitable debt is leſs. But in ſome particular caſes, as where it is to be feared a perſon will run away, &c. the court will hold to bail, for the legal debt exceeds 10 l. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 24.

Trinity, 5 Geo. Anonymous. Error.

On a ſci. fac. in the court of C. B. on a recognizance taken in an action of debt; judgment for the plaintiff, and error brought thereon in this court,

It was inſiſted in behalf of the plaintiff in error, that the breach was not well aſſigned, for though it is a general rule, that a breach aſſigned in the very words of the condition, is a good aſſignment; yet that rule does not hold where the words are by the law interpreted contrary to their natural ſignification, which is the caſe here; for the words of the condition are, that he ſhould render himſelf in execution of the judgment; which words, in their natural ſenſe, import an act that it is impoſſible for the bail to do, for it is the principal only that can render himſelf in execution of the judgment; ſo that the meaning of the words in this caſe muſt be, to render himſelf, in order to execution. And therefore the pleading ſhould not have been in the very words of the condition, but in ſuch words as are expreſſive of that ſenſe that the words of the condition are, by operation of law, to be underſtood in.

This objection was over-ruled by the court; who were of opinion, that the words in the pleading muſt be underſtood in the ſame ſenſe, as when uſed in the condition of the recognizance.

Then it was argued for the plaintiff in error, that there were variances between the ſci. fac. and the recognizance.

The council for the defendant acknowledged, that there were variances, and material ones; but inſiſted, that the plaintiff could not now take advantage of them; becauſe he had not by demanding oyer of the recognizance in the court below, made it part of the record, and ſo brought it before this court; and that as it ſtands now, the recognizance is no part of the record. Salk. 262, 264. 1 Roll's Abr. 760. pl. 1. 2.

And the court being of this opinion, gave judgment for the defendant in error. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 444.

Trinity, 5 Geo. Wraight v. Kitchingman. Error.

On a writ of error from the C. B. of an award of execution on a ſci. fa. on a recognizance of bail;

The defendants aſſign for error, that the plaintiffs in Hilary term, 3 Geo. obtained judgment againſt Welbourn, (one of the bail) in a plea of treſpaſs, and alſo in a plea of debt on demand, for 53 l. debt, and 15 s. damages, on which proceſs iſſued againſt him, returnable in eight days of the Purification, at which day the defendants entered into a recognizance for his paying the debt, or rendering his body. And further, that the plaintiffs did not, within two terms, according to the practice of the court, declare againſt the ſaid Welbourn, in the plea aforeſaid, whereby the recognizance was diſcharged. And they further ſay, that the plaintiffs, in Trinity term following, cauſed the defendant to be ſummoned in the ſaid court, to anſwer the plaintiffs in a plea of debt for 53 l. and obtained judgment thereon, and that ſuch judgment was had on thoſe proceedings, and not in that action wherein the defendants became bail; but notwithſtanding this, the award of execution is grounded on the judgment in that collateral action.

The plaintiffs in error aſſigned ſeveral other errors; and on in nullo eſt erratum pleaded by the defendants in error, the matter was ſet down for argument. And, on hearing council,

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. At preſent this recognizance is no part of the record. The defendant, by praying oyer, might have made it ſo; and if the court below had denied oyer, he would have had the ſame advantage on a bill of exceptions.

Powis, Juſtice, concurred.

Eyre, Juſtice. In the caſe of Trevivian v. Lawrence, the judgment on which the ſci. fa. was brought, was really of another term than the recital mentioned; yet the court held, that no advantage could be taken of it after a ſci feci returned. Therefore the judgment of the C. B. was affirmed. Vide Strange, vol. 1. page 197.

Trinity, 7 Geo: Everett v. Gery. Error.

On the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. againſt the bail, a four day rule was given, and on the fourth day the principal brings error; and the defendant's council, thereon, moved to ſtay proceedings againſt the bail, pending the writ of error; and cited Myer v. Arthur, and Church v. Throgmorton, in the Houſe of Lords; where the houſe threatened to commit the attorney, for proceeding againſt the bail, pending error in parliament.

As to the firſt caſe, the court ſaid it differed, for there the bail came in time, while they might ſurrender the principal; which they cannot do here after the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. at which time no writ of error was brought. And as to the caſe in the Houſe of Lords, it was there agreed, that the court below could not reſtrain them; but the Lords ſaid, they expected more reſpect.

Per Curiam. We can make no rule. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 443.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Turton v. Hays.

The plaintiff had been non pros'd in a former action, for want of a declaration; and in a ſecond action it was moved, that the defendant might be diſcharged on common bail, alledging it to be the practice of C. B.

Per curiam. We know of no ſuch practice here, and think it very unreaſonable; for the plaintiff ſuffers enough by paying coſts in the firſt action, and therefore ought not to be in a worſe condition than before. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 439.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Glynn v. Yates.

The caſe was, the principal died, not having ſurrendered himſelf before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. and on motion the queſtion was, whether the bail are liable to the debt.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. The bail are bound by their recognizance to render the principal where judgment is againſt him, or to pay the condemnation money; but by the courſe of the court, the principal hath time to render himſelf in diſcharge of the bail, till the ſecond ſci. fac. againſt them is returned; and here the act of God intervened, viz. the principal died, ſo that he could not render himſelf within that time.

Eyre, Juſtice. It is true, the grace of the court is uſually extended to the bail where the principal did ſurrender himſelf, but never where he did not; this was the courſe of the court when Popham was Chief Juſtice, but it was altered by Lord Coke, and altered again in Crook's time; that if the principal did ſurrender himſelf before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. againſt the bail, they ſhould be diſcharged; but the indulgence of the court never extended farther.

It is wrong to ſay, that the plaintiff hath no damage by the death of the principal, dying before the time he had to ſurrender himſelf; for it is ſeen by daily experience, that men will pay their debts rather than be committed; and ſo might the principal in this caſe rather than be rendered in cuſtody.

Beſides, the plaintiff is a ſtranger to the bail, and there is no truſt or privity between him and them; but there is a great truſt between the principal and the bail; ſo that it ſeems very reaſonable they ſhould ſuffer in this caſe, rather than the plaintiff, who is an innocent perſon, for it is probable they may have a counter-ſecurity from the principal to indemnify them; and therefore it is more proper for them, than for the plaintiff to ſue ſuch executor or adminiſtrator on ſuch counter-ſecurity; for it is to be preſumed, that by reaſon of the truſt that is between them, they may know more of his concerns than it is poſſible for the plaintiff to know.

On the laſt day of term, judgment was given for the plaintiff againſt the bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 32.

Trinity, 8 Geo. Fiſher v. Emerton.

The plaintiff obtained judgment on the ſci. fa. againſt the bail, pending a writ of error by the principal, and took them in execution; and now they moved to be diſcharged.

Per curiam. Though you might have applied, and had the proceedings ſtayed, yet we will not ſet them aſide. If an action of debt had been brought on the judgment, we ſhould have granted an imparlance, if it had been aſked; but we never ſet aſide a judgment when it is once ſigned; becauſe we take it, you, by not applying in time, have ſubmitted to meet the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 526.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Anonymous.

On a motion for an attachment, the Chief Juſtice declared, that all the judges, on conſideration, had reſolved, that the ſheriff could not take bail on an attachment, but a judge at his chambers might. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 479.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Combes v. Blackall.

In debt on a bond, non eſt factum, i. e. it is not his deed was pleaded; and a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff.

To a ſci. fa. on this judgment, the defendant pleaded bankruptcy, and that the cauſe of action accrued before; and on the trial it appeared, the bond was given before the bankruptcy, but the judgment was after: and the judge who tried the cauſe, being of opinion againſt the defendant, there was a verdict for the plaintiff. And now, in an action of debt on the judgment, the defendant's council moved that the defendant might be diſcharged on common bail, becauſe the bond, which was the foundation of the demand, was before the bankruptcy. But not allowed.

Per curiam. We can look no farther back than the judgment, and therefore there muſt be bail. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 477.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Aldridge v. Snowden.

This was a motion to ſet aſide a judgment againſt the bail, where the ſecond ſci. fac. was returnable on the 13*th day of May*, and the writ of error was allowed on the ſame day, and notice given between three and four o'clock, the ſame day the bail ſurrendered the principal, and then judgment was obtained againſt the bail; and for an authority in point, the caſe of Myer v. Arthur was cited, Eaſter, 7 Geo. where it was reſolved by this court, that after a writ of error is brought on the principal judgment, the proceedings on the ſci. fac. againſt the bail ſhall ſtay, and the bail ſhall have four days after the affirmance of the judgment, to render the principal, or pay the condemnation money; and on the authority of this caſe, a rule was now made for the plaintiff to ſhew cauſe, &c. why judgment ſhould not be ſet aſide, and all further proceedings ſtayed.

And at another day a motion was made to diſcharge that rule, becauſe the bail ought to render the principal, &c. on the very day that the ſecond ſci. fac. was returnable, otherwiſe the plaintiff muſt have judgment, and it ought not to be ſet aſide.

It is true, the bail brought a writ of error on the very laſt day allowed by law for them to render the principal, and gave notice thereof about three of the clock in the afternoon, but did not render the principal till nine days afterwards, which cannot diſcharge the bail, neither is it any foundation to ſet aſide this judgment againſt them.

The council for the bail cited Myer v. Arthur's caſe to prove that they ought to be diſcharged, for in that caſe the ſecond ſci. fac. was returnable the 13*th February*, which was the laſt day of Hilary term, and notice given, that a writ of error was allowed two days before; and the plaintiff intending to proceed on the ſecond ſci. fac. was ſtopped on a motion.

It is true, the render of the principal on the day the ſecond ſci. fac. is returnable, would be too late; if the writ of error did not help it; but that being brought before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. the bail hath till four days after the affirmance of the judgment to render the principal.

To which it was anſwered, that this judgment was regular, and though, if the bail had come before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. and moved the court that proceedings might be ſtayed againſt them, there might have been ſome indulgence; yet when they did not make any application till after the judgment was ſigned, it ought not now to be ſet aſide.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. Application to ſtay proceedings againſt bail, by reaſon of a writ of error brought by the principal, ought to be made before the judgment was ſigned; for ſuch writ of error of itſelf is no ſuperſedeas to the proceedings againſt the bail. However, on the circumſtances of the caſe, ſince notice was given of the allowance of the writ of error, I think in reaſon and equity, the judgment ought to be ſet aſide, paying coſts, on the authority of Myer v. Arthur.

He was further of opinion, that it was neceſſary to move the court to ſtay proceedings; and if they could be ſtayed on a motion, then if the defendants paid coſts, and the plaintiff was put in as good a condition as if the motion had been made in time, the court may ſtay the proceedings, though the motion was made out of time, and the rather, becauſe it is againſt the bail, who ought to be favoured as far as poſſible.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. Such ſurrender on the return day of the laſt ſci. fac. muſt be made during the ſitting of the court. This judgment againſt the bail is ſtrictly regular, and ought not to be ſet aſide. The ſtaying proceedings againſt the bail, when the principal brings a writ of error, is merely an indulgence of the court, even when the bail move in time. All the proceedings are paſt, for judgment is obtained. This caſe differs from the common motions to ſtay proceedings on the bail-bond, for that is never granted, but by making the plaintiff ſecure of his debt if he recovers: for the judgment on the bail-bond ſtands as ſecurity for the debt. When proceedings againſt bail are ſtayed on a motion made in proper time, if the judgment is afterwards affirmed, the bail are allowed four days to ſurrender the principal after ſuch affirmance.

Then the court made a propoſal to ſet aſide the judgment, if the bail would be bound to pay the debt abſolutely, (without an election to pay the debt or ſurrender the principal) if the judgment ſhould be affirmed.

Which not being agreed to, the rule for ſhewing cauſe was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 131.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Waller's caſe.

The court was moved to ſtay proceedings on a ſci. fa. brought againſt the bail, there being a writ of error depending in the Exchequer Chamber.

Per curiam. The rule in the caſe of Myer v. Arthur, on a motion in this court, in Eaſter term, 7 Geo. was, that if the defendants in a ſci. fa. will confeſs judgment, and enter into a rule to pay the debt, or deliver up the principal, within four days after judgment ſhall be affirmed, in ſuch caſe, the proceedings on the ſci. fa. ſhould be ſtayed; and the Chief Juſtice was of opinion, that the like rule ſhould be made in this caſe.

It is true, the plaintiff in the ſci. fa. is to have judgment immediately againſt the bail, but he is tied up from ſuing out execution, till four days after judgment ſhall be affirmed, and then, on non-payment of the debt, or not rendering the principal, he is at liberty to take out execution; and by this means expences would be ſaved on both ſides. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 130.

Hilary, 10 Geo. The King v. Pepper.

A rule of this court was made, 15 Car. 2. that the plaintiff ſhould ſet forth in his writ or bill, an ac etiam of the ſum for which he expected the defendant ſhould give bail; and that if he brought an action without any cauſe, on purpoſe to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail, he ſhould be puniſhed.

The court was moved for an attachment againſt the defendant, who brought an action, with an ac etiam billæ in a great ſum, to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail, where nothing was due, as it appeared before a judge, the plaintiff being ſummoned before him, to ſhew his cauſe of action; and this was ſaid to be an abuſe of the proceſs of this court, and conſequently a contempt.

The court held, this was not ſuch a contempt as to grant an attachment againſt the plaintiff; but directed, that if the defendant was damnified, he might bring his action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 227.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Hutchinſon v. Smith.

The caſe was, one T. S. was arreſted at the ſuit of the plaintiff, and the defendant became bail to the ſheriff, for the appearance of the ſaid T. S. at the return of the writ; but before any further proceedings were had, the plaintiff died; yet his attorney took an aſſignment of the bail-bond, and proceeded to judgment and execution againſt the bail; and the court was moved to ſet aſide theſe proceedings, as irregular; and the matter being ſo reported by the maſter, they were ſet aſide. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 240.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Webſter v. Gearing.

A motion was made to quaſh the proceedings againſt the bail, the plaintiff having declared for more than was contained in the ac etiam in the writ.

One judge replied, that in the caſe of Wiatt v. Evans, anno 1694, it was adjudged to be a diſcharge of the bail; and another judge ſaid, that in the Common Pleas it was held good for ſo much; but that there being two cauſes of this kind now depending, the proceedings were ſtayed in this cauſe, till the point was reſolved in the other. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 234.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Chriſty v. The Bail of Anſtruther.

On a writ of error brought in the Exchequer Chamber, on a judgment given in B. R. the now defendants entered into a recognizance, purſuant to the ſtat. that the plaintiff in error ſhould proſecute his writ with effect; if the judgment ſhould be affirmed, then to pay the debt, damages, and coſts.

Afterwards the judgment was affirmed; and the plaintiff brought an action of debt, on this recognizance, againſt the bail; and the queſtion was, whether they ſhould be diſcharged on common bail; and it was ſaid, by their council, that they ought to be diſcharged, for it is againſt the practice of the court, that bail ſhould be required of bail.

The council on the other ſide obſerved, it was never yet determined, that ſpecial bail is not requirable in an action of debt on a recognizance of bail, but the reaſon of the caſe ſeems to require it, becauſe the recognizance is directly for payment of money; viz. to pay the debt if the judgment ſhould be affirmed; and certainly it was never yet denied, that where an action of debt was brought on a bond for the payment of money, but that ſpecial bail is always required; and the reaſon is the ſame for ſpecial bail in an action of debt, on a recognizance againſt the bail; for ſuch recognizance is a ſecurity for the payment of the condemnation money, and a collateral undertaking, that it ſhall be paid on the affirmance of the judgment; and the bail on the recognizance cannot be diſcharged, but on payment of the money; for they cannot render the principal, becauſe ſuch render does not lie by the bail on a writ of error.

Per curiam. It depends on practice, and practiſers not agreeing.

Forteſcue and Raymond, Juſtices, ſeemed of opinion, that ſpecial bail might be required; and thought, that in debt on a judgment ſpecial bail was always given.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, rather inclined to think ſo. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 238.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Wild v. Harding.

A rule being made to diſcharge the bail in this cauſe, on pretence that the principal had ſurrendered himſelf before the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. againſt the bail; now the court was moved to diſcharge that rule, for two reaſons.

1ſt. For that if there was any ſuch ſurrender, the plaintiff's attorney had no notice of it; and if there had been notice, the defendant's attorney ſhould have brought the bail-piece before the maſter, to have had it diſcharged, otherwiſe it is no ſurrender, by the expreſs rule of this court: and neither of theſe things being done, the ſurrender is not regular; and therefore the bail are not diſcharged there being no exoneretur, i. e. he is diſcharged, entered on the bail-piece, nor that the plaintiff owned the ſurrender was made in time.

It is the practice of the court, that the bail are not diſcharged without entering an exoneretur on the bail-piece, on notice given of the ſurrender; but if the defendants did not give notice, it is an irregularity which will not be ſupplied by the court, without paying coſts; but if the bail ſurrendered the principal fairly, though not ſtrictly regular, they ought to be favoured, and are indulged by the court to ſurrender him at any time before the return of the ſecond ſci. fa.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether the principal did ſurrender himſelf before ſuch return, and the beſt evidence of the matter is the bail-piece; but if he did ſurrender himſelf, and gave notice, he ought to pay coſts until the bail-piece was marked; for he is to take notice of the exoneretur, and not of what the attorney for the plaintiff told him. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 282.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Croſſe v. Talbot.

The court was moved, on behalf of the defendant, to ſet aſide the bail-bond given on his arreſt, and that common bail might be accepted for him; and he obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe. His affidavit ſhewed, that he was retained as valet de chambre to Mr. Hoffman, the Duke of Holſtein's reſident here, at 12*l.* 12*s.* per annum wages, and 10*s.* a week board wages, and a certificate of this was produced, under the reſident's own hand; but it did not appear that he either ſlept in the houſe, or actually executed the office.

The court held, that he ought to be a domeſtic ſervant, and really to execute the duty of his office, and that being a mere nominal ſervant was not ſufficient; and they diſcharged the rule.

A great many caſes have ſince been determined, on the ſame principle; but it was in thoſe caſes held, that the idea of a domeſtic ſervant was not confined to his lying in the foreign miniſter's houſe, provided he is a real ſervant to him, and actually performs the ſervice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 288.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Addiſon v. Patterſon.

One Charles Fountaine was arreſted at the ſuit of the plaintiff, and the bail-piece was marked thus; Peter Fountaine is delivered to bail, &c. who was arreſted by the name of Charles Fountaine; and in the recognizance of the bail, it appeared that they were bail for Peter Fountaine; and now, on a ſci. fa. brought againſt them, both the principal and bail plead this matter in abatement; and the court was moved to ſet aſide this plea, becauſe the bail cannot plead this in abatement; beſides, the principal and his bail cannot join in one plea.

The court were of opinion that the bail could not plead this miſnomer in abatement, though the principal might. So a rule was made for the defendant to anſwer over. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 290.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Smith v. Graham.

A rule was made on a motion for an attachment againſt one Chaſe, a bailiff, for taking inſufficient bail, on the arreſt of one (at the plaintiff's ſuit) on a bill of Middleſex. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 283.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Manning v. Turner.

The court was moved to ſet aſide a judgment againſt the bail, for that the principal ſurrendered himſelf the 2d day of May, and ſeven days afterwards gave notice thereof to the attorney for the plaintiff, that he had ſurrendered himſelf on that day before Juſtice Tracy, and two days afterwards he gave notice that he had ſurrendered himſelf before Juſtice Powys, and all this before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac.

It was ſaid on the other ſide, that though notice was given to the attorney, yet by the expreſs rule of this court, the bail are not diſcharged until the bail piece is marked, which was not done till after the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. it is true there is an exoneratur entered now, but that was after the ſigning the judgment.

To which it was replied; that admitting the fact to be as before-mentioned, yet the judgment ought to be ſet aſide, becauſe the plaintiff's attorney took the bail-piece from the judge's chambers, but did not leave it with the proper officer; but as ſoon as it was left with him, the attorney for the defendant entered an exoneratur, ſo that it was the plaintiff's fault that it was not entered ſooner.

This matter being referred to the maſter, he reported that the principal ſurrendered himſelf on the ſecond day of May, and notice was given to the plaintiff's attorney, that the ſurrender was before Juſtice Tra y on the ſeventh day of May, and two days afterwards that it was before Juſtice Powys, and the bail piece was diſcharged on the fourth day of the ſame month, and the ſecond ſci. fac. was returnable on the ninth day of May, and that the plaintiff's attorney took the bail piece from the judge's chambers, and kept it for a conſiderable time; and that there was not fifteen days between the teſte and return of the ſecond ſci. fac. neither was it four days in the office; and on this report the judgment was ſet aſide. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 281.

The caſe was thus, viz. an action was brought in this court, and judgment obtained, and a writ of error brought, returnable in the Exchequer Chamber. Two perſons became bail to the writ of error, before Pratt, Chief Juſtice; to which bail exception being taken; one juſtified himſelf in court, but the other did not; ſo that another additional bail was put in before Powys, Juſtice, at his chambers; on which entry before Powys the recognizance of the bail was drawn up, and the judgment being affirmed on the writ of error, two ſci. fa.'s were brought in London againſt the bail, and two nihils returned; and a ca. ſa. againſt the defendant, on which he was taken and impriſoned.

Per cur. If the ſecond bail had entered into a recognizance before the Chief Juſtice, as the firſt man did, that would not have related to the time of the firſt recognizance given by the other bail, and taken before the ſame Chief Juſtice; but here the ſecond bail entered into a recognizance before another judge, which makes no alteration of the caſe.

A judge may take a recognizance of bail at his chambers, and the entry in his book is a good warrant for the entry of it in the office, and the practice is ſettled to take ſuch recognizance at one time, and another at another time; for the firſt is de bene eſſe, and no common bail is given till the laſt is taken, and from that taking the recognizance is made up; for ſuch judge before whom the laſt bail is taken ſigns the roll, therefore though taken by different judges, the firſt is of no value till the laſt is taken, for then the bail and the entry is entire and perfect, and not before.

2dly. The return is good and proper; for the ſci. fac. is not grounded on a proceeding by bill, but on a collateral matter.

3dly. The ca. ſa. is good, though it is not indorſed.

5thly. The body may be taken in execution on ſuch recognizance.

Per curiam. The proceedings are regular: wherefore the motion was denied. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 187.

Two perſons jointly and ſeverally entered into a recognizance of 4000*l. bail* for another; and afterwards the plaintiff brought a ſci. fac. againſt both of them jointly, and had two nihils returned, on which the plaintiff prayed execution againſt each for the whole debt, which was awarded accordingly.

And now it was objected, that execution ought not to be awarded againſt each for the whole debt, becauſe a ſeveral judgment cannot be given on a joint ſci. fa. no more than on a bond.

It is true a recognizance may be joint and ſeveral, (as this was) and ſuch recognizance may warrant a joint and ſeveral ſci. fac. but yet, a ſeveral judgment can never be had on a joint ſci. fac. againſt each of the cogniſors, for the plaintiff might have brought a ſci. fac. againſt each of them ſeverally, and not againſt both jointly.

The court was of opinion, that this was the conſtant form; ſo the judgment was affirmed.

For if the award of the execution be joint, yet the plaintiff may have ſeveral executions; and though the ſci. fac. is joint againſt both, yet the execution may be ſeveral, for as the recognizance is joint and ſeveral, to compel the plaintiff to bring two ſci. fac.'s, would be only to multiply actions. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 199.

Hilary, 11 Geo. Anonymous.

See page 117 of this work, under the head arreſt of judgment.

Hilary, 11 Geo. Anonymous.

The practice of the court is, that where judgment is obtained againſt the principal, the bail may ſurrender him at any time before the return of the firſt ſci. fac. when it is returned ſcire feci, or at any time before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. where two nihils are returned thereon.

If the plaintiff proceeds by action of debt on the recognizance, the bail may ſurrender the principal within eight days after the return of the writ.

This was an action of debt on the recognizance againſt the bail, the writ was returnable on the eſſoign day of the term, and the principal was ſurrendered, and an exoneretur entered in the bail-piece on the fourteenth day of January; ſo it was moved, that the bail might be diſcharged, and they were diſcharged accordingly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 341.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. Heavyſide v. Davis.

In the principal caſe, there was judgment againſt the defendant, who became a bankrupt, and the plaintiff did not come before the commiſſioners to prove his debt, but took out a ſci. fac. againſt the bail; and after two nihils returned, had judgment againſt them, and they were taken in execution.

The court was moved, that they might be diſcharged, becauſe a certificate of the commiſſioners allowed by the Lord Chancellor is a diſcharge of the principal, who if he had been taken in execution, would have been diſcharged on producing it.

The judgment againſt the bail being regularly obtained, there being fifteen days between the teſte of the firſt writ of ſci. fac. and the return of the ſecond, and two nihils returned, bankruptcy in the principal, ſhall not be given in evidence, to avoid ſuch judgment regularly entered againſt the bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 349.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Anonymous.

The plaintiff obtained judgment againſt the principal for 2318 l. which judgment was conteſted by him, as far as he could, even to an affirmance in the Houſe of Lords, and afterwards the plaintiff obtained a judgment on a ſci. fac. againſt the bail; and the queſtion now was, whether they ſhould pay intereſt from the time: judgment was had againſt the principal, they offered to pay the principal ſum and coſts; and it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that he ought to have the whole; and the court inclined to that opinion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 336.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Brown v. Combs.

An objection was made againſt the bail in this cauſe, for that it is againſt the rule of this court to take an attorney as bail.

There was ſuch a rule, but the intention of making it was, that an attorney ſhall not be taken as good bail merely becauſe he is an attorney; but when he is reſponſible, and juſtifies, and is an houſe-keeper, then though he is an attorney, he is good bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 339.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Bond v. Turner.

Judgment was obtained by the teſtator, who died, and his executor ſued out a ſci. fac. againſt the defendant, and had judgment therein, and then he ſued out a capias ad ſatisfaciend. againſt him; and on non eſt inventus returned, he ſued out a ſci. fac. againſt the bail; and on a motion made to ſtay the proceedings againſt them, as being irregular, becauſe there were not four days between the teſte and the return of the ſci. fac. againſt the principal, that motion was granted; and then the plaintiff moved to quaſh all the proceedings for his own expedition; which was likewiſe granted on payment of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 305.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Sir John Walrond v. Jacob, Senior, Henricus Van Moſes.

On motion for leave to change the bail in this cauſe on the very day it was to have been tried by niſi prius, becauſe one of them was a very material evidence for the defendant, the council for the plaintiff objected againſt it, viz. that the bail ſhould not be changed, becauſe the principal was run away, and the bail had offered 100 l. reward to any perſon who ſhould bring him in; beſides, the new bail now offered, inſtead of the former, were bail to an action on a South Sea contract for 13,400 l. ſo that the plaintiff in this action cannot tell what they may be worth after the payment of that ſum.

If the bail ſurrender the principal, they ſhall be admitted to put in new bail, and then the old bail may give evidence at the trial; but the bail now offered being bail in another action for a conſiderable ſum, and a verdict againſt the principal; the plaintiff in this action cannot have timely notice to enquire into their circumſtances; therefore the court will not force new bail to the action, but the old ones muſt ſtand.

Note. That at the ſame time the court held that a plaintiff who was in Holland might make affidavit there, and get it atteſted by a public notary; and that it ſhould be admitted as evidence to hold the defendant to ſpecial bail here. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 322.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. The Caſe of the Bail of Boiſe and Sellers.

Boiſe and Sellers were brought up by habeas corpus from Wincheſter gaol, and were returned charged with two civil ſuits, and ſeveral Exchequer informations for frauds in the cuſtoms. It was moved on behalf of the bail in the civil actions, that they might be at liberty to ſurrender, according to 25 E. 3. c. 19. To which it was anſwered, by the attorney-general, that the king had a prerogative to hold his debtor in what lawful gaol he pleaſed. However, the court would never turn them over, till they were ſatisfied as to the reality of the debts, it being an application by the bail: whereon a reference was made to the maſter, and on his reporting that the civil actions were for juſt debts, and actually brought before any of the informations, they were turned over to the marſhal, on the ſurrender of the bail. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 641.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Parry v. Berry.

On a motion to ſtay proceedings on a ſci. fac. againſt bail, becauſe the defendant in the original action died after judgment recovered againſt him, and after a capias thereon ſued out and returned; but before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. againſt the bail, till which time the bail had time by the courſe of the court to ſurrender the principal, and were prevented doing it by the act of God, viz. his death; a rule was made to ſhew cauſe, which was afterwards diſcharged, becauſe it was the bail's omiſſion that they did not ſurrender him, he living till after the return of the capias. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1452.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 2. Chambers v. Robinſon.

The defendant, after judgment, ſurrendered himſelf in diſcharge of his bail, and lay two terms without being charged in execution, during which time the plaintiff brought an action of debt on the judgment; and after a recovery in that action, the defendant lay two terms more without being charged, and the plaintiff brought another action of debt on the ſecond judgment; whereon the defendant moved for a ſuperſedeas as to the two firſt actions, and that common bail might be accepted in the laſt: and, on conſideration, both were granted. It was agreed, that in the firſt action of debt on judgment, ſpecial bail might be required; but the court ſaid it would be a handle of oppreſſion, if they carried it any farther. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 782.

It was moved to ſtay proceedings againſt the bail, pending a writ of error brought by the principal, on the terms it was done in Myers v. Arthur's caſe: but it appearing here, that the bail was not put in on the writ of error, ſo as to make it an abſolute ſuperſedeas, the court refuſed it; ſaying, they would not go one ſtep further than the caſe of Myers v. Arthur. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 781.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Goodchild v. Chaworth.

A capias ad ſatisfaciendum was taken out againſt the bail on a writ of error, and the court refuſed to ſet it aſide, though 1 Rol. Abr. 898. is a caſe in point, that it will not lie againſt bail. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 822.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Baldwin v. Morgan.

The plaintiff out of the penalty of a recognizance of bail, levied not only the money recovered, but ſome coſts not included in the judgment, but ſuch as he really had been put to; and on motion it was held, that though equitable coſts may be levied out of the penalty of a bond, yet it was too hard to ſuffer it to be done againſt the bail, and therefore the overplus money was ordered to be returned. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 826.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 2. Steward v. Smith.

The defendant's council took exception to the ſci. fac. againſt the bail, that on ſetting out the capias ad ſatisfaciendum in the replication, it appeared the ſci. fac. bore teſte the very day the capias ad ſatisfaciendum was returnable; therefore it was ill, becauſe the ſci. fac. cannot iſſue till a capias ad ſatisfaciendum is returned and filed, which could not be preſumed to have been done the very day of the return. But the court ſaid it was well enough, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 866.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 2. Hall v. Howes

The defendant put in ſpecial bail, and then the plaintiff recovered judgment againſt him, and his bail ſurrendered him; but afterwards for want of the plaintiff's charging him in execution within two terms, he was diſcharged on filing common bail, and then the plaintiff brought an action of debt on the judgment, and held the defendant to ſpecial bail; the defendant now moved that he might be diſcharged on common-bail, on the authority of Clever v. Jordan, Hilary 8 Geo. 2. which was juſt this caſe. The defendant ſurrendered in diſcharge of his bail, and after two terms was diſcharged for want of the plaintiff's charging him in execution, and an action being brought on the judgment, was diſcharged on common-bail. The caſe of Chambers v. Robinſon was alſo cited, which was Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 2. where in an action of debt on a judgment, ſpecial bail was put in, and judgment for the plaintiff; and a ſecond action on that judgment being brought, the court would not then hold the defendant to ſpecial bail.

On the other ſide was cited Burdus v. Hoſier, Hilary, 7 Geo. 2. where a judgment of 2000 l. being recovered, and the defendant diſcharged in two terms for want of the plaintiff's charging him in execution, in an action on that judgment, the court obliged the defendant to put in ſpecial bail. But now, at the ſhewing cauſe, it appeared by affidavits which were made in the cauſe laſt cited, that the reaſon the defendant obtained a ſuperſedeas from the execution, was not any laches in the plaintiff, but by reaſon of ſome treaty between the parties, in hopes of making matters up.

Lord Hardwicke. The queſtion in Chambers v. Robinſon, was only how far the plaintiff was intitled to bail in an action of debt on a judgment; and the court held, that if the cauſe of action on which the judgment was obtained was bailable, that the plaintiff would be intitled to ſpecial bail in an action of debt on that judgment; but if he went on with actions on the ſecond judgment, he ſhould not, for that would be vexatious, and to accumulate coſts: and they held likewiſe, that if the original cauſe was not bailable, but the addition of coſts only made the judgment amount to a bailable ſum, that no ſpecial bail ſhould be required in an action on the judgment; but in this caſe the cauſe of action was bailable, but it depends on a collateral circumſtance, viz. the not being charged in execution; now, in the caſe of Burdus v. Hoſier, the great reaſon of the court's requiring ſpecial bail was, the agreement depending between the parties, which prevented the plaintiff's charging the defendant in execution; and the caſe of Clever v. Jordan is directly in point, where the court diſcharged the defendant on common bail, and that is to be ſure a reaſonable way, and will prevent vexation. Indeed we do not ſuffer little matters of treaties between the parties to alter the courſe of the court, unleſs it be a particular and expreſs agreement not to take advantage of laches: and I think a rule ſhould be made to make this matter certain; for in no caſe, where the defendant is diſcharged for want of being charged in execution, ſhould the plaintiff be intitled to ſpecial bail in an action on the judgment.

Per curiam. Let the defendant be diſcharged on common bail. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 244.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 2. Doldern v. Feaſt.

Per curiam. We have ſeen ſo much oppreſſion in letting the ſheriff's officers be bail, that we think proper to concur with the Common Pleas, in a general rule, not to accept of them, or ſerjeants at mace. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 890.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 2. Cole v. Buckland.

In this caſe the ſecond ſci. fac. was returnable the firſt day of term, and a week within term the bail moved to ſtay the proceedings, on the common terms of giving judgment on the ſci. fac. and taking four days to ſurrender after affirmance in the principal cauſe. But the court held they came too late, after their time to ſurrender was gone, and would not revive it again: all they would do was, to ſtay the ſuing out execution till after affirmance. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 872.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Ritſon v. The Bail of Naſh.

After judgment on a ſci. fac. againſt bail, it was moved to ſtay execution, the principal having brought error, and the bail undertaken to pay the condemnation money, and the coſts on the ſci. fac. in four days after the affirmance: but in this caſe there being no bail on the writ of error, the court made the bail undertake alſo to pay the coſts on the writ of error, in caſe the judgment was affirmed: and ſaid, it was a favour they were aſking, and they would make them ſubmit to equitable terms. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 877.

The defendant having prevailed with Collins and Bevan to become bail for him to the ſheriff in 300 l. at the return of the writ, they went before a judge, in order to put in bail above. And the defendant himſelf appearing and inſiſting that no bail ſhould be taken, the judge refuſed to do any thing in the matter; whereon the court was moved, to prevent ſo palpable a fraud, that the bail might be permitted to perform the condition of their bond, by putting in bail above, and on leave being given ſo to do, they put in bail before a judge, and the next day took up the defendant, and ſurrendered him in diſcharge of themſelves. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 876.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. Martin v. Moore.

The latitat was with an ac etiam for 80 l. and the declaration was to his damage of 150 l. and the verdict for 104 l. and there being variety of opinions in the books whether the bail ſhould be liable for ſo much, or totally diſcharged; and the queſtion having been many terms depending in this cauſe, it now came to be finally ſettled, and the authorities contradicting one another, the court took it up on the reaſon of the thing; and reſolved as on the one hand there was no colour to ſubject the bail to more than they were bound in, let the plaintiff's demand be ever ſo much more; ſo on the other hand there was no reaſon the plaintiff ſhould ſuffer by his moderation in taking bail, but the recognizances ſhould be conſidered as an agreement to pay 80 l. or deliver up the defendant; and therefore they made a rule, that the goods taken in execution ſhould be re-delivered, on the bail's paying the 80 l. and the coſts, or elſe the goods to be ſold, and the ſurplus returned. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 922.

Michaelmas,

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. 2. Hoare v. Mingay Ux' &c.

In Eaſter term laſt the plaintiff brought his action in C. B. againſt the defendant on a recognizance of the bail, but the defendant appearing to be an attorney of B. R. the plaintiff was forced to deſiſt: on the 20th of October laſt, the defendant ſurrendered the principal; and the firſt day of this term, a bill was filed. And on the defendant's motion to ſtay the proceedings; as having rendered the principal before an action brought, the queſtion was, whether proceedings in C. B. were to be regarded; for if they were, the render would be too late; and the court held the render to be good, it being before the return of the proceſs in this ſuit; and it was the fault of the plaintiff not to begin right at firſt. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 915.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 2. Duchett v. Martin.

Pending a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry on meſne proceſs, the defendant in error moved to quaſh the writ, becauſe no bail was given.

Per curiam. That is never done till the outlawry is reverſed; and then we take bail to appear to an original to be brought within two terms; and ſo it was done in this caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 951.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. Gammage v. Watkin.

The debt was three guineas, but the coſts ſwelled it to 14 l. 10 s. for which the plaintiff had judgment, and the defendant brought a writ of error. The plaintiff brought debt on the judgment, and held the defendant to bail; and on motion the proceedings were ordered to ſtay pending the writ of error, and common bail to be accepted; for as the original demand did not require bail, the addition of coſts will not alter the caſe. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 975.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. Rice v. Kelly.

On a motion to ſet aſide bail given in before a judge, the plaintiff not having notice of the bail, and that the defendant might put in bail to the plaintiff's ſatisfaction.

Reſolved, that leaving notice under the party's door is in that caſe ſufficient.

That though notice ſhould not be given to the plaintiff of the bail, yet if after the bail is put in, he takes notice of it, and makes enquiry after the perſons, and declares himſelf ſatisfied with them, it is the ſame thing as if he had notice before. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 28.

Trinity, 8 Geo. 2. Collet v. Jennis.

The defendant's council moved, that the recognizance of B. one of the bail for the defendant might be diſcharged, and another perſon, one Spillet might be put in in his room, becauſe the ſaid B. is a material witneſs for the defendant.

And Spillet came and offered himſelf, and undertook to be bail in court and juſtified.

Per curiam. Let B. be ſtruck out of the bail piece, and Spillet's name inſerted in his room. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 133.

Trinity, 10 Geo. 2. Robinſon v. Nicolls.

The plaintiff brought debt on a judgment where the money recovered was under 10 l. but by the addition of coſts exceeded it; and he held the defendant to bail, and bail was put in above. Then the defendants moved on the authority of Gammage v. Watkin, Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. that common bail ſhould be accepted, and the council for the plaintiff agreed it was the rule, but inſiſted, that by actually putting in bail, the defendant was too late in the application; and cited Laſerre v. Johnſon, Hilary, 13 Geo. 1. where on error an executor gave bail, which he need not have done; and the court refuſed to vacate the recognizance.

But in this caſe the court ordered common bail; for the plaintiff, who was an attorney, ought not to have marked his proceſs for bail, and therefore ſhould not take advantage of his own miſtake. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1077.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. 2. Turner v. Warren.

The plaintiff brought his action for 200 l. for ſo much loſt to the defendant at play; and the queſtion was on ſtat. 9 Ann, c. 14. which gives an action of debt at any time within three months againſt the winner, whether the defendant could be held to ſpecial bail; the defendant's council comparing it to the caſe of actions on penal ſtatutes, where bail is never required.

Per curiam. There ought to be ſpecial bail in this caſe, which is at the ſuit of the party aggrieved, and wherein the defendant is a debtor to the plaintiff; and the clauſe is to be conſidered as remedial. And therefore, on conſideration, and talking with the other judges, ſpecial bail was ordered. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1079.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. 2. Smith v. Dudley.

By ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 9. ſheriffs are not to take ſpecial bail in Wales, or counties palatine, on proceſs from Weſtminſter-hall, unleſs a debt of twenty pounds is ſworn to. In this caſe ſpecial bail was taken for 12 l. on a proceſs iſſued in Lancaſhire; and on a motion for common bail, it was inſiſted, that ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 29. for not holding to bail under 10 l. having only an exception of Scotland, was intended to extend to all other places, and conſequently was a virtual repeal of ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3.

Per cur. They are not inconſiſtent; for ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. does not ſay you ſhall have bail for 10 l. but that you ſhall not have bail under 10 l. whereas in ſtat. 11 & 12 W. 3. there are negative words: and the oath here being only to 12 l. the plaintiff was not intitled to ſpecial bail, and the rule for common bail muſt be abſolute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1102.

Trinity, 13 Geo. 2. Elliott v. Smith.

It was held, that if there is fifteen days between the teſte of the firſt, and the return of the ſecond ſci. fa. againſt the bail, it is ſufficient, without any regard to the number of days between the teſte and return of each: and that a capias ad ſatisfaciendum may be taken out againſt the bail, without any fieri facias, or return of no goods, being made thereon by the ſheriff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1139.

Trinity, 14 Geo. 2. Heathcote v. Goſlin.

The affidavit to hold to bail was, that the defendant borrowed 2000 l. of the plaintiff on bottomree, which money is now due and owing to this deponent, by virtue of the ſaid bond, as thereby may appear. It was objected by the defendant's council, that this was no oath for the debt; for ſuppoſe every penny is paid, and a ſeparate receipt taken for it, yet on the face of the bond the whole will appear due.

Per curiam. It is not ſufficient.

The plaintiff would have made a ſupplemental affidavit, but the court refuſed to receive it, for the act of parliament requires a full oath previous to the iſſuing the proceſs, that defendants may not be harraſſed. And therefore, in this caſe, the defendant was diſcharged on common bail. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1157.

Eaſter, 15 Geo. 2. Grey v. Jefferſon.

On a ſci. fa. brought againſt bail, the plaintiff made a miſtake in ſetting out the recognizance, which the defendant took advantage of by pleading nul tiel record; and afterwards the plaintiff moved to amend it, but was denied; for ſcire facias's againſt bail are never amended, and the practice is, for the plaintiff to quaſh his own writ. This may be to defeat the bail of an opportunity to ſurrender, which he would have done, if he could not have been ſure of ſucceeding in his plea. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1165.

Eaſter, 16 Geo. 2. Smith v. Nicholſon.

The plaintiff, in order to proceed againſt the bail, took out a capias ad ſatisfaciendum on the 3d of December, and on the 4th a writ of error was allowed; notwithſtanding which he called for a return of the capias from the ſheriff, who returned non eſt inventus thereon; and then waiting till the writ of error was at an end, proceeded by ſci. fa. againſt the bail. And now, on motion, the whole proceedings were ſet aſide; for the ground of them, viz. the return of non eſt inventus, was obtained after notice of the writ of error allowed, which in its nature ſtopped all ſort of proceedings; and the ſheriff could not ſo much as look after the defendant, in order to ground ſuch a return. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1186.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. Rios v. Beliſante.

The affidavit to hold to ſpecial bail was made by a merchant in London, ſwearing that the defendant owed the plaintiff 270 l. as appears by an affidavit made by the plaintiff, in Amſterdam, which the deponent believes to be true.

Per curiam. There can only be common bail; for the oath abroad is no ground for our proceſs, and then there is nothing but the belief of a third perſon, which is not ſufficient. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1209.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. Beliſante v. Levy.

The affidavit to hold to ſpecial bail being defective, common bail was ordered; and thereon the plaintiff, on the 19th of April, made a full affidavit, and took out a new writ, and held the defendant to bail; and the next day, viz. 20th April, moved to diſcontinue, on payment of coſts.

Per curiam. The plaintiff has been too quick, for he ſhould have had the coſts taxed and paid, before he took out a new writ: therefore let the defendant be diſcharged on common bail, and let the plaintiff pay him his coſts of this application. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1209.

Hilary, 18 Geo. 2. Walrond v. Franſham.

An executrix, in order to hold the defendant to bail, made an affidavit that he was indebted to her teſtator in ſo much money, as appears by the books of her teſtator. And it was held inſufficient, and common bail was ordered. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1219.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. Turner v. Schomberg.

The defendant gave his note for 36 l. and was afterwards diſcharged on the inſolvent debtors act. He afterwards meeting the plaintiff, promiſed to pay him the debt, at two guineas per month, and paid twelve guineas accordingly: And being now ſued for the reſt, the court diſcharged him on common bail, ſaying it was no new conſideration, but the old debt. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1233.

Michaelmas, 18 Geo. 2. Taylor v. Waſteneys.

The defendant being arreſted for 25 l. laid in gaol till he was ſuperſeded. The plaintiff meeting him afterwards, got a note of him for 20 l. and brought a freſh action on it, and held him to bail. But the court diſcharged him on common bail; for it is but a farther ſecurity, and does not extinguiſh the former cauſe of action, which may be declared on ſtill. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1218.

The defendant was convicted for felony, and pardoned on condition of tranſportation; and having alſo a civil action depending againſt him, in which he had given bail; they brought him up by habeas corpus, in order to ſurrender him. It was objected, that the court could not take him out of the cuſtody of the ſheriff, and commit him to the Marſhal; to which it was anſwered, that on the return of the writ he was to be conſidered as the priſoner of the court, who might do what they would with him, and ſend him back to Newgate for ſafe cuſtody: ſo the bail were admitted to deliver him to the Marſhal, and the court immediately remanded him to Newgate. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1217.

Michaelmas, 18 Geo. 2. Olmius v. Delany.

In debt on a bond for 900 l. the defendant put in bail, who juſtified in court, and were allowed. The plaintiff finding they were forſworn, and worth nothing, diſcontinued; but before he had done ſo, he arreſted the defendant in a ſecond action, and held him to bail. The defendant moved to be diſcharged on common bail, according to the caſe of Beliſante v. Levy, and obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe; when the whole villainy appearing, the court diſcharged the rule, and ſaid, the plaintiff was right in laying hold of him as he did; for had he diſcontinued before, the defendant would probably have run away; and therefore ordered that he ſhould be held to ſpecial bail. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1216.

The plaintiff recovered in the court of Meudon in France, damages and coſts, for a malicious proſecution, to 2500 l. he arreſted the defendant here, and held him to bail on an affidavit of ſo much being due to him on a judgment or decree. The court held, that this did not warrant holding to bail; for on a decree here, there can be no bail; and whatever might be the caſe of a money debt contracted and ſued for abroad; yet this being a caſe of damages for a malicious proſecution, can never be conſtrued to raiſe a debt here. So common bail was ordered. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1243.

Trinity, 21 Geo. 2. Richardſon v. Jelly.

Per curiam. Where the bail do not apply to ſtay the proceedings, pending a writ of error, till their time to ſurrender is out, we will not give them any time for that purpoſe, but only four days to pay the money in, after the judgment is affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1270.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2. Woolley and others, v. Cobbe and others, Bail of Cobbe, a Bankrupt.

The defendant being a bankrupt pending the action, the bail were fixed in July, and the bankrupt obtained his certificate in Auguſt following.

The queſtion before the court was, whether the bail ſhould be diſcharged, the bankrupt having obtained his certificate, though not till after the debt levied, and the money in the ſheriff's hands; or whether the bail were abſolutely fixed, from the levy being made before the certificate was obtained?

Per curiam. If the certificate is obtained before the bail are fixed, they ſhall be diſcharged; but if they are fixed before the certificate is obtained, they remain liable. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 245.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Capron v. Archer.

The queſtion before the court was, the terms on which the bail ſhould be allowed time to ſurrender the principal, after a writ of error brought.

Deniſon and Foſter, Juſtices, (being the only judges on the bench) held, that it was the allowance of the writ of error that was a ſuperſedeas to the proceedings below, and that the notice of ſuch allowance was only neceſſary to bring the party into contempt, if he ſhould proceed on his judgment afterwards.

In this caſe, the defendant's writ of error was allowed before the time was expired, within which the bail had indulgence to ſurrender the principal; the notice of ſuch allowance was not given to the plaintiff's attorney till after the expiration of the time which they had for ſurrendering the principal.

The court gave the bail the ſame terms in this caſe, as are uſual when they apply within the time given ex gratia by them to ſurrender the principal; and accordingly the rule to ſhew cauſe why the proceedings on the writs of ſci. fac. brought againſt the bail ſhould not be ſtayed till the writ of error was run out; the bail undertaking to pay the plaintiff the damages recovered by the ſaid judgment, or ſurrender the defendant into cuſtody, &c. within four days next after the determination of the ſaid writ, provided the ſame was given in favour of the defendant, was made abſolute Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 340.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Bond v. Iſaac.

The defendant being inliſted for a ſoldier, and in the Savoy, was brought up by his bail by habeas corpus, in order to be ſurrendered in diſcharge of them.

Lord Mansfield. We may firſt commit him to the Marſhal, and then remand him immediately to the Savoy.

If he was a ſoldier at large, his bail may bring him in and ſurrender him; he muſt be committed to the cuſtody of the Marſhal on ſuch ſurrender, and inſtantly ſet at large, and ſo may we in this caſe.

Accordingly, the defendant was, on being ſurrendered by his bail, firſt committed to the cuſtody of the Marſhal; and the Marſhal was ordered to deliver him inſtantly to the keeper of the Savoy; and an exoneratur was ordered by the court to be marked on the bail-piece. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 339.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Bond v. Iſaac.

The exoneratur before directed to be entered on the bail-piece in this cauſe, was not actually entered thereon, by the omiſſion of the officer whoſe duty it was ſo to do; but the plaintiff in the ſuit had notice of the defendant's ſurrender, though his attorney had not.

The plaintiff's attorney ſued out ſci. fac.'s againſt the bail, who paid the money. The bail were ſued in London, where the original action was; the ſurrender was in Middleſex, and there the bail-piece remained.

The council for the bail moved to ſet aſide the ſci. fac.'s for irregularity, with coſts, and the money to be reſtored, on the following objections, and obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe.

1ſt. The plaintiff being appriſed of the ſurrender and order of the court.

2dly. The ſci. fac.'s not being ſued out into Middleſex.

Per curiam. We are clearly of opinion that the ſci. fac.'s are irregularly ſued out. Therefore the rule was made abſolute without coſts; the plaintiff being gone abroad, and his attorney not having acted with any ill deſign or intention to oppreſs. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 409.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. Bailey v. Dillon.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why the defendant ſhould not be diſcharged on common bail.

Caſe. The defendant being indebted to the plaintiff, became a bankrupt. The commiſſion iſſued 7th May 1754, and he obtained his certificate, which was ſigned 30th Auguſt, and allowed in September following. In September, or November, 1755. this plaintiff, who had not come in under the commiſſion, produced to the defendant an account between them, in which there was a balance due from the defendant to the plaintiff, of 74*l.* and upwards, and which was remaining due at the time of the bankruptcy. The defendant acknowledged the balance, and promiſed to pay it to the plaintiff when he ſhould be able.

The queſtion before the court was, whether the defendant ought to be diſcharged on common bail, or ſhould be held to ſpecial bail.

The court would not enter into the general and principal queſtion, but were unanimous, that the defendant ought in this caſe to be diſcharged on common bail; and the rule was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 736.

Trinity, 32 Geo. 2. Pomp v. Ludwigſon.

On a motion to diſcharge the defendant on common bail, the caſe was; a merchant of London, whoſe correſpondent in Sweden had ſent him over the accounts between him and the defendant, could only ſwear to his belief of his debt, with a reference to the account ſent from Sweden.

Lord Mansfield. The ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 29. requires a poſitive oath of the debt, which poſitive oath may not be contradicted by the defendant.

Foſter, Juſtice, concurred, and the defendant was diſcharged on common bail. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 655.

Trinity, 33 & 34 Geo. 2. Moultby v. Richardſon.

The defendant's council moved, that the defendant might be diſcharged on common bail; the affidavit to hold to bail being, only that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in ſuch a ſum, as he computes it.

Foſter and Wilmot, Juſtices, (the only two on the bench) thought it ſufficient, and the motion was denied. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1032.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 3. Palmer v. Needham.

On a motion to ſhew cauſe why the bail-piece ſhould not be diſcharged, and common bail be accepted, and alſo to ſtay execution till four days after the determination of the writ of error, a rule was obtained.

Caſe. The original demand was 3*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* the plaintiff brought his action thereon, and obtained judgment, with coſts; the debt and coſts amounted to above 10*l.* The plaintiff brought an action of debt on the judgment, and held the defendant to ſpecial bail.

On ſhewing cauſe, the court were clearly of opinion, that as the original debt was under 10*l.* the increaſe of coſts was not ſufficient to oblige the defendant to give ſpecial bail; the intention of the ſtat. being, that ſpecial bail ſhould be required where the original debt amounted to upwards of that ſum; and that, as ſpecial bail ought not to have been taken at all, the bail-piece muſt be diſcharged, and common bail accepted. Therefore the rule was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. page 1389.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 3. Hunt v. Coxe.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe, the court were unanimouſly of opinion, that it was neceſſary to adhere ſtrictly to the eſtabliſhed rules of the court, as to the time and manner of bail ſurrendering the principal.

The two points on which this caſe turned, were the filing the return of the ca. ſa. againſt the principal, and the actual render of the principal within the limited time.

The court ſaid, the ca. ſa. againſt the principal was little more than form, and chiefly deſigned to intimate to the bail, what kind of execution the plaintiff deſigned to take; and as the leaving the ca. ſa. in the ſheriff's office, was a notice to the bail, that the plaintiff would proceed againſt the defendant's perſon, it was the bail's duty to ſearch the office to ſee if any ca. ſa. was left.

As to the time and manner of ſurrendering, the court held, that a ſurrender at about half after 11 o'clock at night, on the laſt day, without bringing the defendant into court, or before a judge, in order to have an exoneratur entered on the bail-piece, was not ſufficient. Therefore, the rule to ſhew cauſe, was diſcharged with coſts, for the court would not meddle with the ſufficiency of the time for rendering the principal, becauſe a ſci. feci had been duly returned by the proper officer. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1360.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 3. Cracraft v. Gledowe.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not iſſue againſt the Sheriff of Middleſex, for diſcharging out of his cuſtody the defendant in this cauſe, who had been taken on a capias utlegatum, on the defendant's attorney engaging under his hand, to appear for the defendant, and reverſe the outlawry, without taking ſecurity by bond in double the ſum for which bail was required as directed by ſtat 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 18. in all caſes where ſpecial bail is required by the court.

On ſhewing cauſe, Yates, Juſtice, obſerved, that by ſtat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2. no Sheriff can diſcharge any perſon taken on a capias utlegatum, without a ſuperſedeas firſt obtained, the words of the ſtat. being "without a lawful ſuperſedeas firſt had and received for the ſame;" and by ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 27. no ſpecial writ or proceſs ſpecially expreſſing the cauſe of action, ſhall be iſſued where the cauſe of action in a ſuperior court ſhall not amount to 10 l. In this caſe the capias utlegatum recites the original, ſpecially expreſſing the cauſe of action.

The court were ſtrongly inclined to think that the ſheriff had acted improperly, and adviſed his council to put in bail to the outlawry, and to give him an opportunity, enlarged the rule, when the ſheriff thought proper to undertake to pay the debt and coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1482.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 3. Pullen v. White.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe, the queſtion before the court was, whether the defendant was, or was not, entitled to be diſcharged on common bail, on ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 21. and the rules made thereon.

Caſe. The defendant was arreſted on a writ taken out four days before the end of Eaſter term, returnable on the laſt day of the then next term. The arreſt was made within two days of Eaſter term. The defendant remained a priſoner in cuſtody of the ſheriff, till after the end of Trinity term following, without being charged with a declaration, and then applied by ſummons to be diſcharged, which was refuſed.

On ſhewing cauſe, the court were of opinion, that the defendant ſhould be diſcharged on common bail. Lord Mansfield obſerved, there was no difference between a man's being in the cuſtody of the ſheriff, and his being in the cuſtody of the Marſhal. The defendant was therefore ordered to be diſcharged, on filing common bail. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1448.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 3. Jennings v. Martin.

On a rule being obtained by the defendant to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not be diſcharged on common bail, from a defect in the plaintiff's affidavit to hold him to bail, viz.

That the defendant was indebted to him in ſuch a ſum as appears by agreement, bearing date ſuch a day.

Per curiam. The affidavit not being poſitive, as ſtat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 29. requires, is a fatal objection. Therefore let the rule be made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1447.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 3. Campbell v. Daley.

The opinion of the court was taken in this cauſe, on the following queſtion, "Whether in a caſe originally requiring ſpecial bail, and the defendant ſtanding out to an outlawry, he can come in and appear to the outlawry, without putting in ſpecial bail." See ſtatutes 31 Eliz. cap. 3. and 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 18.

Per curiam. There ought to be ſpecial bail; it would be unreaſonable that the defendant ſhould reap a benefit by ſtanding out till proceſs of outlawry; he certainly ought not to be in a better ſituation than if he had appeared at firſt; the court therefore in this caſe gave directions, that the filacer ſhould not iſſue a ſuperſedeas till the defendant had put in ſpecial bail, and a week was given him ſo to do. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1920.

Criminal Caſes.

All crimes were bailable at common law, homicide alone was by ſtat. excepted out of the power of the ſheriff, ſo that he could not bail in that caſe, without the writ de odio & atia, and that was founded on an inquiſition, by which it was found, that the party was indicted out of malice.

In caſes of murder, manſlaughter, felony, &c. the party is not bailable, by a juſtice of peace, by ſtat. 1 Weſtm. cap. 15. where there is any preſumption of guilt; but the court of K. B. has a diſcretionary power of bailing in ſuch caſes, the ſtatute not extending thereto.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Croſby's Caſe.

The defendant was brought to the bar by a hab. corp. the laſt day of term; and his council moved that he might be diſcharged or bailed, having entered his prayer the firſt day of Trinity term laſt, and was indicted the laſt term; and afterwards this term again, was indicted for the ſame ſpecies of treaſon, but never tried on either of them; the council alledged, that the end of the ſtatute was, that no perſon ſhould be above two terms under the ſame accuſation; and if a ſecond indictment being found ſhould prevent his being ſet at liberty, at that rate, freſh indictments being found every term, he would never be diſcharged, and ſo the ſtatute would be eluded. The attorney and ſolicitor general agreed, if the caſe had ſtood ſingly on the firſt indictment, he ought to be bailed; but there is an indictment for another treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the King, and the overt-act was laid in Ireland; but the ſecond is for a treaſon in England.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This commitment and both indictments are for the ſame ſpecies of treaſon, though the overt-acts are differently laid; but the laſt indictment agrees exactly with the commitments; beſides, the prayer relates to the commitment, ſo that the party ought to be tried for the treaſon for which he is committed within two terms; and the deſign of the act was, to prevent a man's lying under an accuſation for treaſon, &c. above two terms.

Eyre, Juſtice, concurred: both declared they would give no opinion in the caſe, but bailed the priſoner by virtue of their diſcretionary power. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 66.

Trinity, 7 W. 3. Fitz-Patrick's Caſe.

Fitz-Patrick was committed to Newgate by the privy council for aiding Colonel Dorrington to eſcape out of the Tower, where he was committed for high treaſon, and being brought here by habeas corpus, was bailed; becauſe, though the commitment was for high treaſon, yet there was no proſecution, and a ſeſſions was paſt. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 103.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. The King v. The Earl of Aileſbury.

The Earl of Aileſbury moved to be bailed, and ſeveral reaſons were urged by his council; but the court bailed him by virtue of their diſcretionary power, without any regard to its being in or out of the habeas corpus act, conſidering the length of his impriſonment, his indiſpoſition of body; and that Goodman, who was ſworn to be a material evidence againſt him, was here in England ſeveral months after his Lordſhip's impriſonment; and that during all that time he was neither indicted nor proſecuted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 117. Salk. vol. 1. p. 103.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Armſtrong v. L'Iſle.

On an appeal of murder, the appellee was brought to the bar; and it was moved, that he might have his clergy, on his conviction of manſlaughter; on an indictment whereon he was tried laſt aſſizes for Cumberland.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. There have been reſolutions, that the judges may defer the allowance of clergy to a priſoner to expoſe him to an appeal. In the caſe of Goring v. Deering, the priſoner was convicted of manſlaughter; his clergy was reſpited; and an appeal was brought: he pleaded all this matter, but his plea was diſallowed, by advice of all the judges. I tried him on the appeal; but I muſt confeſs I was never ſatisfied with that reſolution, being of opinion that it is the duty of the court to allow the priſoner his clergy, the ſame aſſizes or ſeſſions wherein he is convicted.

The clergy, in the time of Edw. 3. complained that after clerks were convicted of felony, the judges delayed the giving them their clergy, on ſuggeſtion that there were other matters againſt them; which they might do on this account, becauſe till ſtat. 23 H. 8. clergy was allowed in all caſes except treaſon. And if a man had his clergy once, the delivering him over to the ordinary was an abſolute diſcharge of all offences before clergy had; but notwithſtanding this reaſon, they complained thereof; whereon ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 5. was made, which ſtands unrepealed; whereby it is enacted, that a clerk ſhall be preſently arraigned for all his offences, or otherwiſe delivered to the ordinary; where by the word preſently is meant the ſame ſeſſions or aſſizes, &c. wherein he is convicted. Now then, if by this ſtatute the party muſt have his clergy the ſame ſeſſions he is convicted, and you have lodged an appeal, you may go on therewith; but if you will not go on, you muſt not delay him of his clergy. By ſtat. 3 H. 7. c. 1. auterfoits convict ſhall be no bar in an appeal, unleſs clergy had; the deſign whereof was, to ſave the right of the church, by which the having of clergy was a diſcharge not only for the offence for which he was convicted, but alſo for all other offences before; ſo that having clergy on conviction of manſlaughter was a diſcharge of an indictment of larceny, or other ſuch crime. Before the ſtatute 18 of Eliz. if a man was guilty of two felonies, in one whereof he might have had his clergy, in the other not, and he had his clergy in one before he was arraigned of the other; the other was hereby diſcharged; for remedy of which that ſtatute was made. Stone's caſe, in Dy. 214. b. which is obſcurely reported, is remarkable in this point. Stone had committed two felonies, in one whereof he might have his clergy, in the other not. He was firſt indicted of the felony where the clergy lay, and convicted, and had clergy, but no entry having been made of his being delivered to the ordinary, next ſeſſions he was convicted of the other felony, but judgment reſpited; and the advice of all the Queen's judges and ſerjeants was taken, whether he ſhould receive judgment to be hanged, or delivered to the ordinary: they were divided in their opinion, ſeven againſt ſeven; but at length the opinion of the latter ſeven prevailed, that he ſhould not be hanged; becauſe if he had his clergy, it would have been a diſcharge of all other felonies committed by him before that conviction; and the delay thereof being the act of the court, ſhould not turn to his prejudice. Now, I think, a man, notwithſtanding his being found guilty of manſlaughter, may be appealed to, the ſame ſeſſions before the clergy had; but to make no determination in this point, we are to conſider now, whether he may be bailed. Co. Ent. title Indictment, there was an indictment at the aſſizes for murder, the party being found guilty of manſlaughter; the conviction removed into this court, where he was bailed.

Per curiam. Let him be bailed. And after his clergy was allowed him, for the reaſons before given by Holt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 109.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Barney's Caſe.

A bill of indictment was found againſt her at the quarter-ſeſſions, in Norwich, for petty treaſon, and the murder of her huſband. She came now in cuſtody, and moved the court, by her council, that ſhe might be bailed. It is true, this caſe was not within the common rule; but it appearing by affidavit of the fact, that it was a malicious proſecution, and there being nothing done either on the indictment, or the coroner's inqueſt, or at the aſſizes, and the man being dead above a year, ſhe was bailed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 323.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. The King v. Keat.

The court refuſed to bail the priſoner, he being found guilty of manſlaughter; for that they could not bail him till clergy had, according to Buckler's caſe, in Style. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 102. Salk. vol. 1. p. 103.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Armſtrong v. L'Iſle.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. We cannot bail L'Iſle on a conviction of manſlaughter, before clergy had, unleſs a pardon be ready to be produced under the great ſeal, and then we may, though attainted of murder, or treaſon; and ſo on a writ of error to reverſe an attainder, we may bail him, and bind him over to proſecute the writ of error. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 108. Salk. vol. 1. p. 103.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Marriot's Caſe.

Marriot was committed for forging indorſements on Exchequer bills; and on a habeas corpus, was bailed; becauſe the crime was only a great miſdemeanor; for though the forging the bills be felony; yet forging the indorſement is not. It is now felony, per ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 20. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 104.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Lord Mohun's Caſe.

Per curiam. If a man is found guilty of murder by the coroner's inqueſt, we ſometimes bail him; becauſe the coroner proceeds on depoſitions taken in writing, which we may look into. Otherwiſe where a man is found guilty of murder by a grand jury; becauſe the court cannot take notice of their evidence, which they by their oath are bound to conceal.

There is no difference between peers and commoners, as to bail. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 140.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

A perſon was committed for murder, and he moved to be bailed: two judges were of opinion that he might, becauſe the evidence did not prove him guilty; but Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Gould, Juſtice, were againſt it; becauſe the evidence did affect him, and to allow him this favour would diſcourage proſecutions; and they would not give any opinion of the evidence; for as it might prejudice the priſoner on the one ſide, ſo it might the proſecutor on the other. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 104.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Captain Kirk's Caſe.

The court was moved, that Captain Kirk, who was indicted for the murder of Conway Seymour, Eſq. might be admitted to bail; for that he and the other gentleman, Mr. Cage, were dangerouſly ill, by reaſon of the badneſs of the air, and the inconveniency of the priſon; and that on proof of the matter, the court had frequently bailed perſons, though the coroner's inqueſt had found them guilty of murder; and the reaſon is, impriſonment in ſuch, caſes is not deſigned as a puniſhment, but only to bring the parties to juſtice.

The council on the other ſide replied; It is true, your Lordſhip has a power to bail in treaſon or murder; but you will not exert that power, unleſs it be under extraordinary circumſtances: as in the caſes that have been quoted; and eſpecially in ſuch, where the proſecution is thought not to be well grounded.

But here is no pretence of a malicious proſecution; for here are two inquiſitions for murder found, one before the coroner, and the other before the grand jury. And it is not doubted whether Mr. Seymour was killed by this gentleman; that too plainly appears. Here is no peradventure, whether this unfortunate gentleman was killed by Captain Kirk; ſo that it is but reaſonable he ſhould give an account for his ſpilling blood.

Then here has not been any long lying in priſon, this being the firſt term after their commitment.

The blood of Mr. Conway is on the land, until it be revenged, or the juſtice of the nation be cleared by a fair trial. I could remind your Lordſhip of a caſe, where a perſon, after he was out on bail, was taken up again in the vacation, and committed, it being in the caſe of murder.

Chief Juſtice. I was very well ſatisfied with what I did then, and am ſo ſtill.

But indeed, in this caſe, I do not think their affidavits are full enough. It does not appear, that by this impriſonment they are in danger of their lives.

It is ſaid, in Egerton's caſe, in the 13 Jac. 1. that if there were any delay in the priſoners in putting off their trial, or in not giving timely notice, there could be no bailing of them; and here, ſince they did not give notice of their render to the proſecutor, as this is good reaſon for deferring their trial, ſo it is alſo the ſame for their not being bailed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. page 454. and vol. 12. p. 309.

Trinity,

Trinity, 12 W. 3. The King v. Daviſon.

On a habeas corpus, to bring up the body of one Daviſon a Quaker, the cauſe returned was a writ of excommunicato capiendo, which recited a ſignificavit of an excommunication, for teaching ſchool without a licence; and the court doubting whether this was an offence, deſired to hear council upon it; and then his council moved he might be bailed in the mean time; and cited ſeveral authorities, that a man might be bailed while the legality of the return is under the conſideration of the court. Vaugh. 157. Lat. 174. 1 Cro. 552, 557. and alſo Price's caſe, Mich. 29 Car. 2. B. R. who was taken on an excommunicato capiendo, and brought up by habeas corpus, and bailed, while the return was under conſideration; and in that caſe the court being againſt Price on the return, his council inſiſted that he could not be committed again, and thought they had got an advantage that way: but notwithſtanding that he was re-committed. He cited alſo Clerk's caſe, who was committed by the Vintner's Company, and bailed by Holt, Chief Juſtice, at his chambers. On theſe authorities, the defendant was bailed; and the entry was, he is delivered to bail, and in the mean time the court will adviſe thereon; and the condition of the recognizance was to appear the firſt day of the term, and from day to day, if the court ſhould adjudge the return good, to render his body to priſon. The Chief Juſtice ſaid, they bailed men in execution, on an audita querela; and by the petition of right, muſt bail, or remand men in convenient time. The ſame rule was made this term, in Reynold's caſe, (who was committed by the Court of Aldermen, for aſſiſting to marry a city orphan) while the court conſidered the return. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 105.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. The King v. Purſey.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. The King v. Stukely.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The bail to the action may plead an uſurious contract, though he be not privy to it. And a ſpecial plea is no plea till it be paid for; but if the party accept it, without inſiſting on that, it will be well. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 493.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

The defendant, in an indictment in this court being bailed on the indictment, and likewiſe in a civil action then pending againſt him in C. B. rendered himſelf in diſcharge of his bail in the civil action, to the Fleet; and from thence, by habeas corpus, he moved himſelf to the King's Bench, and eſcaped. His bail to the indictment moved, that their recognizance might be eſtreated, pretending he was taken out of their cuſtody by his commitment to the marſhal: but not allowed; for they muſt take care of him there, and they might have had him committed in diſcharge of them. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 105.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Dr. Watſon's Caſe.

Dr. Watſon, late Biſhop of St. David's, was taken on an excommunicato capiendo, and brought by habeas corpus; he pleaded to the writ, that he was a Lord of Parliament; and moved to be bailed while the return was under conſideration.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, though it had been done, it was in their diſcretion, and was contrary to the ſtat. of Weſtminſter; and he did not think it diſcretion, on ſuch a plea, which every body knew to be falſe, he being deprived by commiſſioners delegates, of whom he himſelf was one, on the appeal.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, agreed. And though they could not take judicial notice of the frailty of his plea, yet it ſhould lead their diſcretion: and he was not bailed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 106.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Bothell.

If a perſon brings a certiorari to remove an indictment, and does not give bail to try it according to the ſtatute, it is no ſuperſedeas; and a record once filed in this court is never ſent back, though council at the bar ſaid, it might be ſent back the ſame term. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Ann: The Queen v. Layton.

Layton, and others, were committed by the Lord Mayor of London, on his view, for a forceable detainer, and fined 100*l*. and committed in execution; and the record of the conviction was removed by certiorari; and the defendants brought a writ of error coram nobis, and aſſigned error in perſon: and now it was moved that they might be bailed. Vide 1 Cro. 557. Keb. 43. Sid. 320. 2 Keb. 173. The council for the Crown, in oppoſition thereto, urged, that in error to reverſe an outlawry, the court will take bail; but not to reverſe a judgment on an indictment: at laſt the court refuſed to bail him, being in execution for a fine, and having committed a very notorious breach of the peace in the heart of the city, though a long vacation was coming on. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 106.

Trinity, 10 Ann. The Queen v. Derby:

The defendant was committed in vacation, by a Secretary of State's warrant, for a libel, and brought on habeas corpus before Parker, Chief Juſtice; and entered into a recognizance to appear the firſt day of term.

On the firſt day of term he appeared, and, by his council, moved to be diſcharged; taking ſeveral exceptions to the commitment, which were over-ruled.

Per curiam. The defendant muſt anſwer the complaint, before he can be diſcharged from his recognizance. Vide Forteſcue, p. 140.

Eaſter, 12 Ann. The Queen v. Ridpath.

A recognizance was entered into by the defendant, with ſecurities; whereby he was bound to appear the firſt day of term, to anſwer, &c. (in the mean time to his good behaviour) and not to depart without the licence of the court.

An information is preferred againſt him by the attorney general; to which information, by reaſon of ſome defect in the pleading, the attorney general thought fit to enter a nolle proſequi, and then the attorney general exhibited another.

It was inſiſted, in favour of the defendant and his ſecurities,

1ſt. That the words to anſwer muſt be extended to thoſe crimes only, the ſuſpicion of which was the cauſe of his commitment, and entering into the recognizance, and not to the crime he ſhould afterwards commit, or be charged with; for then it would be utterly impoſſible for a man to get any body to be bound in a recognizance with him, an opinion of the innocence of the perſon, as to the crime charged, being probably the only motive that can be ſufficient to induce men to become bound for others.

2dly, That to anſwer refers to the firſt day of the term, when he was bound to appear.

3dly. That the entering a nolle proſequi, was a bar to the offence contained in the information; at leaſt, it was a diſcharge from any further proſecution from it: and that it was all one, whether he was diſcharged from the recognizance by a rule of court made for that purpoſe; or by a judgment, that by a neceſſary conſequence amounted to a diſcharge.

But the court were of opinion, that the recognizance extended to all crimes whatſoever he ſhould be charged with; and that if it had relation to any particular crime only, it muſt be mentioned in the recognizance; but that is only to anſwer generally.

That there was no ſuch inconvenience as was pretended; the bail in this caſe being bound in a ſum certain, and not to ſtand in the place of the principal, as in civil caſes: that the perſon's not appearing according to his recognizance, (be the cauſe or reaſon of his abſence what it will) was the cauſe of the forfeiture of the recognizance.

That anciently, in ſpecial bail, in civil actions, where the bail is to ſtand in the place of the principal, bail to one action was to ſtand bail to all actions that the defendant ſhould be charged with when in court: that this was hard in caſe of ſpecial bail, and is therefore now altered, though altered only by rule of court; that as to common bail, the law is ſtill the ſame; and that the nolle proſequi was neither a bar nor diſcharge. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 153.

Trinity, 2 Geo. The King v. Windham.

Sir W. W. being brought up by the Lieutenant of the Tower, his council moved that he might be admitted to bail, and offered ſeveral arguments to induce the court to bail him, which, with the anſwers given thereto by the Attorney and Solicitor General, are compriſed in the opinion of the court, which was delivered the laſt day of term, as follows:

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It has been admitted on all hands, that the court has a diſcretionary power in this caſe, and I think the arguments that have been made uſe of by the council for Sir W. W. are on theſe four points:

Firſt exception. That the commitment is, that he ſhall be kept ſafe and cloſe; it has been inſiſted, this is more than can be juſtified by law. This exception is offered without any authority to ſupport it, and is againſt an infinite number of precedents. But admitting this were a good exception, the conſequence would not be, that we ſhould diſcharge Sir W. W. but only as to his being kept cloſe. The keeping him ſafe is only by way of admonition to the officer, to put him in mind of his duty, and the puniſhment he muſt undergo in caſe of an eſcape. The common proceſs which goes to the ſheriff, commands him to take the defendant, and keep him in ſafe cuſtody.

Second exception. That the charge is not ſaid to be on oath; and if the Sercetary of State might commit people without oath, the whole nation would be their tenants at will. In anſwer to this I muſt obſerve, that the precedents are many of them ſo, and no authority has been cited in ſupport of the objection. The not mentioning it to be on oath, is not concluſive that it was not on oath. In Ferguſon's caſe, this exception was over-ruled, Trinity, 2 W. & M. And it was held in Kendal's caſe, that an impriſonment may be without oath; and alſo in the Houſe of Lords, that commitments may be without oath. If a man be taken with treaſonable papers, he may be committed, and any magiſtrate may commit him on ſight, without oath.

Third exception. That the commitment is generally for high treaſon; and it has been urged, that ſome particular ſpecies of treaſon muſt be expreſſed, and that it muſt have ſo much certainty as to appear to be high treaſon to the court. 2 Inſt. 52. 591. I think this opinion is not to be maintained. We preſume a magiſtrate does right till the contrary appears; and it has never been held neceſſary to expreſs the overt-act in the commitment. Lord Coke puts the caſe of treaſon againſt the King's perſon, and admits that to be ſufficient.

Fourth exception. It has been argued in favour of this laſt exception, that the habeas corpus act ſuppoſes the crime to be ſpecifically mentioned; becauſe it provides, that no perſon ſhall be committed a ſecond time for the ſame offence, after he has been once bailed; the conſequence of which is, that the court muſt judge by the two commitments, whether the offence be the ſame. This argument will appear of little weight, if we conſider how eaſy it is to vary the expreſſion in the ſecond commitment, and yet keep cloſe to the principal charge.

Fifthly. The caſe of Kendall v. Roe, 1 Salk. 347. 5 Mod. 78. has been relied on by the council for Sir W. W. as a caſe in point. But in my opinion it will not come up to that now before us. The caſe did not turn on the point on which the exception has been taken, viz. that the treaſon of Sir J. M. was not expreſſed in the warrant; for it was held neceſſary that Sir J. M. ſhould be averred guilty of, and committed for, high treaſon. And becauſe both theſe particulars were not expreſſed in the warrant, the defendants were admitted to bail. A commitment, it is true, for ſtealing fruit generally, would not be good, becauſe, if it was on trees it would not be felony. 2 Inſt. 52.

There is a caſe in Anderſon, which was to be a direction for the future in making commitments, which is entered in the council book. In Crofton's caſe, reported in 1 Sid. 78. 1 Keb. 305. it was reſolved that a commitment for high treaſon generally is good. Vaug. 142.

The next thing relied on is the illneſs of Sir W. W. which appears to be a diſtemper incident to the family. We are of opinion that this is not ground enough ſingly to induce the court to admit Sir W. W. to bail; for it muſt be a preſent indiſpoſition, ariſing from the confinement; and ſo we held this term in the caſe of Mr. H. of C. who ſtabbed himſelf after his examination; and was refuſed to be bailed, becauſe his illneſs was from an act of his own. But I ſhall not enlarge on this head, ſince we are all of opinion Sir W. W. ought to be bailed. Four terms have paſſed ſince his commitment, and one aſſizes in Somerſetſhire, out of which county it has been hinted the ground of complaint againſt Sir W. W. ariſes: and therefore there being no proſecution againſt him, he muſt be admitted to bail, himſelf in 10,000*l.* and two ſureties of 5000*l.* each. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 2.

Trinity, 2 Geo. Harvey of Comb's Caſe.

A commitment for treaſon generally, without expreſſing the ſpecies of treaſon, is good; for the proceſs is the ſame in one ſort of treaſon as in another.

The court of King's Bench have power to bail in high treaſon, notwithſtanding the ſuſpenſion of the habeas corpus act.

And on affidavit made, that the priſoner was in ſuch an ill ſtate of health, that longer confinement would bring his life in danger, it has been done in Lord Montgomery's caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 334.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. The King v. Biſhop.

The defendant was convicted of printing a ſeditious libel, and appearing to be in a very ill ſtate of health, was brought up, and moved for the judgment of the court, and to be admitted to bail.

Chief Juſtice. The offence is ſo great, that an adequate puniſhment may endanger his life, and to leſſen the judgment would be an ill precedent; therefore bail him for the preſent, and we will give judgment when he is better. The defendant in 2000*l.* and two ſureties in 1000*l.* each. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 9.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. Reeve v. Trindal.

On the trial of the appeal there were two iſſues. The firſt was to a plea in abatement, where the defendant pleaded that he was not a labourer, according to the addition of the writ; but a barber ſurgeon; which was found with the defendant. The ſecond was on his plea over to the ſelony, where the jury found him guilty of murder. And what would be the conſequence on theſe two verdicts, was a point to have been argued in court; but neither ſide bringing it on for near three years, the defendant moved to be bailed, and the appellant ſaid, he did not oppoſe it.

Per curiam. We cannot do it; he is convicted of murder, and therefore we cannot bail him, unleſs the appellant will actually conſent; which he refuſing to do, the defendant was remanded. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 402.

Hilary, 9 Geo. The King v. Sarah Saliſbury.

The defendant was committed to Newgate, for ſtabbing a gentleman with a knife, ſo that his life was deſpaired of: and having obtained a habeas corpus from this court, the day before ſhe was to be brought up, ſhe moved that a phyſician and ſurgeon of her own nominating, might be permitted to be preſent at the dreſſing the gentleman's wound, ſo as to be able to ſatisfy the court that he was out of danger, in order that they might bail her.

Per curiam. There never was a motion of this nature, eſpecially ſo early as this is; the courſe is, for the friends of the party injured, to lay his condition before the court, when they oppoſe the bailing; if they do not do it, then we may order ſuch an attendance for our own ſatisfaction; but at preſent the defendant has no right to demand it. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 547.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. The King v. Earbery.

The defendant having been indicted for writing a libel againſt government, for want of appearance was outlawed; whereon he moved the court for a writ of error, which the Attorney General oppoſed, as not being allowed in the caſe of the crown, without the leave of the King.

The Attorney General moved this matter again at another day; when Pratt, Chief Juſtice, and Powys, J. ſeemed to think that the defendant in diſcretion ought not to be bailed; but Eyre, Juſtice, and Forteſcue, J. were clearly of opinion, this was a caſe within the act of parliament for reverſal of outlawries, and therefore he ought to be bailed, and cited 2 Salk. 504. that it was the reſolution of all the judges in England, except Price and Smith, that the Queen could not deny a writ of error, but that it was grantable from right, and a principle of juſtice, (except in treaſon and felony;) and the true reaſon why a perſon outlawed for treaſon or felony cannot have a writ of error without the King's leave, is, becauſe it is a conviction; and then the culprit has forfeited all he has to the crown.

On this the court unanimouſly thought it reaſonable and juſt, that Earbery ſhould have a writ of error; and the Attorney General immediately ſigned a warrant for a writ of error, and conſented to his being bailed to appear accordingly. Vide Forteſcue, p. 37.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. The King v. Reader.

The defendant was convicted for keeping an alehouſe without licence, and was thereon committed for a month, as the act directs. After he had lain a fortnight, he brought a certiorari, and on the return of it, he was admitted to bail, the court being of opinion, that if the conviction was confirmed, they could commit him in execution for the reſidue of the time. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 531.

Trinity, 10 Geo. The King v. The Bail of Strudwick.

On a motion that the recognizance entered into by the bail of Strudwick, might be eſtreated, the caſe was; Strudwick, who was the principal, gave a recognizance with bail, conditioned to keep the peace for one year, and afterwards to appear in this court on the firſt day of term, which he did not; and therefore it was moved, that his recognizance might be eſtreated, ſo that the bail might be proſecuted.

The Chief Juſtice held, that where a man was admitted to bail, he is by intendment of law in their cuſtody, but when he is taken from them by the proceſs of this court, then they are diſcharged.

All the other judges were of a contrary opinion, viz. that they are not diſcharged till the committitur of the principal is entered; for though he was committed on the conviction on the information, he was as much in the power of his bail, as if he had been at large, or ſtill in their cuſtody; for on a motion in this court, they might have brought him up at any time, and rendered him back again in diſcharge of themſelves.

Afterwards, at another day it was moved that the committitur of the principal might be entered, ſo as the bail might take advantage thereof, and that the proceedings on the ſci. fac. might be ſtayed in the mean time.

The court would not ſtay the proceedings on the ſci. fac. but ordered, that a committitur ſhould be entered on the right recognizance; for there being two, viz. one for the peace, and the appearance of the principal, which was forfeited for his not appearing; and the other for his appearance to anſwer the information, on which he was afterwards convicted; the committitur muſt be entered on the laſt recognizance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 195.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Pyle v. Grant.

In an appeal of murder, it appeared that the defendant was convicted on the indictment, but pardoned on the report of the judges; and after iſſue joined on the appeal, he moved to be bailed, which was refuſed, the preſumption being againſt him, contrary to Bambridge's caſe. But a trial at bar being ordered this term, and the appellant having taken no ſtep to bring it on, but on the day appointed moving to put it off to a further day, the court took the appellee's own recognizance in 500 l. to appear the laſt day of the term, and ordered that nothing ſhould be done previous to the day appointed for the trial; and if there was a diſcontinuance, the appellee might take advantage of it: and the laſt day of the term he was diſcharged, the appellant not appearing. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 858.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. The King v. Kimberley.

The defendant was brought up by habeas corpus, being committed to Woodſtreet Compter, for feloniouſly marrying Bridget Reading, contrary to an Iriſh act of parliament, 6 Ann, in order to be ſent over to Ireland to be tried, the offence being committed there.

On motion that he might be diſcharged, or bailed; his council inſiſted that juſtices of the peace in England are confined to act only as to ſuch offences as are againſt the laws of England, and committed in England; and that the proviſo in the habeas corpus act gives no power as to offences in Ireland, but leaves it on the former practice.

Per curiam. It has been done in Col. Lundy's caſe, 2 Vent. 314. and in 3 Keb. 785. The court refuſed to bail a man committed for murder in Portugal. If application is not made to have him ſent over in a reaſonable time, you may apply again: and thereupon the defendant was remanded. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 848.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. The King v. Acton.

The defendant was deputy-keeper of the Marſhalſea priſon, and on the addreſs of the Houſe of Commons was proſecuted for ſeveral murders, ſuppoſed to have been committed by him on priſoners in his cuſtody. He was tried on four ſeveral indictments, whereon the only queſtion was, whether a place within the priſon, called the ſtrong room, was a proper place for the confinement of diſorderly priſoners: and the jury, on all the four trials, acquitted him, to the ſatisfaction of every body. Soon after he was ſet at liberty, a ſingle juſtice of the peace, on an information of a fifth perſon's having been put in the ſame ſtrong room, and dying within a year after, thought fit to commit the defendant again for murder. On a hab. corp. brought, the defendant's council moved he might be admitted to bail, on producing copies of the informations, and affidavits of the former trials, and of the identical nature of the offences: but the court refuſed to look into the informations, though they were preſſed with Lord Mohun's caſe, Salk. 104. where they looked into the depoſitions taken by the coroner, on a motion to bail. And in the preſent caſe they remanded the defendant, who lay in priſon till the next aſſizes, when the grand jury returned the bill ignoramus, and he was diſcharged. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 851.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Caſtell v. Bambridge and Corbet.

On an appeal for murder, ſtating that the appellant's huſband was a priſoner in the Fleet, under the cuſtody of Bambridge, the warden, who made an aſſault on him, and contrary to his will carried him to the houſe of Corbet, a victualling-houſe in the Fleet, and there impriſoned him, where one White then lay ill of the ſmall-pox, which Caſtell had never had; that the appellees had notice of this, and were deſired to ſuffer him to remove to another place in the priſon, which they refuſed, and afterwards Caſtell fell ill of that diſtemper, and died in Corbet's houſe. The appellees inſtantly pleading not guilty, iſſue was joined, and the court was then moved that the appellees might be bailed. And on debate, the court were of opinion to bail Bambridge, and not Corbet. And the reaſon they gave was, that Bambridge had been acquitted, which was a ſtrong preſumption of innocence, and the judge before whom he was tried had certified that he was very well ſatisfied with the verdict; and they ſaid they would bail in all caſes after an acquittal on the indictment, unleſs the judge was diſſatisfied with the acquittal; and that was the reaſon they denied to bail in Slaughterford's caſe, becauſe Holt, Chief Juſtice, had ſent out the jury again, whether they would ſtand to their verdict of acquittal; and when they inſiſted on it, he himſelf ordered the appeal.

But as to Corbet, there was no foundation to bail, for they denied it was of courſe to bail in an appeal: ſo Bambridge was bailed by two perſons, body for body, who juſtified in 1000 l. each. And it was agreed, that in an appeal by writ on the civil ſide, two bail only are required; but had it come on the crown ſide by certiorari, there muſt have been four. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 854.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. The King v. Dalton.

The defendant had the misfortune to kill his ſchoolfellow at Eton, and being brought up by habeas corpus to the Chief Juſtice's houſe, it was returned, that he was committed by the coroner for manſlaughter. It was therefore prayed he might be bailed. But the Chief Juſtice ſaid, that was no reaſon, for if the depoſitions made it murder, he would not bail; on the contrary, if they amounted only to manſlaughter, he would bail, though the coroner's inqueſt had found it murder; and he ſaid, the diſtinction was between the coroner's inqueſt, where the court can look into the depoſitions; and an indictment, where the evidence is ſecret. That Lord Mohun's caſe, in Salk. 104. was in point, though that was at Holt's chambers, and not in court, as reported; and that the Lords bailed him after an indictment for murder was found. He ſaid, that himſelf refuſed to bail Mr. Clifton, becauſe he thought the depoſitions made it murder, though the inqueſt was manſlaughter only.

The bail were four, in 4000 l. The Chief Juſtice ſaid, it had been uſual to take them in a ſum, or body for body; and that where they are taken body for body, it was a miſtake to imagine the bail were to be hanged if the principal ran away; but that the method is, to amerce them. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 911.

Trinity, 13 Geo. 2. The King v. Greenwood.

Greenwood came up on a habeas corpus, charged with a commitment, for a robbery on the highway. And the proſecutor attending, inſiſted he was the man, and though eight affidavits of credible perſons, proving him to be at another place at the time the robbery was ſworn to, were read; yet the court refuſed to admit him to bail, but ordered him to remain till the aſſizes. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1139.

Eaſter, 15 Geo. 2. The King v. Sidney.

On removing an indictment from the ſeſſions of oyer and terminer, the defendant and his bail entered into a recognizance of 500 l. to plead, go to trial, and appear on the return of the verdict; he did ſo, and received judgment. On motion to diſcharge the recognizance, it was inſiſted he ſhould pay coſts; but this not being in 20 l. the ſum required by ſtat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11. the court held it was to be conſidered as a recognizance at common law, and precedents being ſearched, it was found that coſts had not been required: Here therefore being a performance of every thing the words extended to; the court diſcharged the recognizance. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1165.

A ſpecial verdict on an indictment for murder was found at the Old Bailey, and removed into this court. But before the matter was argued, the defendant obtained his Majeſty's pardon, which he pleaded on his knees, and it was allowed: then the council for the proſecutor inſiſted, that by virtue of ſtat. 3 H. 7. c. 1. the court ought to require bail for his appearance to anſwer an appeal; there being an affidavit produced, that the brother and heir was beyond ſea, but expected in time; and it was alſo inſiſted, that by virtue of ſtat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 13. the court ſhould take ſecurity for the good behaviour.

As to the firſt point, the court were of opinion, that the preſent caſe was not ſuch as the act of parliament meant; and that the word acquittal therein muſt be underſtood in a courſe of law, and not an interpoſition of the crown's mercy.

As to ſureties for his good behaviour, the priſoner's council ſaid, they had them ready. Wright, Juſtice, and Deniſon, Juſtice, were inclined to take them; but as there had been no inſtance ſince the act, and this was merely diſcretionary, the Chief Juſtice was unwilling to make the precedent in the caſe of an infant, where ſome favourable circumſtances were ſtated in the verdict; and at laſt his brethren agreed to diſcharge the priſoner without ſecurity, though the council on behalf of the proſecutor refuſed to waive their demand. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1203.

The condition of their recognizance was, to appear in this court the laſt day of Michaelmas term, on which day articles of the peace were exhibited, and the defendant, White, forbore to move to have his appearance recorded, (though he was there) and went to get bail. The proſecutor on this took out a ſci. fac. teſted the 28*th of November*, and partly for the ſharpneſs of the proceeding, and becauſe the ſci. fac. muſt be teſted in term time, and the defendant had to the laſt moment of it to appear in, the court ſet aſide the proceedings. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1220.

The defendant, a juſtice of peace for the county of Surry, committed a man on ſuſpicion of ſtealing a mare, and bound over the owner to proſecute. Afterwards on examining two other perſons, he admitted the party to bail. The proſecutor appeared at the aſſizes, and found a bill, but the party accuſed did not appear. The court granted an information againſt the juſtice, declaring they would not have bailed the man themſelves. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1216.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why the defendant ſhould not be diſcharged on common bail, on an action brought on ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 21. for a forfeiture of 200 l. for having unſealed wrought ſilks found in his cuſtody.

The 8*th ſect.* of this ſtat. expreſsly authoriſes to hold the party to ſpecial bail: it gives a capias in the the firſt proceſs, ſpecifying the ſum of the penalty ſued for, and directs, that the defendant ſhall be obliged to give ſufficient bail, &c.

Per curiam. The plaintiff's affidavit is poſitive enough; he ſwears therein, that he had cauſe of action againſt the defendant for 200 l. forfeited by him, &c. The ſtatute does not require any affidavit at all; therefore the rule to ſhew cauſe was diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1569.

Bail in Error.

Bail in a writ of error cannot render the principal in diſcharge of themſelves, becauſe they are bound that he ſhall proſecute his writ of error with effect, or pay the money, if judgment is affirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 57.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Atwood v. Duell.

There was a judgment on the ſci. fac. againſt the bail; and they brought a writ of error as well on the principal judgment as on the judgment on the ſci. fac. but it was quaſhed, becauſe they were not parties to the original judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 397.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Shoot v. Higgs.

The bail on a writ of error cannot diſcharge themſelves by ſurrendering their principal. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 319.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Wilbraham. v. Doley.

On a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry for error in law, the queſtion was, whether the plaintiff muſt give bail to the original action, as he muſt do when it is to be reverſed for want of proclamations, on ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 3. And Gould cited a caſe out of Littleton's Reports, where he was held to bail on an error in law; the original cauſe of action being ſuch as required ſpecial bail.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. He ought not to be held to bail on any error in law, for the ſtat. of Eliz. mentions only want of proclamations; and the caſe out of Littleton's Reports is badly reported. And the court ſaid, if it did appear to them that there was want of proclamations in the outlawry, and an error in law beſides, tho' the party aſſigned the error in law only, yet they would reverſe it for want of the proclamations; and ſo held him to bail; but if there were not want of proclamations, but merely an error in law, there need be no bail; for as the ſtatute made a new error, for the advantage of the outlawed perſon, ſo it ought to recompence that with another to the creditor, that in that caſe he ſhould have good bail to his action; but however, they directed the party outlawed to put in bail to anſwer the condemnation, or render his body.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Special bail to reverſe an outlawry muſt be ſimply to anſwer the condemnation; but other ſpecial bail is to anſwer the condemnation, or render his body; and it was agreed, if the party were taken on the cap' utlegat', he muſt give bail to reverſe the outlawry: and the court further ſaid, the ſheriff was fineable for making ſuch errors in outlawries. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 545, 546.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Tilly v. Richardſon.

In debt on bond in the C. B. judgment was given for the plaintiff, on which a writ of error was brought in this court, and bail put in according to the ſtatute, and judgment being affirmed thereon, error was brought in parliament; and the clerk of the errors refuſed to allow the writ, unleſs the party would give a new recognizance; and the defendant's council moved that it might be allowed without the ſame; it not being required by ſtat. 3. Jac. 1. c. 8.

Per curiam. The firſt recognizance does not include payment of coſts to be aſſeſſed in the Houſe of Lords, and thoſe coſts ought to be paid, and therefore a new recognizance ought to be given within the intent of the ſtatute; and it is not the buſineſs of this court to examine whether the bail was put in on the firſt writ of error. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 98.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. By ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 8. when a writ of error is brought on a judgment on a bond to pay money only, ſpecial bail ought to be given: and after a year, a ſci. fac. ought to precede the levari, or fi. fa. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 2.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Morris v. Spencer.

On a writ of error, the exception taken to the bail was within twenty days, but the rule was ſerved after the expiration of the twenty days, which the plaintiff in error thought irregular, and therefore did not put in better bail, whereon the defendant in error took out execution, which was held an irregular proceeding by the court, on ſolemn debate; and the following rules were ordered to be obſerved as a ſtandard for practice.

3dly. The not ſerving the rule within twenty days, is neither material or inconvenient; becauſe it is only in delay of the plaintiff in error himſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 33.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Read v. Charnley.

A writ of error was brought on a judgment obtained in the court of Carliſle, on a ſci. fac. againſt bail.

The plaintiff's council took exception to the recognizance, that it differed from the recognizances taken in this court, and conſequently was illegal and void, this recognizance being poſitive that the defendant ſhould render himſelf, but thoſe in this court only if the defendant do not pay the money, that then he ſhould render his body to priſon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. They are both the ſame; the words in this recognizance are, that the defendant ſhall not withdraw nor abſent himſelf from the execution of the judgment; now if the defendant pays the money, that is an execution of the judgment, and conſequently the recognizance is performed. If a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, be returned non eſt inventus, and the money be not paid, then the defendant has withdrawn and abſented himſelf from the execution: and the bail may plead payment by the principal.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Gibbons v. Dove.

Per curiam. Where bail is put in on the bringing of a writ of error, the practice is, that the other ſide ſhall have twenty days to except againſt them; which exception muſt be entered in the book of the clerk of the errors, and then he who excepts, muſt take out a rule to put in better bail, and ſerve the attorney on the other ſide with a copy; but ſuch rule need not be ſerved within twenty days. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 56.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. Bull v. Clifton.

In an action on the caſe on a bottomree bond to pay money on a contingency, the court was moved, that the plaintiff in error might put in ſpecial bail, the condition of the bond was, that if the Oley Frigate, &c. ſhall with all ſpeed ſail from the river of Thames to China, &c. without deviation, and return to the river within 36 calendar months, hazard of the ſea excepted; and if the ſaid J. S. ſhall within the ſaid 36 months, or thirty days after the arrival of the ſaid ſhip, pay, &c. to J. S. the ſum of —— pounds, then the obligation to be void.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This is not a bond only for the payment of money, for if he does not go the voyage, he forfeits the penalty; his going the voyage, return, and payment of the money, are all conditions; and he was of opinion, that the caſe did not require ſpecial bail. But the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 260.

Hilary, 9 Ann. Goodwin v. Godwin.

The point in queſtion was, whether an action of debt founded on a judgment in this court, might be brought pending error in the Exchequer Chamber.

This point was given up on account of the number of caſes in point, that debt would lie pending error. But it was ſtrongly inſiſted on, and ſtat. 27 Eliz. cap. 8. cited for that purpoſe, that the record itſelf was, in point of law, removed by the writ of error; and that therefore the declaration was naught, being of a record in this court, whereas it ſhould have been on a record in the Exchequer Chamber.

Per curiam. Theſe actions of debt pending writs of error were never favoured by Hale or Holt.

The authorities only kept the court from rejecting theſe actions, and therefore though they held the writ of error to be no plea in bar, yet they doubted whether they might not admit it as a plea in abatement.

In theſe kind of actions, to diſcourage them, bail is never allowed. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 17.

Hilary, 1 Geo. Hammond v. Webb.

The plaintiff gave a bond to one Patchell, conditioned for the payment of ſo much money by Webb; Webb gives a bond to the plaintiff conditioned thus: whereas Hammond has given a bond to Patchell, for the payment of ſo much money at ſuch a day, by him the ſaid Webb, the condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if the money be paid by Webb, according to the condition of the ſaid bond, then this obligation is void; otherwiſe, &c. An action was brought on this laſt bond, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, on which a writ of error was brought.

The court was moved, that on this writ of error the plaintiff in error ſhould find ſpecial bail by virtue of ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 8. the words are no execution ſhall be ſtayed on any writ of error or ſuperſedcas, for reverſing a judgment in any action of debt, or contract for payment of money only, unleſs, &c. Now here the bond is conditioned for the payment of money only; for the condition properly ſpeaking, begins at theſe words, the condition of this obligation is ſuch; and what went before is only a recital.

We are therefore within the very words of the act, and if ſo, I am ſure this court will not conſtrue us out of the meaning of the ſtatute; for this is a remedial law, and ought therefore to have a large and liberal conſtruction. Writs of error are in delay of that right which the judgment has given the party; and therefore have always been looked on by the common law with an evil eye.

The defendant in error's council ſaid, this act ought not to be conſtrued equitably; becauſe it is to take away, or clog a remedy, that the party has by common law; and for this very reaſon it has been ruled, that this ſtat. ſhould not be taken by equity.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. This bond ſtands only as a ſecurity for damages; this bond may be diſcharged, and the plaintiff not paid one penny; there is no difference between this and a bond to ſave harmleſs, out of the meaning of the act.

Pratt, Juſtice. The only queſtion is, whether the caſe be within the meaning of the act; for no matter whether within the words or not; and it ſeems to me, that the preſent caſe, though poſſibly within the words, is out of the meaning of this act, which is plainly, that where a recovery does neceſſarily import a debt due, there this act takes place; and not where a recovery may, or may not import a debt due; and the reaſon is, that delay in the latter caſe is not eſteemed ſo prejudicial, as in the former. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 281.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. Weddal v. The Bail of Jocar.

An action was brought in this court on a recognizance entered into by the bail, to ſurrender the body of the principal, or pay the condemnation money. Judgment was given againſt the principal for 105*l.* for damages and coſts; on which a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and judgment affirmed; and 9*l.* additional coſts given for the delay, &c.

Now, a ſci. fac. being brought a gainſt the bail on this recognizance, the bail pray oyer of the recognizance, which is ſet forth, &c. and then the bail plead the death of the principal before the iſſuing of the writ; to this plea the plaintiff demurs, becauſe the plea is double, and wants form.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. Rendering is to be underſtood, rendering on demand, viz. at the return of the capias; for then is the legal demand compleated. Not rendering then is a refuſal; and then the bail become liable, and not before. Pleading therefore the death of the principal before the return of the capias, is moſt certainly a good plea.

But pleading the death of the principal before the iſſuing out of the capias, is certainly an immaterial plea; becauſe material only, in caſe it be found one way. For death before the iſſuing out of the capias, is death before the return of it. But ſuppoſe it be found that the principal did not die before the iſſuing out of the capias, that is plainly nothing to the purpoſe; for notwithſtanding this, he may die before the return of the capias.

As for the authorities wherein the pleading is, the death of the principal before the iſſuing of the capias, this anſwer may ſerve, that the objection was never taken; and that the doubt in theſe caſes was, whether the bail were not bound to render the principal in convenient time, or had time to do it, until the iſſuing out of the capias. This objection, therefore, the ſtrength of which lies on the principal having till the return, &c. would have been abſurd, at a time when it was a controverted point, whether the bail had time till the iſſuing out of the capias. But now the law is ſettled, that they have time till the return.

The reſt of the judges being of the ſame opinion, the plaintiff would have had his judgment, had not another objection been ſtarted, viz. that the ſci. fac. ſets forth all the proceſs till judgment in the court of B. R. and likewiſe all the proceedings on the writ of error till the affirmance of the judgment, and the damages and coſts in both courts; and concludes with a demand for the aforeſaid damages and coſts in both courts; whereas bail are not liable for thoſe in the Exchequer Chamber.

Per curiam. If judgment be general, execution muſt be ſo too; but ſince the ſums in their own nature are ſeveral and diſtinct, why may not the court enter the judgment for the damages and coſts recovered in K. B. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 267.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Pitt v. Coney.

The plaintiff recovered againſt the defendant on a bottomree bond, and the defendant brought a writ of error, but put in no bail; and the queſtion before the court was on the words of the ſtatute, which are, bonds for the payment of money only.

Per curiam. The contingency having happened, this is now in every reſpect a bond for the payment of money only, and therefore there muſt be bail to the writ of error. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 476.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Colebrooke v. Diggs. Error.

On a writ of error brought in the Exchequer Chamber, on a judgment given in this court for 1600*l.* in an action of debt on bond, conditioned for payment of money only, and the judgment being affirmed; afterwards a writ of error was brought in the Houſe of Peers; and the plaintiff in the original action being about to take out execution againſt the defendant for not entering bail, according to ſtat. 3 Jac. c. 8. ſect. 1. it was inſiſted for the defendant, that he having already entered into ſuch recognizance in this court before the writ of error was allowed; that he was not obliged by this ſtatute to give a new recognizance of bail, having already purſued the ſtatute by giving bail in that court where the judgment was given; and it would be very hard for him to be bound in two recognizances for one and the ſame matter.

Per curiam. We, after an affirmance in the Exchequer Chamber, award execution, which we ought not to delay, without taking new ſecurity for the damages and coſts. This act is a remedial law, and is to be conſtrued equitably. It is conſidered as a judgment and record in this court, after it is affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, for the writ of error returnable in parliament is always directed to the Chief Juſtice of this court, and he carries up the records.

And there is no manner of inconveniency in entering into two recognizances, for both are the ſame with reſpect to the plaintiff in error, becauſe by the late ſtat. he has a proper remedy, if the plaintiff in the original action takes out execution for more than is due; but it would be very inconvenient for him to be delayed by a writ of error, and to have no ſufficient ſecurity to make ſatisfaction for his loſs.

Hob. 24. in Luck's caſe an executor was obliged to give bail in the Chamberlain of London's court, and likewiſe bail for the ſame thing in the ſpiritual court, and ſo double bail; and this was warranted only by a particular cuſtom in London, which is not to be favoured ſo much as a general ſtat. made for the advancement of juſtice: ſo the party was ruled to put in new bail in this court, or elſe execution was to be awarded. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 79.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Gabriel Johnſon v. James Laſerre.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment on a ſci. fac. ſued out in the C. B. by the defendant, on a recognizance for 440 l. entered into by the plaintiff to the defendant, in the C. B. who prayed oyer of the recognizance and the condition; which condition recited, that H. H. and T. his wife, executors of J. L. had ſued out a writ of error, returnable in this court on a judgment recovered in the C. B. by Laſerre againſt H. and his wife: if therefore the ſaid H. and his wife proſecuted the writ of error with effect, &c. and paid the ſum recovered, and alſo the damages and coſts that ſhould be awarded if the judgment ſhould be affirmed, &c. that then, &c. and after oyer obtained, the ſaid plaintiff pleaded in bar of the ſci. fac. ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. to prevent arreſts of judgment, and ſuperſeding executions, and the proviſo therein, that the act ſhould not extend to any writ of error to be brought by an executor, &c. and on demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff Laſerre, in the C. B.

The council for the plaintiff in error inſiſted that executors, by ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. were not obliged to enter into recognizances on writs of error brought by them on indictments obtained againſt them, and that this appearing to be ſuch a recognizance, was void.

Per curiam. If a perſon will voluntarily enter into ſuch a recognizance, it is good at common law. Judgment was therefore affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1459. Strange, vol. 2. p. 745.

On a writ of error brought on debt on a bond, the bail are to be bound in double the penalty recovered; but by the courſe of the court it is ſufficient if they juſtify in double what is really due. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 821.

Trinity, 16 Geo. 2. Thrale v. Vaughan.

The condition of a bond was, that if the plaintiff furniſhed a third perſon's cellar with beer, the defendant would pay not exceeding 100 l. The defendant pleaded that none was delivered; to which the plaintiff replied, on a delivery to the value of 80 l. to which the defendant demurred: and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

On this judgment error was brought, and bail not being put in, execution was taken out. And now, on conſideration of ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 8. where the words are, bonds for the payment of money only, the court ſet aſide the execution: for this is by no means a certain demand, but reſts on a quantum meruit, and the ſum is only put into the replication, in order to aſſign a breach; and the act being to reſtrain a legal remedy, muſt be taken ſtrictly. 1 Keb. 613. Carth. 28. 2 Bulſt. 54. 1 Lev. 117. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1190.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 3. Bidleſon, Eſq; Adminiſtrator, &c. v. Whitel, Eſq;

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why the return of the writ of cap. ad ſa. iſſued in this cauſe ſhould not be ſet aſide, and the proceedings againſt the bail of the defendant ſtayed with coſts, to be taxed by the maſter, and in the mean time all proceedings to be ſtayed.

The following queſtion came before the court, viz. "Whether the plaintiff in a writ of error brought on a judgment in an action of debt, commenced in this court on a former judgment recovered here by the plaintiff's inteſtate, in an action of debt on a bond conditioned for payment of money only, (which former judgment was confeſſed by a warrant of attorney) was, or was not, obliged to put in bail on ſuing out ſuch writ of error, on ſtat. 3. Jac. 1. cap. 8.?"

Lord Mansfield delivered the opinion of the court, and declared that the opinion of all the judges had been taken on this queſtion, who were of opinion, "that bail is not requiſite on bringing a writ of error on a judgment in an action of debt founded on a prior judgment:" the rule was therefore made abſolute, without coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1545.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. The King v. Dawes.

An attachment iſſued out of this court againſt the defendant, for a contempt committed by him, directed to the ſheriff of Cumberland; on which the defendant being arreſted, the ſheriff of the ſaid county took a bail-bond, in which perſons very ſufficient were bound for his appearance at the return of the attachment, and let him go at large. The defendant refuſed to appear at the return of the writ, which was on Friday next after the morrow of the Holy Trinity laſt paſt; on which the ſheriff was amerced, though he offered the plaintiff in the action to aſſign to him the bail-bond, which he refuſed, alledging that the ſheriff could not take a bail-bond on an attachment. On which the ſheriff, thinking he was oppreſſed, moved this court to compel the plaintiff to accept the aſſignment of the bail bond: and his council urged, that it was very reaſonable that ſuch a rule ſhould be made; for the ſheriff is compellable by the ſtatute to let a man arreſted on an attachment go at large on a bail-bond given; and when he is at large, the ſheriff cannot ſeize him again after the return of the writ; and conſequently it is not then in his power to bring him in at the return of the writ: it will then be very hard, that when he has done his duty, and no more, he ſhall be liable to amercements for not doing that which the law ſays he cannot do lawfully. That no action lies againſt him in ſuch caſe appears from, 2 Saund. 54. Poſterne v. Hanſon, and 1 Sid. 23. and if no action lies, he ought not to be amerced for it. But not allowed.

Per curiam. This court cannot make a rule, that the plaintiff ſhall accept the aſſignment of the bail-bond; for he may either accept of it, or proceed againſt the ſheriff by amercements; and the ſheriff may reimburſe himſelf, by ſuing the bail-bond; and if the bail-bond is not ſufficient, (as here it was but for 40 l.) he is without remedy. But it was clearly agreed, that he may take a bail-bond on an attachment. See Stile, 212, 234. Burton v. Low. 2 Vent. 237. contra. 3 Leonard, 208. Bland v. Riccards.

Afterwards, on the laſt day of the term, the council for the ſheriff ſhewing to the court that this was a hard caſe, and that Dawes was in town, the court granted a tipſtaff to bring him in during the ſitting of the court, but he could not be found. And ſo nothing was done for the relief of the ſheriff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 722.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Pickering's Caſe.

Per curiam. Let the bail taken by the ſheriff be ever ſo good, yet the plaintiff may refuſe an aſſignment of the bail-bond, and proceed againſt the ſheriff by amercements; therefore it behoves him to take good bail: it is true, the ſheriff ſhall not be brought into contempt for not bringing in the body; but the only way is, to amerce him, and the ſheriff may proceed on the bail-bond; the plaintiff, by ſtat. 23 H. 6. c. 10. has his election of bail or amercement. Vide Mod. Rep. 12. p. 447.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Hyon v. Ballard.

On a motion to ſtay proceedings on a bail-bond for want of bail above, the defendant produced a releaſe under the ſeal of the plaintiff; and thereon the plaintiff's attorney ſuſpecting it, conſented to deliver a declaration forthwith, and that the defendant ſhould plead the releaſe, and ſo try it; which being done, the plaintiff was nonſuited at the trial; but afterwards it being diſcovered to be a notorious forgery, a motion was made for a new trial: but the court ſaid, they could make no rule in this caſe, the plaintiff being out of court on the nonſuit; but ſince the rule to ſtay proceedings on the bail-bond was not abſolute, they ſaid the cauſe was ſtill before them: and therefore granted a rule for the defendant to ſhew cauſe why proceedings ſhould not go on. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 54.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Fiſh v. Horner.

Per curiam. If a plaintiff accepts of an aſſignment of the bail-bond, and the defendant puts in the ſame bail that were put into the ſheriff at the return of the writ, the plaintiff can not except againſt them; but it is otherwiſe where he has not taken an aſſignment.

It is a ſtanding rule of this court, that in a country cauſe, after an aſſize, or in a town cauſe after two terms, proceedings are never ſtopped on a bail-bond on filing common bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 62.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. How v. Granville.

Per curiam. After an aſſignment of a bail-bond, if the defendant puts in the ſame bail that are put in to the ſheriff, the plaintiff cannot except againſt them; otherwiſe, if he has not taken an aſſignment, and on an action brought againſt the bail, they are not held to bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 117.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Grovenor v. Saame.

On a bill of Middleſex, taken out againſt three, with an ac etiam, in debt on a bond by them jointly and ſeverally entered into, the ſheriff took one bail-bond for the appearance of all three; and there being no appearance, the plaintiff took an aſſignment of the bond, and now moved to have the ſheriff amerced.

Firſt, It was agreed that the bail-bond was not according to the ſtatute, being for a joint appearance of three ſeveral perſons.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, it had been adjudged in the time of Glyn, Chief Juſtice, that if the ſheriff takes inſufficient bail, and has not the party at the return of the writ, an action would lie againſt him; but the contrary has been held ſince in the C. B. it was indeed always agreed, that an action would not lie for taking inſufficient bail; but it was not ſettled whether it would not lie for taking inſufficient bail, and not having the party at the return of the writ; for though the ſtatute commands him to take reaſonable bail, yet if he has not the party, he ſhall be amerced, and the ſtatute does not exempt him from that: the writ was in a plea of treſpaſs, and alſo to a bill, &c. and the bail-bond was to appear in a plea of treſpaſs only, and held good in Hale's time: and though the clerks ſaid they knew the ſheriff amerced after an aſſignment of a bail-bond, yet Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he had known it denied; and ſo held by the other judges.

If a perſon accepts of an aſſignment, and the ſame perſons are put in as bail to the action who were bail to the ſheriff, he cannot deny them.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the ſame perſons that were bail to the ſheriff become bail to the action, and the plaintiff excepts againſt them, and they do not juſtify on ſuch exception, he may go on with amercements againſt the ſheriff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 122.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Shuttle v. Wood.

Per curiam. Anciently there could be no proceedings on a bail-bond till the next term, and it is a great grievance to put it in ſuit till after a convenient time, though it has been otherwiſe practiſed in the C. B. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 132.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Bernardiſton v. The Sheriff of Middleſex.

The plaintiff took out a writ againſt J. S. and delivered it to the defendant, to be executed: on the arreſt, the bail-bond, taken by the officer, was to appear at the ſuit of Bernardiſtant, and bail was put in by that name; and after a reddidit ſe, i. e. he has rendered himſelf, by the ſame name, the plaintiff ſued the ſheriff for an eſcape.

The court was moved, that the bail-piece, and reddidit ſe, might be made according to the writ.

Per curiam. It cannot be; for the bail muſt be according to the bail-bond, and not according to the writ, or the return of it; and though it be an error of the writer of the bond, yet we cannot help it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 309.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Butler v. Rolls.

The defendant was ſued on a bail-bond, to which action he pleaded, and had notice of trial; and then he moved to ſtay proceedings on the bail-bond, on bringing the principal, intereſt, and coſts, into court; which was granted, ſo as he brought it in by ſuch a time, that the plaintiff might not be delayed of his trial, or otherwiſe the plaintiff might proceed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The ancient practice was, that a bail-bond could not be put in ſuit till a rule was had to amerce the ſheriff for not having the body at the return of the writ; and the courſe now is to ſtay proceedings on the bail-bond, if there is no return of a cepi corpus. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 56.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Sumner v. Ferryman.

In debt for 60 l. on a bond dated 16th of Auguſt 1706, on oyer of the condition, it was ſet forth in theſe words, " The condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if N. H. do and ſhall appear before the Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs and under Steward of the borough of New Windſor, at the next court of record, to be held at the Guildhall of the ſaid borough, on the 19th day of Auguſt inſtant, there to anſwer to W. D. B. C. and B. T. in a plea of treſpaſs on the caſe, then this obligation to be void, or elſe to remain in full force, &c. The defendant pleaded in bar, that he was a ſervant to N. H. and that he was employed by H. in governing a barge loaden with ſeveral people's goods, from Oxford to London, and that in his voyage on the River Thames, near New Windſor, the bailiff of New Windſor pretending to have a proceſs againſt N. H. and power and authority to attach the goods of the ſaid H. did attach the barge then being in the cuſtody and government of the defendant, of which the ſaid H. was maſter; and ſo hindered and detained them from going their voyage, and refuſed to let them go, unleſs the defendant would give the ſaid bond to the ſaid bailiffs; ſo that the ſaid defendant, to free the barge, and that he might deliver the goods to the owners, gave the ſaid bond with the aforeſaid condition; when indeed no bailiff ought to take ſuch bond; and that it was took extorſively, &c. and this he is ready to verify, &c. to this plea the plaintiff demurs, and the defendant joined in demurrer.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The defendant having ſubmitted to the proceſs, let it be right or wrong, the bond which he gives ſhall be a good bail-bond, and ſhall not be avoided. And if the goods of a ſtranger are in my cuſtody, and are attached, if I do not conteſt it, but give a bail-bond, their being the goods of a ſtranger ſhall not avoid the bail-bond. Indeed if they had taken it under colour of office, when there was no proceſs at all, it had been void by the ſtatute.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, a man cannot avoid his bond by dureſs to his goods, but only to his perſon. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 201.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. Buſhell v. Haynes.

In debt on a bail-bond, as aſſignee of the Sheriff of Suſſex, according to the late act of parliament; the plaintiff declared generally, without ſhewing the matter ſpecially, that it was a ſheriff's bond, which by the late act is aſſignable; to which there was a demurrer.

Per curiam. It ſhould have been ſhewn that it was a bond aſſignable: and when the plaintiff's council found the opinion of the court was againſt him, he prayed to diſcontinue, which was granted, on payment of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 170.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. Seſtern v. Cibber.

There was an action of debt on a bond brought by the plaintiff as aſſignee of a bail-bond, and on demurrer theſe objections were taken to the declaration,

1ſt. That the breach of the condition was ſet forth to be, his not appearing according to the requiſition of the writ, and according to the form of the writ, whereas it ought to have been, his not appearing at the return of the writ. 1 Lev. 145. 3 Lev. 243.

2dly. It was objected, that the very foundation of the action, viz. the breach, was ſet forth by way of recital; when alſo he did not appear which ought to have been expreſsly averred, that ſo the defendant might have the liberty of traverſing it.

3dly. It was not ſet forth on what day the writ was returnable; and then it does not follow whether he did or did not appear according to the requiſition of the writ, conſequently it does not appear whether the bond was, or was not forfeited.

Per curiam. This caſe differs very much from the caſe of a ſheriff ſuing this bond for himſelf; for there he has nothing to do but to declare on the bond: but where the action is brought by the aſſignee, there it is the forfeiture that gives the action, which here is the non-appearance, and is a matter traverſable, and muſt not be ſet forth by way of recital, but muſt be poſitively averred.

It is true, that the declaring in an indebitatus aſſumpſit is when alſo he was indebted: ſo in a bond.

But then in the firſt caſe it is the promiſe, and in the ſecond the breach of the condition, which gives the action; both which are always poſitively averred, and not ſet forth by way of recital.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It is not true, that there is no traverſing what is only ſet forth by way of recital; for the pleas of non aſſumpſit and non eſt factum are both of them pleas that traverſe matters in theſe reſpective actions, that are pleaded by way of recital; beſides, the return of the writ not being ſet forth, is a fatal objection. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 191.

Hilary, 1 Geo. Kitton v. Fag.

This caſe was; one H. Hamlin, high-ſheriff, did by a legal inſtrument, make Lancaſter his under-ſheriff, in truſt for Altham, who had been under-ſheriff the year before; neither Altham nor Lancaſter took the oaths required by ſtat. 27 Eliz. c. 12. after Hamlin's year was expired, and a new ſheriff appointed; Altham makes an aſſignment of a bail-bond; and the queſtion was, whether Altham had ſuch an authority, as that his aſſignment of the bail-bond was a good aſſignment within the ſtatute for the amendment of the law.

The plaintiff's council argued that this aſſignment was good.

This caſe turns on two points:

1ſt. Whether it is neceſſary that this aſſignment be made by the high-ſheriff in perſon?

2dly. If it be not, whether this aſſignment being made by Altham, the under-ſheriff, de facto, be not a good aſſignment?

It was formerly a doubt, if the ſheriff returned a cepi corpus, (as he muſt, notwithſtanding by ſtat. 23 H. 6. c. 10. he is obliged to take bail) and has not the body in court at the day of the return, whether he was not liable to an action. The law was not ſettled in this point till 21 & 22 Car. 2. See 1 Vent. 55. when it was reſolved that he was not liable to an action.

In the ſtatute for the amendment of the law, tho' the under-ſheriff is not mentioned, yet he is far from being excluded; he may poſſibly be included under the words, other officers.

In all miniſterial acts, whatever is done by the under-ſheriff is of the ſame authority as if done by the ſheriff himſelf.

Aſſignments of bail-bonds to the plaintiff are no new things. It was a common practice before the ſtatute; and though in ſtrictneſs of law a bond being a choſe in an action, ſuch aſſignments were not good, yet ſuch aſſignments have been taken notice of in courts of law, and not ſuffered to be evaded. Foſter v. Jackſon, 22 Car. 2.

This act is not in nature of an authority to the ſheriff, but a judgment in parliament, that the ſheriff ſhall do it, and he is liable to an action if he does not; and in Chancery he may be compelled to a ſpecific performance, according to this act of parliament.

There were two reaſons for making this act; the one to obviate the abuſive practice of ſheriffs in releaſing theſe bonds; and thereby depriving plaintiffs of the advantage of them, for whoſe ſecurity alone they were taken. The ſecond reaſon was, to remove the chicane of the law, that theſe bonds were not aſſignable, becauſe choſes in action.

Had the ſtatute only made the bail-bonds aſſignable, and not ſaid by whom, the law would have ſaid, that the ſheriff was the perſon to aſſign it.

If the ſheriff dies before aſſignment, muſt not the executor of the ſheriff aſſign it?

As to the objection that may be made, that the circumſtances required by the act of parliament to be obſerved in aſſigning, make it neceſſary for the ſheriff to do it in perſon: it may be anſwered, that the reaſon for preſcribing theſe circumſtances was only to make the aſſignment more effectual, and to diſtinguiſh the aſſignments by virtue of this act, from thoſe in uſe before; and may therefore be compared to fines. 3 Co. 88. But no deſign to abridge the power of the under-ſheriff.

An under-ſheriff, by virtue of his office, is included in ſeveral acts of parliament, though not named. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 11. 25 Edw. 3. c. 17. Weſtm. 2. c. 18. Elegit, Fitzh. N. B. 266. b. 4 Co. 64. Fullwood's caſe.

Execution is the end and life of the law. 5 Co. Rep. 92. This is a mechanical part of the ſheriff's office. Cro.Car. 26.

As to the ſecond point, it amounts to no more than this, whether all acts done by one that appears and acts as under-ſheriff, ſhould be void for want of ſome circumſtances, that none think themſelves obliged to enquire into, and concern the under-ſheriff only.

Though there be an under-ſheriff legally appointed, yet the not appearing nor acting makes no alteration at all in the caſe.

A gaoler de facto is bound to take care of the priſoners; and generally the law is ſo, that acts done by thoſe reputed in authority are good. 2 Inſt. 381, 382. Cro. Eliz. 699. Harris v. Jay. Moore, 112. Cro. Eliz. 34. ——— v. Howell. and others. 1 Keb. 357. If acts of under-ſheriffs de facto were void, in ſo many acts of parliament relating to ſheriffs, ſome care would very probably have been taken about it.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that the oath to be taken was an oath of office: that Lancaſter was in a legal manner conſtituted under-ſheriff; but that Altham had no deputation at all, and was a mere intruder.

He inſiſted, that ſuppoſing the aſſignment performed during the year of Hamlin, might have been good, yet it would not now, being performed after. Moore, 112. Yelv. 44. 2 Cro. 73. Moore, 757. 34 H. 6. 3, 6. 1 Roll. Abr. 894.

He took this difference, where a ſtatute appoints things to be done by the ſheriffs, and preſcribes no particular manner for the doing of it, that makes it neceſſary to be a perſonal act; there the under-ſheriff may do it, though the ſheriff is only mentioned: but where the manner and circumſtances, injoined and preſcribed by the act, make it a perſonal act, there the under-ſheriff cannot perform it; which difference anſwers all the inſtances drawn from acts of parliament.

Then he inſiſted, that the ſtatute injoining the aſſignment to be under the hand and ſeal of the ſheriff, made it a perſonal act.

Indeed, in Englefield's caſe, 7 Co. Rep. 11. it is held, that tendering a ring is no perſonal act; but then it is reſolved in the Duke of Norfolk's caſe, there quoted, that the uſes being revocable by writing under the proper hand and ſeal of the duke it was a perſonal act, and not capable of being performed by any body elſe. This caſe is exactly the ſame with that at the bar, except the addition of the word proper, which according to 1 Mod. 40. and 1 Vent. 128. makes no difference at all.

If the ſheriff dies before aſſignment, his executor cannot do it, this being a caſe omitted; and the plaintiff muſt ſue in the ſheriff's name as at common law before this act. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 288.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Watkins v. Parry.

In debt on a bail-bond, the defendant traverſed the arreſt of the principal; and on demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff; for otherwiſe this will be a way to avoid all bail-bonds that are civilly taken, without expoſing the party by an arreſt. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 444.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Watkins v. Marſh.

An action having been brought by the aſſignee of a bail-bond, on ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. the defendant pleaded, that the principal was not arreſted by the perſon, at the ſuit of the plaintiff, by virtue of the latitat, as in the declaration mentioned; to which the plaintiff demurred. The defendant urged, that there is a condition precedent in the ſaid ſtat. if the party be arreſted: but judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Per curiam. The defendant firſt pleads ſtat. H. 6. and ſays, by proteſtation, that this bond was taken of the ſheriff officially, and then pleads the above plea. The words are, if any perſon ſhall be arreſted, by writ, bill, or proceſs, and the ſheriff ſhall aſſign; ſo the laſt words ſay only, where a proceſs is taken out; and it would be ſtrange to ſay, no bail-bond ſhould be aſſigned, but where the party is actually arreſted, though he ſhould appear without an arreſt. The ſame judgment was given in the caſe of Haley v. Fitzgerald, Mich. 12 Geo. Vide Forteſcue, p. 364.

In an action on a bail-bond, the condition of the ſaid bond was, to appear on Saturday next, after eight days of the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin, and the term ended on Friday, which was the day before; and this appeared in the declaration brought by the aſſignee of the bail-bond: the defendant pleaded nil debet, to the bond; to which the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. Nil debet is no plea to a bond, but a writ to appear out of term is a void writ, and ſo is the condition of the bond; and therefore the plaintiff has no cauſe of action on his own ſhewing. Vide Forteſcue, p. 363.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. Belgardine v. Preſton.

In debt, brought by the aſſignee of a bail-bond, the writ appeared to be returnable in eight days of Hilary, which was the 23d of Jan. and the bail bond was ſaid to be taken the 17th of December before the return of the writ; the defendant pleaded ſtat. H. 6. and that the bail-bond was taken, to wit, at a certain place, on the 25th of January, after the return of the writ; abſque hoc, that the bond was made the 17th of December, at Weſtminſter.

On demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff; for, per curiam, the plea makes the place where the bond was made material, which the court held to be naught.

And, per curiam, Though the bond was made two days after the return of the writ, yet it is good; becauſe the defendant has four days to put in bail, by the practice of the court, which the court will take notice of. Vide Forteſcue, p. 365.

Trinity, 8 Geo. Hange, Aſſignee of Caſewell, and Billers, v. Manning.

An action being brought on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, the defendant pleads, that at the time of the aſſignment they were not ſheriffs, but out of their office, and two other perſons were ſheriffs at that time: the plaintiff demurs.

Per curiam. The plaintiff ſhall have judgment; the aſſignment is good, and the deſcription of the party and ſheriffs good likewiſe. Vide Forteſcue, p. 364.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Tucker v. Goldburne. Error.

An action of debt was brought on an aſſignment of a bail-bond taken by the ſheriff, who had arreſted the defendant on a capias, &c. and on a demurrer to the declaration, it was objected, that the plaintiff had not ſet forth the capias, or the teſte or return of any capias, as he ought to have done; and the court of C. B. being of that opinion a writ of error was brought in this court; but the judgment of the C. B. was affirmed, for it is the capias which gives life to the bond. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 78.

An action being brought on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, the defendant pleaded ſtat. H. 6. and ſays, it was a bond made for eaſe and favour, and therefore void: to which the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. The plea is not good; for ſince the ſtatute, the plaintiff ſets out the proceſs, and the bond, and that the bond was to appear only at the return of the writ, and the defendant affirming that it was a bond for eaſe and favour, ought to have traverſed the condition ſet out by the plaintiff; beſides, here are two affirmatives only, which cannot make an iſſue; and where a condition of a bond is ſet out to anſwer the plaintiff in a plea of treſpaſs, and alſo to a bill for 200 l. and does not ſay, to a bill of the ſaid plaintiff, yet it is well; for it cannot be to a bill to be exhibited by any other perſon. Vide Forteſcue, p. 365.

Eaſter, 13 Geo. Gregſon v. Heather.

In debt, on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, brought in London; in the declaration it appeared the bond was made in Surry, and that the aſſignment by the ſheriff of Surry, was laid in London; it was held well: for the action is brought on the aſſignment. Vide Forteſcue, p. 366.

Trinity, 13 Geo. Robinſon v. Taylor.

In debt, on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, if there is a profert to the bond, it is enough, and there is no occaſion to name witneſſes. Vide Forteſcue, p. 366.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 2. Studley v. Sturt.

The writ was returnable on Wedneſday, and the bail-bond was aſſigned on the Monday following; the court held the plaintiff was too ſoon by a day, for that Sunday was not to be reckoned as a day. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1782.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Nott v. Stephens.

An action being brought by the executor of an aſſignee of a bail-bond, it was objected, that the act ſays the aſſignee ſhall bring an action. Judgment for the plaintiff; it is an intereſt veſted, which will go to the executor. Vide Forteſcue, p. 366.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Jenyns v. Gooſtrey.

In debt, on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, it appeared on the face of the declaration, that the ac etiam was for 30*l.* and the bail-bond for 40*l.* ſo bail was taken in a greater ſum than the debt, contrary to the act. The declaration was demurred to, and the following exceptions taken; 1ſt, that the plaintiff has not ſet out that the writ was indorſed; but this exception was over-ruled: 2dly, that the bail-bond being for more than the ſum in the writ, vacates the bond.

Per curiam. If it were void, it ought to be pleaded, but this bond is not void; and the act makes it only a miſdemeanour in the officer, and the act is only directory. The court of Exchequer were of the ſame opinion. Vide Forteſcue, p. 366.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Fromanteel v. Williams.

In this caſe, which was an action brought by the aſſignee of a bail-bond, ſtat. H. 6. and ſtat. Geo. 1. were pleaded: the indorſement of the writ being ſet out different from the ac etiam, the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Forteſcue, p. 367.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Watkins v. Harris.

In debt brought by the aſſignee of William Morris, bailiff of the liberty of the dean and chapter of Weſtminſter, it was objected, that it was not ſaid, that the aſſignment was under hand and ſeal. Anſwer, it is ſaid in the declaration, the aſſignment being ſigillat, et atteſtat. Held well, becauſe in the very words of the ſtatute. Vide Forteſcue, p. 367.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Hen. Mifflin alias Peters and Others, v. Sir William Morgan. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment by nil dicit in debt on a bail-bond in the penalty of 500*l.* obtained by the plaintiff and others, againſt the defendant, as aſſignees of the Sheriff of Glouceſter.

The error aſſigned was, that the plaintiffs did not ſhew that the ſheriff aſſigned the bond to them, by indorſing the ſame, and atteſting it under his hand and ſeal, in the preſence of two or more credible witneſſes, according to the words of ſtatute 4 Ann. cap. 16. but only alledged that the ſheriff at the requeſt and coſts of the plaintiff in the ſuit, according to the form of the ſtatute, in that caſe lately made and provided, did aſſign to the plaintiffs the ſaid bond.

The council for the plaintiff in error inſiſted, that it was not ſufficient, without ſhewing particularly that the bond was aſſigned, as the act directed, by indorſement, &c.

The court unanimouſly over-ruled this exception, and ſaid, that all defects which would have been aided by a verdict, are aided after judgment by nil dicit, by ſtat. 4 Ann. cap. 16. for the amendment of the law; and it being expreſsly alledged, that the bond was aſſigned according to the form of the ſtatute, therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1534.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. Mayhew v. Mayhew.

Nil debet pleaded to an aſſignment of a bail-bond; held not a good plea. Vide Forteſcue, p. 367.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. Vaus v. Hall.

In an action on the caſe, on an aſſignment of a bail-bond, it was ſet out in the declaration, that the bond was aſſigned to the uſe of the plaintiff; whereas the act is, ſhall be aſſigned to the plaintiff.

Per curiam. It is all one, and we hold it well. Vide Forteſcue, p. 369.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Cook v. Brockhurſt.

In an action againſt the ſheriff of Middleſex, for an eſcape, the defendant pleaded not guilty; and nothing appeared againſt the ſheriff, but that he took a bail-bond, with one ſurety only in the bond, viz. the party himſelf, and another perſon.

Per curiam. It is well; and as to his not appearing at the day, no action will lie againſt the ſheriff, but he muſt be amerced. In the caſe of a bail-bond, the ſufficiency of the bail is not traverſable. Vide Forteſcue, p. 369.

Hilary, 8 Geo. 2. Derby v. Roſe.

A bail bond was given to the gaoler of the Marſhalſea priſon, after oyer of the bond, and condition, he pleaded ſtat. 23. H. 6. and that A. B. ſued out of the palace of the King at Weſtminſter, held in Southwark. It was objected to the plea, that it is not ſaid that the proceſs iſſued out of any court, but only ſued out of the palace inſtead of the court of the palace.

Per curiam. It is wrong. The plaintiff accordingly had judgment on the bond, though a Marſhal's court bond. Vide Forteſcue, p. 370.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. Derby v. Hamond.

In an action on a bail bond given to the goaler of the Marſhalſea priſon; it was objected, that it does not appear in the plea or declaration, that the bond was entered into to the plaintiff by the name of his office, but only to John Derby; ſo void by ſtat. 23 H. 6.

Per curiam. No oyer is craved of the bond; ſo the original bond may be right, &c. it does not appear to be wrong.

It was then objected, that theſe bonds were not within the ſtatute; but this objection was over-ruled; and the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Forteſcue, p. 371.

In the declaration, the aſſignment of the bail bond was ſet out to be atteſted in the preſence of one witneſs, naming him, viz. John Weaver. On nil debet pleaded, and demurrer, it was held wrong. According to the ſtatute, it ſhould be done in the preſence of two witneſſes: on which the plaintiff diſcontinued. Vide Forteſcue, p. 371.

Trinty, 14 Geo. 2. Shuttleworth v. Pilkington.

A ſpecial original being taken out returnable before the Lord the King, whereſoever he ſhould then be in England, the bail-bond was without the words whereſoever, &c. and in an action on it, it was objected, that by ſtat. Hen. 6. (which was pleaded) the ſheriff could take no bond, but ſuch as was to appear at the place in the writ mentioned; whereas this might be to compel an appearance out of England, if the King ſhould happen ſo to be.

Per curiam. There is no ſet form of words for theſe bonds, but if in ſubſtance they are to appear according to the deſign of the writ, it is ſufficient. 2 Cro. 286. 2 Vent. 237. 2 Show. 51. 2 Lev. 180. Trin. 3 Geo. 2. Phillips v. Phillips in the Exchequer, on a quo minus. The plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1155.

Michaelmas, 20 Geo. 2. Merryman v. Carpenter.

The writ was returnable in Eaſter term, and a bail-bond taken thereon, the plaintiff never ſtirred till the 24th of October, and then took an aſſignment; and ſpecial bail being put in the next day, the queſtion was, whether on ſtaying proceedings the bail bond was to ſtand as a ſecurity. The defendant's council inſiſted it ſhould not, becauſe the plaintiff did not deliver a declaration de bene eſſe, as he might have done, and thereby quicken the defendant.

Per curiam. He was not bound ſo to do; and the defendant was in the firſt fault, whereby the plaintiff had loſt a trial. So the defendant was forced to conſent to let the bail-bond ſtand as a ſecurity. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 1262.

Trinity, 31 Geo. 2. Cheſterton v. Middlehurſt.

On a bail-bond given in the court of the county Palatine of Cheſter, in an action commenced there, which was afterwards aſſigned by the ſheriff to the plaintiff, who brought an action thereon in this court, the defendant put in ſpecial bail below to the action, and then moved the court to ſtay proceedings here.

Per curiam. The bringing an action here is unfair practice, unleſs under ſpecial circumſtances to warrant ſuch proceedure; as for example, the defendant's living out of the juriſdiction, &c. but that not being pretended, they held that the plaintiff ought to have proceeded below, and therefore ſet the proceedings aſide in this court. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 642.

Per curiam. It is the ſettled practice, that an action on a bail-bond muſt be brought in the ſame court where the bail were taken; and in this cauſe the proceedings in this court were ſtayed, the bail-bond on which this action was brought being on a proceſs out of the C. B. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 923.

Bailiffs.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Heliard v. ———

Per Holt. If a verdict finds a perſon another's receiver or bailiff generally, it ſubjects the defendant to account for the whole declaration; but if it finds him receiver ſpecially as to ſuch and ſuch things, he is only accountable for ſo much as is found. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 420.

Trevilian v. Pyne.

In an action of replevin, the defendant made conuſance as bailiff to J. S. To this plea the defendant demurred: and on argument, the traverſe was held to be well taken; and a difference was made between an action of treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, and an action of treſpaſs for taking cattle on replevin. In the firſt caſe, if the defendant juſtifies an entry to the cloſe by command, or as bailiff to one in whom he alledges the freehold to be, the plaintiff ſhall not in his replication traverſe the command; becauſe it would admit the truth of the reſt of the plea, viz. that the freehold was in J. S. and not in the plaintiff, which would be ſufficient to bar his action, whether the defendant was impowered by J. S. to enter, or not impowered; for it is not material that the defendant has done a wrong to a ſtranger, if it be none to the plaintiff: but in the other two caſes, if the defendant juſtifies taking my cattle as bailiff to J. S. in whom he lays a title to take them, as for diſtreſs, or other cauſe, there it may be material to traverſe the command or authority; for though J. S. had a right to take the cattle, yet a ſtranger who had no authority from him will be liable; ſo that both parts of the defendant's plea in this caſe muſt be true, and therefore an anſwer to any part is ſufficient; the ſame in treſpaſs for taking goods; otherwiſe in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 107.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Matthews v. Carew.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking the defendant's tankard; the defendant pleaded that at a court-leet at Weſtminſter, a preſentment was made, that the plaintiff in a cellar within the leet did melt tallow, to the common nuiſance, &c. for which he was amerced 5 s. by the jurors, of which he had notice, and that being requeſted he did not pay the defendant, who as bailiff to the dean and chapter, by their order, diſtrained.

Per curiam. 1ſt. It is not ſufficient to plead a preſentment was made, without averring in fact that he did melt, &c. for it does not concern him whether the offence was done or not, ſince there was a preſentment: and the court took a difference between a replevin and treſpaſs; in the firſt, the bailiff is an actor, and is to recover, which ſhall be on the merits; but in treſpaſs, as in this caſe, the bailiff is only to excuſe the wrong. Vide 3 Cro. 885. 27 H. 8. 8. 3 Leon. 14.

2dly. The plea is naught, becauſe the defendant juſtifying as bailiff, ought to have ſet out ſome eſtreat of the court, or warrant from the ſteward, and to have juſtified under that. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 108.

Eaſter, 10 Ann. Biſhop & al. v. Eagle.

This action of account was brought by the preſent churchwardens againſt the former ones. They plead that the plaintiffs are no churchwardens. On iſſue joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; and judgment that they may account.

Before the auditors the defendants pleaded, that they received ſuch a ſum of money as churchwardens through a miſtake, when none was due to the pariſh; that perceiving the miſtake, they repaid the money; to this plea the plaintiffs demurred.

Powell, Juſtice, was of opinion in favour of the plaintiffs, for they might have pleaded this matter ſpecially, though they could not plead they were no receivers generally.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, admitting this to be a good plea before the auditors, it will be neceſſary for the churchwardens to plead ſuch a plea as ſhews them to be honeſt men, viz. not only that it was paid them by miſtake, but repaid; whereas taking it the other way, and to be a good plea in bar, a receipt by miſtake will be no receipt at all, and it will not be neceſſary to ſhew re-payment, but only that the money did not belong to the pariſh; he therefore was inclined to ſupport the plea as far as poſſible. Beſides, had they paid this money to the pariſh before the knowledge of this miſtake, the pariſh would have been charged with this money; repayment was therefore an act done in diſcharge of the pariſh, and therefore a proper plea before auditors.

The queſtion then was, whether or not the churchwardens, after payment of the money to the pariſh, viz. the uſe for which they received it, and this before the knowledge of the miſtake, could have been charged in an indebitatus aſſumpſit for the money? Powell and Parker, Juſtices differed; the former thought they might, and the latter, that they could not.

There was another point in this caſe, viz. whether the churchwardens ſhould be allowed their expences and ſurpluſage, in caſe their expences out balanced, &c.

Per curiam. They certainly ſhould; for churchwardens are more than bare receivers; they are in all reſpects bailiffs.

The rule generally taken, that a bailiff be allowed his expences and ſurpluſage in an action of account; but not a receiver; holds true only of a mere receiver, and as to him, the reaſon is evident. But where the nature of the thing ſhews that the receiver muſt be put to trouble and expence, the rule is falſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 23.

Hilary, 3 Geo. 2. Wilſon v. Poulton.

In trover brought by the plaintiff as adminiſtratrix of W. W. aſſignee of the eſtate and effects of E. P. a bankrupt, for ready money, to the damages of 6000 l. On not guilty pleaded, a ſpecial caſe was made for the opinion of the court,

That E. P. on the 7th of May, 1724. became a bankrupt, and a commiſſion iſſued againſt him on 3d Auguſt following, by virtue of which he was declared a bankrupt, and the plaintiff's inteſtate was choſen aſſignee, and had an aſſignment.

That 16th June 1724, the bankrupt's wife brought to the defendant 3082 l. 3 s. 11 d. of the bankrupt's money, and deſired the defendant to lay it out in India and South Sea bonds, that the defendant knowing of the bankruptcy, and that the money was part of the bankrupts effects, received the ſame; and on the ſaid 16th and 23d of June, with part of the ſaid money, bought twenty South Sea and India bonds, and J. A. the defendant's ſervant, by his order, with the other part of the money, bought ten bonds more, and the defendant delivered all the thirty to the bankrupt's wife: that on the 2d of September, 1724. the aſſignee having notice where ſome of the effects were depoſited by the wife, ſeized twenty-two of the bonds for the benefit of the creditors, and accepted them as part of the bankrupt's eſtate: and on this ſtate of the caſe, the point reſerved was, whether the defendant is liable in this action, to make ſatisfaction for the money, with which the eight bonds that did not come to the hands of the aſſignee, were purchaſed.

The council for the plaintiff argued, that here was a plain property in the plaintiff, and a converſion in the defendant. In order to make it out, there are ſome things ſtated, which ſhould be laid out of the caſe; 1ſt. That at the time of the receiving the money, and buying the bonds, there was no commiſſion; the tranſaction by the defendant being in June, and the commiſſion and aſſignment not till Auguſt following. But as to this, it is ſtated, that he became a bankrupt on the 7th of May before, and from that time the property of the aſſignee commenced. 2dly. That ten of the bonds were bought by another perſon, one J. A. But this is ſtated to have been done by the defendant's order, and with part of the money received by him of the bankrupt's wife; and that the defendant had the bonds of his ſervant, and delivered them to the wife, by which he has made it his own act. 3dly. The ſeizing twenty-two of the bonds by virtue of the commiſſion for the benefit of the creditors, and accepting them as part of the bankrupt's eſtate. This is not ſtated to be done in affirmance, and by way of authenticating the act done by the defendant in purchaſing theſe bonds, but only to leſſen the damages which otherwiſe muſt be given for all the money, and to ſhew that in point of juſtice and equity the plaintiff is intitled only to a ſatisfaction for the money with which the eight bonds, not yet brought to light, were purchaſed; for if the plaintiff had taken a verdict for the whole, ſhe muſt have been compelled in a court of equity either to deliver up the twenty-two bonds, or abate for them; and it is in eaſe and favour of the defendant, who had parted with the poſſeſſion, to take theſe bonds out of the hands of a third perſon, and at the ſame time allow him the benefit of the ſeizure. The purchaſe of every bond is a diſtinct act, and where that which is the produce of my money is to be come at, I have my election to ſue for the money, or the thing ſo purchaſed with my money. Huſſey v. Phydall, 12 W. 3. If the bankrupt ſells goods, the aſſignee may bring trover for the goods, or affirm the ſale, and ſue for the money; and if the bankrupt does ſo in two inſtances, the aſſignee is not bound to make one uniform election for both caſes; but as they are diſtinct and independent, he may ſue one vendee for the money; and as to the other, may diſaffirm the ſale, and maintain trover. In this caſe it is ſtated, that the bonds were purchaſed at different times; ſome on the 16th, and others on the 23d June; not that it is material what he did with the money, for as he was poſſeſſed of the money of the aſſignees, he can no otherwiſe diſcharge himſelf of it than by a payment to them. 4thly. The danger that in general will attend brokers and others, if they ſhould be charged merely on account of the money's paſſing through their hands, may be laid out of the caſe. If they do not know it, it may be hard, but if they know it, they ought to be charged; and there is expreſs knowledge ſtated in this caſe, not only of the bankruptcy, but that the money was the bankrupt's effects.

If theſe things are laid out of the caſe, there will then be a plain property in this money in the plaintiff, and a converſion in the defendant. It will be no more than this; a man knowing of the bankruptcy; and having money or goods of the aſſignee, diſpoſes of them without his authority; and it will not at all differ from the caſe of Parker v. Godin, Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. where S. a bankrupt, left plate with his wife, who, to raiſe money, delivered it to her ſervant, who went with the defendant to a broker's door, and there the defendant took the plate, and went into the ſhop and pawned it in his own name, and gave his own note to repay the money; and on the receipt of it went back and paid the money to the bankrupt's wife: and in trover for the plate, it was held that he was liable, tho' he did not apply the money to his own uſe. He was charged with the plate, as having had it in his cuſtody, and not delivering it to the aſſignee; and there the plate was forth-coming, but theſe eight bonds are not; there the directions were to pawn, here to buy. The produce of the plate was delivered to the wife, here the produce money was delivered to her. In neither caſe, had the defendant any advantage; if any difference, his diſadvantage was greater there than here, becauſe there he had by note ſubjected himſelf to pay the money.

It may be ſaid, he laid out the money as directed, and purſued his authority. To which it is anſwered, that no body could give him any directions or authority but the aſſignee, and he was not privy to the tranſaction; for though in another caſe it ſhall be taken, that the wife acts as a ſervant, yet that is only where the huſband himſelf has power; and though the aſſignee comes in in privity under the bankrupt, yet, that is only as to all tranſactions previous to the bankruptcy, but no act of the bankrupt ſubſequent can bind the aſſignee, there being then no privity between them.

The court, without hearing council on the other ſide, declared, that if the four things inſiſted on for the plaintiff were all to be laid out of the caſe, the concluſion drawn from thence, and the application of the caſe of Parker v. Godin would be right; and as to the firſt, ſecond, and fourth things, they thought they ought to have no weight againſt the plaintiff: but as to the third, they were all very clear in opinion, that the ſeizing part of the bonds was an affirmance of the defendant's act in laying out the money; and that the plaintiff therefore could not avow the act as to part, and diſavow it for the reſt. So the defendant had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 859.

Bailment.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Lane v. Sir R. Cotton and Sir T. Frankland, Poſtmaſters General. Entered Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Rol. 403.

Per Gould, Juſtice. The opinion of 4 Co. 83. of a general bailment, is not law; for on a general bailment, the baillee ought to keep the goods only as his own. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 665.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Coggs v. Bernard.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There are ſix ſorts of bailments, the firſt is a bare naked bailment of goods delivered by one man to another, to keep for the uſe of the bailor. The ſecond ſort is, when goods or chattels that are uſeful, are lent to a friend gratis, to be uſed by him. The third ſort is, when goods are left with the bailee, to be uſed by him for hire. The fourth ſort is, when goods or chattels are delivered to another as a pawn to be a ſecurity to him for money borrowed of him by the bailor. The fifth ſort is, when goods or chattels are delivered to be carried, or ſomething is to be done about them for a reward to be paid by the perſon who delivers them to the bailee, who is to do the matter. The ſixth ſort is, when there is a delivery of goods or chattels to ſome body, who is to carry them, or do ſome thing about them gratis, without any reward for ſuch his work or carriage.

In the firſt ſort of bailment, the bailee is not anſwerable if the goods are ſtolen without any fault in him, neither will common neglect make him chargeable, for he muſt be guilty of ſome groſs neglect.

In the ſecond ſort of bailment, or lending gratis, the borrower is bound to the ſtricteſt care and diligence to keep the goods ſo as to reſtore them back again to the lender, becauſe the bailee has a benefit by the uſe of them, and therefore, if he is guilty of the leaſt neglect, he will be anſwerable.

In the third ſort of bailment or lending for hire, the bailee is bound to take the utmoſt care, and to return the goods when the time of the hiring is expired.

In the fourth ſort of bailment, there are two things to be conſidered, firſt, What property the pawnee has therein. Secondly, For what neglects he ſhall make ſatisfaction. He has a ſpecial property, for the pawn is a ſecurity for the pawnee, that he ſhall be repaid his debt, and to compel the pawner to pay him. If the thing is ſuch as it will be the worſe for uſing, the pawnee cannot uſe it, but if it will not be the worſe for uſe, he may uſe it.

The fifth ſort of bailment, a delivery, &c. is of two kinds, either a delivery to one that exerciſes a public employment, or a delivery to a private perſon; if of the firſt ſort, and he is to have a reward, he is bound to anſwer for the goods at all events.

As to the ſixth ſort of bailment, it is to be taken, that tho' the bailee is to have no reward for his pains, yet, if by his ill management the goods are ſpoiled, it is a good ground for an action. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 909.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. Atkin v. Barwick, or Berwick, and Co.

The plaintiff, as aſſignee of the effects of C. and Q. bankrupts, brings an action of trover againſt the defendants for ſeveral parcels of ſilk, who were mercers and partners in London, and uſually dealt with C. and Q. who were alſo partners, living at Penryn in Cornwall; and on the 17th of April, 1715, the defendants by their order, ſent the goods in the declaration mentioned, and gave them credit in their books, they being at the ſame time indebted to them for other goods. The 18th May following, C. and Q. without the knowledge of the defendants, ſent divers ſilks (the ſame as were ſent down in April) to Mr. P. at Penryn, for the uſe of the defendants. June the 4th, C. and Q. became bankrupts. June 6th, they wrote a letter to the defendants, ſignifying their affairs were in a declining condition; and thinking it not reaſonable the laſt parcel of goods ſhould go to ſatisfy their other creditors, therefore they had not entered them in their books, but left them with P. who had orders to deliver them to the defendants. June 9th, a commiſſion of bankruptcy iſſued, and the effects were aſſigned to the plaintiff. June 13, the defendants received the letter, which was the firſt notice they had of the delivery to P. and as ſoon as poſſible, they ſignified their conſent to take the goods again.

Chief Juſtice. The queſtion is, whether by the delivery to P. without more, the property was altered; for if the delivery was countermandable, then the act of bankruptcy intervening before any aſſent of the defendants, will prevent the property from veſting in them. I think, on the circumſtances, that there appears a ſufficient conſideration to bar a ſubſequent power of countermanding, and that this delivery was in ſatisfaction of the debt. It is true, the bare delivery will not extinguiſh it, becauſe he had a power to diſſent; but yet according to Butler v. Baker's caſe in Rep. 3. the abſolute property paſſed ſubject to a diſagreement by one of the parties: the contract does not ſtand open till agreement, but is compleat, unleſs there be an actual diſagreement. The conſequence of all this is, that the delivery to P. to the uſe of the defendants, being before the act of bankruptcy, and founded on a good conſideration, tranſfers the abſolute property to them, it being ſtated that they never diſagreed. Powys, Juſtice, concurred.

Eyre, Juſtice. All theſe caſes go on the diſtinction, where the delivery is with, and without conſideration. Dy. 49. If with conſideration, and the delivery is of money, debt lies. Yelv. 23, 24. 2 Cro. 687. Raſt. 159. If of goods, trover. 1 Bulſt. 68. The precedent debt is a ſufficient conſideration, and it veſts before notice; for it being to his benefit, a diſagreement ſhall not be preſumed.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. Property by our law may be diveſted without an actual delivery; as a horſe ſold in a ſtable: but it is otherwiſe by the civil law. A general bailment alters no property, but this is not ſuch; it cannot be taken for a re-ſale, for defect of contract; but is properly a payment in ſatisfaction. It is moſt reaſonable to apply it to diſcharge the debt, and not as a gift; for a man is juſt before he is kind; and ſince he paid it in ſatisfaction, we will intend an acceptance, till the contrary appears. Therefore judgment was given for the defendants. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 165. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 432.

The plaintiff's inteſtate lodged at the defendant's houſe, and had furniture and plate there, and was proved to have ſaid, that whatever he brought into theſe lodgings, he never intended to take away, but gave directly to the defendant's wife. And now in trover for the goods which were there at the inteſtate's death, it was ruled that a parol gift, without ſome act of delivery, would not alter the property, and that ſuch an act was neceſſary to eſtabliſh a donation by reaſon of death. On this opinion it came to this queſtion, whether there was any delivery. And to prove one, the defendant ſhewed, that the inteſtate, when he went out of town, uſed to leave the keys of his room with the defendant; and that was inſiſted to be ſuch a mixed poſſeſſion, that the law will adjudge the poſſeſſion to be in him who has the right. And the Chief Juſtice ruled it ſo, and the jury found for the defendant. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 955.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. 2. Mytton v. Cock.

The plaintiff, who was owner of a cartoon, left it in the hands of the defendant, who was an auctioneer, without any particular agreement to take care of it, or re-deliver it ſafe, and without any agreement for a reward. And in a ſpecial action on the caſe for not re-delivering it ſafe, but ſuffering it to be ſpoiled; it appeared on the evidence, that the painting was on paper, paſted on canvaſs, and that it was kept by the defendant in a room next to a ſtable, in which there was a wall that made it damp and peel. And on this evidence it was left to the jury, whether this was not a groſs neglect. And they found for the plaintiff 30 l. damages.

And now, on motion for a new trial, the court agreed, that in this caſe of a ſimple depoſit, without a reward, the law raiſes only a promiſe not groſsly to neglect or abuſe the depoſit; and that therefore it was left properly to the jury, and there ought to be no new trial. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1099.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Paterſon v. Taſh.

It was held by Lee, Chief Juſtice, that though a factor has power to ſell, and thereby bind his principal, yet he cannot bind or affect the property of the goods by pledging them as a ſecurity for his own debt, though there is the formality of a bill of parcels and a receipt. And the jury found accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1178.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Scrimſhire v. Alderton.

The plaintiff, who was a farmer in the Iſle of Ely, ſent up oats to Bear Quay, conſigned to one H. as his factor. The cuſtom of the trade appeared to be, that formerly the factor had four pence per quarter for ſelling them, and he gave immediate notice to the farmer of the name of the buyer, and the price: but this being inconvenient to farmers who lived at a great diſtance, it had for many years been cuſtomary for the farmer to allow two pence per quarter more, on the factor's taking the riſque of the debts; ſince which factors had ceaſed to inform the farmers of the names of the buyers. The goods in the preſent caſe were ſold, but the factor failing, the plaintiff (before actual payment) gave notice to the defendant (the buyer) not to pay the factor, which he did notwithſtanding; and thereon this action was brought.

The Chief Juſtice was of opinion, that this new method had not deprived the farmer of his remedy againſt the buyer, provided there was no payment to the factor. And the only reaſon of advancing two pence per quarter, was, to have both at a ſtake, and here being notice before actual payment, there could be no harm done; and therefore he directed the jury in favour of the plaintiff. They went out, and found for the defendant; and were ſent out a ſecond time, and a third time, to re-conſider it, and ſtill adhered to their verdict; and being aſked, man by man, they ſeparately declared they found for the defendant. On this a new trial was moved for, and no cauſe being ſhewn, was accordingly granted. And at the ſittings after this term, it came on again before a ſpecial jury; when the Chief Juſtice declared, that a factor's ſale does, by the general rules of law, create a contract between the owner and buyer; but notwithſtanding this, the jury found for the defendant, and being aſked their reaſon, declared, that they thought from the circumſtances, no credit was given, as between the owner and the buyer, and that the latter was anſwerable to the factor only, and he only to the owner. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1182.

Eaſter, 16 Geo. 2. Sir John Hartop v. Alderman Hoare & al'.

In trover for jewels, the jury found this ſpecial verdict: that the plaintiff being owner of the jewels, lodged them in the hands of S. a goldſmith, for ſafe cuſtody only, incloſed in a paper, ſealed up; and that alſo incloſed in a bag ſealed with the plaintiff's ſeal, and took a receipt of him for the ſame: that S. broke the ſeals, and carried the jewels to the defendant's open ſhop in Fleet-ſtreet, where they traded in jewels, and often lent money on the ſecurity of jewels, and there borrowed of them 300 l. and depoſited the jewels as his own, by way of ſecurity; at the ſame time giving his note for the money: that S. had no authority from the plaintiff to ſell, order, pawn, or diſpoſe of the jewels, and that the defendants have converted them to their own uſe.

Lee, Chief Juſtice. The general queſtion in this caſe is, whether the property found to be originally in the plaintiff is diveſted by any act found to have been done in this caſe. In order to conſider this, it will be proper to ſee, 1ſt. How S. ſtands with regard to the plaintiff; and, 2dly. How with regard to the defendants.

1ſt. As to the plaintiff, he is a mere baillee for ſafe cuſtody only, without any authority to open the bags the jewels were in; and he was a treſpaſſer in ſo doing. 4 Co. 23. Mod. 248. Co. Lit. 39. a.

2dly. As to the defendants, though they came honeſtly by them, yet they are within the general rule of, let the buyer beware, unleſs ſomething appears particularly to exempt them. What they rely on is, that they were purchaſers of them in a market overt, it being found that they bought them in an open ſhop, where they dealt in jewels, which, according to the cuſtom of London, is a market overt for that purpoſe.

To this it was properly anſwered by the plaintiff, that this cuſtom not being found, the court cannot judicially take notice of it; and in all caſes theſe cuſtoms are pleaded or found. For this purpoſe was cited the caſe of Argyle v. Hunt, Trin. 5 Geo. 1. where a prohibition was moved for after ſentence, becauſe it appeared in the libel that the word whore was ſpoken in London; but denied: for though the words appear to be ſpoken there, yet the cuſtom does not appear; and though (ſaid the court) we have ſuch a private knowledge of it, that on motions we do not put the party to produce an affidavit of it, yet we cannot judicially take notice of it. And agreeable to this, is 5 Mod. 162. Carth. 75. Salk. 125. 243. Mo. 360. Co. Lit. 175. b. Cro. Car. 517. Cro. Jac. 69.

Another, and we think a proper anſwer, was likewiſe given, that if we could take notice of the cuſtom, yet that extends only to the caſe of a ſale, and not of a pawn. Perk. ſect. 435. Noy. 28. 2 Sid. 139. Lamb. 619. 35 H. 6. 25 Jenk. Cent. 83.

It is a rule, that all cuſtoms muſt be taken ſtrictly, and not extended to ſimilar caſes. 1 Roll. Abr. 567, 568. Show. 4. 2 Leo. 109. 208. 1 Bulſt. 207. 2 Roll. Abr. 85. Pl. 7. 2 Inſt. 713. But here a pawn is not a ſimilar caſe; ſales in market overt are encouraged, becauſe it is a circulation of property; whereas pawning is for a time, and is a locking of it up.

There is no occaſion to pray in aid of ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 21. in this caſe; though it was not immaterially argued from for the plaintiff. We are all of opinion the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1187.

Bankrupts.

Eaſter, 1 W. & M. Cary v. Criſp.

In an indebitatus aſſumpſit; the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff became a bankrupt, and a commiſſion was taken out, and ſo all his goods, &c. belonged to the commiſſioners, &c. The plaintiff demurred, and had judgment; for till an aſſignment the property of the goods is not transferred out of the bankrupt, by ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. ſect. 13. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 108.

Trinity, 2 W. & M. Cane v. Coleman.

In debt on a ſpecial verdict, the caſe was, H. a ſilkman, owed B. 100 l. and C. 50 l. B. arreſts him for the 100 l. in the ſheriff's court, and had bail within a month after. H. pays off C. and afterwards renders himſelf in diſcharge of his bail in B.'s action. Stat. 21. Jac. 1. c. 19. ſays, he ſhall be a bankrupt from the time of the firſt arreſt.

Per curiam. That is, and muſt be taken, from the time of the firſt arreſt on which he is in priſon, not where he puts in ſufficient bail, for that might be infinitely prejudicial and miſchievous; and no man could ever ſafely pay or receive from a tradeſman. Adjudged in this court, Michaelmas 1 Jac. 2. and affirmed in error in the Exchequer Chamber this term. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 109.

Michaelmas, 2 W. & M. Eliot v. Danby.

An aſſignment of a term by commiſſioners of bankruptcy, was made to a creditor, who, before the inrolment of the deed of aſſignment, made a leaſe to the defendant, and then the deed was inrolled.

Per curiam. Such a leſſee cannot maintain an ejectment, becauſe the leaſe could not have been before the inrolment; the words of the ſtatute are, that commiſſioners may ſell by deed inrolled; ſo without inrolment it is no ſale. 2 Co. 26. a. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 3.

Trinity, 3 W. & M. Newton v. Trigg.

An inn-keeper being part-owner of a ſhip, and having 51 l. ſtock in the ſhip, abſconded.

Eyre, Juſtice, held, the ſhare of the ſhip ſignified nothing; it not being a ſtock in the power of the party to trade with, that will make a bankrupt; but there muſt be trading therewith in fact. And he held that an inn-keeper could not be a bankrupt, being not like a trader; he muſt receive all comers, feed them and lodge them, taking a reaſonable price for ſo doing; which, if he does not, he is indictable.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, concurred, and ſaid, that he was not taken notice of in law as a trader, but as an hoſt; and is paid not merely for his proviſions, but alſo for his care, pains, protection, and ſecurity; and he buys meat and drink, not for ſale and trading, but for accommodation. And an inn-keeper cannot make a contract at will, nor does he, to buy or ſell at large, but to gueſts only; and ſaid, that wherever a man buys and ſells under a particular reſtraint and limitation, he is not a ſeller within the ſtatute, as a commiſſioner of the navy, or a farmer. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 110.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Bird v. Sedgwick.

A gentleman of the Temple went from thence to Liſbon, where he turned factor, traded to England, and broke: his council argued, that the ſtatutes concerning bankrupts do not extend to perſons out of the realm; the ground of them is caſes of arreſt, outlawries, and departing out of the realm; and ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. which extends to aliens, is only aliens reſident here.

Per curiam. He is a bankrupt, by reaſon of his trading hither and back again, which gained him a credit here. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 110.

Eaſter, 7 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where there are two joint traders, and one of them becomes a bankrupt; the commiſſioners cannot meddle with the intereſt of the other, for his eſtate and effects are not affected by the bankruptcy of his companion. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 61.

Hilary, 9 W. 3. Meggot, Aſſignee of Watſon, a Bankrupt v. Mills and Waine.

It was ſaid by Holt, Chief Juſtice, and not denied by the court, that an inn-keeper cannot be a bankrupt, but a victualler may; and if a man contracts a debt while he is a dealer, and after leaves off his trade, and then commits an act of bankruptcy, there none of his creditors, becoming ſo ſince the leaving off his trade, can ſue out a commiſſion of bankruptcy; but if thoſe who were his creditors before his leaving off trade, ſue out ſuch a commiſſion, the other creditors may come in and join. In this caſe there being ſome diſagreement about the fact, it was ordered to be tried again. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 159. Raym. vol. 1. p. 286.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. Cole v. Davis, & al. Aſſignees of Maul, a Bankrupt.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. It was ruled, on the trial of this cauſe at niſi prius, that if the goods of A. be ſeized on a fieri facias, iſſued on a judgment obtained againſt A. and after the ſeizure A. becomes a bankrupt; this act of bankruptcy cannot affect the goods levied in execution aforeſaid. But if A. was a bankrupt before the ſeizure, and after the bankruptcy the ſheriff on a writ of fieri facias to him directed, on a judgment obtained againſt A. ſeizes the goods, and ſells them, and a commiſſion of bankruptcy is granted, and the ſaid goods aſſigned by the commiſſioners, the aſſignee of the commiſſioners may maintain an action of trover againſt the vendee of the goods; but no action will lie againſt the ſheriff, becauſe he obeyed the writ. If a trader, hearing that a writ of fieri facias was iſſued againſt him, to the intent to preſerve his goods from being levied in execution, clandeſtinely conveys them out of his houſe, and conceals them privately, that does not amount to an act of bankruptcy. A ſeizure of part of the goods in a houſe, by virtue of a fieri facias in the name of the whole, is a good ſeizure of all. It was reſolved in this caſe, that if the goods of A. are ſeized on a fieri facias, and ſold to B. bona fide on a valuable conſideration, though B. permits A. to have the goods in his poſſeſſion, on condition that A. ſhall pay to B. the money as he ſhall raiſe it by the ſale of the goods, this will not make the execution fraudulent; and in ſuch caſe a ſubſequent act of bankruptcy by A. will not defeat the ſale. But though the original debt was juſt, yet if the execution was fraudulent, viz. on any truſt, a ſubſequent act of bankruptcy will defeat it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 724.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. Harvey v. Williams.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was a bankrupt, and therefore the defendant could not pay, for fear a commiſſion ſhould be ſued, &c. On demurrer, judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 496.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. The King v. Cole.

The defendant was indicted, for that he being a bankrupt, and brought before the commiſſioners, refuſed to give them an account of his effects; and his defence on the trial was, that he was an infant at the time the debts were contracted, and therefore could not be a bankrupt; and of that opinion was Holt, Chief Juſtice; for though the debts of an infant are only voidable at his election, yet no one can be a bankrupt for debts he is not obliged to pay; wherefore the defendant was acquitted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 243. Raym. vol. 1. p. 443.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Huſſey v. Fiddal. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, by the aſſignee of a commiſſion of bankruptcy; the exception was, that for goods ſold after an act of bankruptcy committed, the action ſhould be trover; and that therefore debt would not lie, becauſe trover might be brought for it again.

Per. Holt, Chief Juſtice. They may avoid the ſale, if they will, and bring an action of trover for the goods; but if they bring the one, they ſhall not afterwards bring the other. By the act of bankruptcy, the property of the goods is in the bankrupt's creditors; and if it be a choſe in action that is aſſigned, the aſſignee is to have the ſame remedy for it, as the bankrupt himſelf might have had; for example, if it is money received to the uſe of the bankrupt, they are to have ſuch remedy as he might have had for it; and without doubt the action lies well in this caſe; nay, a general indebitatus aſſumpſit would have been ſufficient. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 324.

Evidence was offered on a trial at niſi prius, that a ſhip carpenter is within the ſtatutes of bankrupts; and the following caſe was made, for the opinion of the court; viz. A. becomes a bankrupt, and then ſells goods to B. B. ſells them to C. which is a converſion; and then a commiſſion of bankruptcy is iſſued, and an aſſignment made by the commiſſioners to E. who brings an action of trover againſt C.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The action is well brought; if the petition to the Lord Chancellor, mentioned in the declaration, recites, that the bankrupt was indebted in 300 l. and the petition produced at his trial recites, that he was indebted in 150 l. yet that is no material variance. There is no need to produce at the trial the petition made to the Lord Chancellor, becauſe it may have been by parol, though the practice has been otherwiſe. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 741.

If there be ſeveral joint partners, and a perſon has dealing with one of them in matters concerning their joint trade, whereby a debt becomes due to him, it ſhall charge them jointly; but if in that caſe a perſon had rather deal with one of them on his own account, he muſt make his agreement ſpecially, in which caſe the debt ſhall be only his and his executors, and ſhall not otherwiſe ſurvive.

If one or more joint traders become a bankrupt, his or their proportions only are aſſignable by the commiſſioners, to be held in common with the reſt who were not bankrupts.

If there be an act of bankruptcy committed, and a creditor obtains judgment ſubſequent to it, and then a commiſſion is taken out; the judgment is thereby avoided.

If there are ſeveral joint traders, payment to one of them is payment to all. So if they all, except him to whom the payment was made, were bankrupts, the payment is only unavoidable as to his proportion; and if there be four partners, whereof three are bankrupts, and their ſhares aſſigned, and a payment is made to him that was no bankrupt, it is a payment to all the aſſignees, for they now are all partners. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 446.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Bird v. Major.

On an iſſue directed from the court of Chancery, and tried before Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Guildhall, at the ſittings after term, the caſe was.

A ſcrivener who was not liable to be a bankrupt before ſtat. 21. Jac. 1. cap. 19. committed an act which was made an act of bankruptcy by ſtat. 1. Jac. 1. c. 15. viz. abſconding, and he had alſo a ſhare in the ſtationers company. The queſtion was, whether he was not a bankrupt by that ſtat.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Since ſtat. 21. Jac. 1. cap. 19. has made a ſcrivener liable to be a bankrupt, it has ſubjected him to all the old acts, which by former ſtatutes made a man a bankrupt, as well as to the acts mentioned in ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 19. as to his ſhare in the ſtationers company, the Chief Juſtice ſeemed inclined to think that would not make him a bankrupt, for by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 24. It is enacted, that having a ſhare in the Eaſt India Company, &c. will not make a bankrupt. The Lord Keeper held the ſcrivener to be a bankrupt on both the points, but at the inſtance of the bar it was reſerved as a caſe, as to both theſe points, for the farther conſideration of the Chief Juſtice. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 851.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Gidden v. Drury.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, in a caſe between Hopkins v. Gery, declared, if a banker or goldſmith, who has many people's money, refuſes payment, yet keeps his ſhop open, and as often as he is arreſted, gives bail, and by that means gives a preference of payment to his friends, and when he has done, runs away, yet ſuch payment ſhall ſtand againſt a commiſſion of bankruptcy. And this was practiſed in the caſe of Sheppard the banker, who was arreſted almoſt every hour in the day for ſeveral days together, before he went off, and yet gave bail as often, and paid his friends, and then went and rendered himſelf in diſcharge of his bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 139.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Greenway v. Treeman.

The ſtat. directing, that two thirds in number and value, &c. was pleaded in bar, and the defendant to bring himſelf within the benefit of the ſtat. ſhews, that he abſconded at the time mentioned by the ſtat. but did not ſhew for what he abſconded; and for this the plaintiff had judgment on a demurrer to the defendant's plea. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 83.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Nichols's Caſe.

When a defendant pleads the ſtatute, directing two thirds, &c. if he would take advantage of the clauſe of being in cuſtody, he muſt ſhew the time when he abſconded; if of the clauſe of abſconding, he muſt ſhew that he abſconded for debt at the time of the ſtatute made.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he took the ſtatute to be a private law; for though it concerned a great many, yet it concerned a particular ſort of people; and here the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe the defendant did not ſhew in his plea, that he abſconded at the time of the act made, but only ſaid it was on ſuch a day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 96.

In trover the caſe was, J. S. was arreſted at the ſuit of H. and put in bail; afterwards on a ſci. fac. at the ſuit of another perſon, his goods were ſold to the plaintiff; after this J. S. renders himſelf in diſcharge of his bail, and goes to priſon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, inclined (contrary to the caſe of Duncomb v. Walter in 3 Lev. 57. wherein he was of council, but not ſatisfied with the judgment,) that J. S. was a bankrupt from the time of the arreſt, not from the render only; for if H. is arreſted at the ſuit of A. and puts in bail, and pending that ſuit, is afterwards arreſted at the ſuit of B. and goes to priſon and lies two months, he is by the act of parliament a bankrupt from the time of the firſt arreſt by A. But it appearing in the caſe that this commiſſion was taken out before the two months were expired from the render, it was held to be ill taken out, J. S. not being then a bankrupt. And thereon the plaintiff had a verdict. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 111.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Parkins v. Woollaſton.

Per curiam. In an action by an aſſignee, under a commiſſion, on a ſimple contract, the right way is to lay the promiſe to have been to the bankrupt, except there be an expreſs promiſe after the aſſignment made to the aſſignee. And the way of declaring on a promiſe to the aſſignee, is very inconvenient, and a means to ouſt the defendant of the benefit of the ſtatute of limitations, for if the goods were ſold five years before the aſſignment by the bankrupt, and then the debt is aſſigned, and a year paſſes, and the aſſignee declares on a promiſe to himſelf, it will not be a good plea to ſay, that the defendant has not aſſumed within ſix years to the bankrupt, for that does not anſwer to the declaration. And if he pleads he has not aſſumed within ſix years to the plaintiff, it will be againſt him, for if there be any promiſe transferred by the act, it is only on the aſſignment, and the intent of the ſtat. was only to transfer the action, and nothing elſe. Indeed, if after an aſſignment, another receives the money, an action will lie for the aſſignee on a promiſe to himſelf, becauſe the receipt of money after aſſignment, is a contract with him, and ſo is every other contract or agreement.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is an expreſs promiſe, not in words, but in deed, which is as ſtrong; and there is no ſuch thing as a promiſe in law, and acceptance of a bill of exchange is an expreſs promiſe to pay it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 130.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Hopkins v. Ellis. At niſi prius at Guildhall.

On an iſſue directed out of Chancery, whether the perſon was a bankrupt or not at ſuch a time: it was held per Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if H. commits a plain act of bankruptcy, as keeping houſe, &c. though he afterwards goes abroad, and is a great dealer, yet that will not purge the firſt act of bankruptcy, but he will ſtill remain a bankrupt; but if the act was doubtful, then going abroad and dealing, &c. will be an evidence to explain the intent of the firſt act; for if it was not done to defraud creditors, and keep out of the way, it will not be an act of bankruptcy within the ſtatute: alſo, if after a plain act of bankruptcy he pays off or compounds with all his creditors, he is become a new man. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 110.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Ludlow v. Browning.

One T. W. made his will, and thereof made his wife executrix, afterwards ſhe intermarried with the defendant, who was a bankrupt, the defendant was indebted to W. by bond, and the debt becoming due, the commiſſioners aſſigned that debt, and it was urged, that this debt is not aſſignable by the commiſſioners of bankruptcy; for it is a debt due in auter droit, and not to the executrix in her own right, &c. and that it is not forfeitable by her, or her huſband, 10 E. 4. 1. Kelway 64. b. Cro. Car. 464. 1 Jon. 386. Cro. Car. 208. 218. 1 Lev. 17. Raym. 67, &c.

The council ſaid, the queſtion is, whether the commiſſioners can aſſign a debt due to the bankrupt's wife, as executrix to another? He agreed that ſuch debt was not forfeitable by outlawry, &c. of the wife or huſband. But a thing may be grantable or aſſignable, though not forfeitable; his grant can convey away the goods, though he cannot forfeit them. The ſtatute enables him to grant or aſſign choſes in action. Whatever the man himſelf can grant, the commiſſioners may; if a man grants all his goods and chattels, a term in right of his wife, will paſs by ſuch grant.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This here is a choſe in action, and in auter droit, 2 Cro. 318. And as to this being a choſe in action, there is no difference: for they have the ſame power over theſe, as over goods, &c. Noy 142. Palm. 505.

The council on the other ſide ſaid, there are no words in the ſtat. that impower the commiſſioners to aſſign the eſtate of another man, but of the bankrupt only.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This in truth is the eſtate of the teſtator, and they have no authority to aſſign any thing whatever, but the bankrupt's eſtate; the power the huſband has of diſpoſing of it, does not make it his till he has diſpoſed of it.

Powell, Juſtice. If a man grants all his own goods, ſuch things in action ſhall paſs, becauſe the property muſt be in ſomebody; but the law has been ruled otherways ſince, and therefore if he has any other goods the ſtatute is ſatisfied; and by his grant of all his own goods, none but what are really his own ſhall paſs; and theſe words ſhall not paſs away thoſe things which would make him a wrong doer, and in this caſe commit a devaſtavit, (ſee the caſe of Knight v. Goulds in Levintz.) You would have the commiſſioners to be the teſtator's executors, but they are only to pay the debts of the bankrupt, but not the debts of the teſtator, adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 138.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Hull v. Holliday.

An action was brought againſt a bankrupt; the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of bankrupts, in which it is enacted, that the perſon who conforms to the act may plead the general iſſue) and that he manifeſtly became a bankrupt before the day, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This plea will not do; for when a ſtatute gives a plea, it muſt be pleaded in the words of the ſtatute; and beſides, by this pleading, it does not appear the perſon was within the act; for the debt might be after he became a bankrupt, and before he became a public bankrupt, and then he would be out of the priviledge of the act. Therefore, judgment was given for the plaintiff, unleſs cauſe ſhewn before the end of the term. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 207.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. Kiggil v. Player.

Aſſignees under a commiſſion of bankruptcy brought trover on their own poſſeſſion, as of their own proper goods; and that they came to the hands of the defendant, and he converted them. And on evidence it appeared the converſion was by executing a fi. fac. on the goods in the declaration mentioned, after the bankruptcy, and before the aſſignment, and it was not proved that the plaintiff had demanded them; and this being made a caſe, it was argued, that by aſſignment the aſſignee had a property by relation, from the very time of the bankruptcy, and there was no meſne interval of time; as where a perſon takes out letters of adminiſtration, he has a property from the death of the inteſtate, and may declare generally, as of his own proper goods, even before an adminiſtration ſued out. But Holt denied this, and ſaid, he ought to declare ſpecially, and ſo the plaintiff might have done in the principal caſe, and he relied on the caſe of Perry v. Bowyer; and ſaid, the aſſignee was in by relation from the time of bankruptcy, ſo as to avoid all meſne acts, but not ſo as to be actually inveſted with the very property. Adjourned. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 111.

Reſolutions of the Judges, Dec. 3, 1706. on Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 17.

2dly. That there ought to be a certificate of the allowance or diſallowance made on the reference, and that remitted to the Lord Keeper.

3dly. That the act having impowered the judges to determine prout, &c. they have by implication a power given them to examine witneſſes viva voce; and that the ſaid method be taken where witneſſes are to be had; but where there are no witneſſes, that the copies of affidavits filed in Chancery, and ſworn before a maſter extraordinary, be received and read; and that the affidavits taken before the judges, to whom the maſter is referred, be read.

4thly. That the judges make out ſummons for witneſſes.

5thly. That the ſecond clauſe in the act extends to thoſe that were bankrupts before the 10th March, 1705, againſt whom there were commiſſions then ſued out and ſubſiſting: if the matters were determined, and the commiſſion cloſed, or if ſuperſeded or repealed, or the commiſſioners all dead, unleſs the ſame were renewed or revived, or procedendos in reaſonable time brought, viz. within half a year at leaſt, then not within this clauſe, and the certificate to be diſallowed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 112.

Trinity, 13 Ann. Miles v. Williams.

In debt on a bond brought againſt the defendant and his wife, they pleaded in bar, that the bond was entered into by the wife when ſole; that a commiſſion of bankruptcy, iſſued out againſt the huſband, who in all points conformed himſelf to the ſeveral ſtatutes relating to bankrupts, and that thereby the debt was diſcharged; and this he is ready to verify. To this plea the plaintiff demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed the following cauſes of demurrer.

1ſt. Becauſe a bond entered into by the wife, while ſhe was ſole, is not diſcharged by the bankruptcy of the huſband.

2dly. Becauſe they ought to have concluded their plea to the country.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court as to the firſt point to be, that ſuch a debt was a debt within ſtat. 4. of the Queen, and conſequently that it was diſcharged by the bankruptcy of the huſband.

The words of the ſtatute are, "ſhall be diſcharged
" from all debts by him, her, or them, due and owing, at
" the time that he, ſhe, or they, did become bankrupt."

The queſtion therefore will be, whether this is a debt due and owing at the time of the bankruptcy?

It has been argued at the bar, and very reaſonably, that if debts due to the bankrupt's wife are aſſignable by the commiſſioners, then it is reaſonable that debts owing by the bankrupt's wife ſhould be diſcharged by the bankruptcy.

Now, in order to know whether a debt due to the wife of the bankrupt is aſſignable, the intention of ſtat. 13 Eliz. cap. 7. and 1 Jac. cap. 15. muſt be conſidered.

By ſtat. 1 Jac. which is explanatory of that of Eliz. it is provided, that the commiſſioners ſhall have power to grant and aſſign, or otherwiſe to order or diſpoſe of all debts due, or to grow due, to and for the benefit of the bankrupt, by what perſon or perſons ſoever, or in what manner or form ſoever, to the uſe of the creditors, &c. and that the ſaid aſſignment or diſpoſition, &c. ſhall ſo veſt the property, &c. in the aſſignees, as fully &c. as if the ſaid bill, bond, &c. whereon the ſaid debts ſhall ariſe and grow due, had been made to, with, or for the uſe of the aſſignees.

Now, the intention of this act of parliament is plainly that the bankrupt being not conſidered a proper perſon to be intruſted with the management of his own eſtate, for fear he ſhould defraud his creditors, therefore the act puts the commiſſioners in the place and ſtead of the bankrupt; and conſequently whatever eſtate the huſband can turn into money, in order to pay his debts, the ſame is aſſignable by the commiſſioners.

The beſt way of interpreting ſtatutes is by the rules of common law in the like caſes.

It is certainly a very equitable interpretation, that whatever may be applied by the bankrupt to the payment ment of his debts, may be aſſignable by the commiſſioners.

The contrary opinion, that it is not aſſignable, promotes no good end in the world.

To the objection, that the ſtatute does not extend to debts due to the bankrupt as adminiſtrator or executor, it may be anſwered, that it is nothing to the purpoſe, for he has no intereſt in thoſe debts to his own uſe, and when he recovers them they are aſſets, &c.

But it is objected, that this ſtatute extends not to debts due to him and another, and for this purpoſe, 1 Lev. 17. is quoted.

To this I muſt anſwer, firſt, that there is no judgment in that caſe. 2dly. That I doubt whether it be certain, that the whole debt is not veſted in the crown, on the outlawry of one, where there are two obligees.

That as debt due from the bankrupt and another is within the act, appears from ſtat. 10 Ann. cap. 5. a declaratory law; but this is his debt, as he is one with his wife.

Another objection has been taken, that this debt ſhall ſurvive to the wife if the huſband dies before he recovers it, and this conſtruction will deprive her of this contingency.

The anſwer is, that the huſband might by his releaſe have diſcharged this debt: now, this is a diſcharge of the legiſlature, applied in eaſe of his debts.

The aſſignee has the ſame remedy to recover it that the bankrupt himſelf had.

If a note be payable to a feme ſole, or order, and ſhe afterwards marries, her huſband is the proper perſon to indorſe it.

Now, that this debt, due from the wife is diſcharged by the bankruptcy, ſeems to me to be clearer than that a debt to the wife ſhould be aſſignable, &c.

For this conſtruction makes for the benefit and intereſt of the bankrupt, creditors, and wife. As to the bankrupt, nothing can be harder than that he ſhould be ſtripped of every thing, forced on oath, and at peril of felony, to make a full diſcovery, and yet, after all, not to be diſcharged.

The diſcharge of the bankrupt ſtands on this reaſon, that he is ſtripped of every thing that ſhould enable him to pay.

This reaſon holds equally to all the debts for which he may be ſued.

This expoſition is more beneficial for the creditors; for if this debt is diſcharged, then is a creditor of the wife a creditor within the ſtatute, and to come in for an equal proportion, which is far more eligible than an action, for that is good for nothing, unleſs the wife ſurvives, and perhaps not then neither.

As to the wife, that this expoſition is beneficial to her, is ſo plain, that it has been urged as an objection that it will be too beneficial.

Whether this will be a temporary diſcharge during the coverture, or a perpetual one, is now the queſtion; but I am inclined to think it a perpetual one; nor is this unreaſonable, for the law looks on the debt as paid, ſince the creditor is let into the common fund.

As to the objection, that this may be a fortune to a woman, the anſwer is, it is very reaſonable, that ſhe ſhould ſhare in the advantages as well as diſadvantages of the bankruptcy.

If a ſuppoſition be made, that a woman may, precedent to her marriage, put her eſtate into the hands of truſtees, for her ſeparate maintenance; and ſo her debts will be diſcharged by the bankruptcy, and her eſtate out of the reach of the creditors; the anſwer is, No; for I am of opinion that ſuch a ſettlement or conveyance againſt the creditors ſhall be deemed void and fraudulent.

As to the objection, that this diſcharge is a perſonal privilege, and therefore not communicable to the wife; the anſwer is, that her diſcharge is neceſſarily conſequential on his. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 243.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. Atkin v. Berwick.

Trinity, 8 Geo. Mayhoe v. Archer.

The caſe found by the jury was, that one R. B. rented a farm, for which he paid 300*l.* per annum, and planted potatoes on part of the lands, which he farmed, and that he bought great quantities of potatoes to utter and ſell again for profit, and that for ſeveral years then laſt paſt, he dealt with ſeveral perſons in potatoes, at ſeveral times and places, and had employed ſeveral warehouſes, where he put in potatoes, and had ſerved ſeveral markets therewith, and had ſold great quantities thereof for profit, and for his living, &c.

On this ſpecial verdict, there were two points raiſed for the opinion of the court.

1ſt. If the jury found enough to make B. a trader within any of the ſtatutes made againſt bankrupts.

2dly. Whether a farmer who ſells potatoes, though he buys ſeveral other great quantities thereof, and gets his living thereby, is within any of the ſaid acts.

The court being divided, no judgment was given, but two of the judges ſeemed to be of opinion, that where a man bought great quantities of wool, or hops, though he had a farm and ſheep of his own, and ſeveral hop gardens, he ſhall be accounted a trader in theſe commodities, and ſo ſhall an inn-keeper if he turns cornchandler.

It is true, the jury have not found that B. got the chiefeſt part of his livelihood by buying and ſelling potatoes, but it is not the quantity that is material, if it is in proportion to other goods which he buys and ſells; for if a man has an orchard, and buys ſeveral quantities of fruit of other people, though not ſo much as he has in his own orchard; yet this ſhall make him a trader, and conſequently ſubject him to the ſtatutes of bankruptcy.

The two other judges were of a contrary opinion, viz. that here was not enough found by the verdict to make B. a bankrupt; for a farmer is no trader within any of the acts before mentioned, as a farmer; and though he uſes another trade, yet if that is not the principal means of his livelihood, he is not a trader within thoſe ſtatutes; it is true, if buying and ſelling in any trade is the chiefeſt means of his livelihood, then he is a trader within the acts of bankruptcy; but that is matter to be given in evidence, and found by the jury, which was not done in this caſe.

Therefore they held, that this was an inſufficient verdict; becauſe the jury did not find that B. by buying and ſelling potatoes, got the chiefeſt part of his livelihood, or that it did exceed his farming trade, for all that the ſtatute requires, is that trading ſhould be the chief matter to make him a bankrupt.

Afterwards, in Trinity term, the council for the plaintiff finding, that the judges differed in opinion, moved for a venire facias de novo, or that the court would give leave to mend this ſpecial verdict on the affidavit of one of the witneſſes at the trial, that B. bought potatoes ſeveral years, to the value of 500*l.* per annum; and thereon a rule was made for the other ſide to ſhew cauſe why the verdict ſhould not be amended, and the cauſe which they ſhewed was, that though this witneſs had ſworn the ſame thing at the trial, yet it was without precedent to have a verdict (which is a record) amended by ſuch an affidavit, for though it was the ſame which was given in evidence before, yet the jury did not believe it, or probably there might be other evidence at the trial to diſprove it.

But the court was of opinion, that a ſpecial verdict might be amended by the notes taken by the clerk at the trial, or on proof of the certainty of what was then given in evidence, and the ſame was ruled accordingly on payment of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 46.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Grey v. Mendez.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought againſt the defendant by an aſſignee under a commiſſion of bankruptcy.

The defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations, viz. he did not promiſe within ſix years, and ſo no debt.

The plaintiff replied, that the aſſignment by the commiſſioners, &c. was made on ſuch a day, anno 4 Geo. &c.

The defendant demurred to the plaintiff's replication, and it was argued for him, that it was ill, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth how the perſon became a bankrupt, viz. that he was indebted to any perſon, &c. and abſconded, or had done any other act of bankruptcy; but if he had ſet forth this matter, it does not appear by the pleadings that the defendant made any promiſe to the bankrupt himſelf within ſix years, or that the caſe of bankrupts was within the ſaving of the ſtatute of limitations, by which it is enacted, that actions on the caſe for ſlander muſt be commenced within two years after the words ſpoken; and all actions of treſpaſs, of aſſault, battery and wounding, and falſe impriſonment, muſt be commenced within four years after the cauſe of ſuit, and all other actions on the caſe, actions for account, (other than ſuch as concern merchandizing) actions of debt, detinue, treſpaſs, trover and replevin, muſt be brought within ſix years after the cauſe of ſuch actions and ſuits, and not after.

But the right of actions in the caſes aforeſaid is ſaved to infants, feme coverts, perſons non compos mentis, and perſons impriſoned or beyond ſea, ſo as they commence their ſuits within the times above limited reſpectively, after ſuch impediment removed; but the right of bankrupts is not mentioned.

This reaſoning was admitted by the council for the plaintiff, (the aſſignee;) but they inſiſted that the right to this action was a new right, veſted in him by act of parliament.

To which it was anſwered, and ſo reſolved by the court, that the ſtatute of bankruptcy transfers the right to the aſſignee, but it is no more than the old right which the bankrupt held before he had committed any act of bankruptcy, and therefore the aſſignee muſt take it in the ſame plight and condition as the bankrupt himſelf had it; and ſo it had been adjudged in the caſe of Maſon v. Plunket, that the aſſignee was in the ſame condition (as to the right) with the bankrupt himſelf, and conſequently if he was barred by the ſtatute of limitations, ſo ſhall the aſſignee. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Lock v. Major.

By ſtat. 5 Geo. c. 24. ſect. 30. it is provided, that a bankrupt's certificate ſhall be given in evidence, and be a full diſcharge of any action that ſhall be brought by any creditor of ſuch bankrupt. In this cauſe, a point was reſerved at niſi prius before Pratt, Chief Juſtice, whether it was not ſtill neceſſary to prove an act of bankruptcy. And on debate, the court were of opinion that it was, for the word ſuch was relative, and therefore he muſt be proved to be ſuch a perſon as is before deſcribed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 533.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. Rig v. Wilmer.

An action was brought by the plaintiff as aſſignee under a commiſſion of bankruptcy, and the declaration was, that the defendant was indebted to the bankrupt, and being ſo indebted, promiſed to pay to the bankrupt; but throughout the whole declaration there was no aſſumpſit to the plaintiff, the aſſignee.

On demurrer, it was inſiſted on by the defendant, that the ſtatute had transferred the promiſe to the aſſignee, and that a promiſe before made to the bankrupt was afterwards in point of law a promiſe to the aſſignee, and ought to have been declared on as ſuch.

Per curiam. What reaſon is there to vary this from the common caſe of an action by an executor, where you always declare on a promiſe to the teſtator, and yet the promiſe is as ſtrongly transferred to the executor as it is here to the aſſignee. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff, Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 697.

A commiſſion of bankruptcy iſſued in 1726, and the debt of the petitioning creditor appeared to be a promiſſory note given in 1714.

The Chief Juſtice allowed it to be good, ſaying, that though ſix years were elapſed, yet he could not preſume it to be barred. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 746.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Toms et al' v. Mytton.

In trover brought by the aſſignees under a commiſſion againſt A. B. it appeared A. B. was a bankrupt in January, 1724. and the debt of the petitioning creditor was a note dated in September 1725. The Chief Juſtice was therefore of opinion that the commiſſion was a void commiſſion, becauſe the acts of a man after an act of bankruptcy committed are void: ſo the plaintiffs were nonſuited. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 744.

On the 28th November one H. rode out of town, and returned in the evening, before which a bailiff had been at his ſhop to arreſt him; the next morning he ſent for the bailiff, and told him he went out in order to get the term of the plaintiff, and now the return of the writ was out, if they would take out a new writ he would give bail, which was done accordingly; and this was held to be an act of bankruptcy within 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. which ſpeaks of departing from his houſe with intent, and whereby his creditors may be defeated, or delayed from recovering their juſt debts. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 809.

One S. a bankrupt, at the time of his going off, left a quantity of plate with his wife, who, in order to raiſe ſome money on it, delivered it to her ſervant, who went with the defendant to the door of W. a banker, and there the defendant took the plate into his hands, and went into the ſhop, and pawned it in his own name, and gave his note to repay the money, and immediately on receipt of it went back to the bankrupt's wife, and delivered the money to her. And in trover for the plate, the jury (conſidering the defendant acted only as a friend, and that it would be hard to puniſh him) found a verdict for the defendant: but on application to the court, a new trial was granted, on the ground of its being an actual converſion in the defendant, notwithſtanding he did not apply the money to his own uſe. And on a ſecond trial the plaintiff obtained a verdict for the value of the plate.

N. B. A difficulty aroſe on the motion for a new trial, which was this; there were other things beſides plate in the declaration, and as to them the verdict for the defendant was right; and yet a new trial muſt be granted on the whole. But on conſideration, the court held that could be no reaſon to refuſe a new trial, for if the merits, as to the other things, were with the defendant, it would be found for him as well as to them. But it was agreed on all hands, that if one defendant be acquitted, and the other found guilty, that defendant can have no new trial. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 813.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. James Tully v. Frances Sparks and Chriſtopher May, Executors of W. Donaldſon.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt againſt the defendants for 800 l. due on a bond given by the defendants teſtator to the plaintiff, payable at a future day.

The defendants prayed oyer of the bond and condition, and then pleaded in bar of the action the bank- ruptcy of their teſtator, and that he obtained his certificate: to this plea the plaintiff demurred, and the defendants joined in demurrer, and after hearing council for the plaintiff and defendant,

Per curiam. A creditor on a bond, with a condition to pay money at a future day, ſubſequent to the act of bankruptcy, before ſtat. 7 Geo. 1. cap. 31. could not be admitted to prove ſuch debt, or to have any dividend before ſuch ſecurity became payable. It would be hard on the former acts to put ſuch a conſtruction as to bar a man of his debt, when he could come in under the commiſſion, and have the benefit thereof. As to ſtat. 7 Geo. 1. cap. 31. it enacts, that any perſon who hath, or ſhall hereafter give credit on ſuch ſecurity as aforeſaid (referring to the ſecurities mentioned in the recital of the act) to any perſon who was or ſhould become a bankrupt, on a good and valuable conſideration, bona fide, for any ſum of money, or other matter or thing whatſoever, which ſhould not be due or payable at or before the time of ſuch perſon's becoming a bankrupt, ſhall be admitted to prove his bond, &c. for the ſame, in ſuch manner as if it was payable preſently, and not at a future day, and ſhall receive a proportionable dividend, &c. of ſuch bankrupt's eſtate, in proportion to the other creditors of ſuch bankrupt, deducting only thereout a rebate of intereſt, and diſcounting ſuch ſecurities payable at future times, after the rate of 5 l. per cent. per ann. for what he ſhall ſo receive, to be computed from the actual payment thereof, to the time ſuch debt or ſum of money, ſhould or would have become payable in and by ſuch ſecurities as aforeſaid. Then follows a clauſe, that the bankrupt ſhould be diſcharged of ſuch ſecurities. Now, it being uncertain whether this bond ſhould ever become due or not, it depending on two contingencies, which, had not both happened at the time of the act of bankruptcy committed, it was impoſſible to make ſuch abatement of 5 per cent. as the act directs, and therefore this bond, the court held, was not within the act; and therefore they were of opinion to give judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 1548.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. Grace v. Heyham.

The plaintiff brought an action on a promiſſory note, to which the defendant pleaded, that after the ſaid note was given he became a bankrupt, &c. that therefore, by ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 24. he is acquitted and diſcharged of the ſaid debt. The parties having gone to trial, this caſe was made for the opinion of the court.

That the note for which the preſent action is brought was on the defendant's ſeparate account, and that on the bankruptcy of the defendant and one J. S. his partner, a joint commiſſion was taken out againſt them, &c. and whether on this caſe the plaintiff ſhould be barred, was the queſtion then made.

The council for the plaintiff urged, that within the act, bankrupts are not to be diſcharged againſt creditors, who could have no benefit under the commiſſions taken out againſt them: now, the plaintiff could have had a dividend of the joint eſtate under this commiſſion, for that is to be applied to the joint debts only. 2 Chanc. Rep. 226. 2 Vern. 706. 293. But though the commiſſioners under the joint commiſſion might aſſign the joint eſtate to ſeparate creditors, yet the aſſignee of the one trader's part cannot maintain an action without the concurrence of the aſſignee of the other's part, and therefore, ſuch aſſignment might prove fruitleſs to the ſeparate creditors; whereas if ſuch aſſignment had been under a ſeparate commiſſion, a ſeparate right would thereby have been veſted in the aſſignee.

The commiſſioners under a joint commiſſion cannot aſſign the ſeparate eſtate of the bankrupt, for their authority is to aſſign the joint eſtate. 1 Lev. 17. Raym. 6. And beſides, it does not appear in this caſe that the defendant had a ſeparate eſtate to be aſſigned, and that is the only fund out of which the plaintiff might have been intitled to a dividend. If there had been joint and ſeparate commiſſions, the joint and ſeparate creditors would have been equally intitled to the joint eſtate.

The council for the defendant replied; the act does not direct joint and ſeparate commiſſions; but when two partners become bankrupts, and a joint commiſſion is ſued out, it is founded on their diſtinct and reſpective acts of bankruptcy; and therefore, if one becomes ſo one day, and the other the next day, different relations muſt be had under the joint commiſſion, with regard to the different times of the bankruptcy, and the diſtribution under it muſt be the ſame as if ſeparate commiſſions had been taken out; for in both caſes the joint fund is primarily applied to the joint debts, and the ſeparate fund to the ſeparate debts, and then in an average to the joint debts, and ſo vice verſa; ſo are the orders of the court of Chancery in the following inſtances; the firſt, between Stephens and others, v. Brown and Adlam, 22d January, 1728. Brown and Adlam were partners; the partnerſhip was diſſolved, after which, Brown having ſet up for himſelf, became a bankrupt, on which a commiſſion was taken out againſt him, and then Adlam having failed, and a commiſſion having gone againſt him, the joint creditors were admitted to prove their joint debts under the ſeparate commiſſions; the ſecond between Horſey and others, v. Heyham and Heyham, 22d April, 1729. where it was ordered, that the joint eſtate ſhould firſt go to the joint creditors, and the remaining part of the joint eſtate, which reſpectively belonged to each, to their ſeparate creditors, on a joint commiſſion ſued out againſt the then defendants; and to the ſame purpoſe is the caſe of Matthews v. Alana, Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. in C. B. the rule finally pronounced in the Hilary term following, where two having entered jointly into a bond, and then having become bankrupts, ſeparate commiſſions were taken out againſt them, under which the ſeparate commiſſioners having refuſed to let in the obligee, he brought an action againſt one of the obligors in the court of C. B. whereupon the then defendant having got a certificate under the ſeparate commiſſion, was diſcharged on ſolemn argument in that court, which proves that joint creditors may come in under ſeparate commiſſions; and by the ſame reaſon, that ſeparate creditors may come in under a joint commiſſion; and the law being ſo, every aſſignee may recover by ſetting forth the ſpecial matter; and beſides, if the aſſignee of the other part will not join in an action, he may be ſummoned and ſevered.

The court thought the laſt caſe cited came fully to the point; and therefore inclined for the defendant; but adjourned. Vide Fitz-Gibbon's Rep. p. 281.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. The King v. Solomon Nathan.

The defendant was committed by the commiſſioners of bankrupts, who in their warrant recite, that he had been examined before them on his oath, on which examination he had notoriouſly prevaricated; they therefore commit him without bail or mainprize, till he ſhall make a true and full diſcloſure and diſcovery of his eſtate and effects, or otherwiſe be delivered by due courſe of law.

On a habeas corpus being brought, it was moved, that the defendant might be diſcharged, for the following reaſons.

1ſt. Becauſe ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. requires there ſhould be interrogatories exhibited for his examination, that ſo he may have time to conſider of his anſwer, and that it may, can then appear to the court whether he is bound to anſwer, perhaps this prevarication was a matter they had no power to enquire into.

2d. Prevaricated is too looſe an expreſſion: he might prevaricate, and yet give a full anſwer at laſt.

3d. Or be otherwiſe diſcharged, is wrong. Salk. 351. 348.

Per curiam. Interrogatories are a term known in law, and import that the queſtions are put in writing.

And Holt, Chief Juſtice, held that the bankrupt ought to have a copy, and time to conſider of his anſwer. It is very dangerous to let people depart from the words of the act, where theſe ſpecial authorities are given. And this commitment not purſuing the words, the priſoner muſt be diſcharged. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 880.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 2. Macarty v. Barrow.

The defendant in January, 1728, drew bills on Spain, which in March were returned proteſted for non-acceptance; between the drawing and return he became a bankrupt; and being ſued to execution, as the drawer, he moved on ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. to be diſcharged, it being a debt contracted before his bankruptcy.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that this cauſe of action aroſe on the non-acceptance and proteſt; which are both neceſſary to be averred, in order to maintain the action, and the charges thereof are to be recovered.

Per curiam. The principal matter is the drawing the bills, and therefore he muſt be diſcharged. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 949.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Howard v. Poole.

There was a joint commiſſion againſt the defendant, and his partner, and the plaintiff was a ſeparate creditor of the defendant's, and arreſted and held him to bail; but on a motion he was diſcharged on common bail; the plaintiff being ſuch a creditor, as might have come in under the joint commiſſion. Vide Str. vol. 2. p. 995.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. 2. Hockrell or Hockley v. Merry.

The defendant on the 9th of May, 1734, was bail on a writ of error, on the 25th of October, 1734, he committed an act of bankruptcy, and after a commiſſion, obtained his certificate. On the 12th of November, 1735, the judgment was affirmed. And in an action of debt on the recognizance, he pleaded his diſcharge, and that the cauſe of action aroſe before his bankruptcy.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. On the trial held that the defendant was not diſcharged according to the caſe of Tully v. Sparks, Eaſter, 3 Geo. 2. for this was but a contingent debt, for which the plaintiff could not come in under the commiſſion; ſtat. 7 Geo. 1. c. 15. only letting in thoſe where the payment was certain, though future. There was a verdict for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1043. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 262.

At niſi prius at Guildhall, in an action of trover, directed by the Lord Chancellor to try whether goods of the bankrupt, taken in execution on the 8th of November, by the defendant, were rightly taken or not; after having proved the petitioning creditor's debt, and the commiſſion and aſſignment to the plaintiff; the plaintiff entered on proof of an act of bankruptcy.

And for that purpoſe a footman of the bankrupt's was firſt produced, to whom the defendant objected, as being a creditor; and being aſked the queſtion, he ſaid he was a creditor formerly, but had none of his debt paid, and relied on the aſſignee's goodneſs, but reckoned himſelf no longer a creditor, and had no promiſe of payment.

Lord Hardwicke allowed him to be an evidence, for he is not a creditor.

Then his releaſe was read, which was made to the aſſignees only, and objected it ought to be made to the bankrupt likewiſe, for as this creditor will not come in under the commiſſion he has an intereſt in the ſurplus of the eſtate.

Lord Hardwicke. There is no occaſion for the releaſe to be to the bankrupt, and the intereſt you mention him to have in the ſurplus, rather ſtrengthens his evidence for the aſſignees; becauſe he is thereby rather an adverſary to the ſucceſs of the commiſſion than otherwiſe.

Another witneſs in proving the bankruptcy, related what had been ſaid by the bankrupt at different times about his bad circumſtance, and fears of being arreſted.

Lord Hardwicke. It is not uſual to allow ſuch evidence, unleſs when it is concomitant with facts, as what the bankrupt ſays when he is removing his books, or his goods, &c. but not elſe.

And the plaintiff's witneſſes proved him a bankrupt very clearly, but it was obſerved by the defendant's council, that they had proved too much, for now the bankruptcy appeared to be before the giving the bond to the petitioning creditor, which was the debt proved for him in the beginning of the cauſe; and conſequently that bond being after the bankruptcy, was againſt the creditors a void bond, and the petition and commiſſion on ſuch a debt muſt fall to the ground, and the plaintiff be nonſuited It appeared likewiſe on the evidence, that this bond creditor was at the time of the bond, and had been long before the bankruptcy a ſimple contract creditor for a large ſum, and that the bond was given as a higher ſecurity for that debt.

Lord Hardwicke. Here are two queſtions, 1ſt. Suppoſing the act of bankruptcy appears to be before the petitioning creditor's debt was contracted, whether that creditor's petition can ſupport the commiſſion. 2dly. Whether in this caſe the petitioning creditor's ſimple contract debt, which was due before any act of bankruptcy, makes him ſuch a creditor as to ſupport the commiſſion, notwithſtanding the bond given for the ſame debt; or whether the giving that bond is not ſuch an extinguiſhment of the ſimple contract debt, as that he can now be conſidered as a creditor only from the time of giving the bond.

As to the firſt, if there is a clear act of bankruptcy proved, and not purged by any ſubſequent acts of the bankrupt, and the petitioning creditor's debt ſhould appear to be after ſuch act of bankruptcy, a commiſſion iſſuing out on that petition, would iſſue erroneouſly, becauſe ſuch petitioner ought to be a creditor before the act of bankruptcy; for as the commiſſion by relation avoids all meſne acts of the bankrupt, conſequently the petitioning creditor's debt muſt thereby be avoided; which is to make the commiſſion trip up its own heels, and is an abſurdity; it is true, ſome inconveniences may happen by this means, by ſecret acts of bankruptcy, which thoſe who deal with the bankrupt cannot have notice of, and therefore it is expected that acts of bankruptcy ſhould be fully proved, and beyond poſſibility of being purged; and if any ſubſequent tranſactions have been done by the bankrupt, it ſhould be left to the jury whether the act was purged, or was an act within the intent of the ſtatutes of bankruptcy or not; but in this caſe here is a very clear proof of an act of bankruptcy.

As to the ſecond queſtion, I think this petition is ſufficient to ſupport the commiſſion, and that the acceptance of the bond is not an extinguiſhment of the debt as to this purpoſe; for the only queſtion now is, whether there was a debt ſubſiſting, ſufficient to ſupport the commiſſion, and not of what effect it is with regard to the bankrupt himſelf? the reaſon why it is an extinguiſhment with regard to the party, is becauſe the bond is a debt of a higher nature; but in this proceeding both debts are the ſame. And it is every day's practice, that if a creditor by ſimple contract ſhould after an act of bankruptcy committed, get a judgment confeſſed by the bankrupt for the ſame debt, and take the bankrupt's goods in execution, if the aſſignees bring an action of trover againſt that creditor to recover, yet that very creditor is afterwards admitted to come in and prove his debt under the commiſſion, notwithſtanding his acceptance of a judgment after the bankruptcy; and he comes in, in that caſe, by force of his ſimple contract debt; for all creditors are intitled to relief under the commiſſion; ſo that with regard to the commiſſion, he is ſtill conſidered as a ſimple contract creditor, therefore I think the acceptance of the bond has not, as to this proceeding, extinguiſhed his ſimple contract debt, ſo that I think the commiſſion is well founded.

Eaſter, 14 Geo. 2. James Baker's Caſe.

The ſaid J. B. was taken up on an attachment for not performing an award. After which he became a bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; and now moved to be diſcharged, but was oppoſed, becauſe (it was ſaid) bankruptcy does not purge a contempt.

Per curiam. This was a demand for which debt would lie, and the act ſays he ſhall not be arreſted, proſecuted, or impleaded for any debt due before the bankruptcy. It would therefore be hard to keep him in cuſtody, when the duty is diſcharged. And therefore in this caſe he muſt be diſcharged. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1153.

Trinity, 14 Geo. 2. Wickes v. Strahan.

The defendant and his partner in trade had a joint commiſſion of bankruptcy taken out againſt them; under which they obtained their certificate; the plaintiff was a ſeparate creditor, and had obtained judgment before the commiſſion, or act of bankruptcy: and having the body of the defendant in execution, the court was moved to diſcharge him, on the authority of Howard v. Poole, where it was held, that a ſeparate creditor might come in under a joint commiſſion: and alſo in Abr. Eq. Caſes 55. 2 Vern. 707. 2 Wil. Rep. 500. And the court diſcharged him accordingly. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1157.

Michaelmas, 15 Geo. 2. Crookſhank v. Thompſon

The defendant gave a bond of indemnity, and before any breach, became a bankrupt; and being nonſuited in the action, moved to be diſcharged on common bail: but the court compared it to the caſe of Tully v. Sparks, and ordered that he ſhould give ſpecial bail. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1160.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. Aſhley v. Kell.

On a motion for a new trial, the court held, that tho' under ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. the future effects of a bankrupt, againſt whom two commiſſions had iſſued, were liable to be ſeized for the benefit of the creditors, yet the bankrupt had in the mean time ſuch a property in them, as to enable him to tranſact and ſell to a real purchaſer. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1207.

On a queſtion touching a bankruptcy, the C. J. held, that though the preamble of ſtat. 7 Geo. 1. c. 31. ſpeaks only of bonds given for goods in trade, payable at a future day, yet the enacting words extend to all ſort of bonds for the payment of money; and that the words ſuch ſecurity, do not mean ſecurity for ſuch ſort of a debt, but ſecurity by *bonds, bills, notes, &c. Michaelmas, 17 Geo. 2. Graham v. Benton.

On motion to diſcharge the defendant from an execution, as being a bankrupt, on ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. it appeared that the debt was contracted before the bankruptcy, and ſued for and recovered pending the commiſſion, and before any certificate was obtained, and the judgment was afterwards affirmed on a writ of error, and coſts given on ſuch affirmance.

The court diſcharged him as to all; for not having his certificate, he could not plead to the action; and theſe coſts were attendant on the original judgment; and cannot be conſidered as given for delay of execution, when it appears there ought to have been no execution, though no writ of error had been brought. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1196.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. Marſh and others, Aſſignees of May, a Bankrupt, v. Chambers.

On an action of aſſumpſit, the defendant was proved to be indebted to the bankrupt in 208 l. by a ſet off, and bringing money into court, this whole demand would be diſcharged, if the defendant was intitled to be allowed 127 l. on a note of the bankrupt's, which he claimed as indorſee. The caſe was as follows:

One S. who was poſſeſſed of this note at the time of the bankruptcy, applied to the defendant, who he knew owed more money to the bankrupt's eſtate, deſiring him to take the note, and claim a credit for it, on ſetling with the aſſignees, according to ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. the defendant ſcrupled it, and the bankrupt would not conſent; but at laſt, the defendant ventured, on S.'s indorſement (who, he ſaid, was a good man) to pay the 127 l. and on notice to ſet off, produced the note. The plaintiff's council oppoſed its being allowed, it appearing to be an indorſement after the bankruptcy, whereas the words of the ſtatute are mutual debts before; and as it was an unjuſt attempt in S. to get 20 s. in the pound. But the Chief Juſtice conſidering it might be dangerous to inquire into the preciſe time of indorſing negotiable notes, directed the jury to allow it; which, with much difficulty, and merely in deference to his opinion, they did. But on a motion for a new trial, the verdict was ſet aſide, with the concurrence of the Chief Juſtice; the words of the ſtatute being as before ſtated, and the defendant having no right to ſtand in a better condition than S. who could only come in for a dividend: beſides, it would be of ill conſequence to trade, if debtors to the bankrupt's eſtate ſhould be allowed to buy up debts, and ſet them off in this manner. The court gave no opinion how it would be, if the nature of the tranſaction, and the time of the actual indorſement did not appear. Vide Stra. vol. 2. 1234.

Michaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. Cooper, and another, Aſſignees of William Johns, a Bankrupt, v. Chitty and Blackiſton, Eſqrs; Sheriffs of London.

In an action of trover brought by the aſſignees againſt the ſheriffs of London, for ſelling the bankrupt's goods under a fieri fac. at the ſuit of one W. G.

That Johns was regularly declared a bankrupt on the 8th December, 1753. That on the 5th December, 1753, W. G. obtained judgment in C. B. againſt the ſaid bankrupt, and on the ſame day execution was taken out thereon, and the goods ſeized by the ſheriffs: that Johns committed the act of bankruptcy on the 4th of December 1753; and on the 8th of the ſame December, a commiſſion iſſued againſt him, and on the very ſame day the aſſignment of the bankrupt's eſtate and effects was made by the commiſſioners, and on the 28th of Dec. a bill of ſale of the goods was made by the ſheriffs.

Out of this caſe the queſtion made for the opinion of the court was,

Whether the aſſignees under the commiſſion of bankruptcy could maintain an action of trover againſt the ſheriffs for ſeizing the goods on the fieri fac. iſſued after the act of bankruptcy committed, and the goods ſold after the aſſigment was executed?

The court, after hearing council on both ſides, gave judgment:

Lord Manſfield. The commiſſion and aſſignment of the bankrupt's eſtate and effects are both notorious tranſactions, ſo that a ſheriff cannot be well hurt by being left liable to this action. If it were otherwiſe, there would be great danger of colluſion being practiſed by ſheriffs on theſe occaſions, which might be encouraged by a contrary reſolution. The ſeizure in this caſe is after the act of bankruptcy committed, and therefore, after the property by relation is veſted in the aſſignees; but that tranſaction was innocent and excuſable, and the ſheriff ſhall not be liable by relation as a wrong doer. The giſt of the action is, the wrongful converſion by the ſale and falſe return long after the commiſſion and aſſignment.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, this action is maintainable againſt the defendants, and therefore, the plaintiffs muſt have judgment. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 20.

Hilary, 31 Geo. 2. Roſe v. Green.

A queſtion was ſtated for the opinion of the court, viz. whether the defendant became a bankrupt on the 31ſt of March, or on the 6th of May, grounded on the following caſe:

The defendant being arreſted for a debt in Kent, on the 31ſt of March, was afterwards on the 6th of May following brought up by habeas corpus in order to be turned over; and on his way to the judge's chambers called at his attorney's houſe, which was in the city of London, and out of the county of Kent, and was carried from thence by virtue of the habeas to a judge's chambers to be bailed, where he was bailed, but was inſtantly ſurrendered there by his bail, and committed immediately to the King's Bench Priſon, where he lay above two months, viz. from the ſaid 6th of May till the 15th of July next following.

After hearing the council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion as follows:

Lord Manſfield. Where poſitive laws fix and deſcribe what ſhall be conſidered as acts of bankruptcy, they muſt be conſtrued according to their intention, and ſo as to anſwer the ends of public benefit, which the legiſlature had in view.

In conſtruing the act of parliament, he held this caſe not to be ſuch an eſcape as that the man ſhould be thereby rendered a bankrupt and a criminal, for the act clearly intended ſuch an eſcape made by a priſoner as ſhews that he means to run away, and thereby defeat his creditors, but this is not ſuch an eſcape, and a man ſhall not be made a criminal where he had not the leaſt criminal intention to diſobey any law whatſoever. There is no eſcape at all in the ſenſe of the act, he remained ſubſtantially in cuſtody, notwithſtanding his being thus carried into another county.

Where bail is really put in, the bankruptcy only relates to the time of the ſurrender; the mere being arreſted is no preſumption of inſolvency, the preſumption ariſes from his lying in priſon two months. This ſort of bailing is a mere form to turn the defendant over, from one cuſtody, and in ſuch caſe the bail never juſtify.

In caſes of ſuperſeding actions, by reaſon of the plaintiffs not proceeding on them within two terms, being merely turned over from one cuſtody to another, is always conſidered as a continuance of the ſame impriſonment. I think, in the preſent caſe, under the preſent circumſtances, the bankruptcy has a relation to the firſt arreſt.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be indorſed: that the defendant Green became a bankrupt on the 31ſt of March. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 437.

Hilary, 31 Geo. 2. Worſely and another, Aſſignees of Richard Slader, a Bankrupt, v. De Mattos and Slader.

The following queſtion came before the court, on a feigned iſſue out of Chancery, viz. whether one Richard Slader, a trader, was a bankrupt, and if he was a bankrupt then, on what particular day he became ſo, and that the particular day might be indorſed on the poſtea.

The firſt point was ſettled, that he certainly became a bankrupt on the 13th November, 1756.

On the ſecond point it was inſiſted for the plaintiffs, that Richard Slader became a bankrupt anterior to the 13th November, viz. on the 23d of October, by executing the deed in queſtion, which bore date that day, for they alledged this deed to be fraudulent, and the executing it to be ipſo facto an act of bankruptcy, within the ſtatute of 1 Jac. 1. cap. 15.

By conſent of the parties, the following order was made at niſi prius, viz. that either party be at liberty to move the court; and if the court ſhould be of opinion, that the deed of the 23d of October, 1756, is fraudulent, and the execution of it an act of bankruptcy, then the poſtea ſhould be marked on the back thereof: that the ſaid Richard Slader became a bankrupt on the 23d of October, 1756. If the court ſhould be of a different opinion, viz. that the execution of the ſaid deed, under all the circumſtances, by the ſaid Richard Slader be not an act of bankruptcy, then the poſtea to be marked on the back: that the ſaid Richard Slader became a bankrupt on the 13th of November.

On this order, a rule was made as follows. viz.

It is ordered, that the plaintiffs ſhew cauſe why the poſtea in this cauſe ſhould not be indorſed, that Richard Slader became a bankrupt on the 13th of November, 1756.

On this rule, by the direction of the court, the matter was formed into the following caſe, viz.

J.D. an agent of Iſaac De Mattos, knowing Slader to be indebted, and not able to carry on his trade, unleſs ſome perſon in London, in the nature of a banker, would pay his draughts, negotiated in the month of July, 1756, an agreement between the ſaid Iſaac De Mattos and Richard Slader: that De Mattos ſhould pay Slader's draughts on having ſecurity.

After hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Per curiam. Under all the circumſtances of this caſe, we are of opinion, that this conveyance of the bankrupt's whole ſubſtance to De Mattos, though by way of ſecurity, and for a valuable conſideration, is fraudulent, and an act of bankruptcy. Therefore, let the poſtea be indorſed: that Richard Slader became a bankrupt on the 23d of October. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 407.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Cockrell, Aſſignee v. Owſton.

The queſtion before the court on this motion was, whether a bankrupt's certificate obtained after judgment in an action on a bail bond againſt the bankrupt himſelf, ſhould diſcharge the bankrupt from this judgment on the bail bond, as well as from the original debt.

Per curiam. It was held, that the certificate obtained ſubſequent to the bringing of this action on the bail bond (though ſuch certificate was founded on an act of bankruptcy, prior to the bringing this action on the bail bond) did not diſcharge the bail bond, although it diſcharged the original debt, for that this was a new and diſtinct cauſe of action.

The certificate would be a diſcharge of proceedings depending againſt bail in an action on the old debt, who were not already fixed; therefore the court diſcharged the rule to ſhew cauſe, and ordered that the ſheriff ſhould pay the money levied to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 436.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. Bailey v. Dillon.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Mayor, Bailiffs, and Common Council of the Town of Liverpool.

On a mandamus brought by John Clegg, to reſtore him to his place and office of one of the common council of the ſaid Town, from which he was removed on account of his having become a bankrupt, and not having received his certificate.

After having heard the arguments of council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Manſfield. Clegg's merely being a bankrupt, is no objection to his continuing a corporator. It is no offence againſt the duty of his office, he may become a bankrupt without his own fault, and there is no cenſus requiſite as a qualification to be a corporator. Indeed ſome of the conſequencies of bankruptcy, may eventually become a cauſe of a motion, but the bankruptcy itſelf is not ſo; a man may be able to pay above 20*s*. in the pound, or he may very ſoon obtain a certificate after the commiſſion is iſſued.

His having become a bankrupt, and not having obtained his certificate under the commiſſion awarded againſt him, is not of itſelf alone ſufficient to diſqualify him from being a member of the common council of this town, whatever might have been the caſe, if certain eventual conſequences had happened to have followed therefrom.

Per curiam. Let there be a peremptory mandamus to admit him. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 723.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. Tudway v. Bourn.

On a caſe from the court of Chancery. E. C. by will gave a legacy of 200 l. to one C. then a bankrupt, whoſe certificate had, at the time of her death, been ſigned by four thirds of his creditors in number and value, and alſo by the commiſſioners; but the teſtatrix's death happened before its being confirmed and allowed by the Lord Keeper.

The commiſſioners, ſoon after her death, and after C.'s death, and before the allowance of the certificate, aſſigned this legacy to the defendant, Bourn, for the uſe of the creditors, after which the certificate was confirmed and allowed by the Lord Keeper, without oppoſition: but before the allowance of the certificate, the bankrupt himſelf died, having made the preſent plaintiff his executor.

The executor to the bankrupt brought his bill in equity againſt the executor of the teſtatrix, and againſt Bourn the aſſignee under the commiſſion, claiming this 200 l. legacy, as belonging to the bankrupt, by reaſon of his certificate having been ſigned before the death of the teſtatrix, and afterwards allowed and confirmed.

The creditors inſiſted, that it belonged to them, as it was aſſigned to their uſe and benefit by the commiſſioners, before the allowance and confirmation of the certificate by the Lord Keeper.

The queſtion for the opinion of the court was,

"Whether ſuch legacy belonged to the bankrupt's executor, or to his creditors?"

Lord Mansfield. Certainly creditors are not confined either by law or by practice, and any creditor whatever may object to the allowance of the bankrupt's certificate. The allowance of the certificate has been ſometimes refuſed, and ſometimes adjourned, even where there has been no oppoſition. Many years may intervene between the ſigning and the allowance of a certificate, and large effects may in the mean time come to the bankrupt, and the future allowance ought not to over-reach them.

In this caſe the commiſſioners had actually aſſigned this legacy, and for that reaſon the creditors might not perhaps think it worth while to object to the certificate: it is not like the relation of a bargain and ſale, or the ſurrender of a copyhold; poſſibly in this caſe the money may have been actually divided out, and it would be very unreaſonable that all the creditors ſhould refund their dividends.

Foſter, Juſtice, concurred.

The court certified as follows: Having heard council on both ſides, on this caſe, we are of opinion, that the ſaid 200 l. legacy veſted in the aſſignee of the bankrupt, and now belongs to him for the benefit of the bankrupt's creditors. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 716.

Trinity, 32 & 33 Geo. 2. Coppendale v. Bridgen and another.

On an action on the caſe brought againſt the defendants as Sheriffs of Middleſex, for a falſe return, viz. returning nulla bona to a fieri facias directing them to levy 2050 l. debt, and 6 l. 10 s. damages, on the goods of J. D. recovered againſt him in the court of C. B. a verdict was given for the plaintiff for 292 l. 7 s. damages, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the following caſe:

The plaintiff ſued out a bill of Middleſex againſt J. D. on the 2d of May 1757, returnable on Wedneſday next after three weeks from the day of Eaſter. That a warrant was made out thereon, and the party arreſted the ſame day. He being under arreſt on the 4th of May, was charged with a proceſs out of the C. B. at the ſuit of one J. S. and was the ſame day brought by habeas, before Mr. Juſtice Clive, and committed to the Fleet, charged with both actions. The plaintiff in Trinity term obtained judgment in the C. B. for 2000 l. debt, and 6 l. 10 s. damages. On the 17th of June, the plaintiff took out a fieri fac. in Middleſex, returnable from the day of the Holy Trinity in three weeks: and on the 18th of the ſame month, the defendants, the ſheriffs, took divers goods of the ſaid J. D. in execution, and levied thereout the clear ſum of 292 l. 7 s. and on the 5th day of November following, returned on ſuch proceſs, nulla bona.

It was further ſtated to the court, that the ſaid J. D. was a trader within the intent of the ſeveral ſtatutes concerning bankrupts; and that he remained in cuſtody at the plaintiff's ſuit from the time of the firſt arreſt, viz. the 2d of May 1757, until the 2d of July following, when he was diſcharged out of cuſtody, as to the plaintiff's ſuit; but continued in cuſtody as to the ſuit of the ſaid J. S. until the 6th day of the ſame July. That a commiſſion of bankruptcy, on the 5th day of July, iſſued againſt the ſaid J. D. and he was declared a bankrupt on the ſame day; and on the 21ſt of the ſame month, his eſtate and effects were in due manner aſſigned.

The following queſtion, grounded on the foregoing caſe, was made for the opinion of the court, viz.

"Whether, on the whole of this caſe, the plaintiff is entitled to recover againſt the defendants in this action?"

After hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. The bankrupt was firſt arreſted at the ſuit of the man who is the preſent plaintiff againſt the ſheriff of Middleſex, and was afterwards charged in cuſtody at the ſuit of J. S.

The queſtion is, whether the return be falſe? That is, whether theſe goods were the property of the bankrupt, and that depends on the bankruptcy of the defendant in the original action.

If J. D. was a bankrupt on the 2d of May, when he was firſt arreſted at the plaintiff's ſuit, or even on the 4th of May, when he was charged in cuſtody at the ſuit of J. S. the goods could not poſſibly belong to him, but muſt be the property of the aſſignees by relation backwards to that time.

The words of ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 19. are plain; being, "that all and every perſon, &c. who ſhall, &c. or being arreſted for debt, ſhall, after his or her arreſt, lie in priſon two months or more, on that or any other arreſt or detention in priſon for debt, ſhall be accounted and adjudged a bankrupt to all intents and purpoſes, from the time of his or her ſaid firſt arreſt."

In this caſe, J. D. was arreſted on the 2d of May, and on the 4th of May was charged in cuſtody with that and another action. It is admitted, that he did lie two months in priſon, viz. till the 6th of July, at J. S.'s ſuit, and till the 2d of July, before he was diſcharged, at the plaintiff's ſuit.

The lying two months in priſon is a ſtrong preſumption that the perſon was inſolvent at the time of the arreſt; and the act ſays, that "if he lies in priſon two months on that or any other arreſt, he ſhall be adjudged a bankrupt from the time of the firſt arreſt:" ſo that here is plainly an act of bankruptcy on the 4th of May, whatever diſpute may be made about there being one on the 2d of May. Therefore, the ſheriff's return is true.

Nothing can ſupport the plaintiff's claim but his ſhewing that the bankruptcy was not incurred till after the 18th of June, which was the time when the goods were taken in execution.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the defendants, in order to have a judgment of nonſuit entered thereon. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 814.

Trinity, 32 & 33 Geo. 2. Wilſon v. Day.

On an action of treſpaſs for entering the plaintiff's houſe, and taking away his goods, on not guilty pleaded, and a juſtification of the taking under a commiſſion againſt one Lawſon, the cauſe came on to be tried; and the matter was referred to the opinion of the court, on the following queſtion, which was directed to come on by way of motion,

Whether an aſſignment made by Lawſon was in itſelf an act of bankruptcy?

One Lawſon, a trader, was concerned with one Titley in circulating notes, and was really indebted to the plaintiff Wilſon, but being in a fright on Titley's going off, ſent for Wilſon on Thurſday the 16th of November, and told him that Titley was gone off, and that many notes were ſtanding out againſt him, and that he could not ſtand his ground, and therefore propoſed to ſecure Wilſon; and on Saturday the 18th of November ſent for an attorney, and preſſed him to draw an aſſignment immediately from him the ſaid Lawſon to Wilſon. The attorney could not do it till the Monday, and it was privately executed on that day, though it bore date on the preceding Saturday. It was given to Wilſon to ſecure money really due to him, and which he was liable to pay on Lawſon's account; and the deed purports it to be only a ſecurity for ſuch money, but does not liquidate the ſum due. A day or two after, a defeazance was executed, which was a ſeparate deed, making the former void, on payment of all the money due to Wilſon. The defeazance did not ſpecify the particular ſum no more than the aſſignment. After payment of Wilſon's debt, the reſidue was to be in truſt for Lawſon himſelf. The aſſignment was a general aſſignment of every thing that Lawſon had in the world, and imported, that it was made to ſecure a large ſum, viz. 1800 l. and upwards, and recited the cauſe of making ſuch deed. There was no counterpart, and the original remained in the cuſtody and keeping of the aſſignor; no other poſſeſſion was delivered, but a letter of attorney given to one Betham, clerk to Lawſon, a perſon privy to the whole tranſaction, to collect, receive, diſpoſe, &c. but the goods continued in Lawſon's houſe; no notice was given to the debtors of Lawſon, who owed him money, till Lawſon went off, which was a few days after. At the trial it appeared, that the debt really due to Wilſon from Lawſon was about 1840 l. although the deed which recited Lawſon's circumſtances to be bad, and their manner of dealing, recited alſo, that there might be about 3000 l. that Wilſon might be liable to pay, but mentions only 30 l. as actually due; and then aſſigns every thing to Wilſon, &c. without any exception whatſoever.

After hearing council on both ſides on this caſe, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Mansfield. It is a plain caſe, both on the deed, and on the collateral circumſtances.

The ſyſtem of the bankrupt laws is, that the bankrupt's effects ſhall be taken out of his own poſſeſſion, and be divided equally among all his creditors.

It is not neceſſary that the deed ſhould be fraudulent, as between the parties, nor is this deed at all ſo, for it is a very fair deed as to the parties, but it is made to prefer Wilſon to the bankrupt's other creditors.

A trader, before he becomes a bankrupt, may prefer one creditor to another, and may pay him his debt, or may make a mortgage, with poſſeſſion delivered, or may aſſign part of his effects to one particular creditor, yet an aſſignment of his whole eſtate is of a very different conſideration, becauſe it tends to defeat the whole ſyſtem of the bankrupt laws.

In this caſe he aſſigns all, and inveſts his clerk with the management of his effects, inſtead of the commiſſioners.

This deed is an act of bankruptcy itſelf. It defeats the whole bankrupt law, nothing remains for the creditors in any ſhape, but his whole eſtate is put into the hands of his own truſtees immediately; therefore he is a bankrupt the moment he has executed the deed, for there is nothing at all left for his creditors; and this being an unliquidated demand, makes the caſe ſtronger.

Thus the matter ſtands on the deed.

The circumſtances confirm it; for in this caſe there is no viſible change of poſſeſſion, and the letter of attorney to receive the debts is a ſecret tranſaction unknown to every body elſe: and according to the caſe of Ryal v. Rowles, there ought to be notice given to the creditors. I therefore think this deed is in itſelf an act of bankruptcy.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let a judgment of nonſuit be entered for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 827.

Hilary, 33 Geo. 2. Foxcroft and another, Aſſignees of Satterthwaite, a Bankrupt, v. Devonſhire and others.

On a motion for a new trial on ſuppoſition of a miſdirection given by the judge who tried the cauſe, the caſe was as follows:

An action on the caſe was brought by the plaintiffs againſt the defendants, for monies had and received by the defendants to the uſe of the plaintiffs as aſſignees of the bankrupt. To this action the defendants pleaded the general iſſue, that they did not undertake, &c. and iſſue was joined on this plea.

The cauſe was tried at Lancaſter Aſſizes, before Noel, Juſtice, and a verdict was found for the plaintiffs, of which verdict the judge then declared himſelf ſatisfied.

At the trial, the defendants council admitted that Satterthwaite was a trader; they likewiſe admitted the petitioning creditor's debt, the commiſſion, and the aſſignment of the bankrupt's eſtate and effects to the aſſignees; but they diſputed the act of bankruptcy ſuppoſed to have been committed by Satterthwaite.

The action was brought for money ariſing from the ſale of goods conſigned by Satterthwaite to the defendants, as his factors, and ſold by them as ſuch, which money was admitted to be in the hands of the defendants, and amounted to 5314 l. 17 s. 9½ d.

The defendants proved, that they had paid ſeveral ſums on account of Satterthwaite's draughts and otherwiſe, to his uſe, and on his account.

The plaintiffs proved ſome ſecret acts of bankruptcy, viz. his being denied to his creditors about Chriſtmas 1751, after which he appeared again publickly as uſual, till about Auguſt following. In Auguſt 1752 he totally ſtopped payment, on which the commiſſion of bankruptcy was taken out againſt him. Theſe ſecret acts of bankruptcy covered the time of the conſignment to the defendants, and alſo the ſale and time when the money was advanced by them, to the uſe and order of the bankrupt.

1ſt. Whether the defendants were not entitled, as factors for Satterthwaite, to retain for the general balance of their account.

2dly. Whether they were not within the protection of ſtatute 19 Geo. 2. cap. 31. ſect. 1.

The plaintiffs council in reply objected, that this tranſaction of the defendants was fraudulent, for that they knew and were appriſed that Satterthwaite was inſolvent at the time when his effects came into their hands.

The jury being of the ſame opinion, gave the plaintiffs a verdict for the whole money, except commiſſion and charges of ſale.

On this motion, after hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Per curiam. We are all clearly of opinion, that this rule muſt be made abſolute for a new trial on payment of coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 932.

Hilary, 1 Geo. 3. The King v. John Perrot.

The defendant was brought before this court from Newgate by habeas, to get diſcharged from a commitment made by commiſſioners under a commiſſion iſſued againſt him, for not ſubmitting himſelf to them, and making a full anſwer to the queſtions put to him, to their ſatisfaction.

The queſtion put to the bankrupt by the commiſſioners was in theſe words, viz.

“ As you do admit that you have ſpent the laſt “ week previous to this your examination with “ Mr. M. (one of your aſſignees) to ſettle and “ adjuſt your accounts, and to draw up a true “ ſtate thereof, to enable you to cloſe ſuch your “ examination; and do likewiſe admit, that on “ ſuch ſtate thereof it appears, that after giving “ you credit for all ſums of money paid by
“ you, and making you debtor for all goods
“ ſold and delivered to you from your firſt “ entering into trade to the time of your bank- “ ruptcy, there is a deficiency of the ſum of “ 13,513 l. give a true and particular account

"what is become of the ſame, and how and in
"what manner you have applied and diſpoſed
"thereof."

"On the goods ſold this laſt year, I have loſt
"upwards of 2000*l.* and by mournings, I have
"loſt upwards of 1000*l.* and for nine or ten "years I have been extremely extravagant, and
"ſpent large ſums of money." J. P.

His council urged to the court as a ground for his diſcharge,

1ſt. That the anſwer which he had already given before the commiſſioners was a full, ſufficient, and ſatisfactory anſwer, and the beſt and only one that could be given by an idle extravagant man, who had never kept any accounts, and conſequently, that impriſoning him until he ſhall give a more full and ſatisfactory anſwer to the queſtion, was an impriſonment for life.

2dly. That the power and juriſdiction of the commiſſioners to take the bankrupt's examination, &c. was temporary, and confined to the time allowed to the bankrupt to come in and ſurrender himſelf, and ſubmit to be examined, after which the commiſſioners had no further power over the bankrupt at all; and in ſupport of this objection, his council relied on the conſtruction of the bankrupt acts, and particularly ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 30. ſect. 1, 2, & 3.

The council for the commiſſioners, &c. inſiſted, 1ſt. That the bankrupt's anſwer was nugatory and inſufficient. 2dly. That the conſtruction put by the bankrupt's council on the bankrupt acts was falſe, and contrary to the genuine ſpirit and conſtruction of thoſe acts; and, if allowed, would pervert their very end and intent.

Lord Mansfield. If the queſtion put to the bankrupt by the commiſſioners was improper, or if proper, and the anſwer ſatisfactory, he ought to be diſcharged, but this is a proper queſtion, and the anſwer is very inſufficient and unſatisfactory.

The conſtruction put by the defendant's council in objection to the commitment, is founded on mere arbitrary implication, the legiſlature ſay no ſuch thing. Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 30. ſect. 16. gives the commiſſioners a power to commit the bankrupt until he ſhall ſubmit, and a full anſwer make to their ſatisfaction. The 17th ſect. of that ſtatute gives power to the court, or judge, to re-commit the bankrupt to the ſame priſon, there to remain as aforeſaid, until he ſhall conform as aforeſaid.

His examination is not confined to be within the time limited for the bankrupt to come in, ſurrender, and ſubmit to be examined. The power of the commiſſioners is general, and not limited to the compaſs of time given the bankrupt to come in.

In this caſe, the commiſſioners have, within the limited time, required a further anſwer of the bankrupt to their queſtion, and committed him for his refuſal; I am clearly ſatisfied that he cannot redeem himſelf from his impriſonment, but by giving a full anſwer to the queſtion. If he gives a full anſwer, and the commiſſioners are not ſatisfied with it, he will then be entitled to his proper remedy.

Foſter and Wilmot, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let the defendant be remanded. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1122.

Note. The bankrupt was brought up again by habeas corpus in Trinity term following, but remanded, becauſe his anſwer to the commiſſioners was incomplete and unſatisfactory. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1215.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt ſetting aſide a fieri fac. and paying back the money levied thereon, the caſe was:

The defendant was a bankrupt, againſt whom a commiſſion had iſſued, and who had afterwards obtained his certificate: that the preſent action was brought againſt him as executor, on a bond entered into by the defendant's teſtator: that the defendant had, between the time of the iſſuing of the commiſſion, and the time of obtaining his certificate, pleaded a falſe plea, viz. that he had no aſſets, when in fact he had aſſets, which was found againſt him; on which the plaintiff had judgment de bonis teſtatoris, ſi, &c. and againſt the defendant himſelf de bonis propriis for the coſts.

Per curiam. The pleading a falſe plea was his own act, and his own fault, and the judgment and execution de bonis propriis for coſts, was ſingly owing to this his falſe plea, which was ſubſequent to the iſſuing of the commiſſion, conſequently it could not have been proved under the commiſſion, and therefore cannot be diſcharged by the certificate: therefore let the rule be diſcharged.

Lord Mansfield. If an executor becomes a bankrupt, the commiſſioners cannot ſeize the ſpecific effects of his teſtator, not even in money, which ſpecifically can be diſtinguiſhed and aſcertained to belong to ſuch teſtator, and not to the bankrupt himſelf. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1368, 1369.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Brown v. Chapman.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. on an action on the caſe, for falſely and maliciouſly ſuing out a commiſſion of bankruptcy againſt him.

The plaintiff in error's council objected to the action, and ſaid it did not lie, becauſe the ſtatutes of bankruptcy have provided a particular remedy, and the thing itſelf meaning bankruptcy, did not exiſt at common law.

Lord Mansfield. There is no clauſe in ſtat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 30. that takes away the common law remedy, nor that ſays, that the party ſhall not recover more than 200*l.* damages.

It never can be for the benefit of trade, that a man ſhould be at liberty to ſue out commiſſions of bankruptcy maliciouſly.

Per curiam. Let the judgment of the C. B. be affirmed. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1418.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. 3. Lavie, and another, Aſſignees of Jane Cox, a Bankrupt, v. Phillips and others, Aſſignees of John Cox, a Bankrupt.

An action of trover was brought by the aſſignees of Jane Cox, a ſole trader in London, and a bankrupt, againſt the aſſignees of John Cox, her huſband, who was alſo a bankrupt, on which a verdict was given for the plaintiffs, ſubject to the opinion of the court, on the following facts and cuſtom:

1ſt. The commiſſion iſſued againſt John Cox, the huſband, on the 13th of March 1764 and the commiſſion againſt Jane his wife on the 26th of April 1764.

2dly. The cuſtom of London, which is as follows:
"Where a feme covert of a huſband uſeth any craft in
"the ſaid city on her ſole account, whereof the huſ-
"band meddleth nothing, ſuch a woman ſhall be "charged as a feme ſole concerning every thing that
"toucheth her craft; and if the huſband and wife
"ſhall be impleaded in ſuch caſe, the wife ſhall
"plead as a feme ſole: and if ſhe is condemned, ſhe
"ſhall be committed to priſon till ſhe has made ſatiſ-
"faction, and the huſband and his goods ſhall not in
"ſuch caſe be charged or impeached."

3dly. Jane Cox, the wife, was a ſole trader, and carried on a ſeparate trade within the ſaid city, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid city of London.

4thly. The fans for which this action was brought were part of the effects of her ſole trade.

5thly. The aſſignees of the huſband's commiſſion ſeized thoſe fans the day the commiſſion iſſued againſt him.

The following queſtions were put:

1ſt. Whether the aſſignees of John the huſband had a right to take the ſeparate effects of Jane his wife, who was a ſole trader, and apply them towards ſatiſfaction of the debts of the huſband, under the commiſſion awarded againſt him, in prejudice of the ſeparate creditors of his wife?

2dly. Whether a commiſſion of bankruptcy may iſſue againſt a married woman, being a ſole trader?

After hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Mansfield. I am of opinion that a commiſſion may be taken out againſt her as a ſole trader, with reſpect to her ſeparate effects in trade.

Wilmot, Yates, and Aſton, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

Per curiam, unanimouſly. Let judgment be for the plaintiffs. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1776.

Baron and Feme.

Eaſter, 4 W. 3. Hare v. White & Ux.

In an action of treſpaſs brought againſt baron and feme, upon the general iſſue the baron was acquitted, and the feme found guilty; and the court was moved that the baron ſhould have been joined only for conformity, and there is a writ in the regiſter to that purpoſe, 105 b. which ought to be purſued; and ſo is Yelv. 106.

But per curiam. There is no diverſity in the caſe of baron and feme, and where treſpaſs is againſt any other two, and one of them is found guilty. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 19.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Nelthrop & Ux. v. Anderſon.

In an action of trover brought by a man and his wife, where the plaintiffs declare, for that whereas they were poſſeſſed, &c. the defendant converted to the damage of both, held naught after a verdict; for the poſſeſſion of a wife is the poſſeſſion of her huſband, and ſo is the property; ſo that the converſion cannot be to the damage of the wife, but of the huſband only. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 114.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Buckley v. Collier.

In an action brought by the huſband and wife on the caſe, for work done by the wife during the coverture; the queſtion was, whether they could join in this action.

Held in treſpaſs, they may join for entering on the land, and carrying away the graſs of them there growing, &c.

So likewiſe where the huſband has land in the right of his wife, as a jointure by a former huſband, and ſhe is to have the lops and ſhrowds of the trees growing thereon, and he who has the inheritance cuts them down; they may join in an action to recover damages, becauſe it ſurvives to her after his death.

But the court was of opinion, that in the principal caſe the declaration was not good, becauſe the action was brought for a perſonal thing that could not ſurvive, and in perſonal actions, the law is clear they cannot join. Cro. Eliz. 133. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 156.

Eaſter, 6 W. & M. Jones v. Morley.

In treſpaſs and ejectment for the manor of Frenſham in the county of Surry, a verdict was found, the ſubſtance whereof was,

That Ann Bowyer was ſeized thereof in fee, and by indentures of leaſe and releaſe, bearing date the 22d and 23d day of January 1664, and made between Edward Morley, who was brother to the defendant, of the firſt part; the ſaid Ann Bowyer, of the ſecond part; and the defendant, Sir William Morley, and John Wells, of the third part; in conſideration of a marriage then intended between the ſaid Edward and Ann, and of a ſettlement of lands to be made by the ſaid Edward in jointure, of the yearly value of 300 l. ſhe the ſaid Ann did convey the ſaid manor to the defendant Sir William Morley, and John Wells, and their heirs, &c. in truſt for the ſaid Ann and her heirs, until the ſaid marriage ſhould take effect, and until ſuch ſettlement in jointure ſhould be made; and from and after ſuch marriage and ſettlement, then to the uſe of the ſaid Edward Morley and his heirs.

That afterwards the ſaid marriage was ſolemnized, and then, by indenture, bearing date the 29th of January 1665, and made between the huſband and wife, of the one part; and R. Y. and J. T. of the other part; it was recited, that whereas a fine was already acknowledged and agreed to be levied the next Hilary term, by the ſaid Edward and Ann, of the aforeſaid manor, it was declared, that the uſes thereof ſhould be and enure to the ſaid Edward and his heirs.

But before the ſaid fine was levied, viz. on the 31ſt of January, being two days after the date of the former deed, there was another deed made between the huſband of the one part, and the wife of the other part; by which they did covenant and agree to make void all former agreements, contracts, writings, and deeds, whatſoever, until the ſaid huſband ſhould fulfil the covenants in the marriage ſettlement of the 23d of January; and for default thereof, the ſaid Ann and her heirs ſhould enter and hold the ſaid premiſes.

The fine was levied in the ſame Hilary term in which the deed to lead the uſes thereof was dated, viz. on the 9th of February.

The jury find that 300 l. per ann. was not ſettled on the ſaid Ann in jointure by Edward Morley; but only 250 l. per annum, and that charged with an annuity of 15 l. per annum to another perſon.

In July following, viz. 1666. Edward Morley mortgaged the premiſes to one D. for 600 l. and the year following he died without iſſue, and Ann ſurvived about twenty-one years, and is ſince dead without iſſue.

Sir William Morley, the defendant, as brother and heir at law to Edward, entered after the death of Ann, and diſcharged the mortgage made to D. and now, the plaintiff, Henry Bellingham, as couſin and heir to Ann Bowyer, brought the ejectment.

The queſtions on this ſpecial verdict were;

1ſt. Whether by the deed dated the 29th of January, any uſe was raiſed to Edward Morley, becauſe it was dated in Hilary term, and it declared the uſes of a fine as of next Hilary term following, which muſt be a year afterwards?

The chief queſtion was, whether the deed of the 31ſt of January did not revoke and controul that of the 29th preceding, becauſe it was made and executed before the fine was levied?

Per curiam. The ſecond deed is not only evidence, but it actually changes the uſes of the firſt deed; for before the ſtatute of frauds, any thing, even a parol declaration of the uſes of a fine, was good.

Now, ſuppoſing this to be a deed poll, yet it will have the ſame operation as a deed indented, for they both work by way of eſtoppel. And therefore in Hilary term, judgment was given for the plaintiff. The matter was afterwards removed by writ of error into the Houſe of Peers, and there the judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 261.

Hilary, 7 W. 3. Chamberlain v. Huetſon.

There was a libel, ex officio, againſt Chamberlain for incontinency, at the promotion of Mrs. Huetſon, which is alledged to be with her huſband; whereon a ſentence was given, and penance enjoined; and, according to the courſe of the court, coſts awarded to Huetſon, who is not divorced a menſa & thoro, i. e. from bed and board from her huſband; the huſband releaſes the coſts to Chamberlain; ſhe pleads this in the eccleſiaſtical court, and the plea being refuſed, ſhe prayed a prohibition.

Holt, C. J. If a feme covert ſues for defamation in the ſpiritual court, and there obtains ſentence, and coſts are given, if ſhe cohabits with her huſband at that time he may releaſe them; but if ſhe be divorced a menſa & thoro, though the marriage ſtill continues, he cannot; becauſe if there is a divorce, the huſband is to allow the wife alimony; and if ſhe has alimony, the coſts expended in the ſuit are ſuppoſed to iſſue out of it, and therefore the huſband cannot releaſe it, becauſe ſhe has it ſeparate; which is the reaſon, though not mentioned, of Motam's caſe, 2 Roll. Abr. 301. becauſe there is no alimony; and if he may releaſe the duty, he may releaſe the coſts: therefore, in this caſe he may releaſe the coſts, there being no divorce; I think a prohibition muſt be granted. But Rokeby, on account of the ſcandalouſneſs of the cauſe, was againſt it; and afterwards a propoſal was made for bringing money into court, for Mrs. Huetſon to take out as ſhe had occaſion, to carry on the charges of the prohibition, and then to declare; but the matter has not been moved ſince. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 89.

Hilary, 7 W. 3. Carpenter v. Fauſtin.

An action was brought againſt Baron and Feme for a battery done by the wife; the huſband was a priſoner in the King's Bench, before the action brought, and the plaintiff delivered a declaration to the turnkey of the priſon againſt the huſband and wife for this battery; and upon rules given to plead, judgment was entered by nil dicit againſt both, and the wife taken in execution. It was moved, that this was irregular; for upon delivery of the declaration, the plaintiff ſhould have filed common bail for him and his wife; or ſhould have made an attorney for him and his wife, who ſhould have appeared for them.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff ought to have ſued out proceſs againſt the huſband and wife, and the ſheriff ſhould have returned a non eſt inventus for the huſband, and a cepi corpus for the wife; and then upon common bail filed for her, there might be judgment againſt both: it was objected, if there be proceſs againſt baron and feme, and non eſt inventus for the baron, and a cepi as to the feme, ſhe ſhall be diſcharged. Vide 2 Cro. 445. To which Holt anſwered, no, ſhe ſhall not be diſcharged but upon common bail, and then new proceſs ſhall go againſt the baron with the ſame day given to the wife. 1 Mod. 8. And becauſe no bail was entered for the wife, the judgment was ſet aſide. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 115.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If an action be brought againſt huſband and wife, and the huſband is arreſted, he ſhall give a bail bond for the appearance of him and his wife, and muſt put in bail for both; but if a perſon brings an action againſt the huſband only, he cannot declare againſt huſband and wife. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 115.

Hilary, 8 & 9 W. 3. Derry v. The Dutcheſs of Mazarine.

Derry brought an action againſt the Dutcheſs for wages and money lent; the defendant pleaded coverture, and iſſue thereon. And notwithſtanding that there was very ſtrong evidence at the trial, that the Duke of Mazarine, the defendant's huſband, was alive in France, the jury found for the plaintiff, becauſe the Dutcheſs had lived here for twenty years as a feme ſole, and had contracted continually as ſuch; and he who was her huſband was an alien enemy. And it was moved on behalf of the Dutcheſs, that this verdict was againſt evidence and law, for a feme covert cannot be ſole charged for debts and contracts, without a divorce and alimony, although the huſband be a foreigner.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. When the huſband is an alien enemy, and under any abſolute diſability to come and live here, the law perhaps will make the wife of ſuch a huſband chargeable as a feme ſole for her debts and contracts; for this caſe does not differ from the caſe of Lady Belknap and Lady Weyland, who were allowed to be able to ſue and be ſued on the abjuration or baniſhment of their huſbands, as if they had been ſole: and afterwards the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 147.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Garbrand v. Allen. At Guildhall.

An action of trover being brought by the huſband for money paid by the plaintiff's wife to the defendant for land conveyed by the defendant to the plaintiff's wife, by bargain and ſale, without the huſband's knowledge.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If articles of agreement are made by a feme covert, by the order and appointment of her huſband, and the money is paid by the wife in purſuance of ſuch agreement; or if the huſband (tho' not privy at the time of the purchaſe) afterwards conſents to it, the property of the money is altered; and the huſband cannot maintain trover; but if he is not privy to ſuch purchaſe, nor agrees to it, trover will lie for him againſt the vendor, who receives his money of his wife. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 224.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Woodyer v. Greſham.

Judgment was recovered by a feme ſole, who afterwards married, and her huſband and ſhe ſued out a ſci. fa. and had an award of execution; but before execution executed, the wife died: the huſband ſued out a new ſci. facias, to which, on demurrer, it was objected, that the award on the firſt ſcire facias made no alteration, for the execution ſtill muſt be grounded on the firſt judgment, and not on the award; and that this being a choſe in action, muſt go to the adminiſtrator of the wife, and not to the ſurviving huſband.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. This caſe differs not from the caſe of Obrian v. Ram, Michaelmas, 3 Jac. 2. wherein judgment was recovered againſt a feme ſole, who afterwards married; a ſcire facias was ſued out againſt the huſband and wife, and judgment given, that he ſhould have his execution againſt the huſband and wife for the debt and damages aforeſaid. After this award, and before execution executed, the wife died, and after her death a new ſcire facias was iſſued againſt the huſband, and he was held chargeable; which proves that the award or judgment of execution on the ſcire facias makes a plain alteration; for the huſband ſurviving had not been liable on the firſt judgment only: by the ſame reaſon, the award on the ſcire facias is attached in the huſband, and ſhall ſurvive, for it is but equal the huſband ſhould charge in the ſame meaſure he may be charged. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 117.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Yard v. Ellard.

This was an action on the caſe, wherein the plaintiff declares, that whereas the defendant, on the 6th of June 9 W. 3. was indebted to the plaintiff and Suſannah, his wife, as executrix of the teſtament of S. T. 6 l. for arrears of rent due to S. T. in his life-time; and ſo being indebted, in conſideration the ſaid plaintiff would give him time to pay the ſame till Michaelmas, then next following, he promiſed to pay the ſaid 6 l. to the ſaid plaintiff, at the feaſt of Michaelmas then next following; and ſhews that he gave him time till the next Michaelmas, but that the ſaid defendant has not paid, and avers the life of his wife; and on non aſſumpſit pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action ſhould have been brought by the baron and feme; becauſe the debt, which was the foundation of the promiſe, was due to the wife as executrix; and the money, when recovered would enſue the nature of the debt, and be aſſets. But the whole court held the action was well brought by the huſband only; as in the caſe of Lea v. Thinne, Yelv. 84. and it would have been ill if it had been brought by the wife, becauſe the wife was not privy to the contract; but if it is a ſpecial promiſe made to the huſband only, to whom the payment is only to be made; and the recovery on this promiſe muſt be only by him, in his own right; which promiſe does not alter the debt, becauſe it is not of a higher nature, but is a ſort of collateral ſecurity; and the money recovered on this promiſe, is no part of the perſonal eſtate of the teſtator; for if the huſband dies, his executor ſhall have execution thereof; but yet, when it is recovered, it is a devaſtavit in the huſband, ſo far as he recovers. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 207. Raym. vol. 1. p. 386. Salk. vol. 1. p. 117.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Tod v. Stokes or Stoakes. At Guildhall.

The plaintiff, an appothecary, ſued the defendant, a parſon, living in Chicheſter, for phyſic adminiſtered to his wife in London; on non aſſumpſit pleaded, it appeared on evidence, that the defendant and his wife had been parted by conſent, for five years laſt paſt, and that on a ſeparation, by articles made to truſtees of the wife's naming, the defendant had obliged himſelf to allow the wife 200 l. a year; which he did accordingly, and had a covenant from the truſtees to exonerate him of all the charges of the wife; and that the plaintiff did not know the wife to be a feme covert, at the time the medicines were adminiſtered.

Per Holt, C. J. theſe points were held. 1ſt. That the reaſon why the huſband ſhall pay debts contracted by his wife, is on the credit the law gives her by implication, in reſpect of cohabitation; and is like a credit given to a ſervant. 2dly, That if the huſband and wife part by conſent, and the huſband ſecures her an allowance, it is in conſideration that he ſhould not be charged any more by her; and it is unreaſonable he ſhould be charged for victuals or phyſick, or other neceſſaries after. 3dly. That a perſonal knowledge of ſuch agreement is not neceſſary, ſo it be publicly and notoriouſly known. 4thly. That ſuch public knowledge of the agreement need not be at London, where the debt was contracted, but is ſufficient if it be where the parties lived, viz. in this caſe at Chicheſter. 5thly. That if the debt was contracted by the wife, in ſo ſhort a time after the agreement, as it could not be known at Chicheſter, in that caſe the huſband would be liable. 6thly. If the huſband turns away his wife, he muſt ſend credit with her for reaſonable expences. 7thly. If the wife goes away without the conſent of her huſband, ſhe ſhall find credit where ſhe goes, without any charge to the huſband, or his giving any perſonal notice of leaving him; and he ſaid, Scot and Manby's caſe had been carried too far in this; and he remembred a caſe before him at Exeter aſſizes, 10 W. 3. between Lungworthy and Huckmore, where he held, that if a wife elopes from her huſband, and takes up neceſſaries from a tradeſman, who has no notice of the elopement, the huſband ſhould not be liable; and it is ſufficient for the huſband to give general notice, that tradeſmen, &c. ſhould not truſt his wife. But Serjeant Wright, now Lord Keeper, at the ſame time acquainted his Lordſhip, that Treby, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, had ruled that point otherwiſe in an action between the ſame parties; to which Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that notwithſtanding, he would adhere to his own opinion in all the points aforeſaid; and the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 244. and Raym. vol. 1. p. 444.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Cage v. Acton.

In debt brought againſt the defendant as adminiſtratrix to her huſband, for arrears of rent on a leaſe made to him in his life time; the defendant pleaded, that before the intermarriage between him and her, there was a bond entered into by him to her, to pay ſo much money to her, her executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, on condition, that in caſe ſhe ſhould ſurvive him, he would leave her ſo much money; that he has not performed the condition; that ſhe has not aſſets above 200 l. which is a leſs ſum than that which he had bound himſelf to pay her; and that ſhe retained that in part; to which plea the plaintiff demurred generally.

The points in this caſe were two; firſt, whether debt on a bond was of as high a nature as rent; ſo that an execution might give it preference of payment.

2dly. Whether the ſubſequent marriage was a releaſe of the bond.

Gould, Juſtice. Marriage clearly is a releaſe of all bonds and ſpecialties, whether contingent or not, which by any poſſibility may become payable during the marriage. 1ſt. Becauſe huſband and wife are but one perſon in law, and ſo there can be no payment between them. 2dly. Becauſe the ſuit is once ſuſpended; and then it ſhall be ever ſo. 11 H. 7. 15. 10 H. 7. 1 Inſt. 264. Dy. 141.

But the great objection is, how this bond ſhall ſubſiſt, there being now nobody to whom it is due, and every obligation is an immediate debt; and a huſband owing a thing to his wife, is owing a thing to himſelf, which is abſurd.

Anſwer. The law very often makes a fiction for the preſervation of a right; and a ſuſpenſion of a perſonal duty, is not always an extinguiſhment. Lit. ſect. 646. 647. And this is a neceſſary and prudent proviſion in caſe of ſurvivorſhip; and it would be hard marriage ſhould deſtroy that whereof it was the cauſe; the law by its own operation will do no wrong; and ſure it would be a great wrong to defeat the wife of her proviſion. 1 Inſt. 264. 8 Co. 136. If a feme executrix takes a debtor to huſband, it is no releaſe of the debt, becauſe it would be a devaſtavit; and here the law will interpoſe and take away the inconſiſtency of debtor and debtee between husband and wife, by taking it into its own cuſtody, and he quoted the caſe of Dorceſter v. Web. 1 Cro. & 27 H. 8. f. 7 b. A man obligor, marries a woman obligee, who are afterwards divorced, the debt revives, and the man ſhall be ſued by the woman again; and though there be an immediate debt, yet it is qualified in an action of debt, and is no more than a proviſion in caſe of chattel, which the law would make in caſe of inheritance. 2 Cro. 571. Hob. 216. Smith v. Stafford, though it was urged to be a preſent promiſe and lien, releaſeable by the wife, yet judgment was, that ſuch promiſe was not releaſed by the marriage, againſt the opinion of Hob. ſo here the juſtice of the law will preſerve the debt for an honeſt intent. Noy 26. Hut. 17. 18. and in Lit. Rep. it is ſaid, that marriage is only a ſuſpenſion.

Turton, Juſtice. This bond was not entered into by any preſent debt or duty, and if it had, it had been extinguiſhed by the marriage; for as bonds given by others to the wife, are by marriage given to and releaſeable by the husband; ſo bonds which ſhe has from the husband, are veſted in him, and ſo releaſed by act in law. 1 Inſt. 264. Dy. 6. 7. 140. 1 Ro. Abr. 184. 8 Co. 186. Mo. 236. Cr. Ca. 333, &c. And it is a rule in law, that releaſes in law are more mildly taken againſt the releaſer, than releaſes in deed. 1 Inſt. 264. 265. And it is unnatural that marriage ſhould be a releaſe of that which was made by reaſon of the marriage; if the debtee makes the debtor executor, it is a releaſe of the duty; but if a feme executrix takes the debtor for her huband, that is only a ſuſpenſion of the action, and the duty remains. Plow. 184. Hut. 99. 1 Inſt. 264. 1 Ro. Abr. 194. Hob. 10 Mo. 855. A bond may be compared to a covenant or promiſe; for no action can be brought on any of them till broke, and a promiſe is not releaſed by marriage, therefore bond neither, and quoted Dy. 51. Lit. Rep. Clayton's caſe. Obj. That though ſtatute be of a higher nature, it is no devaſtavit to pay the bond before it, becauſe it is not due till broke. Vide Mo. 752. 5 Co. 28.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, contra. There are two queſtions in the caſe; 1ſt. Whether rent be of equal degree with a bond, or of higher nature than a bond; and if payment of debt on a bond may be pleaded in bar of debt for rent; and a caſe out of 2 Vent. was quoted at the bar to prove debt was of an higher nature than a bond. But I hold them to be of equal degree; for if it be a leaſe by parol, it is in the realty, and that is in equal degree with a bond, and payment of one by an executor is a good plea in bar of the other; and Newport v. Godfrey's caſe does not contradict this; it was debt for rent on a parol leaſe, the defendant pleaded ſuch a debt on obligation, beyond which, he had not aſſets, for being equal in degree, he could not plead the one againſt the other till judgment, or payment of the money; but otherwiſe, if one of them be of a higher nature than the other; and there is no diverſity between debt in the realty by ſpecialty, and in realty without ſpecialty, as to equality of degrees; ſo that if there were no more in this caſe, the plea would be good:

As to the other point, which is of great conſequence, whether the bond is not extinguiſhed by marriage, though given in conſideration of marriage:

I hold the bond to be extinguiſhed by the marriage, and that the bond was a preſent immediate duty from the ſealing and delivery of it; and though it is qualified, that is, no action can be brought on it, till after the death of the husband, a releaſe of all actions or all debts will releaſe it, for a releaſe of all demands will diſcharge a debt on a condition ſubſequent, but not on a condition precedent. Lit. ſect. 512. The caſe where the executor of the obligee marries the obligor is different, for there are divers rights; but where the obligee marries the obligor, there he is to receive money to his own uſe; and in my opinion, even Chancery would not give relief in this caſe, though it may be thought much more proper for Equity than law.

The matter, however, went into Chancery, where relief was given, the bond being conſidered as a marriage agreement. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 288.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. White v. Eldridge and his Wife.

In an action of treſpaſs brought againſt husband and wife, on not guilty pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff. And now, the defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, that the wife could not be charged for the treſpaſs of the husband, no more than they can be charged for the converſion of goods to their uſe.

But the court over-ruled the exception. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 443.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Machell & Ux' v. Garrett.

In an action on the caſe brought by husband and wife, for a cauſe ariſing to the wife before marriage, &c. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs were never lawfully married. The plaintiffs replied, that they were married at ſuch a time and place, and on a demur to this replication, the plaintiffs had judgment.

Per curiam. In perſonal actions (as this was) it was right to lay the matter on the fact of the marriage, to make it iſſuable and triable by a jury, and not on the right of the marriage, as the defendant has done in his plea, and as it ought to be done in appeals and real actions. Salk. vol. 3. p. 64.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. ——— v. Harriſon.

It was ruled per Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if husband and wife jointly ſue for a debt due to the wife before marriage, and the husband dies, and the wife continues the ſuit, the monies, when recovered, ſhall not be aſſets to the executor of the husband. And that the husband alone might bring debt for the portion promiſed him with the wife; and though land had been ſettled by the husband on the wife, in conſideration of her fortune, of which this debt was part, yet he having not recovered it during coverture, the wife ſhould recover it to her own uſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 346.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Car v. King.

In an action of debt brought againſt the husband for the lodging of his wife, and proof only made, that he formerly cohabited with her, and owned her as his wife; it was held ſufficient to charge him; but that he might diſcharge himſelf, by giving elopement in evidence; for they that will truſt a wife that has eloped, do it at their peril. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 372.

An husband and wife were ſued, and afterwards in the pleadings it was ſaid, the parties aforeſaid came by their attornies aforeſaid, this was held bad on a writ of error, becauſe they are only one perſon in law. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 63.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Reignolds v. Davis.

A warrant of attorney was given to confeſs a judgment to a feme ſole, who married before judgment was entered; whether it could now be entered, and how, was the queſtion. It was agreed it could not be entered for the husband, for that was beyond the authority given. The courſe is, to make affidavit of the debt's not being ſatisfied; and now the wife could not make ſuch an affidavit; for the money might have been paid to the husband; nor could the husband's affidavit ſerve, becauſe the money might have been paid to the wife before marriage; but it ſeems that point may be cleared by a ſeveral affidavit of each in his time.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, they had better enter it in the wife's name as a feme ſole; but nothing was done. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 383.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Ballard v. Gerard.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though a feme covert ſeal and deliver a deed, yet ſhe may plead non eſt factum, i. e. it is not her act, and give coverture in evidence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 608.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Vezey v. Smith.

In debt for goods ſold and delivered, againſt a woman who pleaded in abatement coverture at that time; the plaintiff replied, that ſhe was ſole, no feme covert, and concludes to the country; and it was objected, that the replication was ill; for that it ſhould have been taken with an abſque hoc that ſhe was covert, and not as here, and not covert. And the caſe 1 Saund. 21. was quoted, and 6 W. 3. Nicholas v. Baw; in debt on a bond, the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy; replication, that he was born in England, and not an alien, without laying any place for venue, but as here; but they could not tell the judgment of that caſe.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If ſuch plea be to a writ, it needs no venue, but may be tried where the writ is brought; but if it is pleaded in bar, there muſt be a replication, and that muſt ſet forth the place of the party's birth in England, from whence a venue may ariſe; and though precedents be both ways, yet this is a true difference, and according to Co.; and he ſaid the defendant muſt ſhew and prove the coverture; and ſaying in the replication, that ſhe was ſole, implies the negative of a marriage as much as that ſhe was not covert; and it is the ſame as pleading of infancy. If this had been a bar, the marriage muſt have been laid at a certain time and place, but being in abatement, it is well generally; but even there the husband's name ought to be ſhewed, that the plaintiff may know whom to have his writ againſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 503.

In debt brought by the husband; it appearing to have become due to his wife as a ſeparate dealer, a diſcourſe of the wife's concerning it was given in evidence for the defendant, with the conſent of Holt, Chief Juſtice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 566.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. At niſi prius, before Holt, Chief Juſtice.

A woman whoſe husband had left her about twelve years before, had carried on a trade in her own name as a widow, and gave receipts in her own name; being ſued for a debt contracted in the courſe of her trade, ſhe gave coverture in evidence, and alſo of her husband's being alive in Ireland; and the Chief Juſtice directed the jury to find for the defendant, and ſo they did. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 603.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Taylor v. Rains.

A woman before marriage had articles of ſettlement made with her intended husband to this purpoſe: ſhe being poſſeſſed of a leaſe for years, the articles were, that ſuch perſon ſhould have the profits of the ſaid term, as the wife ſhould by writing under her hand, or laſt will and teſtament appoint. The woman, the day before her marriage, makes a will, deviſing the truſt of the term to B. and then marries, and after her death the executor appointed in that will, would have proved it in the Spiritual Court, and the husband moved for a prohibition, on ſuggeſtion that ſhe was a feme covert at the time of her death, and therefore could not make a will, or appoint an executor. 4 Co. Forſe v. Hemblinge.

Per curiam. A feme covert could make no will, but either as executrix, or by the conſent of her husband, or of ſuch goods and chattels as by the marriage are not given to the husband, and that likewiſe by conſent of the husband: this will, though in purſuance of a ſettlement, or articles before marriage, was not ſuch a will of which they had juriſdiction below, but it amounted to an appointment in equity, who ſhould have the truſt according to the ſaid articles. And it was farther adjudged, that if a perſon has a truſt for a term of years, and dies inteſtate, his next of kin ſhall have the adminiſtration of it, and adminiſtration may be granted as to, &c. as well as an executor may be as to, &c. and that the way here had been, to grant adminiſtration to them to whom ſhe had appointed the truſt, and not to proceed by way of probate of the will; and a prohibition may go after ſentence in this caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 147.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

A warrant of attorney was given to confeſs a judgment to a feme ſole, who afterwards married. In this caſe the court gave leave, notwithſtanding the marriage, to enter judgment, for that the authority ſhall not be deemed to be revoked or countermanded, becauſe it is for the husband's advantage; like a grant of a reverſion to a feme ſole who marries before attornment: yet the tenant may attorn afterwards: it is otherwiſe, if a feme ſole gives a warrant of attorney, and marries; for in that caſe it charges the husband. Contra Show. 91. and it ſeems as reaſonable he ſhould be charged in this caſe, as for a bond or other debt, which he is liable for during the coverture, though not after. 1 *Rol. Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A married woman is to be diſcharged on common bail of courſe; but if it is doubtful whether ſhe is married or not, ſhe ſhall be held to ſpecial bail, if the cauſe requires it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 10.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Harwood v. Parrot.

In an action on the caſe brought by husband and wife, for maliciouſly indicting the wife for a riot: the firſt count ſhewed the plaintiff's wife was of good reputation, and that the defendant to leſſen it, indicted her for a riot, of which ſhe was acquitted. The ſecond count was the ſame, and that the husband was put to great charge: as to the firſt, it was held to be no ſcandal to be guilty of a treſpaſs; and as to the other, the court inclined, that the husband alone ought to have brought the action; for he alone could be put to the charges; but they delivered no poſitive opinion. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Bradford.

The defendant who was a quaker woman, being charged on oath with having publiſhed a book, called the Dutch Catechiſm, was bound to appear at the Old Bailey, and obliged to give bail, four ſecurities in 200 l. each; but being a feme covert, ſhe was not bound herſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 63.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Wittingham v. Broderick. Error.

A judgment in C. B. in treſpaſs by the husband and wife, for taking away their goods, on a writ of error brought, was reverſed, becauſe the wife ought not to join. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 105.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Buckbridge.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A feme ſole having a warrant of attorney given her to enter a judgment, married before it was entered; a motion was made that the judgment ſhould be entered in the name of the husband and wife; and a diſtinction was made between ſuch a warrant made by a feme ſole, and one made to her; for a marriage in the firſt place would be a countermand of the warrant, as being to the diſadvantage of the husband. And for this a caſe in point was quoted, Eaſter, 9 W. 3. where leave was denied to enter judgment againſt husband and wife, on a warrant of attorney before marriage; and it was compared to the caſe of a grant of a reverſion by a feme ſole, who marries before attornment, whereby the grant is countermanded; but if ſhe had granted it to A. and before attornment had married him, an attornment after would be good. 1 Inſt. 310. 4 Co. 61. a. and to this the court inclined. But on reading of the warrant, it appeared to be to enter judgment as of ſuch a term, which was now paſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 52.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Fenwick v. Gravenor.

The plaintiff pretending the defendant was his wife, delivered ejectments to the tenants, and ſhe denying the marriage, prayed to be made defendant, which was oppoſed by the plaintiff's council; becauſe if ſhe ſhould have a judgment, he would loſe his coſts, ſince he could have none againſt his wife.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is due of right to the tenant in poſſeſſion, and to the landlord to be made defendants, for otherwiſe the tenants in poſſeſſion might combine with the leſſor of the plaintiff, and ouſt the landlord of his rent; and to deny the lady that right, would be on the preſumption of her marriage, which would be directly to determine the point in queſtion; and there is no inconvenience on the other ſide; for if the plaintiff has judgment, he may have coſts againſt the tenants in poſſeſſion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 70.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Etherington v. Parrot.

On a trial before Holt, C. J. at Guildhall, in an action on the caſe for goods, ſold and delivered, the evidence to charge the defendant was, that the goods were taken up by the defendant's wife to make her cloaths, and that they cohabited together: but on the defendant's ſide it was given in evidence, that his wife was an extravagant woman, and uſed to pawn her cloaths for money to buy drink, and be drunk; that ſhe pawned a ſuit of cloaths, which coſt 7 l. for 1 l. 8 s. and when her huſband redeemed them, pawned them again; that at the time of buying theſe, ſhe had very good cloaths; that ſhe had bought cloaths here before, and her huſband had paid for them; but when he paid for them, he gave notice to the plaintiff's ſervant, who received the money, that his maſter ſhould truſt her no more; which he promiſed not to do.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a husband turns away his wife, he gives her credit wherever ſhe goes, and muſt pay for neceſſaries for her; but if ſhe runs away from him, he ſhall not be liable to any of her contracts, for it is the cohabitation that is an evidence of the husband's aſſent to contracts made by his wife for neceſſaries: but if the husband has ſolemnly declared his diſſent that ſhe ſhall not be truſted, any perſon that has notice of this diſſent, truſts her at his peril after; for the husband is only liable on account of his own aſſent to the contracts of his wife; of which aſſent cohabitation cauſes a preſumption; for the wife has no power originally to charge her husband, but is abſolutely under his power and government, and muſt be content with what he provides; and if he does not provide neceſſaries, her remedy is in the Spiritual Court. But here were ſufficient neceſſaries provided, and alſo the husband had forbid the plaintiff to truſt her; and notice to the plaintiff's ſervant uſually employed by him in his trade, was a good notice to his maſter, and therefore he cannot charge the defendant. On which the plaintiff was nonſuited.

It was alſo obſerved by the C. J. that if a wife takes up ſilks, and pawns them before they are made into cloaths, the husband ſhall not be liable for the ſilks, becauſe they never came to his uſe: but otherwiſe, if they were made into cloaths, and then pawned by her. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1006.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought by husband and wife, who was executrix, declaring, for that whereas, the defendant was indebted to them as executor of J. S. for ſo much money received by him to their uſe, as executor, he promiſed to pay it, &c. The defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit; and on the trial the plaintiffs were nonſuited, and the queſtion was, whether they ſhould pay coſts on ſtat. 23 H. 8.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the receipt was ſince the teſtator's death, and by appointment or conſent of the executor, there the action muſt have been brought by him, not as an executor; for the receipt by his appointment, is a receipt by himſelf. Then if the receipt was without the executor's previous appointment, yet the bringing this action is an aſſent to the receipt, and makes it a receipt in his own right; ſo that in either caſe, the debt ought to be looked on as a new debt, contracted ſince the death of the teſtator. And this receipt muſt be intended to have been in the executor's own time; becauſe the receipt is ſaid to be to the executor's uſe; and he concluded, that there was no room for the executor here to declare as executor: if there is a receipt by appointment of the executor, it is immediate aſſets in the executor's hands, and by bringing this action, it is in the ſame manner. And if the executor or adminiſtrator bring an action of trover on their own poſſeſſion, they ſhall pay coſts. Yet there, if the adminiſtrator had called himſelf adminiſtrator, and it is ſo entred on record, and has judgment, and after adminiſtration is revoked, the defendant would be relieved by an audita querela, becauſe it would appear on the face of the declaration, that he had been ſued under that now repealed adminiſtration; and the naming himſelf executor here is not neceſſary, any further than to ſhew how the original right came. If the executor accounts with the teſtator's debtor, indeed thereby a new action accrues, but ſtill it is in the right of the teſtator; and no new contract is made, but only an aſcertaining of what was due before. If judgment and execution are in the teſtator's life, and an action of eſcape brought in the executor's time, on a nonſuit in this action the executor ſhall not pay coſts; but if he had judgment and execution in his own time, and an eſcape had happened, for which he brings an action, and is nonſuited, he ſhall pay coſts.

Powell, Juſtice. Where the thing ſued for is aſſets in the executors or adminiſtrators before recovery, there they ſhall pay coſts on the nonſuit: or where the entire cauſe of action ariſes in their own time. And it was agreed to have been adjudged, that for the rent accruing in the executors own time, the executors if nonſuited ſhould pay coſts; as alſo, that in covenant with the teſtator, and breach in the time of the executor he ſhould pay coſts. But it is a quere with me, if there be any difference on this account, between covenant for rent on a covenant made with the teſtator, and debt for rent on a leaſe with him?

And it was agreed by the whole court, that the ſtatute, by the words thereof, does not diſtinguiſh the caſe of an executor from any other caſe; but it was, by an equitable conſtruction, reſolved ſo by the judges, for this reaſon, becauſe the nature or cauſe of action does not lie in their privity or knowledge.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that it has been held, that if the plaintiff's declaration was ſo bad, that the plaintiff in caſe he obtained a verdict, could not have judgment there; if he was nonſuited, he ſhould pay no coſts; and therefore this action being by husband and wife, on the poſſeſſion of the husband only, ſo that if there had been a verdict, he could not have had judgment, therefore he could have no coſts; but he ſaid the contrary had been reſolved 1 Cro. 175. Hob. 219. 284.

And the matter being again moved, the caſe of Elwis v. Mocato in this court, Eaſter, 2 Ann. was cited for the plaintiff, which was ſeveral counts by a plaintiff executor, one whereof was an inſimul computaſſet who being nonſuited, paid no coſts; which determination was now again agreed to, becauſe there was no new cauſe of action, but a new action on aſcertaining of an ancient cauſe, which aſcertaining leaves it ſtill a debt of the teſtator's.

And it was agreed now by the court, that the caſe of 2 H. 7. 15. was a good foundation for this caſe; for there it was agreed, that a feme executrix cannot give away the goods of her teſtator, without the conſent of her husband, and if he conſents to it, then it is he that gives it, ſo the wife here cannot appoint a perſon to receive this money, but if he conſents then it is his appointment.

And if an executor appoints another to receive a debt of his teſtator, and he receives it, it is now the ſame thing as if he had actually received it himſelf, and then it would be aſſets in his hands, and by conſequence appointing another to receive, who will not repay, is a devaſtavit.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſtrongly inclined, that the bringing of this action was ſuch a ſubſequent agreement, as would make it aſſets in his hands from that time.

But he agreed no more would be aſſets in his hands than he recovered, and not as much as was received or declared for, and even for that he would not be liable till after judgment; but immediately after judgment, and before execution, he is liable; whereas a perſon who ſues as executor, though he has judgment, yet till execution, the thing recovered is not aſſets in his hands; and as if the husband had actually appointed the defendant to receive, he alone ought to bring the action in his own name; ſo here the ratihabition amounting to an appointment, he ought to bring it alone: as if a man enter into my land and take the profits thereof, I may, if I pleaſe, charge him in account as my bailiff, though there was never any privity between us till the action brought.

And whereas it was objected, that if the bringing the action would amount to an appointment, then by bringing the action, the whole would be aſſets in his hands before any recovery.

He anſwered, that would not follow; for they being nonſuited, the matter is ſet at large again, and he has liberty to ſue the original debtor; but if he had judgment, and no execution, or ever like to have any, yet his bringing the action and having judgment, would diſcharge the firſt debtor, and by conſequence be a devaſtavit in him; for by the judgment he makes the defendant his debtor, who never owed any thing to the teſtator.

And he quoted the caſe of Norden v. Levit, Anno 77, which was this: the executor brings an action of trover for a converſion in the life of his teſtator, and the party being arreſted, and inſolvent, takes a covenant from him for the payment of ſo much money in ſatisfaction; and it was held, that foraſmuch as this did extinguiſh the original cauſe of action, it was an immediate devaſtavit, which judgment was affirmed by the Houſe of Lords: a fortiori, in our caſe, the extinguiſhment of the original debt by judgment againſt the preſent defendant, would be a devaſtavit, and on judgment, not the adminiſtrator, de bonis non, but the adminiſtrator of the executor ſhould ſue execution.

If the executor loſes the teſtator's goods out of his poſſeſſion, and declares that he was poſſeſſed of ſo much goods as executor to J. S. and on the evidence, it appears that they were his own proper goods; he ſhall be nonſuited, and pay coſts. Hut. 214. 220.

If a perſon as adminiſtrator, brings an action of trover on his own poſſeſſion, and is nonſuited, he is condemned in coſts: after the adminiſtration is revoked, he ſhall by an audita querela, be relieved againſt the coſts; and this was the caſe of Turner v. Davis. 16 Car. 2.

And it was laid down for a rule, that where an executor brings an action, in which he need not name himſelf executor, there if he is nonſuited, he ſhall pay the coſts. 2 Cro. 361. 229.

But Powell and Gould, Juſtices, were of a different opinion, for this was an action to create aſſets, and not for the recovery of what is ſo already; and immediately after the receipt, were no aſſets accrued to the executor.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the caſe of Cro. Car. 29. reported to be three againſt one, in Hutton is two to two, however, he was of opinion, there ought to be no coſts, for the ward never came to the actual poſſeſſion of the executor, and could not therefore be aſſets in him; as if the teſtator's goods is taken and converted after the death of the teſtator, before they come to the actual poſſeſſion of the executor, they are not aſſets; and therefore if it is nonſuited in trover for them, it would be hard to make him pay coſts. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 91.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Ogden v. Turner.

Per curiam. If a feme covert is arreſted, and it is clear and notorious that ſhe is covert, common bail ought to be received; but if it is doubtful, ſhe ought to find ſpecial bail. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 105.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Ruſſell v. Come.

In treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, brought by baron and feme for the battery of the wife; there were ſeveral counts laid in the declaration, which were ſingly for the battery of the wife. But there was one count for beating her whereby the buſineſs of the husband had remained undone, and concludes to the damage of them both: on not guilty pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and intire damages. The defendant's council took an exception on an arreſt of judgment, that the husband and wife cannot join as this count is laid; for the wife cannot join for the damage accruing to the husband by the loſs and delay of his buſineſs, in which ſhe has no intereſt.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If it had been, whereby he had loſt the benefit of her ſociety, the wife could not have been joined.

Powell, Juſtice. There the whereby, &c. is the giſt of the action, to entitle the husband to maintain an action without his wife. But now, in this caſe, I will not intend, that the judge allowed any evidence to be given as to the ſpecial damage to the husband, but only admitted proof as to the battery.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I remember a caſe where an action of ſlander was brought by baron and feme, for words ſpoken of the wife, by which the husband loſt his trade; and it was held, that if the words could maintain an action without the ſpecial damage, then they ſhould have judgment; but if the words were not actionable without the ſpecial damage, then it was ill; for the wife ought not to be joined. See Lev. 140. Suppoſe the husband was at charge on this occaſion, he may give it in evidence. Gould, Juſtice, remembered the ſame caſe.

Another day, Powell, ſaid, I do not know what they mean by ſaying, whereby his buſineſs remained undone, &c. a woman is to comfort her husband. In this caſe, the giſt of the action is not the whereby, but if the husband had brought the action, then it would have been the giſt.

Gould, Juſtice. There was a caſe, Eaſter, 7 W. 3. treſpaſs brought by the baron alone, for breaking his houſe, and beating and wounding his wife, and impriſoning her for three hours, and alſo for detaining the poſſeſſion of the houſe, and for menacing his wife and ſervants, whereby his buſineſs remained undone.

I moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe that for ſome of theſe wrongs, as the beating and impriſoning his wife, the wife ought to be joined; but judgment was given for the plaintiff by Eyre and Rokeby. Holt, doubting, for they held, that the whereby went through the whole count.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Let the plaintiff take his judgment niſi, &c. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1031.

A working man married a woman of the like condition, and after cohabitation for ſome time, left her; and during his abſence the wife worked; and this action being brought for her diet, it was held, that the money which ſhe earned ſhould go towards her maintenance. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 118.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Anonymous.

Adjudged, that where baron and feme mortgage the lands of the wife, and ſhe dies, the equity of redemption ſhall ſurvive to the husband, and not to the adminiſtrator of the wife; and if he dies, the wife ſhall have the benefit of redemption, and not the executor of the husband. Salk. vol. 3. p. 64.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Hutton v. Manſell.

In an action on the caſe brought by a feme ſole, in which ſhe declared, for that whereas ſhe agreed and promiſed to marry the defendant, he, in conſideration thereof, promiſed to marry her; and at the trial ſuch promiſe was proved.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There is no neceſſity of proving an actual promiſe on the woman's part; for it is ſufficient evidence to ſhew, that ſhe countenanced the promiſe, and behaved herſelf as one who approved and conſented to it. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 64.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Powell v. Maine.

One J. M. entered into a bond to a feme ſole, conditioned for payment of ſo much money at a certain day; ſhe afterwards married the plaintiff, who brought an action of debt on this bond. On this action being brought, the defendant craved oyer of the bond and condition, which was to pay ſo much to the plaintiff's wife. On which the defendant demurred to the plaintiff's declaration.

Per curiam. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 64.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Robinſon v. Goſnold.

A husband diſcovering his wife to be a very lewd woman, goes away from her, and ſhe, after having lived ſeveral years with an adulterer, was received into the plaintiff's houſe, who entertained her as the husband's wife. And this action being on an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the husband for lodging and dieting the wife:

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that let the woman be ever ſo vicious, yet, while ſhe cohabits with the husband, he is bound to provide neceſſaries for her, and is liable to an action from ſuch as furniſh her with them; for his bargain was, to take her for better for worſe. In like manner it is, if the husband turns his wife away for her wickedneſs, he remains ſtill chargeable for her neceſſaries; but if the wife leaves her husband, they that truſt her after it is notorious that ſhe has left him, do it at their peril, and ſhall not therefore charge the husband.

And he ſeemed to be of opinion, that if a wife had run away from her husband, and contracted debts, and afterwards the husband received her, or came after her, or laid with her for a night, that would make him liable for the debts. Like the caſe where a wife elopes with an adulterer, though ſhe thereby forfeits her dower, yet, if the husband will of his own accord receive her again, ſhe ſhall have her dower again. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 171.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Langford v. The Adminiſtratrix of Tyler.

The defendant was adminiſtratrix of Tyler, her late husband; who in his life-time uſed to deal in tea, and ſold four tubs of tea to the plaintiff at ſo much per pound, who took one away, paying for it, and 50 s. over towards the payment of the reſt. When ſhe came for the reſt, the vendor would not ſtand to her agreement. on an action brought, and two counts, one on the agreement, and the other on the indebit. for 50 s. received to the plaintiff's uſe,

It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice; 1ſt. If the husband and wife cohabit, and the wife deals ſeparately, her contracts ſhall charge her husband, for cohabitation is ſufficient evidence of notice.

2dly. If a bargain be made, and earneſt given, without an expreſs agreement, that payment is to be made at a certain time, the money muſt be paid before the goods are removed.

3dly. A demand of the goods without a tender of the money, is void, becauſe it is not purſuant to the intent of the bargain, and the earneſt is only to bind the bargain.

4thly. After earneſt given, the vendor cannot ſell to another; but if the vendee does not come to pay, and take the goods, the vendor ought to come and requeſt him to come and pay; and if he does not come in convenient time, the agreement is diſſolved, and then he may ſell. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 162.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Withers v. Kelſey.

A woman had a portion deviſed to her, and the payment thereof was charged on certain lands; afterwards, on her marriage with T. S. he ſettled a jointure on her, and died before he received the portion, having made a will, and appointed an executor.

Adjudged, that the executor ſhall have this money, becauſe it is not in the nature of a choſe in action, but in the nature of a rent, for it is charged on lands, and it is given the huſband by the intermarriage, and for that reaſon it ſhall go to his executor, and not to his wife on ſurviving him. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 65.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Thompſon v. Woods.

On an action of debt brought on a bond, conditioned to leave his wife 80 l. at his death, in caſe he ſhould ſurvive, ſo that ſhe might receive and take it to her own uſe; the huſband died, and in an action of debt brought againſt his adminiſtrator, he pleaded, that the huſband made a will, and his wife executrix, and left goods to the value of 100 l. and upwards, and directed, that ſhe pay herſelf the ſaid 80 l. and on a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe the huſband at his death might owe money on judgment and ſtatutes, and ſo ſhe might not be able to pay herſelf, and his eſtate might be ſo incumbered, that it would be better for her to renounce her executorſhip. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 65.

Trinity, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Foxby. Error.

She brought a writ of error on a judgment againſt her, on an indictment for being a common ſcold; and on affidavits that ſhe was ſo ill, that without danger of her life, ſhe could not come up out of Kent, where ſhe lived, to aſſign error in perſon, according to the courſe of the court, it was prayed by her council, that ſhe might have leave to aſſign error by her clerk in court.

Per curiam. Scolding is not the offence, but the frequent repetition of it, to the diſturbance of the neighbourhood, makes it a nuiſance, and as ſuch it has always been puniſhable by the leet, therefore indictable; and we have of late indulged people on writs of error, on judgments on indictments, to appear by attorney; and here the court enlarged the time till the next term, to ſee how ſhe would behave in the mean time: and in Michaelmas term ſhe and her huſband came into court, and aſſigned errors. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 213.

Per curiam. A feme covert may plead non aſſumpſit, and give coverture in evidence, becauſe coverture makes it no promiſe; ſo ſhe may plead non eſt factum to a bond, and give coverture in evidence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 230.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Linch v. Hooke.

She was arreſted by the name of Minors, and gave a bail-bond in that name, and now pleaded a miſnomer.

Per curiam. If a perſon is arreſted by a wrong name, and brought into court, he may plead a miſnomer: and if a feme covert is arreſted by a wrong name, and gives a bail-bond, yet ſhe may plead a miſnomer, for her bond being that of a feme covert, ſhe may plead non eſt factum to it; therefore it will not eſtop her. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 311.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Newton & Wife v. Hatter.

The plaintiffs brought an action of aſſault and battery, for a battery committed on them both. Judgment was obtained by default, and a writ of enquiry was executed the 17th of May 1705, and intire damages, viz. 17 l. 10 s. were given. And on the return of the writ of enquiry, judgment was arreſted, becauſe the wife cannot be joined in an action with the huſband for a battery on the huſband. After which they brought a new action only for the battery committed on the wife, and laid it to the damage of the ſaid John, the huſband, on not guilty being pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff: and the defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe it ought to have been to the damage of them both; the damages in ſuch caſe ſurviving to the wife, if the huſband dies before they are received; and cited 1 Sid. 387. Hoffin v. Byles; and of that opinion was the court. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1208.

Hilary, 6 Ann. Aſher v. Wallis.

A man having a wife in England, went to Jamaica, and there married a rich woman, and let her lands, reſerving rent to himſelf, and received the ſame divers years. But after ſome time, they both coming into England, ſhe perceived he had another wife living; and thereon brings an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him for the ſaid rents, as ſo much money received by him to her uſe. And at the trial this point was ſaved to be argued by council, whether an indebitatus aſſumpſit would lie in this caſe, which was argued this term.

Per curiam. An indebitatus aſſumpſit will well lie. But Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that trover would not lie in this caſe, becauſe ſhe was never poſſeſſed of the money; and when ſhe married the defendant, ſhe conſented that he ſhould manage her eſtate: and accordingly, the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 146.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. Billingſworth v. Spearman, &c.

An action of debt was brought againſt the defendants, whoſe wives were aſſignees of the term; it was brought only againſt the huſbands, to which declaration there was a demurrer.

The defendants council ſaid, the wives ſhould have been joined in this action.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the huſband is ſeized of land in right of his wife, which is charged with a rent-charge, the action for the rent in arrear ſhall be brought againſt the huſband only; but that differs from this caſe, for that is by reaſon of taking the profits, for the rent is the profits of the land. Then he found a fatal fault, viz. that the aſſignee of the term had made an executor, who deviſed the tenements to the wives of the defendants, which could not be.

Powell, Juſtice. This action is brought againſt them as aſſignees, in reſpect of their intereſt in the term, and differs widely from the caſe of a rent-charge, for that is only in reſpect of taking the profits.

Judgment was given on the laſt fault of the deviſe by the executor; on the opening of which point, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he thought an executor could not waive a term; for if he accepted part of the executorſhip, he muſt accept the whole, as he ſtands impowered by the will.

Powell, Juſtice. If the rent be more than the term, he may ſhew it ſpecially, and pray that he may be charged no otherwiſe than in the detinet.

Trinity, 7 Ann. Thomſon v. Pinchell.

An action was brought by baron and feme againſt the defendant, for goods taken out of their poſſeſſion; the wife was adminiſtratrix.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the goods having been in their poſſeſſion, the wife ſhould not be joined; and naming her executrix might have been left out of the caſe; and cited a caſe, 10 W. 3. where the wife was executrix, and the defendant promiſed the huſband, that if he would forbear, he would pay; and the wife was not joined in that caſe.

Powell, Juſtice. In the caſe of baron and feme, it is certain the law does give the goods of the wife to the husband; but not when ſhe is adminiſtratrix, becauſe ſhe has them in auter droit; and the husband here cannot bring an action on the judgment; wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 177.

Hilary, 8 Ann. Tod and Wife v. Redford.

An action of aſſault and battery is brought by the husband and wife; the declaration ſets forth, that the defendant on ſuch a day, &c. aſſaulted the wife, and driving a coach over her, bruiſed her, &c. by reaſon whereof the husband laid out divers ſums of money for the cure, &c. and other injuries did, to the great damage of them both; the defendant pleaded in abatement that his name was Redborn, and not Redford; and on iſſue, and a verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment; and objected, that in this caſe the husband and wife ſhould not have joined, becauſe the damage is laid to be for the money laid out in the cure of the wife as well as the battery, and intire damages being given, it is bad for the whole; and cited 1 Sid. 328. Yelv. 106. 2 Vent. 29. 2 Cro. 625. 1 Lev. 3. But the husband ſhould have ſued alone for the money laid out in the cure.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, that where the husband and wife join in an action of aſſault and battery for beating both, it is wrong; but may be helped by a verdict, ſeparating the damages; and here the giſt of the action is only beating of the wife, and the by reaſon whereof, &c. is only in aggravation of damages. As to the other injuries, it is too general to ſuppoſe damages given for it. He ſaid alſo, that husband and wife cannot join in aſſault, and battery, whereby he loſt the benefit of her company, for the whereby in ſuch a caſe is the giſt of the action; and in the caſe at the bar, if the by reaſon whereof had been left out, the ſurgeon's bill might have been given in evidence, in aggravation of damages. Judgment for the plaintiff. Holt abſent. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 264.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. Anonymous. At Guildhall, before Holt, Chief Juſtice.

In an action of aſſault and battery, brought by the husband againſt the defendant, for an intent to raviſh his wife, ſhe was admitted an evidence (which Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, was becauſe the wife cannot give any conſent, though it is not felony).

Holt, alſo held, that A. having laid 5 l. of the event of the cauſe, was no objection to the wife of A. being admitted an evidence; becauſe it ſhall not be in the power of a third perſon to diſqualify one, who otherwiſe would be a good evidence; and thereon ſhe was admitted to give evidence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 224.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Hall v. The Wiſe of William Yates, Executrix to her Husband. At Guildhall.

In this caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that if a perſon receives a woman who runs away from her huſband, and lays out money for her, the husband ſhall not be charged; becauſe the wife was eloped. But if the wife continues to live with her husband, if ſhe takes up neceſſary goods, though without the huſband's conſent, the husband is obliged to pay for them, unleſs ſhe forbids people to truſt her. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 241.

By a return to an habeas corpus it appeared, that in the city of London, there was a cuſtom, that if a feme covert exerciſes any trade in which her huſband does not at all concern himſelf, ſhe may be ſued as a feme ſole, for debts contracted in the carrying on that trade; and if ſhe has not goods that are not her husband's, ſhe muſt be impriſoned till ſhe pay them; and as ſhe may be ſued, ſo ſhe may ſue as a feme ſole, for debts owing to her, in her way of trade within the city. She has a ſpecial and ſeparate intereſt in the profit of her trade, or elſe it were an unreaſonable cuſtom. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 6.

Trinity, 10 Ann, Thomlinſon v. Dighton. Error.

On a writ of error on a judgment in the court of Common Pleas, in an ejectment, the caſe was:

A tenant in fee of the lands in queſtion, deviſed the lands to his wife for life, then to diſpoſe of them according to her pleaſure, provided it was to ſome of the teſtator's children. The husband, the deviſor, dies, and leaves behind him a ſon and daughter, the wife marries again, and then by leaſe, and releaſe, and a fine levied, covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of herſelf for life, without impeachment of waſte, remainder to her daughter by her firſt husband in tail.

The queſtion was, whether this conveyance of the lands was a good execution of the power, ſo that they ſhould go to the daughter, or elſe being bad, to the heir at law, viz. the ſon.

Powell, Juſtice. The main queſtion of the caſe is, whether the power is well executed? A feoffment to a man's own ſon ſhall ſtand as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, rather than the intention of the parties ſhould be fruſtrated. Sir Edward Cleer's caſe is expreſs, that where it can paſs no other way than by virtue of the power, it ſhall paſs that way, tho' the intention of the parties were, that it ſhould paſs another. And as for her own eſtate being limited without impeachment of waſte, as to the impeachment of waſte it ſhall be void, becauſe it exceeds the power; the intention of the parties is plain. He therefore gave his opinion for the defendant.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. In Sir Edward Cleer's caſe, it was reſolved, that where, according to the way the parties intended, the conveyance would have no effect at all, there it ſhould paſs another way: but where, ſhould the eſtate paſs the way the parties intended, the conſequence would have ſome effect, though not all that was intended by the parties, there it ſhould paſs no other way than the parties deſigned. But this point ſince has been carried much farther, as that, where it would have ſome effect, but not all intended by the parties; that there, to the end the main deſign of the parties may be obſerved, the eſtate ſhall paſs in another way than the parties intended. For example, ſuppoſe a woman ſeiſed of an eſtate for life, with a power to make a leaſe for three lives, or twenty-one years, marries, and ſhe and her huſband join in making the leaſe, and husband and wife both die before the leaſe is expired; here though the husband in right of his wife, and ſhe in her own right are poſſeſſed of an eſtate for life, and therefore can as owners make a leaſe, and there appears no intention of the parties, (imagining perhaps they ſhould outlive the leaſe) that this leaſe ſhould be made by virtue of the power; yet becauſe the leaſe, ſuppoſing it to be made by them as owners, cannot have all the effect the parties intended, for ſome it would have, (as it would be a good leaſe during the lives of the huſband and wife) yet becauſe it cannot have all, it ſhall be eſteemed made by virtue of the power. But in the preſent caſe the conveyance, as intended by the parties, would be wholly void.

So he concurred in opinion with Powell, Juſtice, and the judgment in C. B. was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 31.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. D'aeth v. Baux.

The court was moved for a prohibition to the ſpiritual court, for ſuffering a feme covert to ſue ſingly on the ſtatute of diſtributions, becauſe it was for a property ſo veſted in the husband, that it might be releaſed by him.

The court ſaid, no prohibition lay; for this was a choſe in action, and ſo much the wife's, that ſhe ſhall have it by ſurvivorſhip; and if the husband had been joined in the ſuit, it would have been only for conformity. This caſe differs not from the caſe of a legacy, for which it is the courſe of the ſpiritual court to admit feme coverts to ſue alone; but, ſuppoſing it was not the practice of the ſpiritual court to ſuffer a feme covert to ſue without her husband; the party's remedy is by appeal, not by prohibition. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 64.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. The Queen v. Morgan.

Per curiam. A wife living with her husband ſeven years, may after his death, continue the trade, for the act does not require a man or woman to be actually an apprentice; but the words are as an apprentice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 70.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. The Queen v. Williams.

A husband and wife were indicted for keeping a bawdy houſe.

It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the husband and wife could not be jointly indicted for keeping a bawdy-houſe. 2 Roll. 8 Brook's caſe.

But it was anſwered, the indictment was not for keeping a bawdy-houſe only, but for procuring lewdneſs, &c. That theſe crimes are in their nature ſeveral: that husband and wife may be found guilty of a nuiſance, battery, or the like: that the reaſon why in burglary, larceny, &c. the wife is excuſed, is, becauſe ſhe could not tell what property the husband might claim in the goods, &c.

In Hilary term, 2 Ann. James Cook and his wife were jointly indicted for keeping a bawdy-houſe; the husband was fined, and the wife ſet in the pillory.

Per curiam. The indictment is good; keeping the houſe does neceſſarily import property, but may ſignify that ſhare of government which the wife has in a family, as well as the husband. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 63.

Trinity, 1 Geo. Dix v. Brookes.

In this action the plaintiff declared that the defendant broke and entered his houſe, and aſſaulted his wife. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that the wife ſhould have joined in this action, becauſe here it was not laid whereby he loſt the benefit of her ſociety, to intitle the husband only to ſue, and exclude the wife. Yelv. 89. Godb. 369.

Per curiam. The plaintiff may aver this matter in his declaration to aggravate the damages, for which he ſingly could not recover, and the party injured have his ſeparate action. As in the common caſe of treſpaſs for beating a ſervant, whereby he loſt the benefit of his ſervice, both maſter and ſervant may recover. And in the caſe of Newman v. Smith, it was held, that the plaintiff might alledge the beating his daughter in aggravation of damages. Salk. 642. The plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 61.

Hilary, 4 Geo. Strutville v. ———

Where a woman marries a ſecond husband while the firſt is living, and the ſecond is not privy thereto; as to what ſhe acquired during the cohabition,

Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he would eſteem her as the ſervant of the ſecond husband, who is entitled to the benefit of her labour. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 80.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Ramſden v. Ambroſe. At Guildhall, before Pratt, Chief Juſtice.

The husband and wife lived ſeparate, ſhe boarded in the plaintiff's houſe, who declares againſt the husband for meat and drink for him found and provided. On the evidence it appeared to be for the wife. And the Chief Juſtice held, it did not ſupport the declaration; for tho' the husband is chargeable on his implied contract for what neceſſaries are adminiſtered to the wife; and therefore if the goods are delivered to her, the vendor may declare generally for goods ſold and delivered: yet in this caſe the plaintiff fails in his deſcription of the ſubject matter of the contract. So that as he now declares generally, a recovery in this action could not be pleaded to a ſpecial action for meat and drink found and provided for the wife. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 127.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Aleberry v. Walby. Error.

In error on a judgment in C. B. in an action of covenant brought on a leaſe for years, where the breach aſſigned was non-payment of rent; judgment was aſſigned by default, and a writ of enquiry executed, general errors, and want of an original aſſigned, and returned accordingly: another original alledged by the defendant of another term, and a certiorari prayed, and one returned and ſet forth, and ſome little variances; and no error pleaded,

The council for the defendant in error urged, that this was an action by a man and his wife, and a third perſon, who is tenant in common with the wife, on a leaſe at will, made during the coverture, of lands which are the inheritance of the wife, and that third perſon, for arrears of rent incurred during coverture, and therefore the wife cannot join in ſuch an action. 1 Sid. 224.

Per curiam. The husband and wife may or may not join in this action at their election, as where a bond is to both of them. 4 H. 5, 6. Cro. Jac. 77. Cro. Eliz. 61.

Second exception. To the manner wherein the plaintiffs have deduced their title. In covenant the plaintiffs need not ſet out a title, for that whereas he had demiſed is enough, and if he does it wrong it is ſurpluſage.

Per curiam. The introduction, by ſetting out the deſcent, is nothing to the purpoſe here, where they declare on their own demiſe, and therefore there can be nothing in that exception.

Third exception. The breach is not well aſſigned: the covenant is in the disjunctive, to pay, or cauſe to be paid, to them, or any of them; but as to part of the time, the breach is only that he did not pay; and as to the other part, that he did not pay to them, whereas he may have cauſed the rent to be paid to one of them, which is a performance. And there being two ways, the breach ought to have been ſo large as to exclude both ways, by either of which the act might be done. 25 Ed. 3. 29. b.

Per curiam. He that cauſes to pay, pays; and if you have paid the money to one of them, you may plead it in your diſcharge.

Then it was moved to quaſh the writ of error, which deſcribes the ſuit to be between the plaintiff and one 'John Aleberry, alias dict' John Aleberry of Waltham Abey, and the alias dict' is abby in the record; one is b, e, y, and the other b, y. This variance is in the alias dict', where the court has always obliged the party to deſcribe the ſpecialty literatim. Michaelmas, 13 Ann. the writ was Crawley, and the record Crowley. 12. Aſſ. pl. Annſty and Aneſty, Eaſter, 4 Geo. Shartleſs and Sharpleſs, Bro. Variance 26. Baxſter. with an (s), and Baxter without an (s). Salk. 264. Grigger and Griggure. All theſe were held to be fatal variances in the deſcription of a record, and yet no body will ſay they might have been taken advantage of by plea of miſnomer in abatement.

Per curiam. Theſe caſes cited are of variances in the name of the party, which is more conſiderable than the place of his reſidence. Theſe words are both properly uſed; ſome ſpell it Abbey, and ſome Abby; and if there is occaſion, we may take the latter as an abbreviation of the former: therefore, the record is well removed, and the judgment muſt be affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 229.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Read v. Marſhall.

On an action of treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's houſe, beating his wife and taking his goods, judgment was obtained by default, and on a writ of enquiry, intire damages were given.

The defendant's council moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe no damages ought to have been recovered for the beating of the wife, ſince ſhe is no party to the action, nor has the plaintiff laid any ſpecial damages, as whereby he loſt her ſociety, &c. to entitle him ſolely to this action. If theſe damages ſhould be recovered, there may be two recoveries for one aſſault, for this action would be no bar to any action to be brought by the baron and feme jointly.

The plaintiff's council argued, that the aſſault on the wife is only laid as an aggravation of the damages, and not as a diſtinct treſpaſs. Salk. 119. pl. 12. 2 Salk. 640. pl. 10. 2 Lord Raym. 1031. 11 Mod. 265. 10 Rep. 131. a. Cro. Jac 664. pl. Dix. v. Brooks. Forteſcue Rep. 378. Stra. 61.

The court inclined this declaration was good, but left the ſame for further conſideration. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 26.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, allowed the wife's declaration, that ſhe agreed to pay 4*s. per* week for nurſing a child, was good evidence to charge the husband; this matter being uſually tranſacted by the woman. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 527.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Mr. Liſter's Caſe..

Mr. Liſter married Lady Rawlinſon, who was a widow, and had before her marriage with Liſter ſettled her eſtate in her own power, and out of his controul; and afterwards there being ſome diſagreement between them, he, by a proper writing duly executed, covenanted to allow her ſo much every year for her maintenance, and that ſhe might live ſeparate from him, to which ſhe agreed, and accordingly they lived apart for ſome time; the husband pretending a deſire to be reconciled to his wife, but in fact only wanting more money of her, ſhe refuſed, whereon he, with the aſſiſtance of another perſon, forced her into a coach as ſhe was coming from church on a Sunday, and carried her into the Mint, and kept her under ſtrict confinement.

And ſhe being brought into court by habeas corpus, her husband moved by his council, that the court would not interpoſe between husband and wife; that ſhe could not deny herſelf to be his wife, and that by law the husband had a coercive power over the wife.

Per curiam. An agreement between husband and wife to live ſeparate, and that ſhe ſhould have a ſeparate maintenance, ſhall bind them both, till they both agree to cohabit again; and if the wife is willing to return to her husband, no court will interpoſe or obſtruct her.

But as to the coercive power which the husband has over his wife, it is not a power to confine her; for by the law of England, ſhe is intitled to all reaſonable liberty, if her behaviour is not very bad; and therefore, ſhe ſhall now be ſet at liberty, if it is her pleaſure ſo to be; ſhe anſwered, ſhe deſired to be ſet at liberty; and thereon ſhe was diſcharged out of the cuſtody of her husband, and went out of court with her ſon; but that he (the husband) ſhould have leave to write to her, and uſe any lawful means in order to a reconciliation, provided ſhe was willing to ſee him, and that her children or ſervants ſhould not hinder him, unleſs by her order; but that whenever ſhe permitted him to come to her, he ſhould not offer any violence or uncivil behaviour to her perſon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 22.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. King and Wife v. Baſingham. Error.

An action on the caſe, &c. was brought in the Common Pleas by husband and wife, in which he declared on ſeveral counts, and one of them was for money lent to the defendant by him (the plaintiff) and his wife, by his conſent and promiſe made to them both.

On non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was ill, becauſe the wife was joined in this action with her husband, which ſhe ought not to be; and that the joining her in the action being matter of ſubſtance, was not helped by this verdict; for by this means, if the husband ſhould die, then what is recovered would ſurvive to her, when it ought to go to the executor of the husband.

But the judgment was affirmed, and a writ of error being brought in B. R. the ſame objection was made there; and that this action was founded on a contract made by the wife, when by law ſhe cannot make any contract during the coverture.

The plaintiff in error's council excepted to the declaration, for the money being alledged to be lent by the husband and wife, muſt be preſumed to be lent during coverture: and then the money is the husband's money only, for which he alone ought to have brought his action, for a wife can have no intereſt in money during coverture. Cro. Jac. 644. pl.

The defendant in error's council argued, that this objection was too late, it being after a verdict, which ought to be made good, if by any conſtruction it it might; therefore it ſhall be intended, that the husband and wife are joint traders, and that ſhe lent the money to the defendant before marriage.

Beſides, where a promiſe is made to the wife, if the husband brings the action for himſelf and his wife, he makes that promiſe good by his own conſent.

Chief Juſtice. If the money was lent during coverture, the declaration is falſe, becauſe then the wife could have no money. Adjourned.

In Hilary term following, the matter coming on again, the court inclined againſt the plaintiff, for it being laid to the damage of both, made the declaration ill; and ſo it was adjudged in Cro. Jac. 479. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 199. & 341.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The King v. Azire.

On an indictment againſt the husband for an aſſault on the wife, the Chief Juſtice allowed her to be a good witneſs for the King; and cited Lord Audley's caſe, State Trials, vol. 1. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 633.

In an action againſt the husband for a laced hat ſold to the wife, it was proved, that the wife lived from her husband in adultery, and that ſhe told the plaintiff ſhe had a husband, but that ſignified nothing, for ſhe would pay him herſelf. Raymond, Chief Juſtice, held the defendant not chargeable, and ſaid, he ſhould have ruled it ſo if there had been no actual notice, which only ſtrengthened the caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 706.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Morris v. Martin, at Guildhall.

In an action for meat, &c. provided for the defendant's wife, the defendant proved ſhe went away from him with an adulterer. Raymond, Chief Juſtice, held, that the husband ſhould not be charged for neceſſaries for her, though the plaintiff, who provided for her, had no notice; and he ſaid, Holt, Chief Juſtice, always ruled it ſo. And he put the caſe of an apothecary, who took a ſick woman into his houſe, being the wife of a country gentleman, from whom ſhe had gone away with an adulterer: ſo the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 647.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Huggins v. Durham and Wife. Error.

In error on a judgment in C. B. in an action of debt brought by husband and wife againſt the warden of the Fleet for 464*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* on the eſcape of O. R. who was committed by the Court of Chancery for that ſum. The declaration ſet forth, that on the 5th of February, 6 Geo. there was a decree, reciting the bill againſt R. et al.' by the wife only, which ſuit abated by her marriage with the other plaintiff, who revived the ſuit, and R. put in his anſwer, inſiſting that he had repaid 200*l.* part of the money; and an iſſue being directed thereon, the ſame was tried on a feigned iſſue, and found againſt him; that then the cauſe was heard on the equity reſerved, when it was referred to the maſter to take the account, who reported 464 l. 6 s. 2 d. to be due, and appointed it to be paid to the husband. Then the plaintiffs ſet forth, that the report was confirmed, and R. proſecuted ſo far, as to be committed for non-payment, when the defendant ſuffered him to eſcape.

After a judgment by default in C. B. it was objected on error by the plaintiffs council, that the wife ought not to have joined in this action; for by ſtat. 5 Ann c. 9. ſect. 4. the action is given to ſuch perſon to whom the money is paid by the decree; and this not being an action maintainable at common law, they muſt take it as the ſtatute has given it; and if the wife is joined where ſhe ought not, it is error. 1 Roll. Abr. 782. And this is in the nature of a diſtinction of the firſt cauſe of action, and giving the husband a new one in his own right.

Per curiam. Though the order only appoints it to be paid to the husband, yet by the firſt decree it is directed, that the maſter ſhould take an account of what is due to the husband and wife, which ſhews ſhe was intereſted in the cauſe, and therefore proper to join in the action. The judgment of C. B. was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 726.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 2. Child & al. v. Hardyman. At niſi prius Guildhall.

On an action brought for linen ſold to the defendant's wife, on non aſſumpſit pleaded, the delivery was proved, and that ſhe lived in a very lewd manner; one Mr. N. frequently coming to her at her husband's houſe, and they were locked up together in a bed-chamber; and that other indecencies paſſed between them. And it was alſo proved, that ſhe ſeveral times went to the houſe of this Mr. N. a gentleman in Wiltſhire, who lived within three miles of the defendant's houſe. It did not appear farther than that he diſliked her going and ſtaying at Mr. N.'s, but under theſe circumſtances, they continued to live together. Afterwards ſhe went away from him, and went to Marlborough, where ſhe reſided ſome time. But after the leaving her husband's houſe, it did not appear that ſhe ever ſaw Mr. N. or lived in a lewd manner. After ſome time ſhe ſent L. an attorney to her husband, to deſire that he would receive her again; the husband told him, that if ſhe came again, ſhe ſhould never ſit at the upper end of his table, nor have the government of the children, but ſhould live in a garret. Then L. propoſed to him, to make her an allowance, and propoſed about 80 or 100 l. per annum, he being worth about 500 or 600 l. per annum; but that was not complied with: and afterwards ſhe came to London, and bought linen to the amount of 53 l.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that the plaintiff ſhould be called; and accordingly he was nonſuited. He held, if a woman elopes from her husband, though ſhe does not go away with an adulterer, or live in an adulterous manner; the tradeſman truſts her at his peril, and the husband is not bound. And this had been ſo adjudged in two or three caſes; indeed if he refuſes to receive her again, from that time it may be an anſwer to the elopement. In this caſe he does not abſolutely refuſe to receive her again; but that ſhe ſhould neither ſit at his table, nor have any government of the children, but ſhould be kept in a garret; and ſhe deſerved no better uſage, ſo the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 875.

A writ of dower unde nihil habet, was brought in the Dutchy court of Lancaſter, and judgment was given for the demandant. A writ of ſeiſin was awarded accordingly, and a writ of inquiry, and on the return of it damages were given to the widow to the full value of the dower, from the death of her husband to the return of the writ of inquiry. A writ of error was brought in this court and the following exceptions taken on the ſide of the plaintiff in error.

1ſt. That no damages will lie in this caſe. 2dly. That ſuppoſing damages will lie, yet not from the time they are awarded. 3dly. That as damages are given too ſoon, ſo they are carried too far.

The court over-ruled all the exceptions on the anſwers given, but that which is that here does not appear to be any default, becauſe the words in the entry are, quod ipſe exact' non ven. i. e. that he being called, did not come, ſince the words ſeem naturally to refer to no more than one, and it did not ſeem on default of one tenant, the court ſhould give judgment againſt all; therefore, they ordered this exception to be argued again.

In Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. this caſe was moved for again.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. In caſes of this nature, which wholly turn on the critical conſtruction of words, it is incumbent on the court to make them good if poſſible, in order to maintain the right of the party.

Theſe words cannot be amended in this court, but it ſeems they might have been in the court below, Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. Mutty v. Dennis. 2 Stra. 807. Barnard, B. R. 53. In ejectment againſt two defendants; the plaintiff declared that they entered, expelled, and amoved, the court thought it ill, but ordered it to be amended, according to the authority of Cro. Jac. 306. Salk. 48.

It cannot be rejected, for the rule is, that words cannot be rejected unleſs they make an inconſiſtency, but if they have a ſenſe as they ſtand, though it vitiates the thing, they cannot be rejected, otherwiſe according to that rule, any thing may be right that is wrong.

The ſtatute for the amendment of the law will not help this, for that only aids judgment by confeſſion, nil dicit and non ſum informatus, which are after appearance, and writs of enquiry executed thereon, but no judgment by default before appearance.

But at laſt, the court ruled it good, by taking the word ipſe (as there are no diphthongs in court-hand) in the plural number, and ſuppoſing it to agree with the word perſonæ, underſtood.

Trinity, 7 Geo. 2. Smith v. Hixon.

In an action on the caſe for maliciouſly proſecuting the plaintiff and his wife for receiving ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen, by which they were both ſcandalized; the husband interrupted in his trade, and put to expence; on not guilty pleaded, the jury find for the defendant as to proſecuting the husband; and for the plaintiff, as to the proſecution of the wife. And it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that what concerns the husband being out of the caſe, the wife ſhould have joined in the action, as to the matter for which the plaintiff would recover, and the other action would ſurvive her; and the council cited Cro. Eliz. 884. 1 Sid. 5.

Per curiam. In Savil v. Roberts, Salk. 13. it was indeed held, that expence alone without ſcandal would not be a ground for ſuch an action: but afterwards, in the caſe of Jones v. Gwynne, Hilary, 12 Ann, that opinion was exploded. Here it is laid down, that the husband was put to expence, and this being an action founded on a tort, the plaintiff was not bound to prove all the declaration, as he is in the caſe of contracts: and though this action, as to the ſcandal, may ſurvive to the wife, yet that is no reaſon, for he may undoubtedly maintain treſpaſs for beating her, whereby he loſt the benefit of her company, and yet no doubt the action for beating will ſurvive. The plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 977.

It was moved, that the wife may have leave to plead ſeparately from her husband; the caſe was, that her eſtate was ſettled on her, which ſettlement was confirmed by a decree in the Houſe of Lords to be for her ſeparate maintenance, only her eſtate was made liable to anſwer all actions brought againſt the husband on her account: and the council ſuggeſted, that this was a fictitious demand in the plaintiff ſet up by connivance of the husband, and that he will let judgment go by default, and ſo ſhare with the plaintiff in what ſhall be recovered.

Lord Hardwicke. We cannot allow you to ſever in pleading: your beſt way will be to plead in the name of husband and wife, and if the husband ſhould diſavow, and that ſhould be contrary to the order of the Houſe of Lords, you will know how to enforce that order; but we can do nothing in it. Vide caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 101.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. Bern and Wife v. Mattaire.

Lord Hardwicke. This is an action of replevin, wherein the plaintiff declares for taking fourteen ſkimmers and ladles, and three pots and covers, the goods and chattels of him the ſaid —— Bern and —— his wife; the defendant avows the taking for arrear of rent on a demiſe; the plaintiff pleads in bar to the avowry, and traverſes the demiſe; and iſſue is joined on that traverſe of non demiſit, and a verdict for the plaintiffs, that no ſuch demiſe was; and thereon it is moved in arreſt of judgment in behalf of the avowant, and three exceptions taken to the declaration:

Firſt exception. That a declaration in replevin cannot be maintained by a husband and wife jointly for taking the goods of the husband and wife.

Second exception. That it is a bad declaration for laying it to be to the damage of both.

Third exception, that it is ill for the uncertain deſcription of the goods taken, it ſaying fourteen ſkimmers and ladles, and for not ſaying how many of each ſort.

As to the firſt exception, it depends on this foundation, that husband and wife cannot have a joint property in chattels, and in general that is true, becauſe marriage is a gift of all chattels to the husband: but in this it does not appear that the taking was during the coverture, nor can we preſume it was, and the plaintiffs, for ought that appears, might be jointly poſſeſſed of theſe goods before marriage, and if that was the caſe, that they were ſo jointly poſſeſſed before marriage, and thoſe goods taken before marriage, they may after coverture join in the replevin, and declare for taking the goods of husband and wife, and if there can be ſuch a caſe, we muſt take it to be ſo here, becauſe the avowry allows a a property in them both, if it may be, by not diſputing the property as the avowant might have done; ſo in the year book of Michaelmas, Ed. 2. fo. 44. 175. this exception was over-ruled; ſo in Bro. Abr. tit. Baron and Feme, pl. 85. He ſays baron and feme ſhall not join in replevin; but quere, as to goods which ſhe has as executrix, for there it ſeems ſhe ſhall join in replevin for the goods of the wife taken when ſhe was ſole, ſo in Ventris 260, Batmore and Wife v. Greams, in trover brought by husband and wife, though the converſion was laid after the marriage, it was held that in regard the trover was laid to be before the marriage, which was the inception of the cauſe of action, the wife might be joined; as if a man has the cuſtody of a woman's goods, and afterwards marries her, ſhe may join in detinue with her husband; and Hale ſaid in ſuch caſe the husband may bring the action alone, or jointly with his wife; and ſo I take the law to be in this caſe, that the husband might have declared in this replevin alone, or jointly as he has done. The material authorities that have been cited againſt this doctrine are F. N. B. fo. 69. Let. K. But is only, that the goods of a feme ſole taken, who afterwards marries, the baron alone may ſue a replevin, and 1 Sid. 172. Powis and wife v. Marſhall, where it was held by Twiſden and Wyndham, that a replevin ſo brought, is well brought, and that actions which affirm property, ought to be brought by the husband alone; and that I muſt confeſs is contrary to the opinion now given, but it is alſo contrary to the year book of Ed. 2. and to the plea in Brd. Abr. and eſpecially to the caſe of Batmore v. Greams in Ventris, for actions of detinue are a much ſtronger affirmance of property than replevin.

As to the ſecond exception, it will follow the fate of the other, for if there was ſuch a joint poſſeſſion before marriage; the taking muſt be laid to the damage of them, becauſe the damage ſurvives to the wife, Cro. Eliz. 259. Gurney and Wife v. Sir Ed. Clere.

As to the third exception, the uncertain deſcription of the goods taken, it was ſaid, that though ſuch a general deſcription may be well enough, by the later caſes in trover and treſpaſs, yet that it is otherwiſe in replevin, which is an action which affirms property, and where the goods taken ought to be particularized, for a direction to the ſheriff to know what goods to return if a retorn habend. ſhould be awarded.

That it is well enough in trover and treſpaſs, cannot be doubted, though there are ſome old caſes to the contrary; yet the modern caſes are otherwiſe, as Harford v. Jones, and Harriſon v. Bottom. 1 Salk. 654. Trinity, 2 Geo 2. This very point came in queſtion, and was very fully conſidered in Eaſter, 1 Geo. Kempſter v. Nelſon, the caſe was a replevin for taking his goods and chattels, viz. a certain parcel of linen, and a certain parcel of paper, the property of the plaintiff; and the avowry was as a diſtreſs for rent, and it was excepted in arreſt of judgment, that a certain parcel of paper and linen was too general and uncertain a deſcription; and though it might be well enough in trover and treſpaſs, yet in replevin it was ill, as not being a ſufficient direction to the jury to aſſeſs damages, nor to the ſheriff for redelivering the goods: but Lord Parker, in giving his opinion, ſaid, that ſuch a declaration would be ill on demurrer, but that the pleadings had ſupplied the defect, becauſe the avowant having avowed the taking, had thereby taken on himſelf the knowledge of what the goods are; and the only controverſy is, who ſhall have them; and it would be no manner of benefit to the defendant to have them particularized; for if the plaintiffs had demanded five hundred reams of paper, though he proved but one, yet, if he proves one, he muſt recover; for in torts, if the plaintiff proves any part of his caſe, it is ſufficient; and as to the ſheriff's delivering the goods on a retorn habend. in caſe the avowant prevailed; he ſaid, the ſheriff may require either the plaintiff or defendant to ſhew him the goods; and it is a good return to make, that no one appeared on the part of the defendant to ſhew, &c. and there is ſuch a return in Raſtal's Entries, 570. b. and Dalton's Sheriff, 274. which in this caſe of Kempſter, was conſidered; and the court took it to have been determined on the point of an immaterial traverſe, for they ſaid it would be a ſtrange reſolution to ſay, that the addition of circumſtances ſhould make it more uncertain than it was before; and we think the reaſon of that caſe of Kempſter v. Nelſon governs this caſe: ſo the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwiske, p. 119.

Articles of peace were exhibited againſt the defendant by his wife, and he was bound in 1000 l. to keep the peace, and his ſureties in 500 l. each.

In Trinity, 9 Geo. The Earl of Stamford on his Lady's ſwearing articles of the peace againſt him, was bound himſelf in 4000 l. and his ſureties in 2000 l. each. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 74.

In an action for a malicious proſecution, the defendant was willing his wife ſhould be examined, (the plaintiff's wife, I ſuppoſe.)

Lord Hardwicke. The reaſon why the law will not ſuffer a wife to be a witneſs for or againſt the husband, is, to preſerve the peace of families; and therefore, I ſhall never encourage ſuch a conſent; and ſhe was not examined. Vide Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 264.

Trinity, 11 Geo. 2. Smalley v. Kerfoot and Wife.

In an action of treſpaſs againſt baron and feme, for entering the plaintiff's houſe, taking his goods, and converting them to their own uſe. After a verdict for the plaintiff, and general damages, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the feme could not convert to her own uſe; and Salk. 114. was cited, where in trover it was held ill.

But on conſideration, the Chief Juſtice delivered the reſolution of the court, that this being treſpaſs, it was well enough; for the converſion here is not the gift of the action, as it is in trover; this action being maintainable for entering the houſe and taking the goods: and we muſt take it, the damages are given only for that, as where words are joined that are not actionable, (10 Co. Oſborn's caſe) the court in tends they were only added to ſhew the malice of the party: and it is the ſame in trover, where part is ill deſcribed, we will not intend damages given for that: Cro. Jac. 665. Therefore the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1094.

Trinity, 11 Geo. 2. The King v. Frederick and Tracy.

The defendants were indicted for a joint aſſault, and at the trial in Middleſex, it was inſiſted to examine the wife of the defendant Tracy, as a witneſs for the other defendant, but there having been material evidence given againſt the husband, and it being a joint treſpaſs, and impoſſible to ſeparate the caſes of the two defendants in the account given of the tranſaction; the Chief Juſtice refuſed to let her be examined. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1095.

Trinity, 12 Geo. 2. The King v. Dr. Betteſworth.

On a mandamus brought to grant adminiſtration to Mr. Bridgen, the late husband of Lady Bellamont, deceaſed, the Dean of the arches returned, that a ſuit had been commenced before him, between Mr. Bridgen, and a ſon of the deceaſed, who claimed to be her executor, under a will made by her, purſuant to a deed executed before marriage, whereby the husband agreed ſhe ſhould have power to make a will, and diſpoſe of her eſtate, which deed Mr. Bridgen had confeſſed, and thereon ſentence had been given for the validity of the diſpoſition, but not for any executorſhip created thereby; and thereon a new ſuit was inſtituted by the daughter againſt the ſon and Mr. Bridgen, for adminiſtration with the will annexed, which is ſtill depending.

And on conſideration the court declared, that no peremptory mandamus ought to go; for though generally the husband is intitled to the adminiſtration as next of kin, yet that is in reſpect of the intereſt he has in the eſtate, and becauſe no body is in an equal degree, and that is the reaſon why adminiſtrations are ſo often granted to a reſiduary legatee. The matter is properly under the conſideration of the ſpiritual court, to whom to grant adminiſtration, and there is no reaſon for us to interpoſe, and therefore the return muſt be allowed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1111.

The defendant's wife having been convicted of a conſpiracy to charge her husband with ſubornation of perjury, was committed in execution for a year. The plaintiff kept a ſpunging houſe within the rules, and received the defendant's wife into his houſe, and found her neceſſaries, for which this action was brought. The Chief Juſtice ruled, that it would not lie; for her being there was illegal, ſhe being ſuch a priſoner as was not intitled to the benefit of the rules, and in ſuch a caſe the law will not raiſe an implied promiſe to charge the husband. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1122.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. 2. The King v. Crofts.

The defendant being convicted on ſtat. 9 Geo. 2. cap. 23. for ſelling gin, it was objected by her council, that it appeared the defendant was a feme covert, and therefore as ſhe could make no contract, it muſt be taken to be her husband's ſale; or if ſhe could be convicted, he ought to have been joined for conformity. And 2 Keb. 468. 479. 634. and 1 Sid. 410. were cited.

The council on the other ſide argued, that where the crime is of ſuch a nature, as can be committed by the wife alone, ſhe may be indicted without her husband; which being a proceeding grounded merely on the breach of the law, he ſhall not be included unleſs privy. H. P. C. 65. 1 Hawk. 3. 147. 6 Mod. 213. 239. In this caſe there may be impriſonment and whipping.

Per curiam. We think the conviction is right; for this is not like the caſes that ſound only in damages: the wife may be convicted alone for recuſancy. Hob. 96. 11 Co. Forſter's caſe, and though ſhe cannot have the benefit of the contract, yet ſhe as well as a ſervant may do the act of vending. Salk. 384. Cro. Jac. 482. Trinity, 15 Geo. 2. Pitts v. Meller and Wife.

In an action of trover againſt both, and judgment and execution againſt both, the court refuſed to diſcharge the wife out of cuſtody, unleſs it could be ſhewn that there was colluſion between the plaintiff and her husband to keep her there. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1167.

He exhibited articles of peace againſt his wife, and the court received the ſame without any objection. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1207.

Michaelmas, 18 Geo. 2. Bolton v. Prentice.

In aſſumpſit for goods ſold and delivered to the defendant's wife, the caſe appeared to be, that the defendant and his wife had formerly lodged at the plaintiff's houſe, and the plaintiff furniſhed her with goods; and the defendant finding the plaintiff had helped her to pawn her watch, and ſuſpecting he confederated with her, left the lodgings, after paying the plaintiff his bill, forbidding him ever to truſt her again.

After this, the defendant and his wife cohabited together for a year, when, without any cauſe appearing, he left her, locked up her cloaths, and on her finding him out, refuſed to admit her, and ſtruck her, and declared he would not maintain her, or pay any body that did. In this diſtreſs, ſhe borrowed cloaths of her friends, and applied to the plaintiff, who furniſhed her with neceſſaries, according to the defendant's degree, which the defendant refuſing to pay for, this action was brought; and on the trial, the jury found for the plaintiff.

On a motion for a new trial, the court held the verdict was right; for whilſt they were at the plaintiff's, there was a particular reaſon for the particular prohibition; yet the turning her away deſtitute afterwards without cauſe gave her the general credit again: and if a husband ſhould be allowed under the notion of a particular prohibition, to deſtroy her obtaining credit in one place, he may in the ſame manner prevent it with all people ſhe is acquainted with. He appears to be a wrong doer, and therefore has no right to prohibit any body. They diſtinguiſhed this caſe from the caſe of Manby v. Scott, 1 Sid. 109. for there the wife was guilty of the firſt wrong, in eloping. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1214.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. Finch and Wife v. Duddin and Wife.

In an action for battery of the plaintiff's wife by the defendant's wife, there was judgment for the plaintiffs, and the wife of the defendant was only taken in execution. She moved to be diſcharged; but on affidavits of endeavours to take the husband, and it not appearing there was any deſign to ſcreen him, the court refuſed it, on the authority of Pitts v. Meller and wife. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1237.

Trinity, 21 Geo. 2. Harriſon v. Bearcliffe and Wife.

Both were arreſted for the debt of the wife when ſole: and the court diſcharged her, and ſaid, the husband muſt lie till he puts in bail for both. 1 Lev. 51. 216. and 1 Ven. 49. denied to be law. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1272.

Eaſter, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. Mead.

On a habeas corpus brought by J. W. Eſq; to bring up the body of M. W. his wife, before Deniſon, Juſtice:

The ſubſtance of the return was, that her husband, (having uſed her very ill) in conſideration of a great ſum which ſhe gave him out of her ſeparate eſtate, had conſented to her living alone, executed articles of ſeparation, and therein covenanted never to diſturb her, or any perſon with whom ſhe ſhould live: that ſhe lived with her mother, and that this writ was brought with a view of ſeizing her by force.

The court held the deed of ſeparation to be a formal renunciation by the husband of his marital right to ſeize his wife, or force her back to live with him. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 542.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Windham, Eſq; v. Chetwynd, Eſq;

Per curiam. In matters of evidence, husband and wife are conſidered as one, and they cannot be witneſſes the one for the other. The husband cannot be a witneſs for his wife in a queſtion touching her ſeparate eſtate. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 414.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Jenkins v. Whitehouſe and another.

On a motion for a prohibition to ſtay proceedings in a cauſe relating to the will of a married woman.

Lord Manſfield. If the queſtion be, " whether the wife had a power to make an appointment in the nature of a will, and thereby to deprive the husband of any benefit which by law would devolve on him in conſequence of her death?" That would be a proper queſtion to be conſidered here, and if it was found that ſhe had no ſuch power, this court would grant a prohibition. On which the court granted a rule to ſhew cauſe why there ſhould not be a prohibition, but the matter never came on again. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 431.

On a motion to ſhew cauſe why the judgment and writ of fieri fac. executed thereon, ſhould not be ſet aſide with coſts, and the ſum of 172 l. 2 s. 6 d. levied by the ſheriff of Devon, be paid to the aſſignees of the defendant, under a commiſſion of bankruptcy iſſued againſt him on the 12th day of May laſt.

The caſe appeared to be, that Lee, the defendant, had entered into this warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment to the woman plaintiff, while ſole, and ſhe afterwards married Marder, the man plaintiff, after which marriage the judgment was entered up by the husband and wife.

On this caſe the queſtion before the court was, " whether this judgment thus entered up by the huſband and wife be regular or not?"

After hearing council on both ſides,

The court declared their opinion to be, that the judgment was irregular for want of a previous leave of the court to enter it up. They held that in order to warrant this entry of the judgment, there ought to have been an application to the court for leave to enter it up, founded on a proper affidavit, proving the marriage between the plaintiffs, on which a rule of court ſhould have been obtained, giving leave to enter up judgment accordingly, but as this previous ſtep was not taken, the judgment was irregular for want of it: the conſequence of which was, that the rule was made abſolute without coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1468.

The defendant was brought up by habeas corpus from Lancaſhire, having been committed to the houſe of correction for diſobeying an order of two juſtices, who adjudged her child to be a baſtard, and ordering her to pay the pariſh 8 d. a week for the maintenance of the ſaid child, while it remained chargeable.

Lord Manſfield. A feme covert is liable to be proſecuted for crimes committed by her. This woman has diſobeyed the order of the juſtices, and ſtat. 18 Eliz. cap. 3. preſcribes the puniſhment here inflicted on her. There is no need to ſummon the husband in a criminal proſecution againſt the wife.

Baſtards.

In ejectment brought by Pride againſt the Earls of Bath and Montague; Pride the plaintiff made title, as heir to George Duke of Albermarle, proving himſelf the ſon of the brother to the Duke, and that the Duke died without iſſue. The defendants gave evidence, that Duke George had iſſue Duke Chriſtopher, who conveyed to them: the plaintiff proved that Duke Chriſtopher was a baſtard, begotten of a woman who, at the time of her marriage with the ſaid George Duke of Albermarle, was married to another man, then, and ſtill living. To this it was objected, that ſince Duke George and this woman lived together as man and wife, and were now dead, the plaintiff could not be admitted to baſtardize the iſſue, who was dead alſo; and who, during his whole life, was reputed and taken to be the legitimate ſon of the Duke, and ſtyled by the Duke himſelf in his deed of ſettlement, and in his laſt will and teſtament, his ſon and heir; and that it is not juſt to baſtardize any one after his death. The court held this true of ſuch a baſtard as is meant by Lit. in his caſe of baſtard eigne and mulier puiſne, i. e. ſuch a baſtard as is born before the eſpouſals of a father and mother who marry afterwards; and ſaid, the rule extended only to that caſe. If H. marries a woman, and that woman marries again during the life of H. the laſt marriage is void without any divorce; and the jury ſhall try the fact which proves it no marriage: and the reaſon why the ſpiritual court cannot give ſentence to annul a marriage after the death of the parties is, becauſe the ſentence is given only for the ſalvation of the ſoul, and after death it is too late to effect that. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 121.

Hilary, 6 W. 3. The King v. Barebaker.

An order of Juſtices to pay ſo much money per week till the child is fourteen years of age, is naught; for the juſtices have no power but to indemnify the pariſh; and that is only to oblige the father to maintain the child as long as it is, or may be chargeable. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 121.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Liſley.

An order of ſettlement was made by two juſtices of peace to remove one E. S. and W. her ſon, to the pariſh of Morton-Hampſtead; in which order the cauſe aſſigned was, becauſe by fraud and colluſion of the pariſh of Liſley, ſhe was delivered of the ſaid baſtard child in the pariſh of Morton.

It was objected againſt this order, that it did not appear therein that the mother was legally ſettled in the pariſh of Liſley, or that ſhe was a pariſhioner there at the time ſhe was delivered at Morton; it only ſaid E. S. late of Liſley, ſingle woman, which is but the deſcription of the perſon, and an addition of the place, and not a ſufficient allegation that ſhe was an inhabitant there, or that the child was ſettled there.

Now, it appears by the order, that the child was born at Morton, and the birth at firſt view makes a ſettlement in that place, nothing appearing in the order to make him an inhabitant elſewhere, and they cannot ſend him back to a place where he never was.

The reaſon of the removal is too general, to wit, that ſhe was delivered at Morton, by the fraud and colluſion of the pariſh of Liſley.

As to the firſt objection, it was anſwered, that the order recites her to be late of the pariſh of Liſley, ſingle woman; which is a ſufficient taking notice, that ſhe was an inhabitant of that pariſh.

As to the ſecond objection, it was ſaid, that the juſtices are not bound to ſhew reaſon why they make ſuch an order to remove her; and therefore if they aſſign a cauſe uncertainly, that ſhall not quaſh an order.

The court inclined that ſhe ought to be alledged to be a legal inhabitant of the pariſh of Liſley; but would not quaſh the order, becauſe it was nine years ſince it was made. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 204.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. Maſters v. Child.

Adjudged, that the birth of a baſtard child prima facie ſettles it in the place where it was born; but if a woman big with child of a baſtard, and ſettled in one pariſh, is perſuaded to go into another, there to be delivered, this fraud will make the pariſh chargeable where the mother was ſettled, though the child was not born there: but if a woman with child of a baſtard comes accidentally into one pariſh, and is perſuaded by ſome of the pariſhioners to go into another pariſh, which ſhe does, and is there delivered, this ſhall not charge that pariſh which perſuaded her. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 66.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Riſlip, Hendon, and Harrow.

Several orders being removed into the King's Bench by certiorari,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, cited a caſe between Thornton and Pickering, where it was adjudged, that if a man be adjudged to be the father of a baſtard by two juſtices, he is eſtopped againſt all the world to ſay the contrary, and a man may juſtify the calling him ſo. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 394.

An order was made by two juſtices, that A. ſhould maintain a baſtard child, where the caſe was thus: A feme covert, during the abſence of her huſband at Cadiz, was brought to bed of a baſtard, and her huſband was not in England from the time of her conception till ſhe was brought to bed. The order being removed into the King's Bench by certiorari; the queſtion was, whether this child was a baſtard within ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3.? the words of which ſtatute are, "children begotten and born out of lawful matrimony," which cannot be ſaid in this caſe, the mother being married at the time of the birth of the child, ſo that there is a father bound to provide for it; and if ſuch mother ſhould kill ſuch child, ſhe would be guilty of murder within ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 27. But not allowed.

Per cur. He is a baſtard, who is begotten and born of a feme covert whilſt her huſband is beyond the four ſeas. And in a real action, if general baſtardy was pleaded, the biſhop ought to certify ſuch a one, baſtard: indeed, in caſe of baſtard eigne, the baſtardy muſt be pleaded ſpecially; becauſe ſuch a one is mulier by the canon law, and the biſhop would certify him ſuch. And where a man is a baſtard, he is ſuch to all purpoſes, and why not within ſtat. 18 Eliz.? for though ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. is a penal law, yet this act is a remedial law.

Then exception was taken to the form of the order, becauſe it ſaid that the huſband at the time of the begetting and birth was beyond the four ſeas; but it is not ſaid that he was not within them in the mean time, for if he was, the child was not a baſtard. And for this exception, the order was quaſhed: but the defendant was bound in a recognizance to appear at the next ſeſſions.

Per curiam. The conſtant practice has been ſo ever ſince the reign of Charles 1. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 395.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Wood's Caſe.

A woman big with child was removed by order of two juſtices, from A. to B. and was there brought to bed; B. appealed, and on the appeal the woman was ſent back to A.

Per curiam. So ought the child, for all was ſuſpended by the appeal; and now, the mother's right of ſettlement in B. is avoided from the beginning. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 121.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Alinſon v. Spence.

A motion was made to quaſh an order that was made for maintaining a baſtard child, when it was born in lawful wedlock; for it is ſaid that the huſband was at Cadiz.

Then here is a ſum in groſs ordered, which is ill; beſides, we ſay, it is a contrivance.

Chief Juſtice. The order muſt be quaſhed; for it muſt appear that he was not here during the whole ſpace. If he was here either at the begetting or birth of the child, it is ſufficient. Let the reputed father be bound over to appear in this court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 419.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Dr. Groenvelt v. Dr. Burwell Cenſor of the College of Phyſicians, and others.

In this caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that if two juſtices adjudge A. to be the father of a baſtard; if the child is a baſtard, A. is concluded by the judgment of the juſtices, and cannot falſify it, and ſay, that he is not the father; but his only remedy is by appeal: but if the child was born in wedlock, then the judgment was not before the court, and void, and conſequently no perſon concluded by it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 471.

Hilary, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Daniell.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A conſpiracy to charge one with a baſtard child, is indictable; but if one ſhould adviſe another to do it without more, it would not. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 100.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Chaffey.

Several orders made by the juſtices of peace in Wilts againſt the defendant, for being the putative father of a baſtard child, were removed into this court by certiorari. It was moved to quaſh one of them, which was made by the juſtices, that the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor ſhould ſeize on the defendant's goods, what they ſhould judge proper, to ſecure the pariſh from the maintenance of the child; becauſe by ſtat. 13 & 14. Car. 2. c. 12. they have only authority to make an order to empower the churchwardens and overſeers, &c. to ſeize what the juſtices ſhould judge proper, and not what the churchwardens, &c. ſhould judge proper, &c. and for this reaſon it was quaſhed. Then an exception was taken to the original order, becauſe it ordered, that the defendant ſhould give ſecurity for the payment of the ſum by them impoſed for the maintenance of the child; when it did not appear that the defendant had diſobeyed the order in point of payment. And by ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. an order for ſecurity cannot be made, till after contempt; and for this reaſon the order was quaſhed as to that part, and was confirmed as to the reſidue.

Per curiam. When an order is confirmed in this court, an attachment lies for non-performance of it; and therefore this court will not take ſecurity of the party for the performance of it. But if the original order had been at the ſeſſions, and not removed hither, the court would have taken ſecurity of him to appear there. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 858.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Between the Pariſhes of Weſtbury and Coſtham or Corſham.

A poor woman with child, being unmarried, was by order of two juſtices, removed from Weſtbury in Wilts to Corſham, and brought to bed there: Corſham appealed at the next ſeſſions, and the order was reverſed; afterwards, by order of two juſtices, the child was ſent to Corſham, they appealed, and the order was confirmed. At laſt the whole matter was removed into this court by certiorari.

Per curiam. The birth of the child at Corſham did not ſettle it there, becauſe it was under an illegal order, procured by Weſtbury, which order being reverſed, the matter amounts to no more, than that they unjuſtly procured the woman to go there, and therefore ſhall not take advantage of a wrong act of their own. Vide Forteſcue, p. 315. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 213.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Murray.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the queſtion was, if the husband be beyond ſea, and during the time the wife is got with child, whether this child be a baſtard, within ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3?

Per curiam. If the husband was out of the four ſeas during all the time of the wife's going with child, the child is a baſtard; but if he was here at all within the time, it is legitimate, and not a baſtard. And accordingly, as it did not appear by the order, that the husband was abſent all the time, the order was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 122.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Weſt.

The defendant had an order made on him by two juſtices of peace, for the maintenance of a baſtard child; he appealed to the general quarter ſeſſions, who confirmed the order, and committed him for diſobedience to their order. He was brought into this court by habeas corpus, and it was moved that he might be diſcharged; for that the juſtice ought not to have committed him, but to have proceeded on his recognizance; and of that opinion the court ſeemed to be. 2 Bulſt. 341. There was a fault in the order, which was, Dr. Fuller and another, two of her Majeſty's juſtices of the peace, doth adjudge, &c: Cro. Eliz. 108. Cro. Car. 464. But the court thought this not ſufficient to quaſh the order: but they quaſhed it, becauſe it appeared the juſtices ordered him to pay an exceſſive ſum. And though they quaſhed the order, they ordered him to appear at the next ſeſſions. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 59. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1157.

Trinity, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Weſton.

The defendant was adjudged by two juſtices of the peace to be the father of a baſtard child; and the order being removed into this court by certiorari; ſeveral exceptions were taken to it:

1ſt. That the juſtices had ordered the weekly payments to be made on a particular day, viz. on every Monday, in which they had gone beyond the power given them by the ſtatute; for computing the time from the making the order, the week was not up on the Monday.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held that it was well; and if it was before the day the week was up, yet payment before the day was payment at the day.

2dly. That the money was ordered to be paid to the overſeers of the poor, whereas it ought to have been ordered to be paid to the inhabitants of the pariſh generally.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held it was well enough.

3dly. But the great objection which ſtuck long with the court was, that after the recital of the order, when it came to the adjudication, it was, we the ſaid juſtices doth adjudge, inſtead of do, the ſingular number for the plural. And to maintain this objection, Fullwood's caſe, 1 Cro. 489. where F. and others were indicted on ſtat. 3 H. 7. cap. 2. for aſſaulting and taking a woman away by force, and marrying her againſt her will; and the indictment was cepit, inſtead of ceperunt; and notwithſtanding that exception taken, yet judgment of death was given againſt the defendants. But Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the anſwer which is reported in the book to have been given to the objection, is not adequate to it, and is ſo very odd, that he feared the reporter was miſtaken, and ordered the roll to be ſearched: and on ſearching, the roll was produced in court, and was not cepit, as it was reported to be in the book, but ceperunt: and ſo that caſe being removed out of the way, after the matter had depended two terms, and been ſeveral times ſtirred, the court, for that exception, the laſt day of the term, quaſhed the order.

And afterwards, the ſame juſtices made another order, with the very ſame fault in it, viz. doth adjudge, and on a certiorari, that was quaſhed, Hilary, 4 Ann. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 1197.

On certifying an order of juſtices, on ſtat. 4 El. c. 6. an exception taken to the order was, that the judgment ought to have been, that inaſmuch as they had ordered him to pay the money, and he had refuſed to pay, that he ſhould ſtand commited; but in this caſe it was, that they ordered him to pay ſo much, and in caſe he refuſed, then, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the act directs in what manner the money ſhall be levied; that is, firſt, an order or a judgment that he is in arrear; then if he makes an actual refuſal, an award of a diſtreſs; and if a return is made that he has nothing to be diſtrained by, then a commitment.

The court confirmed that part of the order relating to the payment of the money, and quaſhed the order for the commitment, niſi in a week. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 65.

Hilary, 5 Ann. Between the Pariſh of Budworth and the Townſhip of Dumply in Lancaſhire.

On an order made thirty years ago, on the pariſh of Budworth, for the maintenance of a baſtard child, born in the townſhip of Nether Dumply, within that pariſh, which order was now removed before the court by certiorari: it was held,

1ſt, That an order made on the overſeers of any pariſh by two juſtices, for raiſing a ſum towards the maintenance of a baſtard or poor perſon, does not determine the ſettlement of that perſon in that pariſh; for the right of ſettlement is not conteſted, but preſumed.

2dly, That the clauſe in ſtatute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. which provides that diſtinct townſhips of large pariſhes in the northern counties, ſhall reſpectively provide for their poor, under the penalty mentioned in ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. muſt be underſtood with reſpect to the maintenance of poor and impotent perſons, and not with reſpect to baſtards who are provided for by other ſtatutes: but if a baſtard be grown up, and by accident grows impotent, he may be relieved as a poor perſon within that ſtatute. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 123.

Three children being born in Saint George's pariſh, on the body of M. B. wife of G. B. an inhabitant of Saint Margaret's, Weſtminſter; the inhabitants of Saint Margaret's alledged, that the mother was a lewd woman, and was divorced from her huſband, and had the children a long time after the divorce; but the juſtices ſent them by an order of ſeſſions to Saint Margaret's, Weſtminſter, on being informed that the huſband lived there; ſuppoſing that to be the place of their laſt legal ſettlement. It was moved to quaſh the order, for that the children were baſtards.

Per curiam. They are baſtards, being begotten by an adulterer after a divorce.

It was objected, it did not appear by the order but that the huſband got them.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. We will intend the contrary, unleſs you can prove their cohabitation. But being of great conſequence, the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 106.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Simmons.

On a motion to diſcharge a perſon committed by the juſtices at their ſeſſions on ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. The ſtat. ſays, that the two juſtices, if they order a perſon to keep a baſtard child, may commit him, unleſs he gives ſecurity, 2 Hulſt. 341. and it was objected, that the juſtices, and not the ſeſſions, have the power in this caſe to commit, &c.

Powell, Juſtice. Suppoſe he gives ſecurity to abide the order of the juſtices, and that this order is confirmed at the ſeſſions, cannot they commit him for diſobeying it?

Holt, Chief Juſtice. No, they cannot; they muſt proceed on the ſecurity.

Anſwer. But here is no ſecurity given. In this caſe, the man kept out of the way, ſo the two juſtices could neither commit him, nor take ſecurity of him; but they make this order on him, and then he appeals to the ſeſſions, and the juſtices order him to be committed. The order was quaſhed; but the court bound him over to appear at the next quarter ſeſſions. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 136.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Atkins.

An order of two juſtices was made on the father of a baſtard child, that he ſhould pay 1*s.* 6*d. per* week, from the time of the birth of the child till it ſhould be ten years old, and then to pay 5*l.* for the putting it out apprentice; it was objected, that the order was not according to the ſtatute, for 'tis uncertain whether it will be chargeable ſo long as till ten years of age. It ought to have been to pay ſo much, &c. ſo long as the child is chargeable to the pariſh. To which the court agreed, and therefore quaſhed the order. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 172.

Trinity, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Collins.

An order of two juſtices was made on Collins, the reputed father of a baſtard child; it was ordered, he ſhould pay 20*d. per* week, and the woman 4*d. per* week, for ten years. It was moved to quaſh it, becauſe it ſhoud have been, as long as the child is likely to become chargeable, and not for a certain term of years; and the King v. James was cited, for it might be that an eſtate might come to the child in the mean time, and it hinders the father from keeping it himſelf if he has a mind to it.

In an order of removal of a baſtard child to the place of its birth, it was ſtated, that a certain woman was brought to bed at Sneedon, of a baſtard child, and that ſhe came immediately and dropped it in the pariſh of Southwell, there to be chargeable to the pariſh, and ſhe cannot be found, though endeavours have been uſed to that purpoſe; therefore it was removed from the pariſh of Southwell, to the pariſh of Sneedon, that being the place of its birth.

The order was quaſhed, becauſe they had not named the woman; the C. J. declaring they muſt either name her, or ſay, that ſhe is a perſon unknown, as is ſaid in an indictment. Vide Forteſcue, p. 313.

Eaſter, 11 Ann. Anonymous.

An exception was taken to an order of two juſtices for the maintenance of a baſtard child, that it was ſet forth in the order, that the baſtard child was likely to become chargeable to the pariſh, which is the very foundation of the juriſdiction of the juſtices of peace.

But not allowed; for the law preſumes that baſtard children will become chargeable, becauſe nobody is bound to provide for them, and therefore this need not appear in the order.

Another objection was, that the order was for the reputed father to pay ſo much a week for the maintenance of the child, until the child ſhould come to the age of 8 years; whereas the order ought to have been conditional, if the child continue ſo long chargeable.

But not allowed; for ſuch orders in the very ſame form have often been allowed; and the words of the order, towards the maintenance of the child, imply ſuch a condition.

N. B. In caſe of baſtards a complaint is not neceſſary to the giving juſtices of the peace juriſdiction, as in the caſe of poor. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 85.

An order for the removal of a baſtard child ſaid, that a baſtard male child about three months old was brought into Sandridge, and that ſuch child was a baſtard, and born and ſettled in Luton; it was objected, they did not name the mother, nor ſay unknown, and quoted the caſe of Southwell v. Sneedon; and it was held a good exception, and the order was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 314.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. The Queen v. Odam.

An order for maintenance of a baſtard child was excepted to, becauſe the defendant was on ſight of the order to pay 9*l.* in groſs, and after that ſo much weekly.

Per curiam: By the ſtatute the juſtices are to take order for the relief of the pariſh, and keeping of the child, by payment of money weekly, or other ſuſtentation; and this may be only indemnifying the pariſh for money laid out before the reputed father was found. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 124.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. The King v. Miles.

This was a motion to quaſh an order of baſtardy.

The firſt objection againſt the order was, that it ſhould have been ſet forth what place the child was born at; becauſe that gives the juſtices their juriſdiction.

Per curiam: The adjudging ſuch a one the father of a baſtard child, which was born in ſuch a town, is a ſufficient ſetting forth the place of his birth.

Second objection: The pariſh being out of time; the child being 14 years of age.

Per cur. The pariſh is not confined to any time by the ſtatute; and a good reaſon is ſet forth in the order, why the pariſh did not complain ſooner, viz. that the father ran away, and could not be found ſooner; and having no eſtate, nothing could be done in his abſence.

Third objection: Awarded by the order, that the father ſhall give ſecurity both for the performance of the order, and likewiſe for indemnifying the pariſh for the future.

Per curiam: The giving ſecurity is a thing very reaſonable in itſelf; but ſince there have been former opinions of the court, that the juſtices have not a power to award the giving ſecurity for the due performance of their order, until ſuch time as their order has been contemned, (but then they have) the order muſt be quaſhed for that: but as for giving ſecurity for indemnifying the pariſh, it is right. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 271.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. The pariſh of St. Andrew v. The Pariſh of St. Bride.

On an order of ſeſſions for the removal of a wife and three children from the pariſh of St. Andrew to the pariſh of St. Bride, ſetting forth that A. about twenty-three years ſince married B. and lived with her five years in the pariſh of St. Bride, and had by her four children, two whereof were dead, and the other two provided for. That at the end of five years he went away from her, and married another woman, with whom he lived ſomewhere in England; but that he never ſaw his firſt wife B. from the time of his going away.

B. after the ſeparation (having heard nothing for a long time of A.) married a ſecond huſband, by whom ſhe had eight children in the pariſh of St. Andrew, who all went by the name of the ſecond huſband, five of them are dead, and the other three ſurvive. And the ſeſſions preſuming that the ſecond marriage is void from the beginning, adjudge, that her ſettlement, and that of the three children, is in the pariſh of St. Bride, where the firſt huſband lived, as deeming the children the legitimate iſſue of the firſt marriage.

The court quaſhed the order as to the children, and confirmed it as to the wife.

Firſt, Becauſe the ſecond marriage, and living with the ſecond huſband in St. Andrew's, was void from the beginning; and therefore the place of her ſettlement was where the firſt huſband lived.

Secondly, It being adjudged that the firſt huſband had no acceſs to her for ſeventeen years, no preſumption ſhall be admitted but that theſe are the children of the ſecond marriage; and they not being born in the pariſh of St. Bride, nor having ever inhabited there forty days, can have no ſettlement in St. Bride's. 1 Roll. Abr. 351. lib. 1. 8. pl. 4. 5. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 417. Co. Litt. 123. 2 Roll. Abr. 356. Cro. Jac. 541. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 15, 4, 5. Bracton, lib. 1. c. 9, 4. Co. Litt. 244. a. Salk. 123, 483. 7 H. 4. 9. All theſe caſes were cited to prove, that improbability will baſtardize the iſſue; and therefore it was argued a fortiori that impoſſibility, which was found in this caſe, would baſtardize alſo. Vide Strange. vol. 1. p. 51.

Hilary, 8 Geo. The King v. England.

Two orders of baſtardy were returned, one made by two juſtices, and another original order made at the ſeſſions; and both were quaſhed. The order of the two juſtices, becauſe neither the ſex of the baſtard, or the name of it was mentioned, only a certain baſtard child born of the body of A.; and the order of the ſeſſions, becauſe there being an order of two juſtices before, the ſeſſions had no juriſdiction but on appeal. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 503.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. The King v. Godfrey.

An order made on the defendant to maintain a baſtard child was quaſhed, becauſe though in the complaint it was alledged, the child was born in the pariſh of Hitchin, in Hertfordſhire, yet there was no adjudication by the juſtices, nor no words of the juſtices from whence it could be collected, in what pariſh the child was born. And a caſe was cited. The Queen v. Beddington, Eaſter 10 Ann. where ſuch an order was quaſhed for this very exception. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1363.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. William Chandler.

The defendant was indicted at the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace for the county of Wilts, for that Alice Hunt being pregnant with an illegitimate child, which ſhe affirmed to be, by the ſaid William Chandler, of Uphaven, in the ſaid county, begotten; he the ſaid William Chandler being not ignorant of the premiſes, with intention to prevent and obſtruct the evidence of the ſaid Alice, of and concerning the premiſes, and to elude the execution of juſtice for the crime aforeſaid, on the 8th of November, in the tenth year of the reign of our Lord the King, with force and arms, at Uphaven aforeſaid, in the county aforeſaid, carried away, and cauſed to be carried away, the ſaid Alice to a place unknown, and hitherto has ſecreted the perſon of the ſaid Alice, and the ſaid Alice, ſtill continues to ſecrete, to the bad example of others and againſt the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity, &c. To this indictment removed into this court by certiorari, the defendant demurred; and judgment was given in his favour, that this indictment was not maintainable; it being no offence, for which an indictment would lie, as the fact was charged. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1368.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. The King v. Warne.

On an indictment for taking a baſtard child born out of the pariſh of A. and bringing it into that pariſh, and there keeping it privately without notice to the churchwardens, and with intent to charge the pariſh; the court quaſhed the indictment, becauſe it appeared the pariſh could not be burthened, the baſtard being born out of the pariſh of A. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 644.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. The King v. Tenant.

Several orders of baſtardy were removed into this court by certiorari: the firſt order was made by two juſtices of the peace for the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, on the defendant to keep a baſtard child, as being the reputed father. From this order the defendant appealed to the quarter ſeſſions; and the juſtices at the quarter ſeſſions on a full hearing of the merits, diſcharged the order of the two juſtices; but bound the defendant by recognizance to appear at the next quarter ſeſſions, as it was ſuppoſed, under apprehenſion, that better evidence might be procured againſt him. After this the ſame two juſtices made a new order againſt him for keeping this baſtard child. And all theſe orders being removed into this court November 10, 1726, the court quaſhed the laſt order of the two juſtices; for they having made an order on the defendant to keep the child as reputed father, and that order being regularly diſcharged on an appeal, on hearing the merits, the defendant was legally acquitted, and cannot be drawn in queſtion again for the ſame fact. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1423. Strange, vol. 2. p. 716.

An order was made, to pay ſo much weekly till the child was nine years old, or if it ſhould live ſo long.

Per curiam. It is a good order, for we cannot intend it able to provide for itſelf ſooner. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 788.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. The King v. Browne.

On an order of baſtardy, it was ſtated, that the huſband had been abſent ſix years, and that during his abſence the defendant had carnal knowledge of his wife, and therefore they adjudged him to be the putative father.

Per curiam. That order muſt be quaſhed, for his lying with her is not a ſufficient reaſon to infer him the father of this child: and though the juſtices need not ſhew the grounds they go on, yet if they do, and it appears no ſufficient ground, their order will be bad. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 811.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. Pendrell v. Pendrell.

On an iſſue out of Chancery, to try whether the plaintiff was the heir at law of one Thomas Pendrell, it was agreed, that the plaintiff's father and mother were married, and cohabited for ſome months, that they parted, ſhe ſtaying in London, and he going into Staffordſhire; that at the end of three years the plaintiff was born; and there being ſome doubt on the evidence, whether the husband had not been in London within the laſt year, it was ſent to be tried here. And the plaintiff reſted at firſt on the preſumption of law in favour of legitimacy, which was encountered by ſtrong evidence of no acceſs. And it was agreed by the court, that the old doctrine of being within the four ſeas was not to take place; but the jury were at liberty to conſider the point of acceſs, which they did, and found againſt the plaintiff.

The Chief Juſtice allowed the defendant to prove the mother to be a woman of ill fame. Salk. 120. Cro. Jac. 541. but he would not allow the mother's declarations to be given in evidence, till ſhe had been called, and denied them on the croſs examination. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 925.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. 2. On the demiſe of Lomax v. Holmden and others.

In ejectment the queſtion on a trial at bar was, whether the leſſor was ſon and heir of Caleb Lomax, Eſq; deceaſed, which depended on the queſtion of his mother's marriage. And that being fully proved, and evidence given of the huſband's being frequently at London, where the mother lived, ſo that acceſs muſt be preſumed, the defendants were admitted to give evidence of his inability from a bad habit of body. But their evidence not going to an impoſſibility, but an improbability only, that was not thought ſufficient, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 940.

An order of baſtardy, made by two juſtices of the borough of Richmond in Yorkſhire, was quaſhed for want of one of the quorum, though ſtat. 3 Car. 1. c. 5. was inſiſted on, where juſtices in precincts have power to execute ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. as juſtices in the county do.

Per curiam. It muſt be in the ſame manner. The reporter however doubts the legality of this determination, as many charters have no quorum. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 974.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. The King v. The inhabitants of St. Peter's, in Worceſterſhire.

On a motion made to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made for vacating an original order of two juſtices for the removal of a baſtard.

Lord Hardwicke. The firſt order goes too far in calling him a baſtard, and the ſon of J. H. for ſtrictly ſpeaking a baſtard is nobody's child, but this is only an impropriety, and the order is well enough.

As to the order of ſeſſions the man does ſwear to diſcharge himſelf, for whether he be the legitimate or only the natural father of the child, he is equally bound to maintain him. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 25.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. The King v. Reading.

It was moved to quaſh an order of two juſtices, and two orders of ſeſſions made thereon, whereby the defendant was adjudged father of a baſtard child.

The firſt order of ſeſſions was a ſpecial one, ſetting forth the particular circumſtances of the caſe, and charging the defendant, on the oath of a feme covert, with begetting a baſtard child on her. This order adjourned the matter, to take the advice of the judges of aſſize, but they declined giving their opinion in it: and the ſecond order reſumes the affair, and adjudges the defendant to be the father of the child. There were other witneſſes who ſaid, that the huſband was reſident about ſeven miles from the wife's habitation.

Exception was taken to theſe orders, that the wife was the only evidence, and that ſhe is not a competent witneſs in law to exonerate her huſband of the charge and burthen of this child.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. There are in the preſent caſe two queſtions; one on the form of the order, and the other on the merits.

The objection to the form is, that the firſt order of ſeſſions makes no determination, and that the ſecond order is wholly ſuperfluous, as there appears no adjournment on the firſt, ſo as to enable the ſeſſions to reſume the conſideration of the cauſe.

Where an appeal is lodged in the ſeſſions, it is neceſſary that they ſhould make a direct and final judgment, and they cannot refer it to the judges of aſſize for their judgment. Salk. 480. and the caſe of the King v. Willey this term; and therefore, had the matter reſted on the firſt order, it would undoubtedly have been bad, but then, it cannot be doubted, but that they may continue over the determination on the appeal by a proper adjournment, either to take the advice of the judges, or for any other reaſon.

Therefore, the matter reſts on this, that there is on the firſt order a reference to the judges of aſſize for their advice; and no formal adjournment made after it. It does not ſeem there was ever any determination, that it is neceſſary for the juſtices in their quarter ſeſſions, in the execution of any juriſdiction given by the ſtatute, to make formal and regular continuances, as the courts above do. It muſt, indeed, be agreed, that on indictments, where they proceed as a court of record at common law, they muſt make regular continuances. But it ſeems that on orders no ſuch formal adjournment is neceſſary; and the matter ſufficiently imports, that, there was in fact an adjournment in the preſent caſe, by referring it to the judges for their advice, when they ſhould come the circuit.

Then the queſtion will ariſe, whether the laſt order's being adjudged bad on the merits of the firſt order, can be abſtracted from them, and made good? It has always been taken as a rule in this caſe, that where there is a general order of the two juſtices good on the face of it, and the party appeals from it to the ſeſſions again, and they make an order ſpecially, ſtating the caſe as it appeared on evidence before them, the court will take the ſpecial caſe in the laſt order, to be the foundation on which the firſt order of the two juſtices was made, and therefore, if the evidence ſet out on the laſt order is not ſufficient to maintain their judgment thereon, the court will not only quaſh the laſt, but the firſt order likewiſe.

It has been ſaid, that if the orders of ſeſſions ſhould be bad on any account, the court will not take notice of any thing appearing on them; but though this is the rule of pleading, yet it does not hold in orders; for in orders of ſettlement, where on appeal from two juſtices, the ſeſſions ſtate the caſe ſpecially, and conclude with quaſhing the order of the two juſtices; this court will ſometimes make uſe of the fact appearing on the laſt order to quaſh it, and conſequently affirm the order of the two juſtices.

Then, as to the merits: the wife is not a competent evidence in point of law in this caſe, that is, to prove the whole fact, though it ſeems ſhe may be a competent witneſs to prove the criminal converſation between the defendant and herſelf, by reaſon of the nature of the fact, which is uſually carried on with ſuch ſecrecy, that it will admit of no other evidence; therefore, as to the fact of the defendant's converſation with her, ſhe may be a good witneſs; but this is only from the neceſſity of the thing. But then, in the preſent caſe, it is carried further, for the wife is the only evidence to prove the abſence and want of acceſs of her huſband, whereas this might be made appear by other witneſſes, and therefore the wife ſhall not be admitted to prove it, ſince there is no neceſſity that can juſtify her being an evidence in this caſe.

In the caſe of Pendrell v. Pendrell, Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. there was the ſtrongeſt evidence imaginable to prove the want of acceſs of the huſband, it was made appear by ſeveral of the huſband's relations, who watched him for that purpoſe, that he was in Staffordſhire all the time his wife went with child; and that ſhe reſided in London the whole time.

The wife is therefore not to be admitted an evidence to prove that her huſband had no acceſs to her; and the teſtimony of the other witneſſes, that he reſided about ſeven miles diſtant, ſhews an apparent poſſibility of acceſs.

It muſt be of very dangerous conſequence to lay it down in general, that a wife ſhould be a ſufficient ſole evidence to baſtardize her child, and diſcharge the huſband of the burthen of its maintenance.

But the opinion of the court at preſent will not be a precedent to determine any other caſe wherein there are other ſufficient witneſſes as to the want of acceſs: but the foundation that is now gone on is, the wife's being ſole witneſs.

Page, Juſtice. This is ſomething ſimilar to the caſes of hue and cry, where by ſtatute in an action againſt the hundred, the perſon robbed is admitted an evidence from the neceſſity of the thing, as to thoſe matters which generally can be proved by none but himſelf, as the particular ſum of which he is robbed, and in what place; but of all other things, which may poſſibly be proved as well by other evidence, he is no witneſs in law, nor does the ſtatute extend to it, as whether the place is within the hundred, &c.

Probyn, Juſtice. In caſes of violence committed by the huſband againſt the wife, ſhe herſelf is admitted an evidence, as in the caſe of Lord Audley, and in caſes of exhibiting articles of the peace, from the neceſſity of the thing, ſince it may be done at a time when no one elſe can prove or know it.

Lee, Juſtice. In the caſe in Salk. where a child born in lawful wedlock was proved to be a baſtard, no ſuch exception was taken as in the preſent caſe, but the defendant merely inſiſted on the old notion of the huſband's being within the four ſeas.

On ſtat. 3 H. 7. c. 2. in the caſe of Ramſay for forcibly taking away a woman, and marrying her; the wife was admitted an evidence, becauſe none elſe, except the defendant, was preſent; and therefore, it is very proper to admit this woman to prove what was done in ſecret, and what it cannot be preſumed there are other witneſſes to prove; but then, it muſt be admitted, no farther than neceſſity warrants; and in all other caſes, the rule of law is to be adhered to.

But he doubted, as to the order of ſeſſions being good in form; for the words of 18 Eliz. ſeem to confine that to the next ſeſſions; and if they then and there do nothing, then the act of the two juſtices is to ſtand.

At length, the court ordered it to ſtand over as to this ſingle point, of which Mr. Juſtice Lee doubted; but that all the reſt were fully determined. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 79.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. The King v. Jenkin or Jenkins.

An order made by two juſtices, ſetting forth that the defendant had been charged with being the father of a baſtard child, and that on examination into the matter they were of opinion he was not ſo, and do therefore adjudge that he be acquitted thereof, being removed hither.

The court were of opinion, that the juſtices had gone too far; for their whole authority is under ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. whereby they are only impowered to take order for the relief of the pariſh, and the puniſhment of the offender; but have no power to acquit the party, or convict him finally: which appears likewiſe from their proceedings being always in Engliſh, where they are not required to ſet out the evidence, or ſhew a ſummons. The ſeſſions indeed on ſtat. 3 Car. 1. cap. 4. § 15. may make a final order, and after a man is diſcharged by one ſeſſions, a ſubſequent ſeſſions cannot take it up again, as was held Mich. 13 Geo. 1. The King v. Tenant. And it would be greatly inconvenient, that the juſtices ſhould have ſuch a power; becauſe the pariſh cannot appeal: the defendant indeed may, not by virtue of the expreſs words, but in conſequence of the clauſe about giving ſecurity to abide the order of ſeſſions, if the party does not ſubmit to the order of the two juſtices. And tho' a man may thereby be liable to be harraſſed in being carried before ſeveral juſtices, that is a leſs evil than the other: this court being always open for redreſs, if any thing ſhould be done to the manifeſt oppreſſion of the party. The order was quaſhed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1050. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 302.

An order was made on one M. as the putative father of two baſtards born of the body of E. the wife of R. S. in which it is ſet forth, that for ſeven years before the huſband had no acceſs to her, ſhe having never ſeen or heard from him during all that time, and not knowing whether he was alive or dead, which the juſtices adjudge to be true, and that M. is the father of the ſaid two baſtards, and order him to provide for them accordingly.

On appeal to the ſeſſions, the caſe was ſtated with ſome variation, viz. That in 1728. E. was married to R. S. then a ſoldier in Mullins's troop, in a barn, by a perſon not in the habit of a clergyman: that there had been no acceſs for ſeven years: but it appearing by a certificate from the commiſſary general's office, dated 7th of April 1737, and from the evidence of one S. C. that one R. S. who he was told was formerly in Mullins's troop, was muſtered as a private gentleman in the third troop of horſe guards, from the 25th of June, 1733, to the 23d of Feb. 1736, though C. ſaid he could not take on him to ſwear that it was the ſame R. S. pretended to be married as aforeſaid: on this ſuppoſition of the huſband's being alive, the ſeſſions were of opinion the children were not baſtards, and reverſed the order made by the two juſtices.

And now on debate the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices confirmed: for it being ſtated in both orders, that there was no acceſs, according to the caſe of Pendrel v Pendrel. Hil. 5 Geo. 2. it was immaterial whether the huſband was alive or not, but if it was material, here is no evidence to prove it, the identity not being ſworn to; or if it was ſworn to, yet the evidence of his being alive was improper to have been received, and even the marriage itſelf doubtful. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1076.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices for the removal of a baſtard child of a certificate woman, which had been confirmed by the ſeſſions.

The queſtion was, whom the pariſh have a right to remove as children under ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30.

Lee, Chief Juſtice. I know of no caſe that conſiders baſtards as the children of any one. I think the act cannot be conſtrued into ſuch a meaning, and that the preſent removal cannot be maintained, which ſends the baſtard away from the place where born, under the notion of being the child of a certificate perſon.

Chapple, Wright, and Deniſon, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute to quaſh both orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 187.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices made to remove J. G. his wife and children, in which order the wife was ſtated to be pregnant with a baſtard child, and the certificate expreſsly undertakes to provide for her and her child.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, and Wright Juſtice, agreed that they muſt take the child referred to by the certificate to be a legitimate child then in being.

Foſter, Juſtice, obſerved (which the other two Juſtices agreed to) that it did not appear that the pariſh which gave the certificate knew that the woman was then with child; and he added that there were many inſtances where women were near their time, without being known to be ſo.

Bills of Exchange, and Promiſſory Notes.

3 W. & M. Clark v. Mundal.

A. having a bill of Exchange payable to him, and he being indebted to B. in a ſum of money, indorſes this bill to B. Afterwards B. brought an action of aſſumpſit againſt A. for the money, to which the defendant pleads non aſſumpſit. A. gave in evidence this bill of exchange indorſed, and that it had lain ſo long in B.'s hands after it was payable, and reckoned it as money paid and in his hands; but not allowed; for a bill ſhall never go in diſcharge of a precedent debt, except it be part of the contract that it ſhould be ſo. For example, if A. ſells goods to B. and B. is to give a bill in ſatisfaction, B. is diſcharged though the bill is never paid, for the bill is payment; for otherwiſe a bill would never diſcharge a precedent debt or contract: but if part be received, it ſhall be only a diſcharge of the old debt for ſo much. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 117.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Hodges v. Steward.

In an action on the caſe on a Bill of Exchange, the plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of London, that where one merchant draws a bill on himſelf, payable to another, or bearer, and the perſon, to whom it is payable, indorſes it to a third man, the indorſee, on refuſal of payment, may bring an action againſt the drawer; and ſaid, the defendant drew ſuch a bill to F. who aſſigned it to the plaintiff, from whence has accrued, &c.

Per curiam, There is a difference between a bill payable to J. S. or bearer, and a bill to J. S. or order; there is no authority given to aſſign by the one, by the other there is. 2dly. This is a good bill between the indorſor and indorſee, for the indorſement is in nature of a new bill. 3dly. Though there is no averment of the defendant's being a merchant at the time of drawing the bill, yet the drawing the bill was a ſufficient trading and negotiation to this purpoſe; and Holt, Chief Juſtice, cited Sarsfield v. Witherley's caſe; where, in an action againſt Witherley, on a bill of exchange, he pleaded no trader, but a gentleman ſent into France to travel, and for the conveniency of a remittance, drew this bill, &c. and judgment for the defendant in this court; but it was reverſed in the Exchequer Chamber, becauſe his drawing a bill made him a trader within the cuſtom of merchants, as to a bill of exchange. 4thly. The plaintiff having declared on a ſpecial cuſtom for a bearer to have an action, and the defendant having demurred, inſtead of traverſing it, though in truth there is no ſuch cuſtom, has confeſſed it; and ſo judgment for the plaintiff. For though the court will take notice of the law of merchants, and if an action had been brought on it, that demurrer would not have concluded the court to give judgment for the plaintiff, or have forced them to determine a thing otherwiſe than the law directs; yet they cannot take notice of the cuſtoms of particular places; and the cuſtom in the declaration being ſufficient to maintain the action, the defendant, by confeſſing it by demurrer, has given judgment againſt himſelf. 5thly. A general indeb. aſſumpt. will lie on a bill of exchange for want of conſideration; the bill is but an evidence of a promiſe, and ſo only a void agreement, and therefore he ought to bring a ſpecial action on the caſe, on the bill and cuſtom of merchants, or elſe a general indeb. for money received to his uſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 36. Raym. vol. 1. p. 181.

5 W. 3. Williams v. Field.

Adjudged, that where a bill is drawn payable to W. R. or order, and he indorſes it to B. who indorſes it to C. and he indorſes it to D. the laſt indorſee may bring an action againſt any of the indorſors, becauſe every indorſement is a new credit, and implies a warranty by the indorſor, that the money ſhall be paid. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 68.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. Pearſon v. Garrett.

See page 20 of this work, under the head Actions.

The cuſtom with regard to foreign bills of exchange is, that three days are allowed for payment of them; and if they are not paid on the laſt of the three days, the party ought immediately to proteſt the bill, and return it, and by this means the drawer will be charged: but if he does not proteſt it the laſt of the three days, which are called the days of grace; there, although he on whom the bill is drawn fails, the drawer will not be chargeable, for it ſhall be reckoned the holder's folly that he did not proteſt, &c. But if it happens that the laſt day of the ſaid three days is a Sunday, or a great holiday, as Chriſtmas day, &c. on which no money is uſually paid, there the party ought to demand the money on the ſecond day; and if it is not paid, he ought to proteſt the bill the ſaid ſecond day; otherwiſe it will be at his own peril, for the drawer will not be chargeable. The evidence in this cauſe being merchants, ſwore the cuſtom of merchants to be ſuch, which was approved by Holt, Chief Juſtice. 2dly. There is no cuſtom for the proteſt of inland bills of exchange, nor any certain time aſſigned by the cuſtom for the payment of them; therefore the money ought to be demanded in a reaſonable time after it is payable; and then, if it is not paid, the drawer will be charged. Stat. 9 W. 3. c. 17. 3dly. If the indorſee of a bill accepts but twopence from the acceptor, he can never after reſort to the drawer. 4thly. The notes of goldſmiths (whether they are payable to order or to bearer) are always accounted among merchants as ready caſh, and not as bills of exchange. 5thly. The time of receiving money on a goldſmith's note is immediately, or elſe it will be at the peril of him who has the note. He who delivers over the note will not be charged, if the goldſmith fails, as the drawer of a bill of exchange would be; but the receiver is ſuppoſed to give credit to the goldſmith, and the note is looked on as ready money, payable immediately; and if he does not like it, he ought to refuſe it; but having accepted it, it is at his peril. But note, if the party to whom the note is delivered demands the money of the goldſmith in a reaſonable time, and he will not pay it, it will charge him who gave the note. Hopkins v. Geary, Hilary, 1 Ann, in this court. 6thly. A goldſmith's note indorſed is a bill of exchange againſt the indorſor. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 743.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Hackſhaw v. Clerke.

An action on the caſe was brought on a bill of exchange; to which the defendant pleaded, that after the acceptance of the bill, he gave a bond in diſcharge thereof; and on demurrer to the plea, it was objected, that this amounted to the general iſſue, for the debt on the bill being extinguiſhed by the bond, the defendant ought to have pleaded non aſſumpſit, and to have given the bond in evidence; and the court ſeemed of that opinion; but by conſent, the defendant was permitted to plead the general iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 314.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Yeoman v. Bradſhaw.

Per curiam. A bill of exchange is only a ſimple contract debt, and aſſets only where the debtor lives, and therefore adminiſtration is to be granted where the perſon who pays it reſides. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 107.

Hilary, 8 & 9 W. 3. Soper v. Dible.

On an aſſumpſit brought on a bill of exchange; the plaintiff declared, that according to the cuſtom and uſage of merchants, the acceptor is bound to pay, &c. without ſhewing the cuſtom at large. On demurrer, it was adjudged for the plaintiff.

Per curiam. It is a better way than to ſhew the whole at large. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 175.

Hilary, 8 & 9 W. 3. Pinkney v. Hall.

In an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared, that whereas within this kingdom of England, there is, and time whereof, &c. has been a cuſtom, that if two merchants are partners, jointly merchandizing together, and one of them ſubſcribes a bill for the payment of money by him and his partner mentioned therein, to another, or his order, that then both the partners are bound by the ſubſcription of that ſingle perſon; and that if the perſon to whom this bill is payable, indorſes it payable to any other perſon, that then thoſe partners ought to pay ſuch bill on notice to him to whom it was made payable; then the plaintiff ſhewed that J. S. and the defendant Hall were partners, jointly merchandizing; and that J. S. ſubſcribed a bill of 100 l. payable to Hall or his order, by himſelf and his partner, and that Hall indorſed the bill aforeſaid, payable to the plaintiff, that the defendant had notice thereof, and on demand did not pay, &c. The defendant demurred.

Firſt exception. That the declaration being by the cuſtom of England, &c. was ill, becauſe the cuſtom of England is the law of England, of which the judges ought to take proper notice without pleading. But not allowed: For though heretofore this has been allowed, yet, of late time, it has always been overruled; and in an action againſt a carrier, it is always laid on the cuſtom of England, &c.

Second exception. Though the law of merchants is part of the law of England, yet it is but a particular cuſtom among merchants; and therefore it ought to be ſhewn in London, or in ſome other particular place. But not allowed: for the cuſtom is not reſtrained to any particular place. And in Hardr. 485. it is laid as here.

Third exception. It is not ſaid, that the ſaid J. S. promiſed for the defendant and himſelf on the account of trade, and it may be, that it was for rent, or ſome other thing, for which the partner is not liable. But not allowed: for the plaintiff having declared ſo ſpecially on the cuſtom, it ſhall be intended this was for merchandizing, eſpecially ſince the defendant has demurred generally; and if the caſe had been otherwiſe, the defendant might have pleaded it.

Fourth exception. That the declaration is, that Hall indorſed the bill aforeſaid, payable to the plaintiff, which is nonſenſe, for it ought to be, that he indorſed the bill, that the defendant ſhould pay, &c. But not allowed. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 175.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Woolvil v. Young.

The plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of England, to wit, that if any perſon ſigns a bill to pay money at a day, that by cuſtom he ought to pay it on that day; and then ſets forth, that the defendants were reſident and negotiating within this kingdom of England, and that they had ſigned ſuch a bill, but did not pay the money; on demurrer to the declaration, it was held ill, for this way of declaring ſo generally will exclude all conſiderations which muſt be averred.

Every man is negotiating in the kingdom, and if the plaintiff would have brought this caſe within the cuſtom of merchants, he ought to have ſaid having commerce, or have ſhewed, that the bill ſigned was a bill of exchange.

It is true, in the caſe of Sarsfield v. Witherley, the declaration was, that the defendant Witherley was reſident in, and negotiating at London, &c. without ſaying, having commerce, but it appeared on the whole frame of the declaration, that it was a bill of exchange. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 367.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Clerk v. Pigot, before Holt, Chief Juſtice. At Guildhall.

In an aſſumpſit, on a bill of exchange, the caſe was: D. drew a bill of exchange at Briſtol, on Pigot in London, payable to Clerk, or order, at twenty-eight days ſight. Clerk living at Briſtol, ſends the bill with one K. to London, and his name indorſed thereon, but a blank ſpace over his name; K. preſented it to Pigot, who accepted it, and for non-payment Clerk brought this action; it was alledged, the action ſhould have been brought by K. becauſe by Clerk's indorſing his name, the property was transferred from him to K. But the Chief Juſtice held, that there being a blank ſpace left over the name of Clerk, as is uſual in bills of exchange, it was at the election of K. either to make uſe of it as his ſervant, or order; if he had filled up the blank ſpace, and made it payable to him, as he might have done if he would, then the property of the bill had been transferred to him, and he only could have maintained this action againſt the acceptor; but ſeeing he has not filled up the blank ſpace, he thereby declares his intention to act only as a ſervant of Clerk's, whoſe name was put there, that, on payment thereof, a receipt might be wrote for the money over his name; otherwiſe this action would not be maintainable by Clerk. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 192.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hawkins v. Gardner.

In an action on the caſe on a bill of exchange; whereby the defendant promiſed to pay to R. A. or order 460 l. who indorſed 44 l. thereof to the plaintiff, who as indorſee brought this action for the ſaid 44 l. part of the ſaid 460 l. The defendant pleaded an inſufficient plea, and the plaintiff demurred; and it was held, that this perſonal contract is intire, and cannot be apportioned and multiplied into ſeveral accounts: ſo that if A. draws a bill of 100 l. payable to B. or order; B. cannot aſſign 50 l. thereof, ſo as his aſſignee ſhall have an action for the ſame; and if B. himſelf brings an action for part, he muſt acknowledge ſatisfaction for the reſidue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 213.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hawkins v. Cardy.

The plaintiff brought an action on the caſe on a bill of exchange againſt the defendant, and declared on the cuſtom of merchants, which he ſhewed to be, that if any merchant ſubſcribes a bill, by which he promiſes to pay a ſum of money to another man or his order, and afterwards the perſon to whom the bill was made payable, indorſes the ſaid bill, for the payment of the whole ſum therein contained, or any part thereof, to another man, the firſt drawer is obliged to pay the ſum ſo indorſed, to the perſon to whom it is indorſed payable; and then the plaintiff ſhewed, that the defendant Cardy, being a merchant, ſubſcribed a bill of 46 l. 19 s. to B. or his order; that B. indorſed 43 l. 4 s. of it payable to the plaintiff, &c. the defendant pleaded an inſufficient plea. On demurrer, the declaration was adjudged ill. For a man cannot apportion ſuch a perſonal contract, for he cannot make a man liable to two actions, when by the contract he is liable but to one. But if in the principal caſe the plaintiff had acknowledged the receipt of the 43 l. 4 s. the declaration had been good. And though it was objected that the plaintiff has made payment of a part to be part of the cuſtom, and therefore it was well enough by the cuſtom,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, anſwered, this is not a particular local cuſtom, but the common cuſtom of merchants, of which the law takes notice, and therefore the court cannot take the cuſtom to be ſo; and the court were unanimouſly of opinion, that judgment ought to be entered for the defendant: but on the importunity of the plaintiff's council, he was permitted to diſcontinue on payment of coſts. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 360.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. The Governor and Company of the Bank of England v. Newman.

B. gave a bill of exchange, payable to N. or bearer; N. negotiated it with the bank, at the uſual rate of intereſt; after this the bank received 100 l. of B. and after that demanded the money due on the bill of a ſervant of B. who did not pay it; and after B. failed, the bank brought an aſſumpſit againſt N. for the money; and on the general iſſue a verdict was given for the plaintiff, but a new trial was granted, the verdict being againſt law; for whatſoever may be the practice among bankers, the law is, that if a bill or note be payable to a perſon or bearer, and he negotiates the bill, and delivers it for ready money paid to him, without any indorſement on the bill, this is a plain buying of the bill; as of tallies, bank-bills, &c. but if it is indorſed, there is a remedy againſt the indorſor.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man gives ſuch a bill for money not due before, without indorſement, it is a ſale of the bill; and a demand of a ſervant of the drawer, who uſed to pay money for him, is a good demand. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 241.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

A bank bill payable to A. or bearer, being given to A. and loſt, was found by a ſtranger, who transferred it to C. for a valuable conſideration; C. got a new bill made out in his own name.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, A. may have an action of trover againſt the ſtranger who found the bill, for he had no title, though the payment to him would have indemnified the bank; but A. cannot maintain trover againſt C. by reaſon of the courſe of trade, which creates a property in the aſſignee or bearer. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 126.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

A bill of exchange being made payable to A. or order, if A. indorſes it to B. B. cannot ſue A. unleſs he firſt endeavours to find out the firſt drawer to demand it of him; for the indorſor is only a warranter for the payment of the drawer, and therefore liable only on his default; and ſuch endeavour to find the drawer muſt be ſhewn in evidence. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 126.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Jackſon v. Pigot.

On an aſſumpſit on a bill of exchange brought againſt the acceptor; wherein the plaintiff declares, that one D. of Briſtol, on the 25th of March, 1696, drew a bill of exchange on the defendant, payable to the plaintiff within a month; that on the 16th day of May, 1697, the defendant accepted the bill, and promiſed to pay according to the tenor and effect of the bill: on non-aſſumpſit pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the aſſumpſit was impoſſible, becauſe made a year after the time the bill became due. But judgment was given for the plaintiff, for it appearing on the declaration, that the acceptance of the bill was after the day of payment, the according to the tenor and effect, muſt be underſtood to pay the bill preſently; but if it had appeared on the declaration, that the acceptance was before the day of payment by the bill, there, on the evidence, an acceptance after would not have maintained the action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 211.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hart v. King.

A bill of exchange being proteſted, and loſt, an action was brought againſt the drawer; and it was proved, that the defendant owned that he had drawn the bill and it was held good.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. This being a foreign bill, the drawer is made liable by the proteſt, but no proteſt is neceſſary is the caſe of an inland bill: and to make the bill payable to a perſon's order, is the ſame as if it was to him or order; and if the defendant can make it appear, that he is at any damage for want of notice of the proteſt, as if the drawee has failed in the mean time, &c. it would be incumbent on the plaintiff to prove, that notice was given of the proteſt in convenient time. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 309.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Starke, or Starkey v. Cheeſeman.

In an action on the caſe brought on a bill of exchange, the plaintiff declared thereon, and that he offered it to the perſon on whom it was drawn, and he refuſed to pay it, whereby the firſt drawer became chargeable by the cuſtom, &c. there was an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and a quantum meruit, in the declaration, judgment went by default, and on the writ of enquiry intire damages were given. And now it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that as the matter ſtood on the firſt count, this action was founded on a deceit, the bill not being paid according to the warranty, every one who draws a bill, warranting the payment of it; and therefore being in the nature of an action for deceit, which is a tort, it cannot be joined with an aſſumpſit, which is founded on a contract; and therefore for want of laying an expreſs promiſe it was ill, intire damages being given. The plaintiff's council argued, that the action was founded on the cuſtom, and that the obligation aroſe by that, and therefore the action is maintainable without ſhewing a promiſe. Cro. Car. 302. A declaration on a bill of exchange without ſhewing any promiſe, and the roll is ſo. 2dly, This holds in all contracts, for the cuſtom raiſes a promiſe in law, that the drawer will pay the money, if the perſon on whom it is drawn, refuſes to pay it. And 2 Cro. 307. ſays, that if a merchant accepts a bill, it has by cuſtom the force of a promiſe to compel him to pay the money.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, at the beginning ſeemed to agree with the objection, and ſaid, he who draws the bill, warrants the payment of it, and if he does not, it is a deceit, and an action may be had on it; but then they ought not to join it with an action on a promiſe. This is the reaſon of the caſe of Sir John Dalſton v. Janſon, Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. in this court. In the time of 2 Cro. this way of declaring on bills of exchange was not the practice.

Gould, Juſtice, cited 1 Sid. 366, that if a man brings aſſumpſit for arrears of an account, where the action formed is debt; he ought to lay an expreſs promiſe to maintain the action.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the notion of promiſes in law was a metaphyſical notion, for the law makes no promiſe, but where there is a promiſe of the party. And afterwards in this term judgment was given for the plaintiff, becauſe the drawing of the bill was an actual promiſe. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 538.

Eaſter, 11 W. 3. Lambert v. Pack or Oakes.

In an action on the caſe brought on a bill of exchange againſt the indorſor; it was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, 1ſt, That there is no need to prove the drawer's hand, becauſe, though it be a forged bill, the indorſor is bound to pay it. 2dly, The plaintiff muſt prove that he demanded it of the drawer, or of the perſon on whom it was drawn, and that he refuſed to pay it, or elſe that he ſought him and could not find him; 3dly, That this was done in convenient time; for if they ſtand and are reſponſable a convenient time after the aſſignment, and no demand made, the indorſee ſhall not charge the indorſor. The time for foreign bills is three days, and no allowance is to be made for Sundays or Holidays. The caſe of one Tracy was cited which remained a week after the indorſement, and the indorſee loſt his money; which Holt, C. J. thought was too ſtrait; but ſuch matters muſt be left to the jury. 4thly, It is a queſtion whether notice muſt be given, or not; but it is the faireſt way to give notice. 5thly, That the demand muſt be proved ſubſequent to the indorſement; for if it was precedent, he could only act as ſervant to the indorſor; and ſo the demand was inſufficient to charge the indorſor. 6thly, If a man indorſes his name on the back of a blank bill, he puts it in the power of the indorſee to make what uſe of it he will, and he may uſe it as an acquittance to diſcharge the bill, or as an aſſignment to charge the indorſor. 7thly, In caſes of bills purchaſed at a diſcount, there is this diſtinction; if it be a bill payable to A. or bearer, it is an abſolute purchaſe; but if to A. or order, and it is indorſed in blank, and filled up with an aſſignment, the indorſor muſt warrant it as much as if there had been no diſcount. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 127. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 244.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought on a bill of exchange, by D. F. it appeared on the declaration, that there were ſeveral indorſements, and the action was brought by the firſt indorſor, who ſtruck off the ſeveral indorſements, and brought an action for non-payment; the bill ſpecified value received of the plaintiff.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the action had been on the cuſtom, in this caſe the way had been, for the plaintiff to have got the laſt indorſee to indorſe it with him, for him to bring the action as indorſee, but this action will lie, for the bill was given as a ſecurity for money, and, without doubt, it was debt.

And here the plaintiff, to ſhew a proteſt, produced an inſtrument, atteſted by a notary public; and tho' it was inſiſted on, that he ſhould prove this inſtrument, or at leaſt give ſome account how he came by it,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, it is not neceſſary, for that would deſtroy commerce and public tranſactions of this nature. A bill of exchange may be accepted on parol, though the uſual way is to do it by writing; and if a bill is drawn on two, and one of them accepts it, it is an acceptance of both.

Then it was urged, that the declaration ſhews a proteſt for want of payment, when it was in truth for want of acceptance, as appeared by the proteſt; yet it was ruled to be well; becauſe this was not on the cuſtom, but a plain debt; and debt might be brought on indebitatus aſſumpſit, or on a bill of exchange, becauſe it is in the nature of a ſecurity.

The original drawer was offered as an evidence in an action brought on a bill of exchange, to prove that he did not draw the bill, but was denied, becauſe at laſt the burthen muſt fall on him; but the party giving him a releaſe in court, that was deemed ſufficient. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 345.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. ——— v. Harriſon.

A ſervant had power to draw bills of exchange in his maſter's name, and after was turned out of the ſervice.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If he draws a bill in ſo little a time after, that the world cannot take notice of his being out of ſervice; or if he was a long time out of his ſervice, but that kept ſo ſecret, that the world cannot take notice of it, the bill in thoſe caſes ſhall bind the maſter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 346.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Jordan v. Barloe.

Adjudged, that where a bill is drawn payable to W. R. or order, it is within the cuſtom of merchants, and ſuch a bill may be negotiated and aſſigned by cuſtom, and the contract of the parties, and an action may be grounded on it, though it is no ſpecialty; but if it is made payable to W. R. or bearer, it is not within the cuſtom of merchants, and therefore, when, upon ſuch a bill, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant being a merchant, had drawn a bill according to the cuſtom of merchants, but had not paid the money; this declaration was held ill; as was reſolved in the caſe of Hodges v. Steward. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 68.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Carter v. Palmer.

Palmer had given a note of hand in this form: I promiſe to pay the bearer ſo much money on demand. The plaintiff brings his action, grounded on the cuſtom of merchants, as if it was a bill of exchange, and avers no conſideration. After a verdict, on a motion in arreſt of judgment, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, we will take ſuch a note on firſt view as evidence of money lent, and though they have declared on the cuſtom of merchants, yet we muſt take care that by ſuch a ſtep the law of England is not changed by making all notes bills of exchange. But all ſeemed to agree, if it was made payable to him, or order, the defendant by that form had made it negotiable, and by conſequence he would be liable to the action of the aſſignee in his own name; for if a man who is no merchant will draw a bill of exchange, he is ſuable on it according to the cuſtom of merchants, for he makes himſelf a merchant for ſo much. 2 Vent. 295. And inland bills were not known till trade grew to a great height; and when they came in uſe, they received the ſame law with foreign bills; and he ſaid, he remembered at a trial on an inland bill being before Hale, the defendant's council would put the plaintiff to prove the cuſtom; but Hale ſaid, they had a hopeful point of it. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 380.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Mitford v. Walcot.

A. draws a bill of exchange at Madrid in Spain on B. at Amſterſtam, payable at two uſances. B. after the two uſances, viz. on the 4th day, which was the laſt day of grace, accepts the bill at London; and for non-payment, an action is brought againſt him; and the declaration ſtated the days of drawing and acceptance, by which this fact appeared.

Per curiam. 1ſt. An acceptance is an actual promiſe to pay: the doubt then was on the variances of the days of grace at Amſterdam and in England, for there they have eight, and only four here; and that as it was urged by the cuſtom of merchants, an acceptance at Amſterdam after the time of payment was void, and that the days of grace are no part of the uſance; and the acceptance here being to pay according to the tenor of the bill aforeſaid; it muſt be underſtood the ſame as if it was at Amſterdam, for there it was directed and payable. But it was agreed here, that an acceptance or negotiation in England, after a bill becomes payable, ſhall bind the acceptor or indorſor, though not perhaps the original drawer. And for this was quoted Pigot v. Jackſon's caſe in this court, Hilary, 9 W. 3. though it was an acceptance to pay according to the tenor of the bill aforeſaid, as here. 2dly. It was reſolved an uſance is a month conſiſting of 28 days. 3dly. If a bill is accepted at Amſterdam, and no houſe named where the payment is to be, the party need not acquieſce to it, but may proteſt the bill; but if he acquieſces; it is well enough. 4thly. If A. draws a bill on B. and C. offers to accept it for the honour of the drawer, the drawee need not acquieſce, but may proteſt; but if he does acquieſce, C. is bound. 5thly. If a bill is drawn on a perſon at Amſterdam, and he does not care to accept it, but gets a perſon here to do it, the party need not acquieſce; but if he does, the party here is bound. The plaintiff had judgment niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 410.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Lord v. Francis.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man contracts for goods, and after carrying them away gives the ſeller a goldſmith's note for the money, it does not amount to a payment; but if it was given at the very time of the contract, it would be at firſt ſight evidence that it was taken in payment. And if a man, on a contract made before, take ſuch a bill, and keeps it till the party on whom it was drawn becomes inſolvent, in an action brought by him againſt the buyer on that bill, he ſhall be barred; but he ſhall recover the debt on the original contract. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. 408.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Mendez v. Carreroon.

In an action on the caſe on a bill of exchange, on the evidence at the trial at Guildhall, the caſe was thus: A. drew a bill of exchange on B. payable to C. at Paris; B. accepted the bill, C. indorſed it, payable to D. D. to E. E. to F. and F. to G. G. demanded the bill to be paid by B. and on non-payment, G. proteſted within the time, &c. and then G. brought an action againſt D. and it was well brought, and he recovered. Afterwards D. brought an action againſt B. and tho' D. produced the bill and the proteſt, yet, becauſe he could not produce a receipt for the money paid by him to G. on the proteſt, as the cuſtom is among merchants, as ſeveral merchants on their oaths affirmed, he was non-ſuited: but Holt ſeemed to be of opinion, that if he had proved payment by him to G. it had been well enough. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 742.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Spurraway v. Rogers, at niſi prius, before Holt, Chief Juſtice.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If A. purchaſes goods of B. and gives him a goldſmith's bill in payment, which the vendee accepts without exception; if the goldſmith was worth nothing, and A. did not know it, it is a good payment; otherwiſe, if A. knew him to be in a failing condition. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 517.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Ward v. Sir Peter Evans.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If A. owes B. money, and he gives him a goldſmith's note in payment, the debt is not diſcharged till B. receives the money, if it was not his fault that it was not paid, or if he does not, at the receipt of the note, give an acquittance for the debt to A. but if B. had an election to receive the money, or a goldſmith's note, and he choſe the note, it may be otherwiſe; and more eſpecially if he gives up his former ſecurity that he had for the original debt.

If A. and B. be two goldſmiths, and B. gives a note to C. for 100*l.* A. gets poſſeſſion of it, and brings it to B. and takes a new note for it, giving up his former, it is no payment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 521.

If a man has a bill of exchange, he may authorize another to indorſe his name on it by parol; and when that is done, it is the ſame as if he had done it himſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 564.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Potter v. Pearſon.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment from the C. B. on a note of hand; the plaintiff declared, that there was a cuſtom within the city of London among merchants trading there, that if a merchant ſigned a note, promiſing to pay to J. S. or order, &c. that he became bound by the cuſtom to pay, &c.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The cuſtom to oblige one to pay a note without conſideration is void and againſt law. The judgment was accordingly reverſed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 129. Raym. vol. 2. p. 759.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Clerke v. Martin.

In an action on the caſe brought againſt the defendant, the plaintiff declared on ſeveral promiſes, as follows: one count was on a general indebitatus aſſumpſit, for money lent to the defendant; another count was on the cuſtom of merchants, as alſo on a bill of exchange; and ſhewed that the defendant gave a note, ſubſcribed by himſelf, by which he promiſed to pay —— to the plaintiff, or his order, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, with intire damages. And it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this note was not a bill of exchange within the cuſtom of merchants, and therefore the plaintiff having declared on it as ſuch, the declaration was ill, but that the proper way in ſuch caſes is, to declare on a general indebitatus aſſumpſit for money lent, and the note would be a good evidence of it. But it was argued for the plaintiff, that this note being payable to the plaintiff or his order, was a bill of exchange; inaſmuch as by its nature it was negotiable, and that diſtinguiſhes it from a note payable to J. S. or bearer, which is not a bill of exchange, becauſe it is not aſſignable or indorſable by the intent of the ſubſcriber, and conſequently not negotiable, and therefore it cannot be a bill of exchange, becauſe it is incident to the nature of a bill of exchange to be negotiable: but here this bill is negotiable, for if it had been indorſed, payable to J. N. J. N. might have brought his action on it as on a bill of exchange, and might have declared on the cuſtom of merchants. Why then ſhould it not be before ſuch indorſement a bill of exchange to the plaintiff himſelf; ſince the defendant by his ſubſcription has ſhewn his intent to be liable to the payment of this money to the plaintiff or his order; eſpcially ſince he has thereby agreed, that it ſhall be aſſignable over, which is by conſequence that it ſhall be a bill of exchange. There is no difference in reaſon between a note which ſays, "I promiſe to pay to J. S. or order, &c." and a note which ſays, "I pray you to pay to J. S. or order, &c." they are both equally negotiable; and to make ſuch note a bill of exchange, can be no wrong to the defendant, becauſe he, by ſigning the note, has made himſelf to that purpoſe a merchant, 2 Vent. 292. Sarsfield v. Witherly, and has given his conſent that his note ſhall be negotiated, and thereby has ſubjected himſelf to the law of merchants. But Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, this note could not be a bill of exchange: that the maintaining theſe actions on ſuch notes were innovations on the rules of common law; and that it amounted to the ſetting up a new ſort of ſpecialty unknown to the common law, and invented in Lombard-ſtreet, which attempted in theſe matters of bills of exchange to give laws to Weſtminſter-Hall: that the continuing to declare on theſe notes on the cuſtom of merchants proceeded from obſtinacy, ſince he had always expreſſed his opinion againſt them, and ſince there was ſo eaſy a method as to declare on a general indebitatus aſſumpſit for money lent, &c. As to the caſe of Sarsfield v. Witherly, he ſaid, he was not ſatisfied with the judgment, and that he adviſed the bringing of a writ of error.

Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, he did not remember it had ever been adjudged that a note in which the ſubſcriber promiſed to pay, &c. to J. S. or bearer, was not a bill of exchange: that the bearer could not ſue an action on ſuch a note in his own name, is without doubt; and ſo it was reſolved between Horton v. Coggs, 3 Lev. 299. but that it was never reſolved that the party himſelf (to whom ſuch note was payable) could not have an action on the cuſtom of merchants on ſuch a bill: but Holt, Chief Juſtice, anſwered, that it was held in the ſaid caſe of Horton v. Coggs, that ſuch a note was not a bill of exchange within the cuſtom of merchants; and afterwards, in this term it was moved again, and the court continued to be of opinion againſt the action: and then the plaintiff's council urged, that if this note was not a bill of exchange within the cuſtom of merchants, then the promiſe founded on it was void; and then it could not be intended, that any damage was given by the jury for the breach of it, but all the damages muſt be intended to have been given on the general indebitatus aſſumpſit. Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that would be true, if it had been void by reaſon of its being inſenſible; but this matter is ſenſible enough, though not ſufficient to raiſe a promiſe; and therefore it cannot be intended, but that damages were given for it; and conſequently that judgment muſt be arreſted: wherefore judgment was given, that the plaintiff have nothing by the bill, &c. by the opinion of the whole court. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 757.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Eaſt v. Eſſington.

In an action on the caſe brought on a bill of exchange; the plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of merchants, on a bill directed to the defendant in this manner: Pray, Sir, pay this my firſt bill of exchange, the ſecond and third not being paid; and then ſhews, that the bill was indorſed by the drawee to himſelf, in this manner, viz. that the drawee indorſed on that bill, the contents thereof are to be paid to the plaintiff, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict. And on a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was objected, 1ſt. That it is not averred in the declaration, that the ſecond and third bills were not paid, and without ſuch averment the plaintiff is not intitled to have his action; for if the ſecond or third bill was paid, the defendant is not bound to pay this bill; and the non-payment of it is, as it were, a condition precedent, which ought to intitle the plaintiff to this action; and therefore it ought to be averred. But not allowed.

Per curiam. Though this had been ill on a demurrer, yet it is aided by the verdict; for if the ſecond or third bill had been paid, the jury would have found on the non aſſumpſit.

The ſecond exception was, that the indorſement ſhewn in the declaration was not ſuch as would transfer the property of the bill, and therefore the plaintiff was not intitled to his action. But not allowed, for it is aided by the verdict, as want of attornment in debt for rent by the aſſignee of the reverſion, is aided by the verdict: and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 810.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

A bill of exchange was drawn on W. R. for 40 l. payable to C. W. or order, W. R. accepts the ſaid bill, and afterwards C. W. the drawer indorſes part of it to the plaintiff, who brought an action againſt the acceptor. Adjudged, that ſuch action would not lie, becauſe by his accepting the bill, he made himſelf liable only to one action for the whole, and not to ſeveral actions for part of the money. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 70.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Lucas v. Haynes.

In trover for a bill of exchange, the caſe upon evidence was, that the plaintiff had a bill of exchange drawn upon the defendant, and ſent it by J. S. to the defendant to get it accepted; J. S. left it with the defendant, and afterwards the bill being loſt, the plaintiff brought trover for it, and J. S. was now the plaintiff's witneſs for this matter, and becauſe the plaintiff had indorſed the bill, it was objected that J. S. could not be a witneſs; and this point being ſaved, the court were all of opinion, that the bare indorſement, without other words purporting an aſſignment, does not work an alteration of the property; for it may ſtill be filled up, either with a receipt or an aſſignment, and conſequently J. S. is a good witneſs. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 130. Raym. vol. 2. p. 871.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Butler v. Crips.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The words pay to me or my order ſo much, is a bill of exchange, if accepted, and this is the only way to make a bill of exchange without aid of a third perſon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 29.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Brough or Borough v. Perkins.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment by default in C. B. in an action brought againſt the drawer of an inland bill of exchange; it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that ſince ſtat. 9 W. 3. no damages ſhould be recovered againſt the drawer on a bill of exchange, without a proteſt, and therefore the action could not lie, here being none.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. The ſtatute never meant to deſtroy the action for want of a proteſt, but only to deprive the party from recovering intereſt and coſts, on an inland bill againſt the drawer, without notice of non-payment by proteſt; for that before the ſtat. there was this difference between foreign and inland bills of exchange, if the bill was foreign, one could not reſort to the drawer for non-acceptance, or non-payment, without a proteſt, and reaſonable notice thereof; but in caſe of an inland bill there was no occaſion for a proteſt; but if any prejudice happened to the drawer for want of notice of the non-payment, which the perſon to whom the bill is made ought to give, the drawer was not liable; and the word damage in the ſtatute, was meant only of the damages the party is at in being longer out of his money than the tenor of the bill purported, and not of damages for the original debt; and the proteſt was ordered for the benefit of the drawer; for if any damages accrue to the drawer for want of a proteſt, that ſhall be borne by him to whom the bill is made; and if no damages accrue to him, then there is no harm done him; and a proteſt is only made to give formal notice that the bill is not accepted, or accepted and not paid, and if in ſuch caſes the damage amounts to the value of the bill, there ſhall be no recovery, but otherwiſe he ought not to loſe his debt; but that ought to appear either in evidence on non-aſſumpſit, or by ſpecial pleading; and the act is very obſcurely and doubtfully penned, and we ought not by conſtruction on ſuch an act to take away a man's right. The whole court concurred, and the judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 80.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Kent v. ————

Per cur. Intereſt on a bill of exchange commences from the time the demand was made; and therefore if there was no demand made till an action was brought, the defendant may plead tender and refuſal, and ſtill ready, and ſo diſcharge himſelf of intereſt; but if it was the defendant's fault that a demand could not be made, as if he was out of the kingdom, there want of demand ought not to prejudice the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 138.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Buckley v. Campbell.

In this action the plaintiff declared on a bill of exchange drawn at Amſterdam, payable at London at two uſance, and did not ſhew what the two uſance were; therefore judgment was given for the defendant, for the court could not take notice of foreign uſances which vary, being longer in one place than another. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 131.

In an action on the caſe brought for 170 l. 10 s. the plaintiff declared on ſeveral counts, viz. 1ſt, On two bills of exchange againſt the indorſor. 2dly, On a mutuatus. 3dly, On an indebitatus aſſumpſit for money laid out for the uſe of the defendant. To this action the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit: the caſe on evidence appeared to be, that one Moor a goldſmith ſubſcribed two notes payable to the defendant; the defendant on the 19th of October indorſes theſe two notes, and gives them and eight others to one Zouch, to whom he was indebted: Zouch on the 19th of October, betwixt the hours of eleven and twelve, brought theſe notes to the plaintiffs, being goldſmiths, and they accepted them, and gave to Zouch other bills, and ſome money; afterwards on the ſame day, the plaintiffs received money on other bills of the ſaid Moor, and might have had the money due on theſe two bills, if they had been demanded; but in the night following about midnight, Moor became inſolvent, and ran away, and the queſtion was, whether the plaintiffs or indorſor ſhould loſe this 170 l. 10 s.

The firſt queſtion was, whether the acceptance of theſe bills in ſatisfaction for ſo much money, was a good diſcharge of the indorſor?

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that goldſmiths bills were governed by the ſame laws and cuſtoms as other bills of exchange; and every indorſement is a new bill, and ſo long as a bill is negotiating, and ſuch indorſements are made, all and each of the indorſors are liable as a new drawer. That by the law generally, every indorſor is equally liable as the firſt drawer, and cannot be diſcharged without an actual payment, and is not diſcharged by the acceptance of the bill by the indorſee; but by the cuſtom it is reſtrained, viz. The acceptance is intended to be on this agreement, to wit, that the indorſee will receive it of the firſt drawer, if he can, and if he cannot, then that the indorſor will anſwer it; as for example, if the firſt drawer be inſolvent at the time of the indorſement, or on demand refuſes to pay it, or cannot be found. And the indorſor is not diſcharged without actual payment, till there is ſome neglect or default in the indorſee, as if he does not endeavour to receive it in convenient time, and then the firſt drawer becomes inſolvent.

The ſecond point was, what ſhall be thought convenient time to endeavour to receive ſuch a bill?

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. In caſe of foreign bills, he on whom the bill is drawn has three days to pay it, and the indorſee of ſuch foreign bill need not demand payment till the ſaid three days are expired; and if he on whom the bill is drawn becomes inſolvent in the ſaid time, the indorſor is chargeable, and after the three days, the indorſee may proteſt it; and it ſeems the ſame time ought to be allowed for inland bills, though it was urged that for foreign bills a longer time was required, in reſpect the drawee was to receive advice from the drawer.

The Chief Juſtice in his charge to the jury ſaid, that what ſhould be thought convenient time, ought to be according to the uſage among traders in ſuch caſes, and on all the circumſtances. That the plaintiffs had ten bills delivered to them together; and that perhaps they had other affairs that hindered them from going preſently to receive theſe two bills, and that they received two other bills the ſame day. It was left to the jury to conſider, whether the time in this caſe was a convenient time or not; and if the plaintiff had convenient time to receive his money, then to find for the defendant, otherwiſe for the plaintiff. And they on conſideration found for the plaintiff; on which the plaintiff prayed to take the verdict on the indebitatus aſſumpſit.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice, You cannot take the verdict on any part of the declaration, but that to which evidence was given, and here it will be good, if found on the bills of exchange; but if the evidence be applicable to any other part of the declaration, you may take it on any ſuch part to which the evidence is applicable. And becauſe Zouch had ſworn that he received the benefit of, and had been ſatisfied with the bill he took of the plaintiff, by which the defendant was diſcharged againſt Zouch, the verdict was taken on the indebitatus aſſumpſit for money laid out for the defendant's uſe; and it ſeems the indorſement by the defendant to the plaintiff was good evidence of a requeſt to pay the ſaid money to Zouch. An exception was taken that one bill was payable to the defendant only, without the words, or his order, and therefore not aſſignable by the indorſement; the Chief Juſtice agreed, that the indorſement of this bill did not make him that drew the bill chargeable to the indorſee; for the words, or to his order, give authority to the plaintiff to aſſign it by indorſement; and it is an agreement by the firſt drawer that he would anſwer it to the aſſignee: but the indorſement of a bill which has not the words, or to his order, is good, or of the ſame effect betwixt the indorſor and indorſee, to make the indorſor chargeable to the indorſee. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 132.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Walker v. Atwood.

An action was brought on a bill of exchange; the bill was drawn the 8th of April, 1707, on Atwood, to pay 15 l. to Godfrey; the bill being ſhewn to Atwood, he promiſed to pay it the 18th of April, 1707. Afterwards this bill was aſſigned to Walker, who brings this action, and declares on the cuſtom, &c. On a demurrer to the declaration, the defendant's council argued, that the bill being to pay a ſum of money, and no day mentioned when it ſhould be paid, it muſt be paid on ſight; therefore, this promiſe to pay four or five months after, viz. on the 8th of September, is a new agreement, and conſequently the action muſt be founded on the new agreement, and not on the cuſtom of merchants.

Powell, Juſtice. The cuſtom of merchants is by the acceptance, and a promiſe to pay at ſuch a time is good, and he is bound by the cuſtom of merchants, by acceptance, to pay at the time appointed, and therefore the plaintiff has declared well on the cuſtom of merchants; and if it ſhould not bind him on the cuſtom, it would not at all, becauſe no indebitatus aſſumpſit lies on the acceptance. Judgment was given for the plaintiff niſi, by Powell, Powis and Gould. Holt, Chief Juſtice being abſent. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 190.

Trinity, 9 Ann. Harvey v. Perrit.

On an action on a promiſſory note brought againſt the ſecond indorſor, the plaintiff declared without an averment, that the money was demanded of the drawer, or of the firſt indorſor. Adjudged good on a motion in arreſt of judgment, for the indorſor charges himſelf in the ſame manner, as if he had originally drawn the bill. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 133.

Trinity, 10 Ann. Louviere v. Laubray.

At niſi prius in London, the caſe was thus: Louviere uſed to furniſh Laubray with great quantities of ſtockings: Louviere drew a bill on Laubray, payable to ſuch a one; Laubray accepted the bill, but ſome time after refuſed to pay it. On this the bill was indorſed to Louviere, the drawer, who brings an action as indorſee.

The queſtion was, whether the drawer of a bill could maintain an action as indorſee?

Parker, Chief Juſtice. On the evidence given to the court, there were effects of the plaintiff's in the hands of the defendant ſufficient to anſwer the bill; and conſequently the acceptance of the bill was not on the honour of the drawer, the action is therefore well brought: for when a merchant draws a bill on his correſpondent, who accepts it, this is payment; for it makes him debtor to another perſon, who may bring his action: this therefore is ſuch a payment as may be ſet off againſt a former account, and pleaded in bar of ſuchan action: but if there were no effects, then the action would not lie; for it would have been an acceptance on honour only, and the money would be recovered only to be recovered again.

N. B. It was ruled, that intereſt ſhould be paid from the time of the proteſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 37.

Michaelmas, 11 Ann. Nickſon v. Brohan. At niſi prius at Guildhall.

The caſe was; a maſter ſent his ſervant, who was uſed to tranſact affairs of that nature for him, on Saturday morning, with a note drawn on Sir Stephen Evans, with orders to get from Sir Stephen either bank bills, or money, and to turn them into Exchequer notes: but the ſervant having other buſineſs of his maſter's to tranſact, to ſave himſelf the trouble of going to Sir Stephen, goes to B. and prevails on him to give him a bank bill for a note on Sir Stephen; and then inveſted it in Exchequer notes, which he brought to his maſter, not letting him know but that he had gone to Sir Stephen.

Sir Stephen Evans failing on the Monday following, the queſtion was, whether this loſs ſhould light on B. or on the maſter.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, who tried the cauſe, was at firſt of opinion it ſhould fall on B. becauſe the ſervant had acted directly contrary to his maſter's order, and B. by furniſhing the ſervant with a bank bill, did the maſter no ſervice, for if he had not done it, the ſervant muſt in obedience to his maſter's order, have gone and received the money from Sir Stephen; and cited the caſe of Ward v. Evans, where it was reſolved, that if a ſervant ſent to receive money, takes a bill inſtead of it, the maſter is not bound by the act of the ſervant, unleſs the bill is anſwered.

But one of the jury informing him that he took the Practice to be otherwiſe, (for whether a ſervant, who uſed to act on the credit of his maſter, went againſt the orders of his maſter, was a fact that could not be known to a third perſon) he quitted his opinion; but directed the council to move the court, which was accordingly done.

And the court were of opinion, that the verdict was well given, and that the maſter was chargeable, and he only, for a ſervant by tranſacting affairs for his maſter, does thereby derive a general authority, and credit from him, and if this general authority ſhould be liable to be determined for a time, by any particular inſtructions or orders, to which none but the maſter and ſervant were privy, there would be an end of all dealing but with the maſter.

It was alſo agreed, that the property of the note was not transferred and veſted in B. but was only in nature of a depoſit or ſecurity to him, for there was no indorſement; nor could he have ſued on the bill; and though practice cannot alter the law, yet it may explain an agreement.

They were likewiſe of opinion, that the maſter could not recover it of the ſervant, the loſs being occaſioned by a mere accident, and not by either folly or negligence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 109.

Hilary, 1 Geo. ——— v. Ormſton.

In an action brought on a bill of exchange made payable to the order of the plaintiff, the declaration ſet forth, that the defendant by his acceptance became liable to pay it to the plaintiff, according to the cuſtom of merchants. To this declaration the defendant demurred.

It was urged for the defendant, that the plaintiff had only an authority to indorſe the bill, and then the indorſee might maintain an action; but that the plaintiff was not intitled to receive the money. It was compared to the caſe of a deviſe that the executors ſhall ſell land, where the executors have only an authority to ſell, but no intereſt; and therefore immediately on ſale, the vendee is in, not from the executors, but under the will.

On the other ſide it was ſaid, if this was law, a multitude of bills of exchange muſt be overthrown: that by the cuſtom of merchants, there is no difference between payable to the order of ſuch a one; or payable to ſuch a one or order; and that the cuſtom is confeſſed by the demurrer.

Per curiam. Even in the caſe of land, a grant or deviſe of the profits of land, carries the land: order implies property; there is no difference between having a power to diſpoſe of money, and having the money itſelf. What is an order, but an authority to appoint the payment of it, which the plaintiff here does to himſelf: therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 287.

Eaſter, 1 Geo. Joſſelyn or Joſceline v. Lacier or Laſſerre. Error.

On error brought on a judgment recovered in C. B. in an action on the caſe brought againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange, which bill was made to pay 28 l. at 7 l. a month at monthly payments out of the drawer's growing ſubſiſtence, the firſt payment to be made in September following the date of the ſaid draft: it was inſiſted this was no bill of exchange; for if the acceptor receives no pay, then he will not be liable; the court will take notice of the cuſtom of merchants, and it makes no difference whether the action is brought againſt the acceptor or the drawer. Now, it is eſſential to a bill of exchange to be negotiable, which this cannot poſſibly be, becauſe it is to pay on a contingency, viz. out of the growing ſubſiſtence; and 4 Mod. 244. was cited as a caſe in point to prove the above aſſertion, and that the declaration on this, as a bill of exchange, was erroneous.

The council for the defendant in error argued, that even ſuppoſing this not to be a good bill of exchange, there was an expreſs promiſe laid, and a ſufficient conſideration to ſupport it: that the drawing the bill was a requeſt and authority to demand the money, and that the trouble the plaintiff was at in demanding the money, was a good conſideration.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion it is not a bill within the cuſtom of merchants; it concerns neither trade nor credit; it is to be paid out of the growing ſubſiſtence of the drawer; and is not to be paid if he dies, or his ſubſiſtence is taken away.

It may never be paid, and yet the credit of the acceptor unimpeached, and it is neither made payable to order, nor ſaid to be for value received; beſides, it does not appear, whether the party who is to receive it is to receive it on account of a former debt, or as a gratuity.

As to the ſecond point, whether, if the bill by the cuſtom of merchants is not a good bill of exchange, it may not be ſupported by the promiſe? We are unanimouſly of opinion that it cannot. For that matter ſtands thus: by reaſon of which premiſes, &c. and in conſideration thereof, he promiſed to pay, &c. the word thereof plainly refers to the bill as ſupported by the cuſtom, and conſequently if that fails, the conſideration muſt do ſo likewiſe.

The judgment of the C. B. was therefore reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 294, 317. Forteſcue, p. 281.

Hilary, 3 Geo. Andrews v. Franklin.

In an action on the caſe brought on a promiſſory note to pay within two months after a ſhip is paid off, the declaration was on the ſtatute.

It was inſiſted for the defendant, that this is not negotiable, it being on a contingency that may never happen. Jocelyn v. Laſerre, Eaſter, 11 Geo. on a writ of error, was a bill to pay out of the drawer's growing ſubſiſtence, and that was held not to be negotiable as a bill of exchange.

Per curiam. The paying of the ſhip is a thing of a public nature, and this is negotiable as a promiſſory note. The plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 24.

Hilary, 3 Geo. Cole v. Hawkins.

Hilary, 4 Geo. Butler v. Maliſſy.

In an action on the caſe brought on a promiſory note, the declaration ſet forth, that the defendant and another did jointly or ſeverally promiſe to pay, &c. on a demurrer it was inſiſted for the defendant, that the action ſhould have been brought againſt both.

Per Parker, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff might have brought it againſt either or both, for he had his election. If the action had been againſt both, he ſhould have declared as he now does; but that is not right in the action againſt one only. For he ſhould have declared generally, that this defendant by his note promiſed to pay, and a ſeveral note by two, would have been good evidence. And where there are ſeveral obligors, and one only is ſued, no mention is made in the declaration of the other obligors. Suppoſe the note had been to pay 50 l. or 100 l. the plaintiff is intitled to either, but which is uncertain, till he has made his election; for he that ſpeaks in the disjunctive ſays true, if either member of the disjunctive is verified; whereas he that ſpeaks in the affirmative affirms both parts to be true.

The plaintiff had leave to diſcontinue on payment of coſts, but was refuſed to amend. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 76.

Hilary, 6 Geo. Popplewell v. Wilſon. Error.

In an action on the caſe on a promiſory note, entered into by A. to pay ſo much to B. for a debt due from C. to the ſaid B. it was objected, that this note being for value received, was not within the ſtatute; and on firſt ſight, the debt of another is no conſideration to raiſe a promiſe. But the court held it to be within the ſtatute, being an abſolute promiſe, and every way as negotiable as if it had been generally for value received. And the judgment was affirmed. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 264.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Wegersloffe v. Keene.

In an action on the caſe, on the cuſtom of merchants, brought by a perſon to whom a foreign bill of exchange was made payable, againſt the acceptor, the declaration ſet forth, that one J. C. being a merchant, reſiding at Chriſtiana in Norway, according to the cuſtom of merchants, drew his firſt bill of exchange on the defendant, requeſting him to pay the plaintiff ſuch firſt bill (his ſecond not being paid) of 127 l. 18 s. 4 d. which bill was afterwards, viz. on the 9th day of December 1717, ſhewn to the defendant, who accepted to pay 100 l. part thereof on the 8th day of February following, by virtue whereof he became chargeable, and in conſideration thereof the ſame day and year laſt aforeſaid, aſſumed on himſelf to pay the ſame on the ſaid 8th day of February then next following, which he has not done according to his undertaking. There was likewiſe a count for monies had and received, and an inſimul computaſſet. The defendant, as to thoſe two counts, pleads non aſſumpſit; and as to the count on the bill, he pleads that the ſaid J. C. drew another bill for 100 l. only, wherein he countermands the payment of the odd 27 l. 18 s. 4 d. by virtue whereof the defendant paid the 100 l. in ſatisfaction of the firſt bill, and the plaintiff accordingly received it in ſatisfaction. The plaintiff proteſted, that the defendant did not pay it in ſatisfaction; and for plea ſaid, that he never received it in ſatisfaction. And to this replication the defendant demurred.

Powys, Juſtice. Either party might have refuſed this partial acceptance, and they were at the ſame liberty to take it, neither could force the other to it, but if they agree, there is no injury done to a perſon who is willing. The drawer truſts all to the diſcretion of the perſon to whom he gives the bill, and if that perſon leads him into inconveniencies, who can help it.

Eyre, Juſtice. I think the declaration is well enough; we will reject next following, then all is right: there is no difference between the caſe of the drawer and acceptor, for if he pays either of the bills, the drawer is liable. Acceptance of one is ſo of both, though in fact it amounts to no more than an acceptance to pay the contents of one of them, and payment of one is a diſcharge of both: ſo that the averment that the money was not paid on the firſt, goes to the ſecond alſo. I ſearched, but could not find the record of Eaſt v. Eſſington; and by my notes I find it went off immediately on the anſwer, that the verdict had cured it. The precedents are, as this declaration. Vidians Ent. 31, 67.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. I think there is a difference between the caſe of drawer and acceptor, for the drawer is bound to pay all, the drawing being an actual promiſe; but the acceptor is bound to pay but one, and no action can be maintained but on the very note which he accepts. There is another anſwer to the objection, that the action is brought too ſoon; and that is, that the plaintiff need not have ſet out any promiſe at all. 10 W. 3. Starke v. Cheeſeman, Salk. 128. Lowther v. Conyers, which was on a promiſſory note, and they had left out he aſſumed on himſelf, and yet it was held well enough; for the law creates a promiſe. And this is likewiſe an anſwer to the want of requeſt. In Molloy, and the other books, there is a whole paragraph about the partial acceptance of a bill of exchange; and they allow it to be good: ſo judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 214.

Hilary, 7 Geo. Moore v. Warren. Holmes v. Barry.

The defendants in each of theſe actions, at two of the clock in the afternoon, gave the plaintiffs goldſmiths notes in payment, which were tendered the next morning at nine, when the goldſmith had a quarter of an hour before ſtopped payment. The Chief Juſtices directed the juries, that the coſts ſhould fall on the defendants, there being no laches in the plaintiffs, who had demanded their money as ſoon as was uſual in the courſe of dealing, and that keeping the notes till the next morning could not be conſtrued a giving a new credit to the goldſmiths: and both juries found accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 415.

Hilary, 7 Geo. Turner & al. v. Mead & al.

The defendant paid the plaintiffs, who were the ſword-blade company, two goldſmiths notes, at three in the afternoon; the plaintiffs ſervant next morning leaves the notes with the goldſmiths, in order to have the money ready for him as he came back a clearing; it being as they proved cuſtomary for the bank and ſword-blade company to ſend out their notes in a morning, and then call for the money as their ſervant returned in the evening; and the goldſmiths on receiving the notes always cancelled them, and got the money told out againſt the time it was uſually called for. The notes in this caſe were brought early in the morning, and received and cancelled; and between four and five in the afternoon, the ſervant who left them called again for the money, when the goldſmiths had juſt ſtopped payment: on which the ſervant takes new notes of the ſame tenor and date as the cancelled ones he left in the morning. And becauſe the plaintiffs ſervant had done nothing but what was uſual in leaving the notes, inſtead of taking the money when he firſt called in the morning,

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, directed the jury to find for the plaintiffs, which they did. Vide Strange vol. 1. p. 416.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Bromley v. Frazier.

In an action on the caſe brought on a foreign bill of exchange, by the indorſee againſt the indorſor; on a general demurrer it was objected, that they had not ſhewn a demand on the drawer, on whoſe default only it is that the indorſor warrants: and becauſe this was a point unſettled, the court took time to conſider of it.

And on the ſecond argument, they delivered their opinion, that in the caſe of a foreign bill of exchange, a demand on the drawer is not neceſſary to make a charge on the indorſor, but the indorſee has his liberty to reſort to either for the money; and conſequently the declaration is well enough, and the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 441.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. Taylor v. Dobbins.

In an action on the caſe, on a promiſſory note the declaration ran, that the defendant made a note with his own hand. Exception was taken, that ſince the ſtatute he ſhould have ſaid, that the defendant ſigned the note; but the court held it well enough, becauſe ſaid to be wrote with his own hand, and there needs no ſubſcription in that caſe, for it is ſufficient that his name is in any part of it. I A. B. promiſe to pay, is as good as I promiſe to pay, ſubſcribed J. S. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 399.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Manwaring v. Harriſon.

On the 17th of September, (being Saturday) about two in the afternoon, Harriſon gave to Manwaring in payment, a note for 100 l. ſigned by Mitford and Mertins, goldſmiths, dated the 5th of September, payable to Harriſon or order. The ſame afternoon, Manwaring pays away the note to J. S. Mitford and Mertins, paid all Saturday and Monday, and on Tueſday morning as ſoon as the ſhop was opened, and before any money was paid, J. S. came and demanded the money, but Mitford and Mertins ſtopped payment. Manwaring paid back the money to J. S. and demanded it again of Harriſon; who refuſing to pay it, an action was brought. And on non aſſumpſit pleaded, Pratt, C. J. told the jury, that giving the note is not immediately payment, unleſs the receiver does ſomething to make it ſo, by neglecting to receive the value in a reaſonable time, by which he gives credit to the maker of a note. He left it to them whether there had been any neglect, and obſerved, that the note was payable to Harriſon, who had kept it eleven days, and probably would not have demanded it ſooner than Manwaring did, it appearing the goldſmiths were in full credit all the while. The jury deſired they might find it ſpecially, and leave it to the court, whether there was a reaſonable time; but the Chief Juſtice told them they were judges of that: whereon they found for the defendant, and declared it as their opinion, that a perſon who did not demand a goldſmiths note in two days, took the credit on himſelf. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 508.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. Windham v. Wither. Idem v. Trull.

The plaintiff brought two actions on a promiſſory note, one againſt the drawer, and another againſt the indorſor, and recovered in both. And it was moved, that they having tendered the principal in one, and the coſts in both actions, no execution might be taken out; which the court ordered accordingly, and ſaid they would have laid the plaintiff by the heels, if he had taken out execution in both. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 515.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. Lawrence v. Jacob.

In an action brought by the ſecond indorſee of a bill of exchange againſt the firſt indorſor, it was held ſufficient to ſay the drawer had not paid it, without ſhewing a demand. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 515.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Smallwood v. Vernon.

In an action on the caſe by original in this court, the plaintiff declared againſt the defendant as indorſor of a promiſſory note, and after ſetting out the note and indorſement, he goes on, that by virtue thereof, the defendant became chargeable with the payment of the money according to the tenor of the indorſement. The defendant on oyer of the original, pleads in abatement, that the charge againſt him ought to be according to the tenor of the note, and not of the indorſement: and the defendant's council inſiſted, that it might be, that the indorſement appointed the money to be paid at a different time from what is mentioned in the note, which are terms that the indorſor cannot lay on the party who made the note.

Per curiam. There is no occaſion to pray in aid of that objection here, where the action is againſt the indorſor; it is true he cannot lay a charge on the giver of the note in a manner different from the terms of it; but he may charge himſelf if he pleaſes, for every indorſement is the ſame as making a new note; and if the note is payable the 1ſt of May, and the indorſement appoints it to be the 1ſt of April, as to the indorſor this is a promiſſory note, payable on the 1ſt of April. If this was an action againſt the giver of the note, there might be more in the objection. Let the defendant anſwer over. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 478.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Hayward v. The Bank of England.

The plaintiff who kept caſh with the bank, on Saturday left a note with them for 50 l. on C. and they on Monday gave it to the runner, who left it at the ſhop in the morning, where they cancelled the note; but when he called in the afternoon for the money according to his uſual practice, he found the bankers had ſtopped payment; whereon he took a new note of the ſame tenor and date. And King, Chief Juſtice, told the jury, that it would be dangerous to ſuffer perſons to deal with notes in this manner, and ſaid the Common Pleas were of that opinion in the like caſe. But however, he adviſed them only to find the value of the note when cancelled, on which the jury found 25 l. the goldſmiths having paid 10 s. in the pound. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 550.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Acheſon v. Fountain. At niſi prius, before Pratt, Chief Juſtice.

In an action on the caſe, it appeared, that the plaintiff had declared on an indorſement, made by William Abercrombie, whereby he appointed the payment to be to L. A. or order, and on producing the bill in evidence, it appeared to be payable to Abercrombie, or order; but the indorſement was only in theſe words, "Pray pay the contents to L. A." and therefore it was objected, that the indorſement not being to order, did not agree with the plaintiff's declaration.

But on conſideration, the whole court were of opinion, it was well enough, that being the legal import of the indorſement, and that the plaintiff might on this have indorſed it over to another, who would be the proper order of the firſt indorſor. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 557.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Jenney and others v. Herle. Error.

In an action on the caſe brought on ſeveral promiſes, there were 5 ſeveral counts laid in the declaration; as to 4 of them, the defendants pleaded non aſſumpſit, and iſſue was joined on it; but afterwards the plaintiff entered a nolle proſequi as to them: but the other was on a bill of exchange, wherein the plaintiff Herle in the Common Pleas declared that the defendants on the 27th day of Sept. 1720, at, &c. according to the cuſtom of merchants, made a bill of exchange, ſigned with their own hands, directed to J. P. by which the defendants required the ſaid J. P. to pay to the plaintiff Herle 1945 l. on demand, money by the ſaid bill mentioned to be in his hands, belonging to the proprietors of certain hereditaments, called the Devonſhire mines and quarries being part of the conſideration money for the purchaſe of the manor of Weſt Buckland: that P. refuſed to accept the bill, whereby the defendants became liable to pay that ſum of money, and being ſo liable, promiſed to pay, &c. To this count the defendants demurred in the Common Pleas, and an interlocutory judgment was given for the plaintiff Herle, a writ of enquiry was executed, and 1945 l. damages found, and final judgment in the Common Pleas for Herle. On which the defendants brought a writ of error: and after argument by council on both ſides, the judgment of the Common Pleas was reverſed by Pratt, C. J. and Forteſcue and Raymond, Juſtices, Powys being abſent; they being of opinion, that this was not a bill of exchange, but a bare appointment to pay money out of a principal fund, with a view of having it paid, out of which fund, the defendants probably drew the bill, and never deſigned the bill ſhould be payable at all events, but only out of the particular money mentioned in the bill, ſuppoſed to be in Mr. P.'s hands. And it would be very miſchievous to make ſuch notes as theſe, which are but appointments, bills of exchange; for at that rate, if a tradeſman applies to a gentleman for money for his bill, ſays the gentleman, "I will direct my ſteward to pay you," and writes to him, "pay to J. S. the money mentioned in his bill out of my rents in your hands;" the ſteward has no rents in his hands, it never can be imagined the gentleman ſhould be liable to be ſued on this as on a bill of exchange. And the caſe of Jocelin v. Laſerre, Eaſter 1 Geo. was cited, where a bill was drawn on an agent of a regiment, "pray pay out of my growing ſubſiſtance," &c. and adjudged no bill of exchange. And though the council objected, the reaſon of that caſe was, becauſe it depended on a contingency; yet Forteſcue, Juſtice, ſaid, the reaſon was, becauſe it was payable out of a particular fund; and if that was the reaſon of it, it is a caſe in point. There was alſo cited the caſe of Smith v. Boheme, Michaelmas 1 Geo. B. R. where the note was, "I promiſe to pay to J. S. ſo much money, or render the body of J. N. to priſon before ſuch a day; and it was adjudged to be no negotiable note within the act of parliament, and that an action could not be maintained on that note within that law, becauſe the money was not abſolutely payable, but depended on a contingency, whether he would ſurrender J. N. to priſon, or not. The judgment was reverſed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1361.

Trinity, Geo. 11 Morris v. Lee.

In an action on the caſe, brought by the plaintiff as ſecond indorſee of a note, ſigned by the defendant, whereby the defendant promiſed to be accountable to

A. or order, for 100*l.* value received; the plaintiff declared on the note, and alſo on an inſimul computaſſet, and on non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and intire damages. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action could not be maintained by the plaintiff as indorſee of this note, becauſe it was not negotiable by ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. cap. 9. for a note within that ſtatute muſt neceſſarily and originally import a promiſe to pay the money; and therefore it was held, Michaelmas 1 Geo. in the caſe of Smith v. Boheme, that a note ſigned by the defendant, whereby he promiſed to pay ſuch a ſum of money, or render the body of J. S. to priſon, was not ſuch a note as that an action would lie on it by the ſtatute, after failure of rendering the body to priſon, becauſe it was not neceſſary and originally for payment of money, but by matter after the act, became a note for payment of money only, viz. by the body not being ſurrendered to priſon. So here, the defendant is not obliged to pay the money to the perſon to whom it was firſt given, or to the indorſee; but may account for it another way, by having laid it out in goods for the party as a factor. If a man receives money for a ſpecial purpoſe, as to account, or to merchandize, (which may be, in this caſe, for any thing appearing to the contrary) it cannot be demanded as a duty, till he has neglected or refuſed to apply it according to the truſt. 1 Salk. 9. Poulter v. Cornwall, though it was held there good after a verdict, becauſe the court would intend, there was proof to the jury that the defendant had done ſomething to make himſelf an abſolute debtor; and therefore, an indebitatus aſſumpſit for money received to account was held good after a verdict for the plaintiff. It was inſiſted likewiſe, that it would bemore for the benefit of trade, that the form of this ſort of notes ſhould be certain.

Per curiam. There are no preciſe words neceſſary to be uſed in a promiſory note, or bill of exchange. Raſt. 338. Deliver ſuch a ſum of money, makes a good bill of exchange. But if the promiſory note is within the intent of the ſtatute, it is ſufficient, though it does not follow the very words of the ſtatute. Now, by receiving the value, the defendant became a debtor; and when he promiſes to be accountable for it to A. it is the ſame thing as a promiſe to pay to A. And it is the ſtronger, becauſe it is to be accountable to A. or order, which is the proper expreſſion uſed in ſuch notes, and mentioned in the ſtatute, where it is intended the note ſhould be indorſable or negotiable. But it would be an odd conſtruction, to expound the word accountable, to give an account, when there may be ſeveral indorſees. But if this note had been value received on account, it might have had a very different conſideration.

Powys, Juſtice, relied much on the verdict in this caſe; but Forteſcue, Juſtice, Reynolds, Juſtice, and Raymond, Chief Juſtice, were of opinion, that if the note was not within the ſtatute, the verdict could not help it; but the note would be within the ſtatute, or not, on the words of the note. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1396.

Trinity, 12 Geo. Pepys v. Sir John Lambert.

The third indorſee of a promiſſory note kept it from the 1ſt of November to the 7th of January, without receiving the value from the maker of the note; and in an action againſt the firſt indorſee, without notice, the plaintiff was nonſuited for this neglect. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 707.

Hilary, 12 Geo. Welſh v. Craig.

In an action of debt on two promiſory notes and on a mutuatus, on a demurrer to the declaration, it was objected that an action of debt would not lie: that before the ſtatute no action at all lay on the note, (Salk. 129.) nor did an indebitatus aſſumpſit lie on a bill of exchange. And the only remedy given on the note by the ſtatute is the ſame that was before on an inland bill of exchange. And of this opinion was the court, and pronounced judgment for the defendant. But then it was obſerved by the plaintiff's council, that there was one good count on the mutuatus, and the demurrer was to the whole. Whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 680.

Trinity, 12 Geo. Chadwick v. Allen.

On a demurrer to a declaration on the following note, it was held to be a note within the ſtatute, "I do acknowledge that Sir Andrew Chadwick has delivered me all the goods and notes for which 400*l.* were paid him on account of Colonel Synge, and that Sir Andrew delivered me Major Graham's receipt and bill on me for 10*l.* which 10*l.* and 15*l.* 5*s.* ballance due to Sir Andrew, I am ſtill indebted, and do promiſe to pay. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 706.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Wilkinſon v. Lutwidge.

In an action on the caſe brought on a bill of exchange againſt the acceptor, it was objected, that the plaintiff ſhould not be admitted to prove the acceptance, until the hand writing of the drawer was proved. And a difference was taken between this caſe, and the caſe of an action againſt the indorſor, who is liable, though the bill is not ſigned by the perſon who is ſuppoſed to draw it; becauſe an indorſor is in the nature of a new drawer, whereas an acceptor is not liable, unleſs the bill was fairly ſigned by the drawer. But as to this Raymond C. J. was of opinion, that the proof of an acceptance was a ſufficient acknowledgment on the part of the acceptor, who muſt be ſuppoſed to know the hand of his own correſpondant: but he ſaid it would not be concluſive evidence, and therefore if the defendant could ſhew the contrary, the reading the bill on behalf of the plaintiff ſhould not preclude him.

Whereupon the bill was read, and the queſtion came on the validity of the acceptance, as to which the caſe was thus: the bill was drawn from New England, for a ſum of money advanced there, to fit out a ſhip that had put in there, after having been taken by pirates. The bill was drawn on the defendant, who was the freighter, and he living at Whitehaven, the plaintiff applied to a merchant in London, who was his correſpondant, to get him to ſend this bill and another of 150*l.* drawn by the ſame perſon, and on the ſame account. He ſent both bills incloſed to the defendant, who by letter acknowledged the receipt of them, and writes thus: "The two bills of exchange which you ſent me, I will pay them in caſe the owners of the Queen Anne do not; and they living in Dublin muſt firſt apply to them; I hope to have their anſwer in a week or ten days. I do not expect they will pay them, but I judge it proper to take their anſwer before I do; which I requeſt you will acquaint Mr. Wilkinſon with, and that he may reſt ſatisfied of the payment." In another letter he writes, "I have not had an opportunity of ſending the bills you ſent me, to the owners of the Queen Anne to Ireland, but will take the firſt opportunity, and then ſhall remit to the gentleman concerned, according to my promiſe."

The defendant on this paid the 150*l.* bill; but in this action inſiſted, that it did not amount to any acceptance, being only conditional, to pay it in caſe the owners of the Queen Anne did not; and his promiſe to procure it from them was in favour of the plaintiff. But Raymond C. J. was of opinion, that it was rather in favour of himſelf, and he having undertook to write to them, it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to ſhew any application to them; and as to the acceptance, it was in his opinion a very ſtrong one. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 648.

Error.

In error on a judgment given againſt Macleod in C. B. in an action on the caſe, brought on ſeveral promiſes againſt him by Snee, Pargiter, and Becker; wherein they declared, that they and one J. D. and C. S. were merchants, &c. and that the ſaid J. D.

on the 25th of May, 1724, at London, &c. drew his bill of exchange according to the cuſtom of merchants, dated at Edinburgh, and the ſame day directed it to the defendant by the name of Captain Macleod, of the late Brigadier Douglas's regiment of foot, and by that bill required the defendant "one month after date, to pay to the ſaid Charles Severs or order, 9*l.* 10*s.* for his quarter's half-pay from the 24th day of June, 1724, to the 25th day of September following in advance, as by advice from the aforeſaid John Dundas," that C. S. indorſed the bill payable to the plaintiffs Snee &c. for value received, of which afterwards, viz. on the 5th day of June, 1724, the defendant Macleod had notice, and afterwards on the ſame day and year accepted it, &c. The defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, and on a trial before Eyre C. J. in C. B. the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, and 9*l.* 10*s.* damages beſides coſts; on which Macleod brought this writ of error. And the plaintiff in error's council argued, that the judgment ought to be reverſed, becauſe this was not a bill of exchange, but was an appointment, authority, or order for the defendant to pay the 9*l.* 10*s.* as if a perſon deſires the caſhier of the bank to pay money which will grow due for a dividend before hand, for this is only an appointment by an half-pay officer to the defendant, to pay by way of advance. In this caſe the drawer never intended to make himſelf chargeable by this bill, for it is not ſaid to be for value received; ſo that (they inſiſted) this could not be a bill of exchange as to the drawer; and if not, it cannot be ſuch as to the acceptor: for it muſt be a bill of exchange, if at all, both to drawer and acceptor. And they compared it to the caſe of Joceline v. Laſerre, and the caſe of Jenney v. Herle, 10 Geo.

Per curiam: This bill was not payable on a contingency, nor out of a particular fund, and is made payable at all events, and payable to order, and is drawn on the general credit of the drawer, not out of the half-pay, for it is payment as ſoon as the quarter begins for the half pay mentioned in the bill, which was not to be due till three months after; accordingly the judgment was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1481.

In an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff as indorſee of a promiſſory note, againſt the defendants, the plaintiff declared that on the 28th day of February, 1725, and long before and continually afterwards hitherto, the defendants were partners in the way of merchandizing and jointly trading for their common advantage, and that on the ſaid 28th day of February, 1725, at &c. the ſaid William, for himſelf and the ſaid James his partner, made his promiſſory note in writing with his own hand ſubſcribed according to the ſtat. &c. bearing date the ſaid day and year, and delivered it then and there to one P. R. by which note the ſaid William for himſelf and the ſaid James Baily, promiſed to pay to the ſaid P. or order ſeven months after date of the ſaid note 36*l.* 5*s.* for value received, &c. To this count (there being ſeveral other counts in the declaration to which the defendants pleaded non aſſumpſerunt) the defendants demurred generally. And the defendants council inſiſted, that this note was not a negotiable note, nor indorſable to the plaintiff within ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. becauſe the plaintiff had not charged in the declaration, that the defendant William had ſigned the note for him and the other defendant Baily his partner.

Per curiam: It is very good, for the plaintiff has ſaid, the defendant William made it for himſelf and his partner, and ſubſcribed it with his own hand, whereby he promiſed for himſelf and partner to pay, which ſhews ſufficiently he ſigned it for himſelf and partner. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1484.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Coleman v. Sayer.

A bill was drawn payable at ſix days ſight, and preſented and accepted on the 8th of February, which made it payable the 14th, and the three days of grace, brought it to the 17th, which was on a Saturday, and the acceptor ſtopt payment on the Tueſday following, before which the bill was not tendered. And on this evidence it was left to the jury, who were of opinion, that the drawer was diſcharged at the end of the three days of grace. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 829.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. Neale v. Ovington. Idem v. Waller. Error.

The plaintiff declared on a promiſſory note, by which the defendant and one A. B. jointly or ſeverally, promiſed to pay. There was a verdict and judgment in C. B. for the plaintiff. But on a writ of error, the judgment was reverſed for want of the plaintiff's ſhewing a title to bring a ſeparate action againſt one of the makers of the note; for by the preſent declaration he only ſays he has this, or ſome other cauſe of action. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 819. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1544.

The plaintiff brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant on a promiſſory note, wherein the plaintiff declared, that the defendant O. S. and one T. J. on the 24th of May 1725, &c. made their certain note in writing, called a promiſſory note, ſubſcribed with their names, bearing date the ſame day and year, and delivered the ſaid note to the inteſtate W. B. by which note the ſaid O. and T. jointly and ſeverally promiſed to pay to the ſaid W. 101 l. 12*s.* in three months after the date of the ſaid note for value received of premiſes in Roſemary-lane, late in the poſſeſſion of one T. R. S. by reaſon of which premiſes, and alſo by force of the ſtatute, &c. and in the declaration there were three other counts, but to this count the defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that the note ſet out in this count is not a promiſſory note within the ſtatute. And the plaintiff joined in demurrer. But the court held it clearly to be a promiſſory note within ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1545.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. Sir John Ereskine v. Murray, Error.

William Murray, brought an action againſt the defendant Sir John Ereskine on an inland bill of exchange; wherein he declared, that he on the 1ſt of March, 1727, at Weſtminſter in the county of Middleſex, made his bill of exchange in writing to the ſaid Sir John directed, and by the ſaid bill requeſted the ſaid Sir John on the 10th day of the ſaid month of March, to pay to the ſaid William Murray, or order, at his manſion-houſe in Edinburgh, 200*l.* ſterling, for value in the hands of him the ſaid John, out of monies lent by the ſaid William, that the defendant Sir John accepted the bill, and by reaſon thereof, according to the cuſtom of merchants, became liable to pay, &c. and being ſo liable, promiſed to pay the ſaid 200*l.* to the plaintiff Murray, &c. The defendant Ereskine, let judgment go againſt him by default, and after execution of a writ of enquiry, and final judgment given againſt him, brought this writ of error.

The firſt exception taken by the council for the plaintiff in error was, that it was not alledged, that the bill was drawn according to the cuſtom of merchants.

But to this it was anſwered by the council for the defendant in error, and ſo reſolved by the court, that the law takes notice of the cuſtom of merchants, without ſetting it out ſpecially; and if the bill as ſet out in the declaration appeared to be within the cuſtom of merchants, it was ſufficient. Beſides, after ſetting out the bill and acceptance, it is ſaid, by reaſon whereof according to the cuſtom of merchants the defendant below became liable, which they held was ſufficient.

The ſecond exception was, that it was not averred the bill was ſigned by Mr. Murray: the third, that the defendant had not accepted the bill by under-writing the ſame under his hand. And ſtat. 9 W. 3. c. 17. and 3 & 4 Ann, c. 9. par. 4 & 5, were quoted.

As to the ſigning, it was anſwered, that it is alledged that the plaintiff made his bill of exchange in writing to the ſaid Sir John Ereſkine directed, and by the ſaid bill requeſted; which of neceſſity implies the plaintiff's name was wrote in the bill, elſe he could not requeſt; and ſaying he made the bill in writing, imports he wrote on ſome body by his authority, which will be the ſame thing, and imports a ſigning if it is neceſſary in caſe of inland bills of exchange. And ſuch a way of declaring was held ſufficient in caſes of promiſory notes, where the ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. requires that the party who makes the bill, or ſome perſon intruſted by him, ſhould ſign it. Mich. 7 Geo. B. R. Taylor v. Dobbins, and Mich. 11 Geo. B. R. Elliot v. Cooper.

The fourth and laſt exception was, that the bill was not laid to be for value received.

But the court held, for value in the hands of him the ſaid John, had been ſufficient; and the other words might be rejected as ſurpluſage. And the judgment of the C. B was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1542.

In an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes, the plaintiff in his firſt count declared that one T. R. on the 8th day of Aug. 1728, &c. according to the cuſtom of merchants made a certain bill of exchange, with his own hand, with the name of the ſaid T. thereto ſubſcribed, dated the ſame day and year, and directed the ſaid bill of exchange to the ſaid Roger, and thereby requeſted the ſaid Roger to pay to the ſaid Henry or his order 14*l.* 3*s.* out of the fifth payment, when it ſhould become due, and it ſhould be allowed by the ſaid T. which was afterwards accepted by the defendant, by reaſon of which premiſes, the defendant became liable to pay the 14*l.* 3*s.* to the plaintiff Henry, and ſo being liable promiſed to pay &c. Then there were other counts in the declaration, to which counts the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, &c. and to this count the defendant demurred; and it was inſiſted on by the defendant's council that this action was not maintainable on this bill as a bill of exchange, according to the reſolutions in the caſes of Jocelin v. Laſerre, Eaſter, 1 Geo. 1. B. R. and Jenny v. Herle, 10 Geo. 1. B. R. And of that opinion was the court, and November 20, 1729, gave judgment for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1563.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Hoar v. Dacoſta.

The note of one W. was paid to the plaintiff at twelve o'clock on the Friday, who put it into the bank at one, and the next morning at ten o'clock, the runner of the bank carried it to the ſhop with other notes to the value of 2600*l.* and left them (as uſual) to call again for the money: he called at eleven o'clock, and they ſaid their ſervant was gone to the bank. He called again at two o'clock, and they ſaid they were going to ſhut up, and refuſed to pay: but paid ſmall notes for two hours, and then ſtopped. And the next morning notice was given to the defendant who had paid the note to the plaintiff. And now in an action for the money, the queſtion was, whether this was payment to the plaintiff. It was inſiſted for the defendant that he ſhould not ſuffer by the plaintiff's paying it into the bank, who ſent it with other notes; whereas if the note had been tendered by itſelf it would have been paid. On the contrary it was inſiſted, that if there had been no demand, there would have been no laches, being within a day after the receipt, that the goldſmith ſtopt payment. Raymond, C. J. ſaid, there was no ſtanding rule, but left it to the jury, who found for the plaintiff to the value of the note. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 910.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Harris v. Benſon.

In an action brought againſt the drawer of an inland bill after an acceptance, Raymond, C. J. ruled, that for want of a proteſt, according to ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17. the drawer could not be charged with intereſt. Then the plaintiff would have had it as for money lent, and that appeared to be the conſideration of the bill; but the C. J. ſaid, it had never been allowed barely for money lent, without a note; ſo the plaintiff had no intereſt allowed him. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 910.

In an action brought by the indorſee of a bill of exchange againſt the acceptor, it was held not to be neceſſary, to prove the hand of the drawer: and the plaintiff reſted on the proof of the acceptance. The defendant offered to prove it a forged bill, by calling perſons who were acquainted with the hand of the drawer, and would ſwear they did not believe it to be his hand. But the C. J. would not admit this, from the danger to negotiable notes, and becauſe a man might with deſign write contrary to his uſual method. And he ſtrongly inclined, that even actual proof of a forgery would not excuſe the defendants againſt their own acceptance, which had given credit to the indorſee. Therefore a verdict was found for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 946.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Lumley v. Palmer.

The defendant was ſued as acceptor of a bill of exchange, And on the evidence it appeared to be a parol acceptance only, which the C. J. ruled to be ſufficient, that being good at common law, and ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. which requires it to be in writing in order to charge the drawer with damages and coſts, having a proviſo that it ſhall extend to diſcharge any remedy that any perſon may have againſt the acceptor. On this direction the jury found for the plaintiff. But the C. J. of C. B having lately ruled it otherwiſe in the caſe of Rea v. Meggot, the court was moved for a new trial. And in order finally to ſettle this point, it was ordered to be argued: and after argument the court was of opinion, that the direction in the preſent caſe was right and agreeable to conſtant practice, and therefore ordered the poſtea to be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1000.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Moore v. Paine. Error.

On error brought on a judgment by default in the C. B. in an action on the caſe, on a promiſſory note, the following exceptions were taken by the plaintiff in error.

1ſt. That the declaration is on the ſtatute, and yet ſets out a note within the ſtatute, for it is only a note payable to the plaintiff, and not to his order.

2dly. That no venue is laid in this caſe, where the promiſe was made; to ſupport which exception, Chapman v. Fothergill, 2 Lev. 227. Knighton v Moreton, 3 Lev. 311. and Anger v. Brower, 1 Vent. 340. were cited.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice. The firſt exception has been often over-ruled; and as to the ſecond, the ſtatute of jeofails of Charles helps this defect after a verdict, and the ſtatute for amendment of the law extends the ſtatute of jeofails to judgments on writs of enquiry.

The defendant was ſued as indorſor of a note, and it was proved, that a diſcounter ſent the note to the defendant, who looked on it, and ſaid it was his hand, and the note (which had ſome months to run) would be paid when due.

Hardwicke, Chief Juſtice, refuſed to let the defendant in to ſhew a forgery by ſimilitude of hands, ſince it would tend to deſtroy all negotiation of notes and bills. But he ſeemed inclined to allow proof of an actual forgery, if the defendant could have ſhewn it, which he could not: and the plaintiff obtained a verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1051.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Hamilton v. Mackrell. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment by default in the C. B. in an action on the caſe againſt an indorſor of a promiſory note; exception was taken to the declaration, for that the plaintiff had not averred that the indorſor had notice of the drawer's refuſing to pay it, for ſuch a demand is neceſſary, in order to charge the indorſor. Salk. 127.

Hardwicke, C. J. It is here ſaid, that the defendant was indebted, and in conſideration thereof, he promiſed to pay it; therefore, on the face of the declaration, it is certainly well enough; for it does not appear to the court, but that the plaintiff may prove an actual promiſe, and not merely rely on the aſſumpſit in the law; the time to make ſuch an objection is at the trial of the cauſe; and Ld. Holt always held it neceſſary, to prove a demand on the drawer, for he took the indorſor to be only a warrantor; but the Lords Macclesfield, Pratt, and King, held a demand not neceſſary, for they looked on every indorſor to be as a maker of a new note, ſo that it is a point in much doubt, and wants to be ſettled; but, however, as it now ſtands before us on the face of this declaration, I think it is well enough. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 322.

Hilary, 11 Geo. 2. Collins v. Butler. At Guildhall.

A note was payable on the 27th of December, 1732. The drawer ſhut up his houſe, and went away the November before. And the queſtion was, whether a general demand on the drawer is neceſſary before the indorſor can be charged, and if it was, whether in this caſe the plaintiff had ſhewn ſufficient, in proving the ſhutting up the houſe.

As to the firſt point, Lee, C. J. ſaid, that a demand on the drawer was neceſſary, as was determined in C. B. Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. on great debate; and in this particular caſe, he held the plaintiff had not gone far enough, but ought to ſhew, that he had inquired after the drawer, or attempted to find him out. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1087.

When the note was delivered in, the plaintiff's name was on it, and the Chief Juſtice permitted it to be ſtruck out in court, it being only an indorſement in blank. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1103.

Hilary, 14 Geo. 2. Bevis v. Lindſell.

In an aſſumpſit on a promiſory note, there was judgment by default, and on executing a writ of enquiry, the plaintiff did not produce the ſubſcribing witneſs, but offered other evidence of its being the defendant's hand. And the court held, this was ſufficient, for the note being ſet out in the declaration is admitted, and the only uſe of producing it is to ſee whether any money is indorſed to be paid on it. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1149.

Eaſter, 14 Geo. 2. Smith v. Abbot.

The defendant accepted a bill of exchange to pay it when the goods conſigned to him, and for which the bill was drawn, were ſold: and the plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of merchants. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this acceptance depending on the contingency of the ſale of the goods, was not within the cuſtom of merchants, or negotiable. But the court (on conſideration) held it good; for though the plaintiff might have refuſed to take ſuch an acceptance, and have proteſted the bill; yet nobody can ſay he might not ſubmit to it. And it will affect trade, if factors are not allowed to uſe this caution, when bills are drawn before they have an opportunity to diſpoſe of the goods: a man who is drawn on to pay at ten days ſight, may accept for thirty: Molloy 304. though the other might proteſt the bill. Salk. 129. Cumb. 452. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1152.

Eaſter, 14 Geo. 2. Beardeſley v. Baldwin.

A promiſory note to pay money within ſo many days after the defendant ſhould marry, was (on conſideration) held not to be a negotiable note within the ſtatute. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1151.

Trinity, 14 Geo. 2. Bowyer v. Bampton.

On a caſe ſtated at niſi prius in an action brought by the plaintiff as indorſee of ſeveral promiſory notes, it appeared that the notes were given by the defendant to one J. C. for money by him knowingly advanced to the defendant to game with at dice, and that C. indorſed them to the plaintiff, for a full and valuable conſideration, and that the plaintiff was not privy to, or had any notice, that any part of the money for which the notes were given, had been lent for the purpoſe of gaming.

On this a queſtion aroſe on ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 14. ſect. 1. which ſays, "That all notes, where the whole or any part of the conſideration is money knowingly lent for gaming, ſhall be void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever," Whether the plaintiff could maintain the action againſt the defendant. And after two arguments, the court were of opinion he could not; for it is making it of ſome uſe to the lender, if he can pay his own debts with it; and it will be a means to evade the act, it being ſo very difficult to prove notice on an indorſee. And though it will be ſometimes inconvenient to an innocent man, yet that will not be a ballance to thoſe on the other ſide. And the plaintiff is not without remedy, for he may ſue C. on his indorſement. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1155.

In an action on the caſe brought on a bill of exchange againſt the defendant as acceptor, who, on a tender of the bill, wrote, "Meſſrs. Caſwal and Mount, pay this bill when due for Thomas Chitty." The bill fell due on the 2d of January, 1741, the bankers paid till the 19th, and on the 21ſt of January, the money was demanded of the defendant.

For the defendant it was inſiſted, that the plaintiff had given ſuch credit to the bankers, as to make it his loſs; and they compared it to the common caſe of a note or draught kept.

For the plaintiff it was ſaid, there was no limited time, but that of the ſtatute of limitations, to ſue the acceptor; and that the plaintiff cannot come in as a creditor of the goldſmiths, becauſe they have done nothing to make themſelves liable.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, that it was the loſs of the plaintiff, who though he might have refuſed to take ſuch an acceptance, yet had now agreed to it: and it was to all purpoſes in nature of a draught, which is always conſidered as actual payment, when a reaſonable time to receive is elapſed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1195.

At half an hour after eleven in the morning of the 18th of January, the defendant being indebted to the plaintiffs, paid to their caſhier a note of C. and M. goldſmiths, in Lombard ſtreet, they continued to pay all notes till the next day at two; and immediately after they had ſtopped payment, the company's ſervant came with the note. The queſtion was, who ſhould bear the loſs? And on examining merchants, it was held, that the company had made it their own, by not ſending it out in the afternoon of the 18th, or at furtheſt the next morning; ſo the jury found for the defendant. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1175.

The plaintiff declared on the cuſtom of merchants againſt the defendants as acceptors of a bill of exchange; and the inſtrument ran in theſe words:

Meſſrs. G. and Co. 4th February, 1741
Pray pay to Mr. Richard Banbury one month after date, two hundred pounds on account of freight of the Veale Galley, Edward Champion; and this order ſhall be your ſufficient diſcharge for the ſame. J. Gibſon.
Accepted for Liſſet and Gilly of Leghorne, to pay as remitted from thence at uſance.
18th March 1741. H. Gilly.

And two objections were made by the defendant; 1ſt. That this was not a bill of exchange, for it is not payable to order, ſo as to be negotiable; nor is it ſaid to be for value received. And it is only an order on a particular fund, like the caſe of Jenny v. Herle, and ſeveral merchants proved, that they did not look on it to be a bill of exchange; and others were of a contrary opinion.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held it not to be a bill of exchange. He ſaid, it was not in the power of the parties to make what form they pleaſe paſs for ſuch a bill, it ought to be agreeable to the law of merchants: the privilege ariſes from the convenience to trade, which is not conſulted in this caſe. And he thought it bad on the objection to the fund out of which it was to be paid: however, being a mercantile tranſaction, he left it to the ſpecial jury of merchants, who found it to be no bill of exchange on the objection for want of value received.

The ſecond objection was, that the plaintiff (ſuppoſing it a bill of exchange) had not ſhewn there was any remittance to the defendants: and that this was not an abſolute acceptance, but only conditional: and ſo Lee, Chief Juſtice, declared he underſtood it, and left it to the jury. But they, finding for the defendants in the firſt point, gave no opinion as to this. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1211.

On error from *C. Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Vaughan v. Fuller.

In an action brought on a promiſory note by the indorſee againſt an indorſor, it was proved that the defendant had paid part of the money. And Lee, Chief Juſtice, held that ſufficient, to diſpenſe with the proving a demand on the maker of the note. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1246.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Fletcher v. Sandys.

A banker's note for 500 l. was paid to the plaintiff after dinner, who ſent it the next morning at nine, when the banker had ſtopt payment: and it was held, that there was no laches in the plaintiff, ſo as to fix the loſs on him; and that in all theſe caſes, there muſt be a reaſonable time allowed, conſiſtent with the nature of circulating paper-credit. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1248.

Michaelmas, 20 Geo. 2. Robinſon v. Stone.

On a writ of error, it appeared to be an action brought by an indorſee of a promiſory note, indorſed by a woman as adminiſtratrix: the defendant demurred to the declaration, and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

It was objected, that an adminiſtratrix was not within the cuſtom of merchants in the caſe of bills of exchange: and ſtat. 3 Ann, c. 9. makes notes aſſignable only in the ſame manner as bills of exchange are.

Per curiam. We cannot ſay this on a demurrer. It ſhould have been pleaded, or found not to be within the cuſtom: and it is every day's practice to have indorſements made by executors. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1260.

Trinity, 21 Geo. 2. Martin v. Chauntry.

The court held on error brought from C. B. that a note to deliver up horſes and a wharfe, and pay money at a particular day, could not be declared on as a note within the ſtatute; and therefore reverſed the judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1271.

Michaelmas, 32 Geo. 2. Heylyn and others v. Adamſon.

In an action on the caſe brought on an inland bill of exchange, drawn by R. C. and directed to W. D. dated the 13th of March, 1756, by which bill the ſaid R. C. required the ſaid W. D. to pay to the defendant, or his order, 100 l. at forty days after date, value received as adviſed by the ſaid R. C. which bill was indorſed by the defendant to the plaintiffs, and was accepted by the defendant, but not paid by him:

On the trial the plaintiffs proved, that the ſaid R. C. made the bill, and that the defendant indorſed it to the plaintiffs, that the ſaid defendant accepted the bill, and afterwards refuſed payment, and that on the day it became payable, the plaintiffs carried it to be proteſted for non-payment, and ſoon after brought this action.

It not being proved on the trial, that the drawer of the bill had any notice of ſuch non-payment, or that any demand of the money was made on him before the commencement of this action; the defendant's council objected, "that the action would not lie againſt the defendant (who was the indorſor of the bill) till a demand of payment had been made on the drawer, and as no ſuch demand was proved by the plaintiffs, they ought to be nonſuited.

The court gave a verdict on the firſt count for the plaintiffs for 100 l. damages, and 40 s. coſts, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the following caſe, viz.

Whether in an action brought on an inland bill of exchange, by the indorſee againſt an indorſor, no evidence being given of notice to the drawer of the bill, or of making any inquiry after him, was a ground of nonſuit.

Per curiam. We are all clearly of opinion, that in actions on inland bills of exchange, brought by an indorſee againſt an indorſor, the plaintiff muſt prove a demand of, or due diligence to get the money from the drawee (or acceptor) but need not prove any demand of the drawer. And that in actions on promiſory notes, brought by an indorſee againſt the indorſor, the plaintiff muſt prove a demand of, or due diligence to get the money from the maker of the note. Therefore a rule was made to deliver the poſtea to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 669.

On an action brought by the indorſees on two foreign bills of exchange, drawn by Colonel Clive, on the company, and accepted by them, payable to Mr. C. or order, and indorſed by Mr. C. to Mr. O.

One of theſe bills was by ſuch indorſement directed to be paid to R. O. or order, in the cuſtomary way of indorſements.

The other was indorſed by Mr. C. to Mr. O. but the words, or order, were originally omitted in this indorſement, and afterwards put in by another hand.

Theſe bills ſo indorſed, were by Mr. O. indorſed to the plaintiffs, Edie and Lard, or order.

Mr. O. became inſolvent, and the queſtion then was, who was to bear the loſs, whether Mr. C. or the plaintiffs, as the India company were only ſtakeholders in the buſineſs.

At the trial, the defendants council gave up their objection to the firſt bill, and a verdict was taken for the plaintiffs thereon.

On the ſecond objection as to the ſecond bill, a verdict was found for the defendant.

The plaintiffs moved for a new trial, and obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe, and after hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. There ought to be a new trial, as to the coſts, I think there ſhould be none given in the preſent caſe, for the verdict muſt be ſet aſide generally, not in part only. The merits were always clear for the plaintiffs on the firſt count, and it now appears, that nothing remained to be tried on the ſecond.

Per curiam. Let the former verdict be ſet aſide, and a new trial be granted without coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1216.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 3. Grant v. Vaughan.

On ſhewing cauſe why a verdict given for the defendant ſhould not be ſet aſide with coſts, and a new trial be granted; the caſe appeared to be,

That the defendant, a merchant in London, gave a caſh note on his banker to one Bicknell, a huſband of a ſhip of his. The note was dated, London, 22d October 1763, and directed to Sir Richard Aſgill, who was Vaughan's banker, and was worded thus:

"Pay to the ſhip Fortune or bearer" ſo much: Bicknell, by ſome accident, loſt this note, the perſon who found it, or who at leaſt was in poſſeſſion of ſuch note, (however the ſame might be obtained) came four days after the note was payable in London to the ſhop of Grant the plaintiff, and bought 5 l. worth of tea of him, and gave him this note in payment for the ſame, and deſired the change thereout. The plaintiff ſtepped out to make enquiry who this Vaughan might be, and being informed he was a good man, and that it was his hand-writing, changed the ſame.

Vaughan being apprized that Bicknell had loſt the note, ſent to Sir Charles Aſgill not to pay it, and Grant being refuſed payment, brought his action on the caſe againſt Vaughan; and in his declaration inſerted two counts, viz. one on an inland bill of exchange, the other on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, for money had and received to his uſe. The cauſe was tried by a ſpecial jury, and a verdict found for the defendant.

On hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. On the ſecond count in the declaration, the preſent caſe is quite clear beyond all diſpute, for an action, for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe, may be brought by the bona fide bearer of a note made payable to bearer. There is no caſe to the contrary. It was certainly money received for the uſe of the original advancer of it; and if ſo, it is for the uſe of the perſon who has the note as bearer. In the preſent caſe, Bicknell himſelf might certainly have brought this action. Bicknell and the plaintiff are both innocent. The law muſt determine which of them is to ſtand to the loſs, by law it falls on Bicknell, therefore there ought to be a new trial.

Wilmot, Juſtice. On the whole, I think this to be a verdict againſt law, and am of opinion that it ought to be ſet aſide.

Yates, Juſtice. On the whole, I think the jury have done wrong, and therefore the verdict ought to be ſet aſide.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for a new trial. Vide Bur. 3. p. 1516.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. 3. Pillan and Roſe v. Van Mierop and Hopkins.

On a rule to ſet aſide a verdict obtained againſt evidence, the evidence given on the trial was thus ſtated to the court:

One White, a merchant in Ireland, deſired to draw on the plaintiffs, who were merchants at Rotterdam in Holland, for 800 l. payable to one Clifford, and propoſed to give them credit on a good houſe in London for their reimburſement, or any other method of reimburſement.

The plaintiffs deſired a confirmed credit on a houſe of rank in London, as the condition of their accepting the bill; White names the houſe of the defendants, as this houſe of rank, and offers credit on them: on which the plaintiffs honoured the draught, and paid the money, and then wrote to the defendants, deſiring to know whether they would accept ſuch bills, as they the plaintiffs ſhould in about a month's time draw on the ſaid defendants for 800 l. on the credit of the ſaid White. The plaintiffs having received an aſſent from the defendants, accordingly drew on them. In the interim, White failed before their draught came to hand, or was ever drawn: the defendants gave the plaintiffs notice of the failure of White, and forbid their drawing in conſequence; but the plaintiffs did notwithſtanding draw, and the defendants refuſed to pay their bill.

On the trial, a verdict was given for the defendants.

After hearing council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. This is juſt the ſame thing as if White had drawn on the defendants payable to the plaintiffs. It had been nothing to the plaintiffs, whether the defendants had effects of White's in their hands or not, if they had accepted his bill. And this amounts to the ſame thing, "I will give the bill due honour," is in effect accepting it. If a man agrees to do the formal part, the law conſiders it (as in the caſe of an acceptance of a bill) as if actually done. This is an engagement to accept the bill, if there was a neceſſity to accept it, and to pay it when due, and they could not afterwards retract. It would be very deſtructive to trade, and to truſt in commercial dealings, if they could. There was nothing of nudum pactum, i. e. a void contract, mentioned to the jury; nor was it, I am perſuaded, in their idea or contemplation, on their giving their verdict. I therefore think the point of law is with the plaintiffs.

Wilmot, Juſtice. I am of opinion that there ought to be a new trial.

Yates, Juſtice, concurred with his brethren.

Aſton, Juſtice. I am of opinion that there ought to be a new trial. If there be ſuch a cuſtom of merchants, as has been alledged, it may be found by a jury; but it is the court, not the jury, who are to determine the law.

This muſt be conſidered as a commercial tranſaction, and is a plain caſe; the defendants have undertaken to honour the plaintiff's draught, therefore they are bound to pay it.

Per curiam. Let the rule to ſet aſide the verdict, and for a new trial, be made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1663.

Bonds.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Bowden v. Shaw.

One Twyford was indebted to the plaintiff Bowden in 70 l. for which he was arreſted, and being in the cuſtody of a ſerjeant of the mace in London, was diſcharged at the inſtance of the defendant Shaw, by giving a bond to the ſaid ſerjeant for the uſe of the plaintiff; that Twyford ſhould either render himſelf, or put in bail at the return of the writ, or pay the plaintiff

The defendant pleaded, that the officer took the bond under colour of his office, abſque hoc, &c. that Twyford was at large at that time; and on a demurrer, it was ſaid, this was an immaterial traverſe.

But admiting it to be ſo, the plaintiff ſhall take no advantage of it on a general demurrer; he ought to have demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed it for cauſe.

Then as to the matter, it was held, that the officer having taken ſuch a bond to enlarge a perſon, without the privity of the plaintiff, who had a power either to confine or let him go, it is void; and though it is taken to his uſe, it is within the equity of the ſtatute; but it might be otherwiſe if the bond had been made to the plaintiff himſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 187.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Stayner v. Baker.

Per curiam. A bill imports it to be under the hand and ſeal, and not a note in writing only; a promiſe cannot be extinguiſhed by a bill under hand alone, becauſe in law it is of no higher nature. A bond is no ſatisfaction of money due, though it may be of money before it is due. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 86.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Cromwell or Crumwell v. Grumſdale or Grunſdale.

In an action of debt brought againſt the defendant adminiſtrator of R. Urlin for 40 l. for that the ſaid Roger, the 10th of July, 1674, by his writing obligatory, dated the day and year aforeſaid, acknowledged himſelf to be held and firmly bound to the aforeſaid George, in the aforeſaid 40 l. by theſe words quadrans libr. payable on requeſt, the defendant pleaded, that it was not the act of the aforeſaid R. Urlin; the jury found that one R. Urlin the inteſtate of the aforeſaid Grumſdale, did ſeal and deliver a certain writing in the form of an obligation, in theſe words; by which he bound himſelf to the ſaid Geo. Cromwell per mid viginti in quadrans libr. of good and lawful money of England, to which payment he bound himſelf, his executors, adminiſtrators, and aſſigns, firmly by theſe preſents, ſealed with his hand and ſeal, dated the 1ſt day of July, in the year of the reign of King Charles the 2d, 1674, conditioned for the payment of 20 l. 12 s. on the 25th day of December next enſuing the date thereof, &c.

And Holt, Chief Juſtice, who delivered the opinion of the court, ſaid, that the bond was ſilly and inartificial as could be; yet the intention of the parties being apparent, the plaintiff muſt have judgment; as for the quadrans libris, if there had been nothing further to explain it, we ſhould have made nothing of it, but the word quadrans here being ſomething of four, and it appearing by the condition to be for the payment of 20 l. we cannot underſtand it to be meant of any other ſum than 40 l. and if the meaning does ſufficiently appear, we ought to conſtrue bonds and agreements not according to the ſtrict words, but according to the intention of the parties. Seſſanta is as unintelligible as this; and ſo is quantoginta. Th. Jo. 48. We have ſearched the Rolls for Dobſon v. Key's caſe, and find it exactly the ſame as reported in Yelv. 193. As to the per mid viginti, that is inſenſible, and therefore cannot hurt. Then as to the cujus dat. in the declaration, there is no ſuch date, as in the year of the reign, 1674, it is a void date, and the plaintiff may alledge the bill to be made when he will; and though by the profert in this court, he has confined himſelf, yet the cujus datus ſhall be underſtood of the delivery, and not the date; cujus datus ſhall be the giving of which was, &c. if it had been gerent' date, it might have been otherwiſe, but here it is good enough; therefore judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 193.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Neſſon v. Finch.

In an action of debt brought on a bond conditioned, that whereas the plaintiff became bound to the defendant in a bond of 52 l. conditioned for the true payment of 26 l. on the 29th of September following; if after the diſcharge of the ſaid bond by the plaintiff, the defendant ſhould make the plaintiff free of the clothworkers company on requeſt, that then this bond ſhould be void.

The plaintiff ſhewed, that he had paid the 26 l. but the payment was not on the 29th of September, but afterwards, and that he requeſted the defendant, but that he had not made him free. And on demurrer, judgment was given for the defendant, becauſe that payment of the 26 l. could not diſcharge the firſt bond, being after the day; and therefore, the plaintiff had no title to ſue this bond as yet, becauſe the defendant was not bound to make him free of the cloth-workers company before the firſt bond was diſcharged. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 382.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Pierce v. Hutcheſon.

An action of debt was brought on a bond for performance of covenants, the defendant pleaded in bar, that for all the breaches till ſuch a time, he had brought covenant, and recovered damages, and that there was no breach ſince that time; and on demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff: for by the very plea, the bond was forfeited. Though it was objected, a perſon might waive the benefit of a forfeiture of a bond, as well as the forfeiture of a copyhold eſtate, &c. and the bringing of covenant was a waiver of the forfeiture of the bond, and ſo a bar.

Per curiam. Even in equity, it would be no bar till ſatisfaction; as if two perſons are bound in a bond, judgment againſt one is no diſcharge to the other, before ſatisfaction. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 321.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. The Duke of Ormond v. Ireland.

A bond was given to an officer, conditioned, that the plaintiff in replevin would follow the ſuit with effect; afterwards he obtained an injunction in the Exchequer, whereby the proceedings were delayed.

Per curiam. That is no forfeiture of his bond; nor is any thing elſe, but an abſolute determination of ſuit, as nonſuit, non proſ. &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 320.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. The Duke of Ormond v. Brierly.

A bond was taken by the bailiff of W. conditioned, that if the obligor, being plaintiff in replevin, ſhould proſecute the ſuit with effect, &c. On oyer, the defendant pleads that he did declare and proſecute the action till ſuch a time, as may appear by the record; and that pending the ſuit, the defendant died, whereby it did abate by the act of God. The plaintiff replied and confeſſed the plea; but ſaid further, that the defendant ſued an Engliſh bill in the Exchequer, and there obtained an injunction to ſtay proceedings; whereby the ſuit was delayed, ſo as judgment could not be had till the defendant's death; and on demurrer it was urged for the plaintiff, that by obtaining the injunction; the defendant had diſabled himſelf for a time, to proſecute the ſuit for a time; and a temporal diſability of performing a condition is tantamount to a forfeiture. Mo. 400.

Per curiam. He cannot be ſaid to continue the ſuit with effect till nonſuited, retraxit, or ſome other act, by which there is an end of the ſuit; this bond is in lieu of pledges, which the ſheriff is bound to find, and take, by ſtat. W. 2. and if he failed to find pledges according to that ſtatute, he would be liable to the avowant's damages, to be recovered by action againſt him; and where ſuch pledges would not be liable, the obligor that is in lieu of them, would not be liable. Judgment for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 380.

In an action of debt on a bond, made in this manner. Know all men by theſe preſents, that I ——— Firmen of Perth Amboy, in the province of Weſt Jerſey, am held and firmly bound to the plaintiff in 80 l. of lawful money aforeſaid, &c. The plaintiff demanded 80 l. of the money of England; and on the defendant's pleading it was not his deed, at the trial before Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Guildhall, Eaſter, 13 W. 3. the plaintiff was nonſuited; the Chief Juſtice held, that this bond bound the defendant in the money of Weſt Jerſey, not of England; the condition of the bond being alſo for the payment of 40 l. of the ſaid province. And now the plaintiff brought a new action on this bond in the detinet as of foreign coin, to the value of ſo much of the money of England; and this term it was moved by the defendant's council, that the plaintiff might not proceed before he had paid the coſts of the former nonſuit, which was oppoſed by the council for the plaintiff, and denied by the court; becauſe the merits did not come in queſtion on the trial, on which he was nonſuited, but he was nonſuited only on the variance. And the ſaid rule is grantable generally only in ejectment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 697.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If A. is bound in a bond to B. to pay him 20 l. when B. puts in his anſwer in Chancery, there B. to bring an action, ought to give A. notice of his having put in his anſwer. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 63.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Orchard v. Ireland.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt againſt the defendant on a bond, conditioned for the payment of money at a day long ſince paſt; on which the defendant's council moved, that on payment of principal, intereſt, and ſuch coſts as the maſter ſhould tax, proceedings ſhould be ſtaid in this action. The plaintiff's council oppoſed it, becauſe the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff on a ſimple contract, to which the defendant threatened he would plead the ſtatute of limitations, it being above ſix years ſince the debt was contracted, and no revivor ſince; and therefore ſince this motion was not for a matter of right, but for a favour, it was in the diſcretion of the court, whether they would grant it or not; it was alſo inſiſted, that if the defendant would have equity, he muſt do equity, and therefore hoped the court would not refer this action, unleſs the defendant would waive his plea of the ſtatute of limitations, or refer that cauſe of action to the maſter as well as the other. But the court granted the motion, and ſaid the debts were diſtinct, and the plaintiff by his own negligence had loſt the ſimple contract debt, and it was not in their power to deprive the defendant of the benefit of the ſtatute, which the law had given him. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1033.

In debt on a bond, conditioned for payment of money, and therefore to ſpecify in taxation according to the late ſtatute.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. On evidence, if the certificate produced bears date in due time, I will not doubt but that it was then delivered, or now, that it bears but a very late date; yet if it is proved that it was taxed in due time, it will ſuffice: or laſtly, if it has not been taxed in due time, yet if a tally is produced that a double tax has been paid for penalty, it will do: and the plaintiff failing in all, was nonſuited. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 3 Ann. At Niſi Prius.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a bond is for 400 l. with a condition to pay 200 l. on ſuch a day, without mentioning any intereſt to be paid for the ſame, if the 200 l. is paid at the day, the bond is ſaved; and though the money is not then paid, the obligor cannot be relieved againſt the penalty without paying intereſt, yet ſuch bond needs no ſpecification by the late act of parliament. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 184.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Woodcock v. Morgan.

In debt on a bond, ſhewing, that ſuch a day the defendant became indebted to the plaintiff, by an obligation in writing, without ſhewing the date of the bond, or ſaying it was ſealed and delivered.

Per curiam. Becoming indebted by an obligation in writing, is enough; but the plaint being W. complains of Morgan, of a plea, &c. without ſaying, which he owes, and unjuſtly detains. It was held ill. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 306.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Robert v. Harnage.

The plaintiff declared, that the defendant became bound to him at Fort St. David's in the Eaſt Indies, at London, in a bond of F. for the payment of F. to him, his attorney, or aſſigns: on oyer, the bond appearing to bear date at Fort St. David's in the Eaſt Indies; and the payment was to the plaintiff's attorney or aſſigns, without mentioning himſelf: and on demurrer to the declaration, two exceptions were taken.

1ſt, That the bond declared on, and that ſet out on the oyer, varied; the one being payment to him, his attorney, or aſſigns, and the other to attorney or aſſigns.

To which it was anſwered, that the declaration muſt not be according to the letter of the obligation, but according to the operation of the law thereon: as if A. binds himſelf in a ſum to B. payable to C. who is a ſtranger, a payment to C. is a payment to B. and in an action on it, the count muſt be on a bond payable to B. 4 Ed. 4. c. 19. 2 Keb. 81. 1 Sid. 295.

Per curiam. If A. makes a bond to B. payable to ſuch perſon as he ſhall appoint; if B. does appoint one, payment to him, is payment to B. and if B. appoints none, it ſhall be paid to B. himſelf.

The ſecond exception was, that the bond is ſet forth to have been ſealed and delivered at Fort St. David's in the Eaſt Indies, and therefore the date made it local; and by conſequence, the declaration ought to have been of a bond made at Fort St. David's in the Eaſt Indies, at Iſlington in the county of Middleſex, or in ſuch a ward or pariſh in London, &c. And of that opinion was the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 228.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Selby v. Greene.

The obligee made a conſiderable erazure in the condition of a bond, and after brought an action on the bond, and the defendant having had oyer, and the bond being in court, and the erazure diſcovered, the defendant pleaded it was not his deed, and notice of trial was given; but when the plaintiff underſtood the defendant had found out the cheat, and could prove it, he countermanded the notice.

And it was moved on affidavits of this matter, that the bond ſhould remain in the cuſtody of the officer of the court till the cauſe ſhould be tried, for otherwiſe the plaintiff would ſtay till the defendant's witneſſes were dead, and put this forged bond in ſuit againſt him, when he could by no poſſibility relieve himſelf againſt it; and now, if he would try it by proviſo, the plaintiff would be nonſuited, and might begin again.

Per curiam. If you had denied the deed according to Weymark's caſe, it is to remain in court till the cauſe is tried; otherwiſe it ſhall only remain for the term in which it was brought in; but the moſt it goes to is, that on an imparlance granted, it ſhould remain in court till the defendant pleads: if it is by bill, the defendant after imparlance may crave oyer; and therefore it muſt remain in court till the party is put to plead, that he may in that caſe have oyer of it.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, recollected Sir Solomon Swale's caſe, where a deed on evidence was found not to be the defendant's deed, and by conſequence forged; and it was inſiſted on, that the court ought to cancel it: yet the court denied it, becauſe there might be error in the proceedings for which the verdict might be ſet aſide, and then the bond would ſtand unimpeached, and ſo the matter be brought in queſtion again: and therefore it was reſolved it ſhould not be cancelled, but remain in the court uncancelled: and they ſaid, here the defendant's beſt way would be, to carry the cauſe down by proviſo; and if the plaintiff would ſuffer himſelf to be nonſuited, whereby the ſuit will be at an end, and the plaintiff entitled to take his bond out of court, yet that nonſuit would be ſtrong evidence againſt him in another action to be brought thereon; or elſe he might have his witneſs's teſtimony perpetuated in Chancery. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Ann. Luttin v. Benin.

Per curiam. Dating of a bond to be at a certain place, makes it local; and ſhould the city of London hold a plea, if it was dated at York it would be erroneous: but the making of a bond without dating, makes it tranſitory, and it may be ſaid to be made all over England. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 52.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Hacket v. Tilly.

In an action of debt brought on a bond, conditioned to ſave harmleſs againſt any actions brought for any eſcapes, a difference was taken between a general condition, and a condition only to ſave harmleſs any eſcapes ſuffered by the party himſelf.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. A bond to ſave a man harmleſs from an unlawful act already done, is not void, but is an undertaking to bring him off: there is a difference between ſaving a man harmleſs from an action, and a judgment: for in ſaving harmleſs from an action, he muſt take care it does not go to a judgment; for then it is no longer an action.

Powell, Juſtice. If a gaoler takes a bond from a ſervant, to ſave him harmleſs from all eſcapes to be ſuffered by the ſervant, it is good. A condition may be good for part, and void for part; but a condition againſt a ſtatute, if void in any part is void in the whole. Stat. 23 H. 6. cap. 10. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 93.

Hilary, 13 Ann. Mitchell v. Reynold.

In an action of debt brought on a bond conditioned, that he nor his aſſigns ſhould keep a victualling-houſe, or vend liquor therein, or in any other place within a mile of Roſemary-lane, during twenty-one years; the conſideration was, the plaintiff had aſſigned his intereſt in this houſe, then a public-houſe to the defendant.

Per curiam. The queſtion is, whether theſe bonds in reſtraint of trade are good, or void? We are all of opinion they are good, if they are grounded on a ſpecial conſideration ſet down in the bond, which makes it a reaſonable contract, and the true diſtinction is not between a bond and a promiſe, but between contracts, whether by bond, covenant, or promiſe, in ſuch a conſideration as makes them reaſonable and uſeful; and ſuch contracts as are without any juſt reaſon or conſideration; where no conſideration is to balance the reſtraint of trade, thoſe are void, in what form ſoever the contract appears.

Yet there is this difference between bonds, not to ſet up a trade in a particular place, and not to ſet up a trade generally in any other place; ſuch are void, not becauſe one is a bond, and the other a promiſe, but becauſe nothing appears in the one but a bare reſtraint of trade, which may be of no uſe on one ſide, and ſerve only the purpoſe of oppreſſion. Vide Forteſcue, p. 296.

Trinity, 4 Geo. Turner v. Hawkins.

In an action of debt on a bond of 500*l.* entered into by the defendant, who was the parſon, to the plaintiff, who was the patron of Water-Newton church, in Huntingtonſhire, on condition that the defendant, on the requeſt of the plaintiff, his heirs or aſſigns, patrons of this living, made to the defendant, ſhould abſolutely reſign ſuch rectory into the hands of the biſhop of Lincoln, which then ſhould be; the defendant pleaded, that the bond was given to compel him to reſign, in caſe he would not permit the plaintiff to enjoy part of the glebe; and iſſue was tendered, and a demurrer.

Per curiam. Theſe bonds, though to reſign generally, are good, and have been allowed ſo conſtantly, and there are many determinations thereon, becauſe they may be for a good and valuable conſideration, and not ſimonical; as in caſe he takes a ſecond benefice, or for non-reſidence, and a court of equity will inſiſt on theſe bonds, where made for a good conſideration. Vide Forteſcue, p. 351.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Stibbs v. Clough.

In an action of debt brought on a bond, conditioned to perform articles, which on the plea appeared to be an agreement, that the plaintiff ſhould furniſh the defendant with ale and beer, to be ſold in his houſe at ſuch prices, and that he ſhould take of nobody elſe, but might be at liberty to take any other liquors, (malt-liquors only excepted): and that what ſhould not be paid for at the breaking up of the trade, and were undrawn, ſhould be taken back. And the defendant pleaded performance. The plaintiff replied, that by the ſame articles, it was further agreed, that what ſhould be drawn ſhould be paid for, and that there was ſuch a quantity of liquors unpaid for. On demurrer,

It was argued for the plaintiff, that by the breach it did not appear that the liquors unpaid for were malt-liquors; and as other ſorts are mentioned, the plaintiff ſhould have been more particular, eſpecially in the caſe of a bond, where he is to ſubject the defendant to the penalty.

Per curiam. The replication is likewiſe ill, for the plaintiff can only alledge new matter in the articles, by ſetting them out on oyer. The caſe of the African Company v. Maſon, was a bond, conditioned, reciting, that the defendant was their receiver at Briſtol, if therefore he does well and truly account for all ſums by him received, then the bond to be void. The breach was, that he received ſo much money, and did not account for it; and becauſe it appeared by the recital in the condition, to be only about tranſactions of a particular nature, the general aſſignment of the breach was held ill: ſo is 2 Saund. 411. Therefore, judgment for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 227.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Cloud v. Nicholſon.

The caſe was, two were jointly bound in a bond; and in an action brought againſt one alone, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that though this might have been pleaded in abatement of the action, yet, ſince it appears on the face of the record in which the bond was entered, that the plaintiff had no right againſt one alone, he cannot have judgment.

The court were of opinion that it did not appear on the record, that the other ſigned, ſealed, or delivered this bond; but admitting it did appear that he ſigned and ſealed it, yet it does not appear that he delivered it, it is the bond of the defendant alone, though another is named therein with him, for it is not his deed without the delivery. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 242.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Serle or Searle, v. Barrington.

This was an action of debt brought by an executrix on an old bond, for money due to the inteſtate; and on oyer of the bond, and the condition thereof, it appeared to be dated the 9th year of W. 3. (which was thirty-five years ago, and thereon the defendant pleaded he paid it at the day, on which iſſue was joined; and at the trial, the defendant offered to prove the iſſue by preſumption, i. e. this being a bond of more than twenty years ſtanding, and no intereſt being paid in all that time, it muſt be preſumed that the principal was paid on the day.

Now, to encounter this preſumption, the plaintiff offered to give another preſumption in evidence, and that was, an indorſement of one year's intereſt after the bond was nine years old, which indorſement was written with the inteſtate's own hand; and whether that ſhould be given in evidence at the trial, was the queſtion. It was proved, that after the death of the teſtator, this bond was found amongſt his papers; and that the teſtator was eſteemed an honeſt man. No evidence was given to prove whether the indorſement was made by the obligee or obligor, or that this indorſement was ever ſeen by any perſon; on which the plaintiff was nonproſſed; and the Chief Juſtice ordered, that this matter ſhould be referred by way of a caſe ſtated for the opinion of the court.

Forteſcue, and Raymond, Juſtices, were of opinion, that this caſe ought to be judicially brought into court by demurrer, or by ſome other proper method; for the plaintiff being nonſuited, there is no cauſe now in court; ſo, whatever judgment is given will be extrajudicial; and becauſe ſuch judgment would not determine the caſe, they were at firſt unwilling to give any judgment.

It is true, the indorſement made by the obligee charges himſelf, but if the obligor ſhould get the bond into his poſſeſſion, he may make as many indorſements as he will, and by that means wrong the obligee of all the intereſt; and they were of opinion that this indorſement might be admitted in evidence; for it is the daily practice to make ſuch indorſement on bonds, and generally at the requeſt of the obligor; and this is the beſt and ſureſt evidence of the payment of the money, becauſe acquittance and notes may be loſt, whereas indorſements will continue as ſo many brands on the bond, into whoſe hands ſoever it falls, as long as the original lien, which creates the juſt charge, ſhall continue.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that at the trial he was of opinion, that the indorſement ought not to be received as evidence, becauſe it would leave too great a power in an obligee (in whoſe cuſtody the bond always remains) to make ſuch indorſements whenever he thinks proper: they may be made at any time, and ſo no bond can ever be preſumed ſatisfied.

The court ſeemed clearly of opinion, that the non-proceſs could not be ſet aſide, but ordered precedents to be ſearched. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 297.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Moreland v. Bennet, before Raymond, Chief Juſtice, in Middleſex.

In an action of debt on a bond of thirty years ſtanding, the defendant pleaded he paid it at the day, and relied on the preſumption: the plaintiff in anſwer could only prove payment of intereſt two years after the time mentioned in the condition, but gave no evidence of any receipt or demand for twenty-eight years paſt. The Chief Juſtice was of opinion, that this plea of payment at the day was to be taken as ſtrictly in this caſe, which went only on the preſumption, as in any other caſe; and the plaintiff having falſified the plea, by ſhewing a payment of intereſt two years before, it was not enough to ſay, the other twenty eight years were ſufficient to let in that preſumption, becauſe to have taken advantage of that, the defendant ſhould have pleaded on the act for amendment of the law, that he paid the money after the day, in which caſe it would have been with him on this evidence. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 652.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Cheeſman v. Ramby. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. on a bond conditioned not to ſet up a trade within half a mile of the plaintiff's now dwelling-houſe, or any other houſe that ſhe, her executors, or adminiſtrators, ſhould think fit to remove to, to carry on the trade of a linen-draper, nor inſtruct or aſſiſt any other, under any pretence whatſoever; this was in conſideration, that the plaintiff was to take the defendant's wiſe as a hired ſervant to her, to aſſiſt her in the trade of a linen-draper, for three years, without any money, whereas ſhe reaſonably deſerved 100 l. with ſuch a ſervant; this was a bond for 100 l. only, with condition to pay 100 l. in caſe the condition was broken.

Per curiam. This is a good conſideration for this bond, taking a ſervant without money, and in effect is no more than an agreement to pay what ſhe ought to have paid at firſt, in caſe ſhe ſet up trade, and does not amount to a general reſtraint, becauſe it extends to executors, and adminiſtrators; yet, if it did, the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant inſtructed her huſband in the ſaid trade, &c. and a bond may be good as to one part of the condition, and void as to the other part, being at common law. The judgment was affirmed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 297.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Serle or Searle, v. Barrington.

A new action was brought on the former caſe, (ſee page 244. of this work) and tried at Guildhall before Raymond, C. J. who ſuffered the indorſement to be read, and the jury found for the plaintiff. The defendant tendered a bill of exceptions; and a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and the bill of exceptions returned as parcel of the record; and the judgment of this court was affirmed.

In February 1730, this judgment was alſo affirmed in parliament. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 826.

Hilary, 6 Geo. 2. Lambert v. Branthwaite. Error.

On a writ of error brought in an action of debt on a bond; on oyer thereof, it appeared to be held and firmly bound in twenty pounds, payable to the ſame Richard Lambert. The defendant pleaded it was not his deed, and objected that there was no perſon to whom he was ſaid to be bound, or to whom the ſame can refer. 1 Lev. 235. But on the authority of 3 Lev. 21. the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 945.

Hilary, 13 Geo. 2. Turner v. Criſp.

In this caſe the Chief Juſtice refuſed to let the indorſement of a receipt of part of the bond, after the preſumption had taken place, to be given in evidence, ſaying, it differed from the caſe of Serle v. Barrington, where the indorſement appeared to be made before it could be thought neceſſary to be made uſe of to encounter the preſumption. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 827.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 3. Bonafous v. Rybot.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why it ſhould not be referred to Mr. Owens to compute what was due to the plaintiff of the ſeveral inſtalments ſtipulated by articles of agreement, dated the 28th of January, 1758, made in the defeazance of the bond, whereon this action is brought, and why on payment of what ſhall appear to be due with intereſt for the inſtalment unpaid, together with the plaintiff's coſts to be taxed, all further proceedings in this action ſhould not be ſtaid.

This rule was obtained on the ground of ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16, which enacts, that if at any time pending an action on any ſuch bond with a penalty, the defendant ſhall bring into the court where the action ſhall be depending, "all the principal money and intereſt due on ſuch bond," and alſo all ſuch coſts as have been expended in any ſuit or ſuits in law or equity on ſuch bond, the ſaid money ſo brought in ſhall be deemed and taken to be in full ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the ſaid bond, and the court ſhall and may give judgment to diſcharge every ſuch defendant of, and from the ſame accordingly.

The bond on which this action was brought, was a bond conditioned for the payment of a groſs ſum of money abſolutely at a day certain, viz. in April 1759, but no notice was taken in ſuch bond of paying the money by inſtalments, nor was that any part of the original agreement, which original agreement is dated the 13th of January, 1758.

On the 26th of January, 1758, the parties came to a ſubſequent agreement, and entered into articles dated on that day, by which articles it is agreed between the ſaid plaintiff and defendant, "that the money ſhall be paid by inſtalments," four of which inſtalments were fixed to Midſummer, 1759, Midſummer, 1760, Midſummer, 1761, and Midſummer, 1762, and the laſt at Midſummer, 1769.

In theſe articles was contained a defeazance to the bond of the 13th of January 1758, in caſe the ſum mentioned in the condition thereof, to be payable in groſs at a certain day therein fixed, ſhould be paid by inſtalments, on the particular days ſpecified in the defeazance for making the ſaid payments, if the defendant ſhould live till all the ſaid days be paſt, otherwiſe the defeazance was to be void.

The defendant paid the two firſt payments at Midſummer, 1759 and 1760, and part of the inſtalment due at Midſummer, 1761, but totally neglected to pay that which became due at Midſummer, 1762, or even any part of it at Michaelmas, 1762, (ſubſequent to the laſt mentioned inſtalment) the defendant paid to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff received of him the whole intereſt then due on the whole debt, up to that time, including intereſt for the ſum payable at the preceeding Midſummer, as well as for all the remaining ſums not yet become payable.

Lord Mansfield. The proviſo in the defeazance makes the whole money due on the failure of any of the payments by inſtalments.

The ſtatute meant that in caſes of penalties by way of ſecurity, the clear final juſtice of the caſe ſhould be attained in the courts of law.

The defeazance being dated at a ſubſequent time, and written on a diſtinct ſeparate paper from the bond, makes no difference, the difference is, the bond here is conditioned for the payment of a groſs ſum then due to be paid at a certain fixed day, then there is a ſubſequent agreement, made in favour of the debtor, eaſing him of that ſtipulated ſingle payment at that fixed day, and allowing him to pay it by inſtalments, provided that he pays it punctually on the days agreed on, and that he lives till they ſhall be all paſt, otherwiſe the agreement and defeazance to be void, and conſequently as the debtor has not paid the money punctually, they are void, and the groſs ſum is due to the obligee.

Unleſs the defendant pays the whole money, he cannot be relieved from the penalty, however, this rule muſt certainly be diſcharged, there being no ground to make it abſolute.

Wilmot and Deniſon, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice, and the rule was diſcharged, with coſts to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1370.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. 3. Walker v. Perkins Adminiſtrator.

The plaintiff brought an action on a bond; on oyer being prayed, the bond appeared to be made from William Perkins the inteſtate, to the plaintiff, in a penalty; the bond recited, that William Perkins the inteſtate, and the plaintiff had agreed to live together; therefore he had agreed to find her meat, drink, waſhing, and lodging, &c. and to leave her an annuity of 60 l. a year, if he quitted her, or ſhe outlived him, and if they had any child, he was to take care of, and provide for it; but if ſhe ſhould leave him, or go to another man, then he ſhould not be obliged to provide for her any longer, or to leave her any annuity.

The defendant pleaded that this was an agreement between the plaintiff and his inteſtate, to live together in a ſtate of fornication, and that ſuch a bond is void in law. The plaintiff replied, that ſhe was a virgin, and was ſeduced by the inteſtate, and in conſideration thereof, this bond was given to her by the inteſtate, and that it was a reward of her virtue: to this replication the defendant demurred, and the court gave judgment on the demurrer.

Lord Mansfield. This bond is the price of proſtitution, for if ſhe becomes virtuous, ſhe is to loſe the annuity, it appears clearly on the condition, that the bond is illegal and void. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1568.

Breach.

Michaelmas, 1 W. & M. Coleman v. Sherwin.

In an action of covenant, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant and one J. S. demiſed to the plaintiff for ſeven years, by virtue whereof he entered, and was poſſeſſed; and the defendant and one A. by his command, entered on the plaintiff; and that neither the defendant nor the ſaid J. S. had or ought to have demiſed the premiſes, but at the time of the demiſe, one R. was ſeized in fee; the defendant pleaded that J. S. was ſeized, and had power and right to demiſe, abſque hoc that R. was ſeized, &c. And abſque hoc that the defendant entered, and kept him out; to this plea the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. 1ſt, There being no expreſs covenant, the action is founded on the covenant in law implied in the word demiſerunt; and therefore as the intereſt granted by that word is joint, ſo is the covenant imported by it: and then the action as to this breach of their being not ſeized at the time of the demiſe, ought to have been againſt both the leſſors, and cannot be maintained againſt the defendant alone: but as to the other breach, viz. that the defendant and one A. entered, the action is well enough brought againſt him only; for it is his own act, and in conſtruction each did demiſe, and it is a ſeveral covenant as to their own acts ſubſequent. 2dly, The court held, that as the plaintiff might well aſſign ſeveral breaches, the defendant might as well purſue and traverſe them; but judgment was given for the defendant, becauſe the action was not againſt both the leſſors, and the plea was good. Show. 79. Meſme caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 138.

Eaſter, 2 W. & M. Meredith v. Alleyn.

In an action of debt on a bottomree bond; the defendant craved oyer, and the condition was, that if ſuch a ſhip returned within ten weeks, and gave an account of the profits, then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that the ſhip was loſt, and did not return; the plaintiff replied, the ſhip was not loſt, and this he prays may be inquired of by the country. The defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that no breach was aſſigned in the replication: for the defendant's council urged, that without a breach, the plaintiff had no cauſe of action, and the condition, by craving oyer, is become part of the record. And he relied on 1 Saund. 102. But the court gave judgment in this caſe for the plaintiff.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. In all caſes (that of a bond to perform an award excepted) if the defendant pleads a ſpecial matter that admits and excuſes a non-performance, the plaintiff need only anſwer and falſify the ſpecial matter alledged; for he that excuſes a non-performance, ſuppoſes it; and the plaintiff need not ſhew that which the defendant has ſuppoſed and admitted: but if the defendant pleads a performance of the condition, though it be not well pleaded, the plaintiff in his replication muſt ſhew a breach; for then he has not a cauſe of action unleſs he can ſhew one. The reaſon of the caſe touching the award is ſingle; it is becauſe, though an award be made, yet it may be void in whole or in part: and therefore the plaintiff muſt not only ſhew the award, that the court may ſee that there was an award, but muſt alſo ſet forth the breach, that it may appear likewiſe that the non-performance was of a good part of the award, and not of a void part thereof; for in that it need not be performed. 2 Cro. 472. But if the defendant pleads he did not ſubmit, and to force the plaintiff to iſſue, there need be no breach ſet out. 1 Sid. 290. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 138.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Knight v. Keech.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. grounded on mutual promiſes and agreements between the plaintiff and defendant, which were ſpecially ſet forth in the declaration; the plaintiff aſſigned for error, that the breach was too general, which being a matter of ſubſtance, the right of the action could not be tried; and therefore it was not within any of the ſtatutes of jeofails: and to prove this, many caſes were cited. But the court, after hearing council on both ſides, affirmed the judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 188.

Trinity, 6 W. & M. Stagg v. Hind.

In an action of covenant the plaintiff declared, that the defendant covenanted to pay yearly, during the plaintiff's life, at the two feaſts of Michaelmas and Lady-day, 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. by equal portions, and for breach aſſigned, that 3 l. 6 s. 8 d. for a year at Lady-day laſt was in arrear and unpaid: the defendant demurred, and objected, that it does not appear when the money became due; for it might be behind and unpaid at Lady-day, and yet might become due at Michaelmas, or the Lady-day before. But the court held this well enough upon a general demurrer, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 139.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Smith v. Sharp.

In an action of debt for 500 l. on articles in C. B. and judgment by nil dicit, a writ of error was brought in this court, and the plaintiff aſſigned for error, that whereas the defendant was to tender a conveyance to the plaintiff, his heirs, or aſſigns, the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant had not tendered a conveyance to the plaintiff, and ſo had not acted purſuant to the covenant, by which he is to tender to the plaintiff or his aſſigns. 3 Cro. 348.

Per curiam. The difference is between doing a thing to a man, or his aſſigns, and by a man or his aſſigns; if a thing be to be done by him or his aſſigns, the breach muſt be in the disjunctive, that it was not done by him or his aſſigns. But where a thing is to be done to a man or his aſſigns, it is ſufficient to aſſign for breach, it was not done to him; for an aſſignment ſhould be intended to be done to the plaintiff himſelf, and if he aſſigns his intereſt, then to the aſſignee; and if he did aſſign over his intereſt, that ought to be ſhewed on the other ſide; therefore the judgment of C. B. was affirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 139.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Lockey v. Darby.

In an action of debt brought on a bond, on oyer thereof, the condition appeared to be, that if the defendant ſhould ſave the plaintiff harmleſs from all damage that might accrue to him, by the executing a writ of execution, that then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff did not execute the writ, &c. The plaintiff replied, iſſuably. The defendant demurred. And the defendant's council argued, that the replication was ill, becauſe it had not aſſigned any breach, and therefore the plaintiff could not have judgment, for he ſhould have ſhewn in his replication, that ſome action was ſued againſt him for the execution of this writ, or how he was damnified by it. But not allowed.

Per curiam. The point here in iſſue is a collateral matter, to which the defendant, by his plea, has inveigled the plaintiff; and therefore the plaintiff is not obliged to ſhew a breach: for the defendant has admitted that the plaintiff was damnified by offering this plea of a collateral matter. Beſides that, if the plaintiff had aſſigned a breach in the replication, the defendant could not have traverſed it, becauſe it would have been a departure from his bar: therefore, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 186.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Farrow v. Chevalier.

In an action of covenant brought by the maſter againſt the ſervant, on a covenant not to buy or ſell without the maſter's leave within two years; and breach aſſigned that he had, at divers days and times, between ſuch a day and ſuch a day, ſold to H. and to ſeveral other perſons unknown, goods to the value of 100 l. on iſſue being joined, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and the defendant moved in arreſt of judgment, that the breach was uncertain as to times and perſons; and cited caſes pro & con. viz. 3 Cro. 916. 2 Cro. 567. Ray. 8, 9, 10. Sty. 420. 428.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. In debt on a bond to perform covenants, the replication muſt ſhew a certain breach; but in covenant it is enough to aſſign a general breach. And this is certain enough; for it is ſo deſcribed, that if another action be brought, the defendant may plead a former recovery for the ſame cauſe, and aver this to be the ſame ſelling.

Gould, Juſtice, agreed, and ſaid, that in debt for a penalty on a ſtatute, it is enough to aſſign a breach in this manner, becauſe every offence intitles the party to a diſtinct penalty; but here the action being only for damages, it is well enough; therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 140.

In an action of covenant brought on a deed of demiſe by the plaintiff's teſtator to the defendant of ſeveral parcels of land, reſerving rent and ſuit of court; in which the leſſee covenanted to grind all his corn and grain, that he ſhould ſpend in domeſtic uſe, at the mill of the leſſor's manor; and breach aſſigned that there were 500 barrels of wheat ground and uſed in the defendant's houſe, which he did not grind at the ſaid mill, or any part of them; and to this a demurrer.

It was objected, firſt, that this covenant by the operation of law, extends only to ſuch corn as ſhould grow on the premiſes, and it is not averred to be ſo; and 1 Sid. 374 was quoted.

Per curiam. The covenant is expreſs and general of all his corn, which he ſhould grind for the uſe of his houſe, and nothing appears to reſtrain it againſt the words. But on another exception, viz. that it was not averred, that the corn was his at the time of the grinding, and it might be another's at the time of grinding, and after bought by the defendant, and ſo not within the covenant, the meaning and words whereof were, that he ſhould grind all his corn which he ſhould uſe at his own houſe, at the plaintiff's mill; for the defendant might have a mill of his own, and grind another's corn there, and afterwards buy it for his houſe. Judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 327.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Tompkins v. Pincent.

In an action of debt for rent; the plaintiff declared on a demiſe made the 24th day of Auguſt, 11 W. 3. of a meſſuage, habendum for ſeven years, to begin on the 24th day of January, the rent to be paid quarterly, at the feaſt days of St. Michael, St. Thomas, Lady Day, and Midſummer, at the rent of —l. per annum; the firſt payment to be made at Michaelmas next; and ſhewed, that —l. of the aforeſaid rent for one year, ending the 24th day of December, 13 W. 3. was in arrear, &c. whence an action, &c. The defendant demurred: and this exception was taken to the declaration, that there is no year ending the 24th day of December, but it ends at St. Thomas's Day, according to the reddendum, which is the 21ſt day of December, which the court allowed; for where ſpecial days of payment are limited by the reddendum, the rent muſt be computed according to the reddendum, and not according to the habendum; and the computation of rent according to the habendum is only where the reddendum is general, viz. yielding and paying quarterly ſo much rent; on which the plaintiff prayed leave to diſcontinue, which was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 141.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Vivian v. Campion.

The plaintiff, as heir, declared, that his anceſtor, by indenture, the counterpart whereof, with the ſeal (omitting the word ſealed) of the leſſee, he brings here into court, did demiſe; and that the leſſee covenanted to repair from time to time, and to leave in repair, &c. and then ſhewed, that his anceſtors died in the 10th year of W. 3. and for breach aſſigned, that on the 1ſt of April, in the third year of the Queen, now, and for ten years before then, the premiſes were out of repair. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, 1ſt. That the word ſealed is wanting. 2dly. That part of the ten years incurred in the life of the anceſtor, and that this was a hard action.

Per Holt, Chief Juſtice. 1ſt. The want of ſealed is cured by the verdict, and the pleading over. 2dly. If the premiſes were out of repair in the time of the anceſtor, and continued ſo in the time of the heir, it is a damage to the heir: and the jury give as much damages as will put the premiſes in repair; but hereby no damages are given in reſpect of the length of time they continued in decay; but in reſpect of what it will coſt at the time of the action brought to put the premiſes in repair; therefore, for ten years, is frivolous; and this is not a hard action; and good damages were always given in theſe caſes, becauſe the damages recovered ought to be applied to the repair of the premiſes. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 141.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Hacket v. Glover. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment obtained in C. B. on an action of covenant, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant ſold him goods for ſo much money, and covenanted to defend and warrant the goods to the plaintiff againſt all perſons whatſoever, and aſſigned for breach, that at the time of the ſale the defendant had neither the poſſeſſion nor the property of the goods; to this the defendant demurred, and the plaintiff had judgment in the C. B.

It was inſiſted for the plaintiff in error, that this was no breach of the covenant; for the intention and deſign of the covenant was only to ſecure the poſſeſſion; and therefore, until an eviction, the covenant was not broken. Co. Lit. 365. a. Fitz. 134. a. 2 Saund. 175. Hobart, 51. 1 Rolle Rep. 519. Moore, 175. Hobart, 34, 35. Dyer, 328.

It was argued on the other ſide, that ſince it was confeſſed by the demurrer, that he that ſold them had neither the poſſeſſion nor the property, the buyer could not take poſſeſſion of them, without expoſing himſelf to an action of trover.

The word dimiſi in a leaſe, imports a covenant in law; and in ſuch an action, it had been enough to aſſign for breach, that the leſſor had no title at the time of the leaſe, without ſhewing an eviction. 2 Cro. 274. 3 Mod. 261. 1 Siderf. 178.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff cannot uſe the goods without being liable to an action, which is a damage. If the caſe had been, that the defendant had had the equitable right, but another the legal one, it had been proper to have laid it before the court by pleading it.

Eyre. Juſtice. Warranty, in the nature of it, imports as well warranty of the property as poſſeſſion. 1 Rolle 90. Warner v. Tallard. The caſe on the word dimiſi is a ſtrong caſe; for that is a covenant in law; and if it is not neceſſary there to ſet forth eviction, a fortiori not here. Therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 142.

Eaſter, 12 Ann. Sail v. Kitchingham.

In an action of covenant, ſeveral breaches were aſſigned; but that covenant on which moſt ſtreſs was laid was, that the leſſee ſhould lime and dung the land during the term, which was ſix years.

This action was brought by the plaintiff as heir at law to the leſſee, and the breach of the covenant was thus aſſigned, that after the deſcent of the land, he did not, during the term, lime and dung the land.

It was objected for the defendant, 1ſt. That covenant is a perſonal action, and therefore the executors were the proper perſons to have brought this action; though they on recovering ſhall be truſtees for the heir at law.

2dly. That the breach was not well aſſigned, becauſe the not dunging and liming ſince the deſcent is no breach of the covenant, if it was limed and dunged ſo ſufficiently before that it did not need it.

As to the firſt objection, the court were of opinion that this was a covenant relating to the land, and for the advantage of the reverſion: that it would have gone to an aſſignee without his being named in the covenant, which proves it to be a covenant that runs with the land, and attends on the reverſion; and by conſequence, a covenant to which the heir at law will be intitled, as he is to the reverſion. As to the ſecond objection, the court were of the ſame opinion. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 158.

Trinity, 5 Geo. Anonymous. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment obtained in C. B. on a ſcire facias, on a recognizance taken in an action of debt:

The plaintiff in error's council inſiſted that the breach was not well aſſigned; for though it is a general rule, that a breach aſſigned in the very words of the condition is a good aſſignment: yet that rule does not hold where the words are by law interpreted contrary to their natural ſignification, which is the caſe here. For the words of the condition are, that he ſhould render himſelf in execution of the judgment; which words, in their natural ſenſe, import an act, which it is impoſſible for the bail to do, for it is the principal only that can render himſelf in execution of the judgment; ſo that the meaning of the words in this caſe muſt be, to render himſelf in order to execution. And therefore, the pleading ſhould not have been in the very words of the condition, but in ſuch words as are expreſſive of that ſenſe, in which the words of the condition are, by operation of law, to be underſtood.

This objection was over-ruled by the court, who were all of opinion, that the words in the pleading muſt be underſtood in the ſame ſenſe as when uſed in the condition of the recognizance.

It was then urged for the plaintiff in error, that there were variances between the ſcire facias and the recognizances.

The council for the defendant acknowledged, that there were variances, and material ones; but inſiſted that the plaintiff could not now take advantage of them, becauſe he had not, by demanding oyer of the recognizance in the court below, made it part of the record, and ſo brought it before this court; and as it ſtands now, the recognizance is no part of the record.

And of this opinion was the court, and gave judgment niſi for the defendant in error. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 444.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Knight v. Cambridge.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. in an action brought on a policy of inſurance againſt the perils of the ſea, winds, pirates, and barratry of the maſter.

The declaration laid for breach, that the ſhip was loſt by the fraud and negligence of the maſter; on non aſſumpſit pleaded, a caſe was made at the trial for the opinion of the court, which ſhewed the policy of inſurance which inſured the ſhip againſt all loſſes and misfortunes, and againſt barratry; and then ſhewed that the ſhip was loſt by the wilful fraud and direct negligence of the maſter; and whether ſuch loſs was within the policy was the queſtion?

Per curiam. Every neglect of the maſter is not within this policy; and if he had run away with the ſhip, or embezzled the goods, the merchant may have his action againſt him: but yet, he may provide againſt him in another manner, viz. by inſuring his ſhip and goods to ſecure himſelf againſt all acts of barratry; for it is reaſonable that merchants, who venture a large ſhare of their ſtocks, ſhould ſecure themſelves in what manner they think proper againſt the barratry of the maſter, and all other frauds.

" Barratry is a word of more extenſive ſignification " than only to include the maſter's running away " with the ſhip: it may well include the loſs of the " ſhip by his fraud or negligence."

" A breach aſſigned in the words of the covenant is " good, as here by the barratry of the maſter had been " good: but it is equally good to aſſign the breach in " words tantamount. Where is the difference be- " tween running away with the ſhip, and ſinking it?" The judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 230.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. Andrews v. Paradiſe.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. in an action of covenant in an indenture to lead the uſes of a fine, wherein the cognizor covenanted, that the cognizee ſhould quietly enjoy, &c. and that he would not do any thing to moleſt, hinder, or prevent him, (the cognizee) or his wife, or any occupiers of theirs, in the quiet poſſeſſion or enjoyment of the lands, &c. but that the defendant had moleſted him, &c.

The defendant pleaded, that he had done nothing to moleſt, hinder, or prevent the cognizee, or his wife, &c.

The plaintiff replied, and aſſigned a breach, for that he was ſeized of a cloſe in ſuch a field, being parcel of the lands purchaſed under this fine and conveyance, and that there was a lane leading through this cloſe, through which lane the plaintiff had a way to the cloſe, and that the defendant, to wit, afterwards, did erect a gate a croſs that way, whereby the plaintiff's tenant was obſtructed in the quiet poſſeſſion and enjoyment of the aforeſaid cloſe, &c.

On demurrer to this replication, the plaintiff had judgment in C. B. and on this writ of error, it was inſiſted, that the judgment ſhould be reverſed, for that the replication was only argumentative of an obſtruction, viz. whereby the plaintiff's tenant was obſtructed; whereas the pleading ſhould have been certain.

Per curiam. This appearing to be a neceſſary way for the enjoyment of this cloſe, then, whether the gate is ſet up by right or wrong, it is not material as to the defendant; for in either caſe, if it is an obſtruction, it ought not to be erected there. The judgment was therefore affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 319.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Lane v. Sir R. Cotton and Sir T. Frankland, Poſtmaſters General. Entered Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Roll. 403.

In this caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, a common carrier may refuſe to admit goods into his warehouſe before he is ready to take his journey; but an action will lie againſt him if his horſes are not loaded, and he refuſes to take a packet proper to be ſent by a carrier. But if the carrier's horſes are loaden, the action would not lie for ſuch refuſal; for one that has made profeſſion of public employment, is bound by the utmoſt extent of that employment to ſerve the public.

A carrier is liable in reſpect of his reward, and not of the hundred's being anſwerable over to him; for the hundred is liable by the ſtatute of Wincheſter, but he was ſo at common law; and the reaſon why robbery did not excuſe him, was becauſe it might be by conſent and combination, carried on in ſuch a manner, that no proof could be had of it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 652. *Mod. On not guilty pleaded, the defendant gave in evidence, that he offered to deliver the goods to the plaintiff, if he would pay him his hire; but that the plaintiff refuſed, &c. and therefore he retained them. And it was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that a carrier may retain the goods for his hire; and on direction, the defendant had a verdict given for him. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 752.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Taylor v. ———.

It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, on a trial at niſi prius, at Hertford, on the 4th of Auguſt, 1 Ann, that if goods are delivered to a carrier, and he does not deliver them according to the direction given him; on a demand of the goods from him, and refuſal by him to deliver them, trover lies againſt him; or an action on the caſe lies againſt him on the cuſtom. But if the goods are delivered to a ſervant of the carrier, or to his warehouſe keeper, and they are not delivered, &c. an action of trover does not lie againſt the carrier, &c. without an actual converſion by him. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 792.

In this caſe which was an action of replevin, Holt, Chief Juſtice, cited the caſe of the Exeter carrier, where A. ſtole goods and delivered them to the carrier, to be carried to Exeter, the right owner finding the goods in poſſeſſion of the carrier, demanded them of him, on which the carrier refuſed to deliver them, without being paid for the carriage. The owner brought an action of trover, and it was held he might juſtify the detaining againſt the right owner for the carriage; for when A. brought them to him, he was obliged to receive and carry them; and therefore ſince the law compelled him to carry them, it will give him remedy for the premium due for the carriage. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 866.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Amies v. Stevens.

The plaintiff put goods on board the defendant's hoy, who was a common carrier, coming through bridge, by a ſudden guſt of wind the hoy ſunk, and the goods were ſpoiled. The plaintiff inſiſted that the defendant ſhould be liable, it being his careleſſneſs in going through at ſuch a time; and offered ſome evidence, that if the hoy had been in good order, it would not have ſunk with the ſhock it received, and from thence inferred the defendant anſwerable for all accidents, which would not have happened to the goods in caſe they had been put into a better hoy.

But the Chief Juſtice held the defendant not anſwerable, the damage being occaſioned by the act of God. For though the defendant ought not to have ventured to ſhoot the bridge, if the general bent of the weather had been tempeſtuous: yet this being only a ſudden guſt of wind, had intirely differed the caſe: and no carrier is obliged to have a new carriage for every journey; it is ſufficient if he provides one, which, without any extraordinary accident, (ſuch as this was) will probably go the journey. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 128.

In an action brought againſt the defendant as a common carrier, on an undertaking to carry for hire on the River Thames from the ſhip to the company's warehouſes; on the evidence it appeared, the defendant was a common lighterman, and that it was the uſage of the company on the unſhipping of their goods, to put an officer, who is called a ſurveyor, on board the lighter, who, as ſoon as the lading is taken in, puts the company's lock on the hatches, and goes with the goods to ſee them ſafe delivered at the company's warehouſe. It appeared to be done ſo in this caſe, and part of the goods were loſt.

The Chief Juſtice was of opinion this differed from the common caſe, this not being any truſt repoſed in the defendant; and the goods were not to be conſidered as ever having been in his poſſeſſion, but in the poſſeſſion of the company's ſervant, who hired the lighter to uſe himſelf. He thought therefore the action was not maintainable, ſo the plaintiffs were nonſuited. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 690.

Trinity, 5 Geo. The Pariſh of White Waltham. v. The Pariſh of New Windſor.

An order was made to remove A. P. widow of J. P. and ſix of the children of the ſaid J. P. by his ſaid wife, and ſo names them, to the pariſh of White Waltham; and on appeal brought by that pariſh, it appeared that they cohabited as man and wife two years in the pariſh of White Waltham, and then got a certificate in 1702. from White Waltham to the pariſh of New Windſor, whereby they undertook to receive again the ſaid J. P. his wife and family, whenever he or they ſhould become chargeable, and they went into the pariſh of New Windſor, and there cohabited as man and wife till the death of J. P. which was a little before the order of the two juſtices, and children were born in New Windſor, and chriſtened there by the name of P; and then goes on and ſays, and it further appearing on the oath of the ſaid A. P. that ſhe was never married to the ſaid J. and therefore the ſaid ſix children are baſtards, and we do hereby diſcharge the order of the two juſtices.

Per cur. Let the order of the ſeſſions be quaſhed, for the pariſh which gave the certificate is bound by it, and cannot diſpute the marriage after having allowed them to be man and wife, and baſtard children are not within the act; for though the act ſays, ſhall receive his or her children, yet in law they cannot be children of either father or mother, if baſtards, and the certificate is given to indemnify the pariſh. Vide Forteſcue, p. 304.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of two juſtices made for the removal of T. P. his wife and ſix children, from Woolverſtone in Suffolk, to St. Nicholas in Harwich in Eſſex, and which was confirmed by an order of ſeſſions, ſhould not be quaſhed.

On ſhewing cauſe on this rule, after hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

Chapple, Juſtice. As to the validity of the certificate, there are two objections. The juſtices ſay, that they believe it be ineffectual to the pariſh of St. Nicholas; they ſtate that there is but one pariſh in Harwich, via. St. Nicholas, and the certificate is addreſſed to the pariſh of Harwich near Dover Court, whereas there is no ſuch pariſh.

I do not think any direction at all to be neceſſary, and a miſdirection is as a void direction; beſides, if it was neceſſary, I am doubtful if the miſtake would make it bad.

As to the delivery of the certificate, it was given to an inhabitant, though it does not appear that he was a pariſh officer; if it had been a removal to Harwich, a delivery to the officer had been neceſſary, but the ſtatute does not make it a condition that the certificate ſhall be delivered to the pariſh officers: therefore he held, that the man had not gained a ſettlement in Harwich, and was of opinion that the order ought to be quaſhed.

Wright, Juſtice, concurred; and it was admitted by the court that ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. does not require any direction of a certificate, and that the ſame is good without; and in this caſe, the pariſh of Woolverſtone has by their certificate acknowledged him to be an inhabitant legally ſettled in their pariſh, and they are thereby bound againſt all the world.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing both orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 171.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Hilperton.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of two juſtices made for the removal of R. H. his wife and daughter, from Charterhouſe Hinton, in the county of Somerſet, to Hilperton, otherwiſe Hilprington, in the county of Wilts, and which on appeal to the ſeſſions was confirmed, ſhould not be quaſhed.

On the motion, it was obſerved, that the certificate was good within ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. conſequently by ſtat. 12 Ann, cap. 18. the ſervice of the apprentice to a certificate man is not available to gain a ſettlement.

The only exception that can be taken to the certificate is, that the words legally ſettled are not inſerted therein, but there are words tantamount. The certificate admits them to be inhabitants of the pariſh of Charterhouſe Hinton, and therefore to be taken ſtrongly againſt the makers.

Note. This being a new caſe, no caſes were cited on either ſide, and the parties made no defence.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 227.

Hilary, 22 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. George's, Southwark. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Olave's, Southwark.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of ſeſſions, made to diſcharge an order of two juſtices made on appeal for the removal of J. P. from St. George's to St. Olave's, both in Southwark, ſhould not be quaſhed.

On ſhewing cauſe, the court ordered, that the appeal be diſcharged, and the order be confirmed.

On which the council for St. Olave's moved to quaſh the laſt order of ſeſſions, and to affirm the firſt order of ſeſſions, on which they obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe.

Lee, Chief Juſtice. The queſtion is, whether this be a certificate within the ſtatute? The thing neceſſary to infer the obligation, is owning the pauper to be a perſon legally ſettled in their pariſh.

The paper writing which is not produced, is only ſaid to bear the form of a certificate; the order ſtates what was done on this writing, and it is ſtated, that it was ſigned, atteſted, and allowed according to the ſtatute.

It does not appear, that this was a certificate, owning the man to be an inhabitant ſettled in St. George's pariſh, it rather by the ſtate of the caſe appears otherwiſe, it was delivered back again when the lunatic was diſcharged. This matter was all before the ſeſſions, and no other pretence of a ſettlement in St. George's pariſh appeared to the juſtices; therefore we cannot determine that the ſeſſions have done wrong, on the contrary, it rather ſeems that they have done right.

The other three juſtices on the bench concurred with the Chief Juſtice, that this could not be ſupported as a certificate under ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30.

Per curiam. Let the original order of the two juſtices, and the laſt order of ſeſſions be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 1. p. 283.

Note, The firſt order of ſeſſions was conſidered by the court as out of the caſe, and it was ordered, that the recognizance entered into by the pariſh of St. George's on their removing the original order of the juſtices, and the firſt order of ſeſſions by certiorari, ſhould be diſcharged.

Trinity, 29 & 30 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Taunton, St. Mary Magdalen.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of ſeſſions made to quaſh an order of two juſtices made for the removal of R. B. his wife and three children from Taunton, St. Mary Magdalen, to Taunton, St. James's (both in Somerſetſhire) ſhould not be quaſhed, and the original order affirmed.

Deniſon, Juſtice. We are inclined to think, that the rule which was prayed for quaſhing the order of ſeſſions, ought to be diſcharged on the particular circumſtances of this caſe, and the ſeſſions order confirmed.

Two matters have been diſputed,

1ſt, Whether ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. extends to the grandchildren of a certificate perſon, or is confined to immediate children.

2dly, Whether the ſon of this certificate man was emancipated from his father's family or not?

We are unwilling to give our opinion on either of theſe points, as we hold that the certificate itſelf was of no force at the time of the grandſon's being put apprentice in Taunton, St. Mary's; but was then totally at an end. At the time the order was made, it was abſolutely waived, and the father and grandfather of the pauper could not have gone to St. Mary's again without a new certificate, conſequently the juſtices were miſtaken in ſending this man and his family to St. James's, and the ſeſſions did right in diſcharging the order of the two juſtices: therefore let the order of ſeſſions be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. page 402.

On an indictment brought againſt the defendant, at the quarter ſeſſions at Warwick; the indictment ſet forth, that at a court leet holden in and for the manor of Birmingham, the defendant was duly elected by the jury, one of the conſtables for the ſaid manor for the year enſuing; that the defendant had notice of ſuch election, &c. that the ſteward of the manor certified his appointment to the juſtice of peace by whom he was ſummoned to appear, &c. to take the oath of office as conſtable, &c. and that although ſummoned, &c. he refuſed to take on the ſaid office, &c.

The defendant removed the indictment into this court by certiorari, and it was tried at Warwick aſſizes before Parker, C. J.

It appeared on evidence, that the facts charged againſt the defendant were true, and that the defendant was eligible to ſerve the ſaid office, unleſs exempt by reaſon of a certificate, &c.

That the defendant had a certificate according to ſtat. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. diſcharging one P. J. from all pariſh offices within the ſaid pariſh of B. and an aſſignment thereof duly executed and inrolled.

On this ſtate of the cauſe, a ſpecial caſe was made for the opinion of this court, on the following queſtion.

"Whether the ſaid J. D. on the circumſtances of this caſe, is, notwithſtanding the certificate, guilty of the indictment, or not guilty."

After hearing council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion as follows:

Lord Mansfield. The only queſtion here is, whether the conſtable of the manor of B. is a pariſh officer of the pariſh of B.

The term pariſh officer does not include every office exerciſed in the pariſh, if it did, it might even take in the office of high ſheriff of the county.

It is an office relative to the pariſh only; but this man has a much larger juriſdiction than the pariſh only, for he has a juriſdiction over the whole manor; the act does not intend the certificate to be a diſcharge from an office whereof the functions are to be exerciſed out of the limits of the pariſh.

The defendant cannot be eſteemed a pariſh officer either from the origin of his office, or the nature of the exerciſe of it.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the proſecutor, and judgment be entered for the King. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1182.

Hilary, 8 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Wooton, St. Lawrence.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order made by two juſtices for the removal of T. P. his wife, and ſix children, viz. M. T. H. J. G. and J. from Wooton St. Lawrence to Mitcheldever in Hants, and which on an appeal to the ſeſſions was quaſhed as to M. and T. two of the ſaid children for inſufficiency, there being no adjudication therein as to their ſettlement, ſhould not be confirmed as to the ſaid two children.

On ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the council againſt quaſhing the order of ſeſſions gave up the certificate as regularly executed under the certificate acts, but alledged the ſame to be good at common law before ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. as it was a full acknowledgement that the pauper was their pariſhioner.

Lord Mansfield. A certificate cannot conclude the pariſh unleſs properly ſigned. The certificate act ſpecifies certain checks and guards on certificates. The juſtices are not obliged miniſterially to allow and ſign a certificate: they are not bound at all events to allow and ſign it: they have a diſcretionary power to allow it, or not to allow it, if it be liable to objection. The act requires a concluſive certificate to be under the checks and guards ſpecified in ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. This certificate wants them, therefore it is no certificate within that ſtatute, and if ſo, it cannot conclude the pariſh.

Yates and Aſton, Juſtices, agreed with the Chief Juſtice, and ſaid it muſt be a certificate purſuant to the ſtatute, or it could not conclude the pariſh that gave it.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, except as to the two children, M. and T. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 581.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Ipſley.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an order of ſeſſions made to quaſh an order of two juſtices made for removing M. C. the wife of J. C. and her two ſons, from Ipſley in Warwickſhire, to Studley in the ſame county, ſhould not be quaſhed.

On ſhewing cauſe to this rule, the court were clearly of opinion, that the pariſh of Studley were bound by this certificate, which takes notice of the woman's being then unmarried, and with child, and acknowledges the child ſhe then went with to be legally ſettled with them in their pariſh.

Lord Mansfield ſaid, that the woman was very big with child, which was known to both pariſhes; and Studley expreſsly promiſed to provide for the infant ſhe then went with: therefore they ought to be bound by their certificate, an infant en ventre ſa mere may be to a variety of purpoſes conſidered as born, and cited a variety of caſes in ſupport of his doctrine.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the original order be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 3. p. 650.

Certiorari.

Eaſter, 4 W. & M. Barſdale v. Drew.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. the judgment was affirmed in this court.

The plaintiff brought a certiorari to remove the recognizance itſelf here, which was given in C. B. on the allowance of the writ of error, ſo that he might ſue out a ſci. fac. againſt the bail.

But it was alledged, that this court could not grant ſuch a writ, becauſe the recogizance is a record, which is not to be removed by a certiorari; for that only removes the tenor of the record, and not the record itſelf.

Per curiam. In the courts at Weſtminſter, the recognizance is taken by itſelf, and is no part of the record on the roll; and therefore a certiorari may be to remove it, though it cannot remove the record itſelf: and it was allowed accordingly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 104.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. The King v. North.

The defendant was indicted before juſtices of the peace, and pleaded not guilty; and after the jury were gone out to conſider of their verdict, he delivered in a certiorari; and the juſtices returned the verdict, and it was held well; for a certiorari cannot be delivered after the jury is ſworn. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 144.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Anonymous.

A motion was made for a certiorari to remove an indictment of barratry, found at the ſeſſions of gaol-delivery; and one Nurſe's caſe was cited, wherein ſuch a motion was granted.

Per curiam. It is never granted to remove an indictment found before juſtices of gaol-delivery, without ſome ſpecial cauſe; ſo it is of the Old Baily; and if ſuch a certiorari ſhould be granted, and the cauſe ſuggeſted ſhould afterwards appear falſe, a procedendo ſhould be awarded. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 144.
